

A romantic close-up photograph of a man and a woman about to kiss. The woman has long, light brown hair and is wearing a black top. The man is shirtless, has a beard, and his eyes are closed. They are positioned in the center of the frame, with soft lighting creating a warm, intimate atmosphere. The background is dark and out of focus.

KENNY WRIGHT

BULL'S EYE

Discovering the Hotwife Fantasy

BOOK ONE

A romantic close-up photograph of a man and a woman about to kiss. The woman has long, light brown hair and is wearing a black top. The man is shirtless, has a beard, and his eyes are closed. They are positioned in the center of the frame, with soft lighting highlighting their faces and the woman's hair. The background is a plain, light color.

KENNY WRIGHT

BULL'S EYE

Discovering the Hotwife Fantasy

BOOK ONE

Bull's Eye 1

Discovering the Hotwife Fantasy

Kenny Wright

Copyright © 2020 by Kenny Wright

All rights reserved.

Edited by Gary S.

Cover design by Kenny Wright

Cover image © g-stockstudio/istockphoto.com

First digital edition electronically published by KW Publishing, February 2020

Smashwords edition electronically published by Smashwords, March 2020

No part of this book may be reproduced in any form or by any electronic or mechanical means, including information storage and retrieval systems, without written permission from the author, except for the use of brief quotations in a book review.

Contents

Foreword

1. Cocktails

2. Gala

3. Eleanor

Bull

Acknowledgments

Also by Kenny Wright

About the Author

Foreword

This book series has been a long time in coming. Even writing this foreword has taken much longer than it should have. Consider this a formal apology to all of my readers, both new and old, for the drought in Kenny Wright books. Hopefully that's at an end. First, a few words on this series as a whole.

Bull's Eye began as an experiment: could I write a hotwife book that was told from the bull's perspective entirely—a “what would AJ do” novella that was light and fun, mostly filled with sex with little character development beyond what I could do with dialog. What ended up happening was a sprawling series that went from two books to three to five. And no, it's not just about the bull, nor is it written entirely from the bull's perspective (although you won't see that in this first book).

What I ended up with was a romance series—or to coin an old term of mine, a romantic erotica series. It even follows some of your typical romance beats. I couldn't help myself, because as I wrote, I fell in love with these characters. Hopefully you will, too.

This one is different than most of my previous work. Fans of pure hotwife content may not be immediately drawn to it. That's fine. Not everything I write will please everyone, and I promise I plan to publish something more straightforward sooner rather than later. But I also encourage those same readers to stick with it, because this story is one of growth, change, and evolution.

One of the reasons that it's taken me so long to write and publish this series is how interwoven each book is, and as I've learned more about these characters, I've wanted those lessons to be hinted at in the previous books. The revision process has been brutal.

Four books are already completed and in various stages of the editorial process. I plan on publishing them about a month apart, which should give me more than enough time to complete the final book. After that, once this monkey is off my back, I've got plans for more. So much more. Keep an eye on Twitter (@kennywriter) and my blog, kennywriter.com, for news on that.

Enjoy, and thanks for reading!

Cocktails

The hotel bar of the downtown Marriott is one of my favorite spots to go hunting. Especially just after dinner on a Friday, before the clubs start kicking. It's busy, but not so crowded that I have to yell to be heard. Pro-tip: it's hard as hell to successfully flirt while yelling. The patrons are always different, too, travelers from out of town, here on business, or for conferences, or visiting friends.

Doing a sweep of the bar, I don't recognize any familiar faces, but see plenty of faces that I wouldn't mind getting familiar with.

That is the other thing I like about this bar—hotel bars in general, I suppose, but this upscale one in particular. If they are down here for a drink on a Friday night in a city that they don't call home, they are primed for some fun.

And I am always ready to be that fun. I know, it's terrible. I'm terrible. How do I look myself in the eye? It's easy, I just lift my head and stare forward. I take advantage of the situation, not the woman. Everyone is a consenting adult—me, her...her friend, if that's what we're doing that night. I may be an enabler of some naughty acts, but they are always there, ready to be enabled.

I don't ply women with drinks. If she's had too many, it wouldn't be fun for anyone, and there's no sport in that anyway. I've never forced anyone—unless I knew explicitly that that's what they were into. I understand that no means no—although I've never had anyone complain.

We're all having fun, right? It's just a night of no-strings-attached fun. In the morning, I'll go my way, she'll go hers. We live our lives. We go our separate ways... usually. Sometimes, they're too fun to let walk away. I've been burned by this—repeats can get messy, can mean relationships and emotions and entanglements. But sometimes, she's worth the risk.

The initial scan of a bar on a new night always fills me with buzzing anticipation. The night is full of possibility. This is my kid-in-a-candy-shop moment, if the pieces of candy are attractive, young women.

A conference session must have just ended. A few of the groups still wear their name badges, their body language tentative as they chat and get to know one another better. The tourists are just as easy to spot—shorts, backpacks, studying their phones for tomorrow's itinerary. A bridal shower is grouped on the far side of the bar—the bride-to-be a pretty blonde wearing a tight, white sheath dress and a gauzy veil.

As wrong as it is, I'm tempted by the challenge in that veil. I could be her last great adventure before she ties the knot. Her last hurrah. As if sensing my thoughts, she looks toward me as I enter the room, our eyes meeting—hers playful and promising. So she's not a challenge after all. Somehow, that diminishes my interest. I smile at her anyway and move to the bar, where a brunette sits alone.

She is the obvious mark in the place. Young, dressed up for a night out, and currently solo with a single glass of white wine in front of her. Her maroon dress appears painted on, hugging the curves in a way that makes it easy to imagine it on my bedroom floor.

Even I'm not cocky enough to deny that luck plays as much a part in this game as a confident smile and a good sense of humor. A lot of other pieces need to fall into place. Right now, one of those pieces is in the form of an open stool beside her.

"Anyone sitting here?" I ask.

She looks me over, and I feel her approval more than see it. She leans forward ever so slightly, her fingers rising to touch her neck before she stops herself. “No one yet,” she says.

“Lucky me,” I respond with a smile that earns me the beginnings of a blush. She looks away, sipping nervously at her wine.

Her phone sits in front of her. She’s waiting for someone. No ring on her, but it could be a boyfriend she’s waiting to meet.

The bartender comes over, recognizing me with a knowing nod. He doesn’t give my game away. “What’ll it be?” he asks.

I order a Jameson on the rocks. He pours the easy drink, nods one last time, and gives me space to work.

She is checking something on her phone when I turn to her and say, “Recommend any good clubs? I just got in and have no clue about where to go in this town.”

Women are easy to unlock. I just need to figure out what it is they want, a way to get past their initial defenses. My first tactic is usually flattery. With this one, the flavor of the flattery is not so much her looks—she knows she’s hot, else she wouldn’t be wearing that dress—but her expertise. I play ignorant, she can sweep in and act knowledgeable. Gives her a sense of control, if only in her head.

My ploy lands. I see it in the way her face lights up at my question. “Actually, I’m not from here, either,” she says. “But I know a thing or two. What kind of club are you looking for?”

The way she asks it seems suggestive. I wonder how hard to press. My original plan is to take things slowly, but I’m adaptable. “You look like you’re out for some fun. Where are you headed?”

I hold my breath, watching her carefully. Looking for... there. She bites her lip. Her kohl-lined eyes flare just so. “Well, I’m meeting a...friend at Eden.”

I hear the hesitation. A male friend, then, and one that she’s either involved with, or will likely be by the end of the night. Bro code says I should back off. She's another man's. But I don't know this other man, and the brunette here is capable of making her own choices.

"Eden. Heaven on earth. Good choice for you."

On the other side of me, someone scoffs at the line. I ignore it because this brunette doesn't seem to mind. I see the flush climb her neck. Her mouth opens—full lips that I can already feel wrapped around my dick—but before she speaks, someone interrupts us.

"Sorry, Cheryl. I'm finally ready." We turn, and her friend has come to her rescue. She's slightly older than Cheryl, and her body hasn't held up as well. She's pretty enough, though, but before I can entertain any more lurid thoughts, she pulls Cheryl away, looking at me warily. "Come on, girl. Let's not keep the guys waiting any longer."

I just shrug at the older woman as she glares at me. Cheryl looks back with the eyes of a doe and mouths, I'm sorry. I am, too, but there are plenty of other opportunities, and even I'm not good enough to expect success every time.

I turn back to the bar, scoop up my drink, and savor a sip of the whiskey.

"So does that really work?" A woman's voice coming to me, from my right. The woman who scoffed earlier.

I turn, finding a blonde vision regarding me with a crooked smile and clear, blue eyes. She seems to scan me, dissecting me like a scientist would an insect, and doesn't bother hiding her disdain.

I noticed her when I arrived, but know her type. Like Cheryl, she's dressed for a night of fun in a tight, heather-gray dress that shows off a gym-toned body that she's proud of. There's just a touch too much class to her. Years of experience tells me that she's more work than I am looking for on a Friday night—a seduction project that I'm not in the mood for.

So I decide to be honest with her. No harm other than to disgust her more. "Works sometimes. It was going to work on her."

“And you’re okay if they’re that easy?” she challenges.

If she’s trying to shame me, it doesn’t work. “I’m not looking for love.”

She raises her cocktail—something dark and red served in a martini glass—and smirks before saying, “Clearly not.”

“Cheryl wasn’t, either,” I say. “And trust me, whoever she ends up with tonight—and she will end up with someone—it’s not going to be some great romance. I was just giving her another option.”

“How kind of you. Let me guess, you probably think you’re the better option.”

“I think so. If you’re free, I can give you a demonstration.”

Her laugh catches her by surprise, as bright as her eyes and louder than I expect. She covers her mouth and looks away from me. When her laughter dies, she says, “You’re something else.”

Her laughter—even at my own expense—is infectious. Like music, catchy and upbeat. “Didn’t I just say that?” I say.

She finishes her drink without responding, holding her finger up to the bartender for another. When he comes over, I say, “Nick, put it on my tab, will you?”

“Sure thing, boss.” He glances at the blonde beside me with skepticism, but goes about fixing her drink.

“So Nick, you know this guy?” the blonde asks. Nick looks uncomfortable. She turns to me. “Thought you said you were from out of town?”

“Maybe I frequent this Marriott.”

She reaches out and straightens the lapel of my shirt, which wasn’t crooked. I feel the warmth in her fingers and subconsciously draw a breath of her perfume. It’s subtle, hinting at vanilla. “Yet with all these visits, you don’t know where the good clubs are? How unresourceful of you. No wonder you have to resort to hitting on girls like your friend there.”

Nick chuckles, sets her Manhattan cocktail in front of her, and leaves us.

I lift my glass of Jameson in a toast. “To being fortunate enough to be graced by your wisdom...?”

She pauses for only a fraction of a moment as she puzzles out the rising lilt of my toast. Then that delightful smile is back, her eyes wide. “Are you hunting for my name?”

Busted—and weirdly, I feel an uncomfortable heat gather along the back of my neck. I ignore it. “No need for a name. I’ll just call you...” I look at her drink. “Manhattan.”

This time, her laugh comes like the swell of an orchestra—a refined version of her spontaneous one. She brushes her long blond hair away from her shoulders, like she’s auditioning for a shampoo commercial. “Do I look like a Manhattan?”

I shrug. Truth be told, she looks more like something West Coast than East, but that isn’t the game. “It’s not up to me. You picked the drink, so your name’s your own fault.”

When she smiles, her nose crinkles cutely, softening her sharp beauty. It feels calculated. “Oh, it’s my fault, is it?”

“Hey, look on the bright side. You could have been drinking a Gimlet.”

And there’s her full, genuine laugh again, hand back up, covering her gleaming, white teeth. “Too bad I wasn’t drinking a Sex on the Beach.”

Oh, she is good—not that I would acknowledge it. “Nah, tried that. Not a huge fan. Sand gets everywhere.”

If Manhattan is impressed, she doesn’t show it. She does smile, although there is more gamesmanship than anything else. So I press.

“Besides, you're not a Sex on the Beach kind of girl, are you?”

“Girl, huh?”

Manhattan possesses the classical beauty that makes her age hard to pinpoint. Her high cheekbones and a slim face are unlined, and her bright blue eyes dance with a playfulness that I usually ascribe to younger women, yet I get the feeling that I am wrong. I guess she's closer to my age of thirty-five.

“I know a trap when I see one,” I say. “But Mannhattans are timeless.”

“Timeless?” she says, arching her brows as she laughs. She plucks the Maraschino cherry from her drink and bites into it. Twirling the stem, she looks at me skeptically. “You sure you're good at picking up women?”

“What makes you think that I'm trying to pick you up? Maybe I've got more discerning tastes.”

A sly smile replaces her laughing one. “Don't forget, I saw the girl you were putting the moves on before me. Your tastes can't be that discerning.”

Was that jealousy I hear? I grin. I almost call her on it, but know that would just lead to a dead end. Truth is, the more I banter with Manhattan, the more I want her. I also know that this is all a waste of time.

“And how discerning are yours?” I ask.

“Sir, I am a married woman,” she says with faux shock, holding up her left hand to show off a very large diamond. “I only have eyes for my husband.”

I saw the ring earlier, of course, but I am not the type to be stopped by some jewelry.

“And yet here you are, sitting alone at a bar wearing a dress that you know you look good in, and a pair of red-soled Louboutins that must have cost you close to a grand. Explain that one to me?”

“You know women’s shoes,” she says, nodding. I can’t tell if she’s impressed, or is once again toying with me. This feels like a game of cat and mouse, where neither of us can decide who is who.

“Actually, my husband is here.” She leans in, eyes lighting up. “He’s watching.”

“Oh, come on—”

Manhattan sits back. “I’m serious.” Breezily, she sips her Manhattan. Without looking over her shoulder, she says, “He’s the older guy at the far end of the bar. Wearing a charcoal gray suit. Don’t look,” she says when I start to turn my head.

I don’t know how to respond. It’s like I suddenly realize I’m playing a game without understanding the rules.

“He’s speechless,” Manhattan says. I hate the delight this gives her.

“Your husband’s a cuck?” I’ve heard of this, but never met anyone with the fantasy. Cuckolds get off on their wives fucking other guys. Makes no fucking sense to me.

Manhattan turns her head away from me, although she continues to watch me in her peripheral vision. She smiles. “Oh, don’t sound so judgmental. You of all people should know not to cast stones.”

She has me there. Still, this just feels wrong. This vibrant woman beside me doesn’t seem like the type to be married to a guy like that, let alone go along with his fantasy. “You just don’t seem like the kind of woman who would like to be shared.”

“So I’m a woman now?” The question is a deflection. I search her face for some emotion, some judgment of her own toward her husband’s fantasy. I don’t find it, but I also don’t see the spark that she shares the fantasy. “Who said I was being shared?”

“So you’ve never gone through with it?” I challenge.

She places her hand on mine. It's soft, warm, and completely dry. No sweat, no nerves. This is all an act for her. "I'm afraid to break this to you, but there's nothing to go through with. This is foreplay." She gently removes her hand, touching my cheek. It is all a show for her husband. "You're foreplay."

I feel used, and hate that it bothers me as much as it does.

"I'm cool with that," I say instead. "But this foreplay's pretty boring. Come upstairs with me and we can spice it up."

She rolls her eyes, but she's all smiles despite that. "You are delightfully single minded."

And she is delightful. Casually, I glance across the bar, where I see a man in a charcoal gray suit sitting, engrossed in the bar's two page menu. He is older than Manhattan, but distinguished, wearing the gray around his temples well. He doesn't look like a cuckold, but a man with a firm handshake—a man used to getting what he wants. That makes sense to me. That's the kind of guy this woman would marry. Still...

I look back at her. "So how long have you been with Mr. Manhattan. Or is it Dr. Manhattan?"

She looks surprised. "A comic book reference? I didn't think you were the type," she says.

"Funny. Wouldn't have guessed you'd get it either."

She opens her purse, a small clutch that sits on the bar, and pulls out her phone. I give her space, but see her opening her messaging app to fire off a rapid text. Her nails are painted dark red. She waits. I drink my whiskey. Then she laughs.

"Looks like your time with me has come to an end, I'm sad to say. Your hunt can commence. Sorry for the interruption."

"If I ask you for your number..."

“I’ll laugh.” She taps a finger on her lips, thinking. “But why don’t you write yours on this napkin.”

Very little surprises me in life. Manhattan has done it more than once already. She sees my look of surprise and laughs musically, putting one hand on my arm, and pushes a cocktail napkin toward me with the other.

“Don’t get your hopes up,” she says, her expression so sensual I think I’ve misheard her. “I’m not going to call.”

I get it. I write my number and slide it back to her. “More foreplay. I’m just a prop.”

She pouts for me. “Aw, don’t worry. You’re a very pretty prop. And don’t they say, Third time’s a charm?”

“You don’t count.”

She stands. I stand with her. In her heels, she’s almost as tall as I am. Once again, her vanilla perfume fills my nose. She leans close enough that when she speaks, I can feel her breath against my ear. She whispers, “But you wish that I did.”

I do, but I don’t tell her that. She starts to leave. “Don’t you want to know my name?”

She looks at my glass of Irish whiskey. “Not really, Jameson.” With a wink, she struts out of the bar, her ass swaying in her tight, gray dress. She doesn’t bother looking back.

“Hey, Nick,” I say, waving the bartender over.

“Paul?”

Nick’s a good guy. This isn’t the first time I’ve struck out a couple times. He’s younger than me by about five years, with a harder look—taller, more angular face, tattoos peeking out beneath the rolled up sleeves of his shirt.

“You ever see that?”

“See what?” I know he knows, but he’s discreet enough not to make assumptions.

“The blonde. She was with her husband. They left together.”

“Ah, that.” He has seen it. “They don’t always leave with the husband.”

“Huh.”

It’s funny. I’m well acquainted with cheating wives—women looking for some illicit fun on the side. I’m also aware of cuckolds—guys who get off on their wives cheating. This feels different. Or maybe it was just the first time I’ve been used this way.

Nick wants to fill the silence, so he starts explaining it. “I’ve heard it called a ‘hotwife’ fantasy. Couples who play together.”

“Like swingers.”

“Sort of, only it’s just the lady who gets in on the action.”

“And the husband watches?” This is interesting to me, the way learning about some foreign culture can be interesting.

“Sometimes he watches. Sometimes she just leaves him in the bar.”

“What’s he get out of it?”

“You’d have to ask one of them, man. I guess that’s part of the fantasy. I’m surprised you’ve never seen that before.”

“I mean, I’ve heard of it. Never encountered it.”

“You probably have. You just didn’t know it. Don’t take this the wrong way, but you’re the kind of guy they look for. A bull, it’s sometimes called.”

I laugh, thinking of myself as a bull, snorting, charging. I look at Nick’s septum piercing. “You’re the one with the nose ring.”

He grins. “Like I said, I’ve seen it before, and you’re not always here to step in.”

I chuckle. “Well good. You can take over from here. I shouldn’t even be out tonight. Big day tomorrow.”

“Work?” He turns, running my card and handing me the receipt.

“Always work.”

“I’m curious, what’s a guy like you do for a living?”

I sign my check, giving Nick a generous tip, and chuckle to myself before answering. “I’m an accountant for a charity.” I grin at his surprised expression. “We raise money to fund research to combat Alzheimer’s.” I push up out of my seat. “Have a good night.”

Gala

Thoughts of the blonde, “Manhattan,” keep me up. I toss and turn as I think about being in her husband’s position, sitting there in the bar as she flirts with another man. I don’t get it. I’m not a possessive guy, but I’m also far from a monogamous one. I don’t get jealous easily, and I’ve had a threesome or two in my day. I just never got off on it.

I wake, feeling like I barely slept as vague visions of the blonde wearing a bridal tiara and nothing else linger and eventually fade. I take a shower. I brew some coffee. I go for a nice, long run.

It clears my head of the blonde, but not of the fantasy. Hotwife. Bull. Cuckold. The terms clatter together, filtering the world around me. It’s a Saturday morning in the city. I greet other joggers on the street. I detour around the Farmers Market, where people mingle with their baskets of organic produce. I wonder how many of those couples have the fantasy. I see tight bodied mommies in racerback tanks carrying yoga mats, and wonder if their husbands think about sharing them.

And being the opportunist that I am, I see all the possibilities of what this means.

You’re foreplay, Manhattan said.

They don’t always leave with the husband, Nick added.

I don’t need to understand the fantasy to see myself in it.

But first, work.

I wasn't lying to Nick. I really do work for a charity—Dawning Foundation. We issue grants to research companies and local chapters across the world to help find a cure for Alzheimer's Disease. Every year, we throw a big party to celebrate our most generous donors, those who give millions of dollars to keep fighting the good fight.

Or so that they feel good about something.

Or for a big tax write-off.

We attract all types, but everyone's money is green.

I actually look forward to the Annual Donor Recognition Gala every year—and not just because it presents an excuse to see so many attractive women dress up in very little. Believe it or not, I try not to mix business with pleasure, and while this is not a hard and fast rule for me, it's one I do my best to observe. Less messy this way.

No, I look forward to this gala because, as silly as this sounds, it reminds me that all the hours that I spend working for this organization are appreciated. And I spend almost all of my hours working for this organization.

I may not be the one receiving recognition or reward, but it still feels good.

This year, we are honoring Gregory Hamilton, a man who has donated not only millions to us over the years, but has personally hosted fundraisers to bring in even more. Along with the plaque and pin we are giving him tonight, he will be offered an honorary position on the board of trustees.

I wear a tux, and know I fill it out well. With my dark hair, thick chest, and broad shoulders, I know I'll catch my fair share of appreciative looks this evening. Hey, that's why I lift, right?

The gala is downtown, in the ballroom of the Westin. The party is already in full swing by the time I arrive—three-string band playing in the corner, catered drinks weaving through the crowd, and everyone dressed to impress. I recognize many, but not all. Most are wealthy, and because of that, they know one another.

Mason Coles, son of one of our most generous donors and my closest frenemy, strolls up to me. He wears his tuxedo almost as well as I do. He's a good looking black man, taller, bigger, but leaner than me. He's always kept his head shaved and his dark, week-old beard trimmed and shaped at the edges like a cultivated hedge.

"Paul," he greets with an easy smile. He's got bright, white teeth and a constant sparkle in his dark eyes. "Love these things. They're always filled with so much potential."

His eyes linger on a woman wearing a filmy and flimsy excuse of a dress. She sees us through the crowd, smiles, then turns back to her husband—on whose arm she's hanging.

I don't want to like Mason. He wears a Rolex, drives a BMW. Thinks too much of himself. Thinks he's God's gift to women. When we go out, as we sometimes do after these fundraisers, he always assumes I'm the wingman. I still haven't forgiven him for New Orleans, when he moved in on this pretty Asian I'd been chatting up all night.

But that's the thing. I look at him and it feels like I'm looking at myself. Well, an African American version of myself, anyway. It's hard to really hate that.

"Glad we could accommodate you," I say.

He exchanges his nearly empty glass for a full one off a passing caterer, and hands me one as well. "You have one hell of a job, Paul, managing all these spoiled, rich fuckers.” He grins. “Present company included.”

And that’s another thing. He may be cocky, but he knows the score. He knows the type of spoon with which he was born—more than most of the people in this room. It’s hard to hate a guy with that amount of self-awareness.

I shrug. “Mostly I take your money and do good things with it. You get the deductions. It’s all symbiotic.”

He claps his hand on my shoulder. “Well, as one of your most valued donors, I grant you leave to relax and play. There’s certainly enough alcohol and pussy here for everyone.”

And that’s Mason in a nutshell. At least he makes me feel like a Boy Scout.

I look around. He may not be subtle, but Mason isn’t wrong. There are some very attractive women here, most of them on the arms of successful men, but not all. I see a blonde facing away from me, her dress leaving her back entirely bare, and for a second, I think it’s Manhattan.

She turns and laughs at something she’s heard, and the illusion shatters. She’s pretty, but her body is softer and rounder than the woman from last night. Shortly, a man joins her—old and overweight and definitely not Manhattan’s husband.

It's hard to believe in romance when in a place like this, thus I don't believe in romance. I look around and all I see are transactions—power and wealth for something beautiful. Mostly it's the men with the wealth and the women with the beauty, but not always. Several older heiresses to great fortune arrive with handsome men younger than me. It's not always so obvious, but it's always there if I look close enough.

I chat some with Mason before going my separate way, schmoozing with the patronage, flirting with a few older donors that I know respond well to it. It’s all a transaction. I'm willing to donate some of my attention. Least I can do for men and women who have donated so much more to me.

My boss and the director of the Dawning Foundation, Larry Park, introduces the man of honor, Gregory Hamilton. The philanthropist accepts his award, gives a speech. He announces a new grant, the Hamilton Grant, and asks the gathering to pledge to it. He will match every dollar, without limit. The crowd applauds his generosity.

“When do I get one of those awards?” Mason asks beside me.

“When you pony up more of Daddy’s cash.”

He chuckles. “I don’t know, man. Would be a PR coup to honor a black man at this very white event.”

“Then I’ll make sure to give your dad a call.”

“You’re an asshole. You know who handles the Coles finances.”

“How could I forget?”

Mason wanders off. I wonder what it would be like to be that rich. To so casually throw out that much money. Gregory Hamilton. Mason Coles. All of these men and women. I scan the crowd, laughing, conversing, seemingly happy.

Then I see them.

Actually, I see him first, a guy I do not recognize sitting alone at a cocktail round, completely inconspicuous as he watches the crowd. I watch him as I get another drink at the bar, and almost lose interest until I realize he's not watching the crowd, but one woman in particular. She’s tall and coltish, her long, sable hair half back before tumbling down between her shoulder blades. Even from across the room, I can see the freckles sprinkled across her face and shoulders, left mostly bare but for the spaghetti straps of her black gown.

She's worth looking at, for sure. I'd noticed her earlier in the evening, shy and quiet, prone to easy laughter, with rich, brown eyes that seem to take everything in. But the inconspicuously conspicuous man isn't watching her like a man admiring a sexy stranger does. He knows her. A jealous ex, perhaps? Is he her boss who thinks tonight is the night he'll get to do something inappropriate?

No. I know what this is even before I see the look pass between them from across the room. Last night's conversation with Nick, with Manhattan, is too fresh.

As if on cue, Mason Coles saunters up to her, says hello. She meets his eyes, color in her cheeks. She takes his hand, her pale, white skin so small and delicate in his large, darker one. He says something that makes her laugh, setting a hand on his arm. I see the ring, bright and glittering. I see the way her eyes slide away from Mason to find the watcher.

He gives a slight nod, caressing the stem of his wineglass obscenely. She blushes, turns back to Mason, and continues to flirt.

These two are married. They're playing the game—the same game Manhattan and her husband were playing. It wouldn't be obvious before last night. Now I see it everywhere. I scan the crowd, wondering if others are doing the same? Plenty of couples have split off from one another. Many men stand or sit alone, nursing drinks. How big is this fantasy? How far does it go?

With my drink in hand but without much of a plan, I set off to Mason and the freckled brunette.

“Evening to the two of you,” I say, most of my greeting directed to the brunette. “Thank you so much for your generosity.”

“Hello, again, Paul,” Mason says. He doesn't look happy to see me, which in turn makes me happy. “You've met Eleanor Heller?”

“I haven't had the pleasure.” I shake Eleanor's hand, more gently than I would a man's, but still firmly. Her hands are warm and small in mine, her skin soft. I don't break eye contact. “Nice to meet you, Mrs. Heller.”

The “missus” reminds her that she's married. I see guilt pass like a shadow across her face, see her fight—and lose—to keep from glancing at her husband. It's quick, barely a flicker. I see Mason's scowl, too, although he tries to hide it. I don't blame him; I would be upset if our roles were reversed and he came in to cock block me, too.

Bro Code dictates that this is wrong, but that's not the code Mason or I have ever played by. This is for New Orleans and the Asian, fucker, I think.

“A pleasure, Paul.” Her accent is British, posh and aristocratic, and that much more sexy because of it.

“Paul here works for the Dawning Foundation. How're the numbers looking so far?”

I glance at him, perturbed. Now I'm part of the help? But his attempt to belittle me in front of Eleanor backfires. She raises her eyebrows in genuine interest—the first, I realize, since she's arrived. “Oh,” she says. “You do great work.”

I smile inside as I sweep my arm wide, encompassing the whole room. “We couldn't do it without the help of everyone here. I hope I'm not the first to thank you.”

I look pointedly at Mason as I say this, throwing the question at him. He scowls again. Eleanor barely sees him.

“Actually, yes, everyone from the charity has been more than gracious. Almost feels like a family.”

“The Dawning Foundation began as a family charity. We've managed to grow it internationally.” I have something to do with that, so I don't even need to fake that sense of pride.

“And how long have you been with Dawning?”

“About five years.” Mason is almost forgotten, and he knows it. “But it's a cause that I've believed in for years. Ever since my dad...”

I'll admit, it makes me slightly slimy to use my father and his epic fight with the disease to pick up a woman, but I'm pretty sure he wouldn't mind. Apple doesn't fall far from the tree and all that.

Eleanor puts a hand on my arm and looks at me sympathetically. At that moment, I think of Manhattan, and how she would scoff. I immediately put her out of my mind.

I smile and move past the heavy stuff. It did the trick of getting the focus off of Mason and onto me, but I don't want Eleanor to feel sorry for me. I want her to want me. Full stop.

"We've all got a reason to be here," I say. "And let's be honest—those reasons usually aren't happy ones. But hey, tonight's a night to celebrate, right? You didn't put on that dress to attend a wake."

Eleanor looks down at her dress, as though remembering how low it hangs off of her, and color springs to her freckled cheeks. "Certainly not."

I pull a couple glasses of wine from a passing server and hand her one. Mason must have slipped away. I wonder if there will be repercussions for pissing off a donor, but all I have to do is look at Eleanor—and think about her husband watching this—and realize that I don't really care. This situation is too intriguing.

"So Mr. Heller couldn't make it?" It's a risk to ask—to remind her of her marriage and stir her doubts back up—but I need to know how committed she is to their game.

She studies her wine glass before answering. When she does, she can barely meet my eyes. "No, he had to leave early, unfortunately. Something related to work."

She doesn't look at him, but I know she wants to. And I know he's staring at us, puzzling out what we're saying, what she's suddenly nervous about.

"Well, I'm glad you stayed." I consider adding something about the party being brighter because of it, but drop the line. She doesn't need it. She was ready the moment I saved her from Mason Coles—even if she didn't know she needed saving until I arrived.

We make small talk, all under the watchful eyes of her husband. She makes excuses to check her phone, texting her husband, who she over-explains by telling me he's not going to make it back tonight.

“I'm sorry to hear that,” I tell her, looking her in the eyes. “Being the gentleman, I guess I'll have to keep you company.”

She giggles. Her blush spreads like peaches and cream across her English complexion. “But you're not really a gentleman, are you?”

She surprises both of us with her forwardness. She giggles again and holds up her glass of wine. “I should stop drinking these before I do something I'll regret.”

Then, she promptly drains the glass.

“You're right. I'll get you some water, if you'd like.”

She looks uncertain, like a girl at the end of a date with a new boy. She's trying to work up the nerve to fulfill her husband's fantasy, but I don't want her doing this for him. I want her doing this for her.

And me.

“Line at the bar is long,” I say without ever taking my eyes away from her. “But I've got some bottles of Evian up in my room.”

The breath goes out of her, but only for a moment. “That sounds convenient.”

I feel the eyes on us, not just her husband's, but Mason's. Maybe my coworkers. This isn't a good idea. This is business and pleasure mixing. But I can't stop myself. I say, “I'm in 1015. Great view of the city. I'll have a bottle of water waiting.”

Her eyes are as wide as saucers, fringed with excitement. Hers, not her husband's. This isn't obligation. This is lust.

She squeezes my arm. "I'll see you in five minutes."

"1015. See you soon."

I walk out, chancing a glance back at her. Her husband does not wait for me to leave before he's across the room, talking to her.

I wonder if I'll ever see her again. I could have asked her to leave with me, but the risk is worth it. If she comes, she'll be absolved from the guilt. She'll be free to enjoy herself. And I intend to rock her world.

Eleanor

My room is quiet. Dark. I turn the lights on and wonder how to get ready for this encounter. This is uncharted territory. I've slept with other married women before, and I've had to sneak away from other parties for illicit liaisons. But this time, her husband knows. This time, I'm not the only one she's sneaking away from.

It's an odd thought, this sharing. I'm not complaining. Eleanor's beauty is clean in a way that begs to be dirtied—and I fully intend to dirty that beauty. But I'm used to inviting women back to my place for no other reason than that they want me. This time, her husband is coming along, even if not literally, and that lights my competitive fire. It becomes as much of a motivator as her body, as her innocence. When she leaves here, I do not want her thinking about him, but about me.

Still, this isn't my first rodeo, and I know that coming on strong with a woman like Eleanor will end poorly. She's still not certain she should be doing this—hell, she may not come up at all. She's a feather, ready to be blown in either direction.

I pull out a bottle of spring water and retrieve two glasses from the bathroom. I find a station on the alarm clock radio, soft jazz with a Latin flair. I consider loosening the bowtie of my tuxedo before deciding against that, too. Let her do that. Let her see this wolf in all of his sheep's clothing. It's more exciting for her that way.

I wait five minutes. She does not come. I wait ten. Still nothing. At fifteen minutes, I do unravel my bow tie and unfasten the top button of my tuxedo shirt. I open the bottle of water, pour myself a glass, and drink it fast. The cool liquid is soothing.

This is fine. She's probably with her husband right now, fucking his brains out as they relive their brush with the forbidden. He invited me back to his room, she's probably telling him.

And you wanted to go, didn't you, baby?

She did. But she didn't.

And I'm here by myself, alone.

You're foreplay, the blonde from last night reminds me.

They don't always leave with the husband, Nick rebuts.

I laugh to myself, sardonic and biting. The self-pity doesn't feel right, an old shirt that no longer fits. I go to the mini-fridge and remove something stronger. There's a small bottle of Jim Beam. That'll do. Unscrewing it, I'm in mid-pour when the knock comes.

I look up at the door, frozen, listening. I imagined that. I must have.

It comes again. She's come.

Taking a deep breath, I calm myself, calm my hands that surprise me by shaking. Setting the glass of bourbon on the desk, I cross the room, glancing at myself in the mirrored front of the hotel closet. No time to fix my tie. The debonair seduction is lost, but not the night.

I glance through the spy hole, and sure enough, there's Eleanor waiting for me. She glances up and down the hall, wringing her fingers nervously in front of her. A few more seconds and she'll be gone.

I open the door before she leaves, and there she is, taking in a breath as she sees me, a stranger to her—a stranger who she is about to fuck.

“Sorry I was delayed,” she says in that lilting British accent. It takes all my willpower not to grab her and kiss her against the door. “Harder to get out of there than I had thought.”

Her makeup has been redone, her lipstick a shade brighter. She needed to make sure her husband was okay with this—or he needed to make sure that she was. Either way, she was here, and that makeup is for me.

“No worries. Please, come on in. The water’s still cold.”

She hesitates for just a fraction of a second, glancing at the door frame as though looking for traps. A blush springs to her cheeks, ruddy and uneven. It’s sexy in its imperfection. She glances at me shyly and enters the room.

Now that we’re alone, her dress is distracting. Long and black, it hangs from her slender body like it was poured on. The spaghetti straps seem to barely support breasts full enough to normally require a bra. Her visibly hard nipples betray that she’s not wearing one. I cannot wait for the dress to be a pool on the floor, but we are not there yet.

She doesn’t carry herself like a woman who knows that she’s sexy. There’s a shyness to her that’s irresistible. Being tall, she stands with her shoulders hunched, and I get the impression that she’s the kind of woman who normally wears much looser clothing than this. She’s delicious.

I hand her the water, retrieving my glass of bourbon. “Cheers,” I say, raising my glass.

“It’s bad luck to toast with water,” she says without raising her own. Instead, she drinks it quickly and hands it back to me. “Share?”

I smile. She’s working up the nerve. I don’t want to get her drunk, but can appreciate some liquid courage. I pour her a swallow from my glass. This time, it’s Eleanor who toasts.

“To charity.”

I almost laugh. “Cheers.”

Our glasses ring. Our eyes never leave one another.

“So, you said you have a view up here?”

“I do.” It is so hard not to give her a suggestive once-over. My pause alone is filled with innuendo. I walk to the window, opening the curtains to let the city lights spill in. The room is only ten stories up, but the hotel was built along a hillside and my room is positioned to take advantage. “Let me get the lights, it's more dramatic.”

She looks poised to tell me no, but doesn't. Just floats to the window as I dim the lighting to almost nothing. The city's glow silhouettes her body. Her pale skin is iridescent. She pretends to stare down at the view, but I can just make out her reflection, and her eyes are all for me. Finishing her drink, she takes a quick breath as I stalk up behind her.

“Beautiful,” I say, meeting her eyes in the reflection.

She shivers. “I don't normally do this.”

“Would you like to go?” I stop just behind her, but don't touch her. Not until she shakes her head.

“No.”

I reach out and run my fingers along her shoulder. Dipping down, I kiss the inside of her neck. She sighs. I feel her pulse racing beneath my lips. Kissing up the nape of her neck, I whisper, “Good choice.”

Our lips meet over her shoulder. She reaches up and behind her, pulling me closer, raking her fingers through my hair. I push my tongue into her mouth, and she meets it hesitantly. At first. Then, her passion takes over.

I hug her close, my hands drifting over her body. I can feel the heat of her skin through the thin dress. Her tits are full in my hands, warm and soft and real. I find her nipples, squeezing them until she moans and breaks the kiss.

I make enough space that when I push the straps of her dress from her shoulders, we can peel it down her body. Beneath, she wears nothing but a black g-string and a pair of sheer, nude thigh highs, topped with intricate lace.

Her ass is a work of art, tight and round, made wicked by the tiny panties. I wonder who picked them out—her husband or her. I run my index finger along the g-string, from the hip to the T-intersection, just beneath the dimples in her lower back. “Love these,” I say. She shivers at the compliment. “Very naughty, Eleanor. Are you a naughty woman?”

She doesn’t respond either way. She’s frozen, waiting for me to make the next move. I thread my thumb beneath the black string, tugging it outward, away from her hip. Our eyes meet in the window, ghosts against the cityscape, and I pull her panties down.

Even in the dim reflection, I can see that she’s wet, her pussy glistening. Her pussy is shaved completely bare, leaving her pale body a flawless work of art.

With my eyes fixed on her smooth mound, I say, “I think you are a naughty woman, Elie. But I think you do everything you can to hide it. Am I right?”

Her lips betray her, curling up at the tips ever so slightly. Whether I have her figured out, or plant a new idea in her, she takes to it shyly. I take her hand in mine and step back, turning her toward me.

She wears stockings, high heels, and nothing else. I wear my full tuxedo. There’s something powerfully sexy about being completely clothed in the presence of a naked woman.

But I don’t want her to feel awkward. I pull her close again, folding her into my thick arms as we kiss, properly this time. In her heels, she only has to tilt her head up a bit. She wraps her arms around my neck, all hesitancy as gone as her dress. I pull her tighter, until she can feel my erection press against her stomach. She moans, wiggling against it.

She breaks the kiss. “Is that...?”

“For you, yes.”

She shakes her head, blushing. No, that's not what she was wondering. I grin. Say, "Yes, it's that big. You like big cocks, Elie?"

"I've never..."

I kiss her neck. "Tonight, you will."

Her slow gasp shakes with anticipation.

"I want you on your knees. Right now."

She's not used to being told what to do. Even if her husband is the reason she's here with me now, I don't think that he ordered her to do it. But right now, in this moment, it's what she wants. It's what she craves.

She does as she's told, holding my gaze all the way to her knees before shifting her attention lower. She traces my bulge with her hand, marveling at the size as it presses into my gut. She searches for a zipper before glancing up at me in confusion.

Tuxedo pants don't have them, so I guide her to the clasp at the hip. She pulls off my boxer briefs along with the pants, freeing my trapped member. It flops forward, stiff and thick, grazing her nose before she can wrap her hand around it.

"It's so big," she whispers, more to herself than to compliment me. I'm used to this. Her eyes go wider. "And you're...shaved."

I keep myself hairless, it's true. It's cleaner, and it makes me look even larger. "So are you," I say. "Makes sex feel so much better, doesn't it?"

When she doesn't answer immediately, I know that she's done this just for tonight. Just for her husband. I intend to prove my point about how good the sex feels, but first...

I shift my hips ever so slightly. She takes the hint, leaning in and wrapping her lips around my cockhead. Her blowjob is slow at first, hesitant as she explores the contours of her first new cock in years. She runs her tongue along the outside, lapping along the smooth root of my shaft before swallowing it again.

“Look at me,” I order.

She does, making that sensual eye contact. I see her excitement there, mixed with fear—fear of not performing well, fear of what she’s doing, fear of the strength of her own lust. But she doesn’t look away.

“That’s it, Elie. Suck my cock. Suck as much of it as you can.”

She tries to, but gags, pulling back. “It’s so big,” she repeats.

“Have you ever deep-throated a guy?”

She shakes her head. “My husband isn’t...”

I wonder if she’s the type who gets off on her husband being disparaged. Eleanor seems like she wouldn’t, so I hold back.

“That’s okay. Just relax your throat and try again.”

She tries. She gags again, but takes more of me this time. On her third pass, I help her, taking hold of her head and shoving my cock into the back of her throat. She chokes. Her nostrils flare. I hold her there, fucking her throat in tight thrusts before yanking free. She coughs, but doesn’t look away, doesn’t protest.

“You liked that, didn’t you?”

She nods. Barely.

“Say it.”

“I...liked it.”

“Liked what?”

“Sucking your... thing... into my throat.”

“My thing?”

Despite everything—despite her being naked and on her knees with her own saliva glistening on her chin—she blushes. It’s adorable. “Your cock.”

I unbutton my tuxedo shirt and peel it off. Beneath, I wear nothing else. She eyes me greedily, taking in my eight pack, my muscled chest and broad shoulders. I don’t have chest hair—a genetics thing more than an aesthetics one—and I wonder how different that is from her husband.

Unprompted this time, she goes back to sucking my cock. I can already feel her confidence grow. She’ll be better at this when she returns to her husband later tonight. I wonder what he’ll think of that.

Manhattan enters my mind, tossing her blond hair and looking up at me with challenge in her eyes. I wonder if she would learn anything new from me. I can’t imagine that she would, but my blood rises to the challenge.

I grasp Eleanor’s head, holding it steady as I begin to fuck her mouth again. She moans, clutching the backs of my thighs as she accepts me. Her eyes are wide, locked onto mine, filled with lust and submission. When was the last time she looked at her husband like that?

The thought pushes me over the edge.

I pull back just enough to explode in her mouth. Eleanor jacks me off, both hands working my shaft furiously as she swallows my load. It’s enough of a sight that I don’t go soft, but I’m no longer hard.

“On the bed,” I say. It’s not a suggestion, and she obeys. The innocence is gone. She’s alive now with what she’s done, embracing it, her face on fire. She crawls backwards, on her elbows, inviting me to look at her nudity as she looks at my own. She likes what she sees.

With my shoulders back and my chest forward, I advance like a predator. Her breath catches. She opens her legs for me, putting her shaved pussy on lewd display. It blossoms, pale pink to compliment her paper white skin. My cock hardens as I imagine sinking into her tight sex. That’s not my immediate destination, though. I want her to remember tonight forever. I want it to change her, and to do that, I need to pull out every stop.

I crawl onto the bed, capturing her long legs in my hands as I kiss along her thigh. I keep my eyes fixed on hers—just as I trained her to do with me earlier. This isn't just a physical connection. I want to get inside of her. Make her feel like she's special...because tonight, to me, she is special.

I've been with a lot of women over the years, and I remember all of them. None of them are just a number to me. I'm not interested in padding stats that no one but me cares about. I'm interested in having a good time, and in order for me to have a good time, my partner needs to have one, too.

Her thighs are taut. She holds her breath as I near her sex. She knows what comes next, but is wound up on the anticipation anyway.

I run my thumb over her smooth mound. She shivers. If she did this just for tonight, then I can take advantage of that. Everything will be more intense—and she'll associate that intensity with me. I blow softly, sending warm air across her sex. She gasps.

Her clit peeks out, engorged already, waiting for my touch. I deny her. At first. Instead, I lower my head and sweep my tongue along her pussy lips.

“Uh, yes,” she groans.

“You have a pretty pussy,” I say between licks. “Secretly naughty. Just like you.”

Eleanor sighs as I near her clit, swirling my tongue up and over her mound before darting it back down.

“Please...” she whispers. She lifts her hips to my mouth. I pull away, just out of reach.

“Uh, uh,” I say. Firmly, I press her back down onto the mattress, my hands on her hips. “Not until I think you're ready.”

I press two fingers inside of her. She moans, rocking her head back. She tries to push her hips up again, but I hold her fast with my left hand. She may be tall and lean and coltish, but I'm stronger.

I wait until her moans turn into more of a growl, until they emerge from somewhere deeper, somewhere more desperate. That is when I attack, sliding my tongue along the outside of her clit. It hits her like a tsunami. She shrieks, her whole body rolls back as she tries to burrow into the bed.

This time, when she lifts her hips to my mouth, I let her, moving my hand beneath her ass, lifting her up to me. The angle is perfect. I cover her mound with my lips, my tongue and fingers working her in unison. She lasts no more than thirty seconds. My jaw isn't even sore yet when she screams the last of her orgasm and tries to push me away.

Her chest heaves as she recovers, her fingers laced through her damp hair, her eyes closed. "That was...the best I've ever..."

I climb up onto the bed, cock in hand. It's now fully erect. "The best is yet to come."

She looks at me, a smile springing to her lips. This woman is gorgeous. I wonder if she realizes just how beautiful she is. I kiss her, tasting the last hints of myself in her mouth. I don't mind it all that much. To me, it's just a reminder of how I've corrupted her.

"Take my cock," I say. "I want you to put it in you."

She reaches down, her hand warm as it wraps around my shaft. "I don't think I can take it all."

"We can go slow if you want," I reassure. "But trust me, you can."

She breathes in deeply, but doesn't release it. Not until she pulls me forward, guiding my cock against her sex. I consider bringing up protection. I've got condoms in my tuxedo jacket—I was a Boy Scout, after all. But I also know that I'm clean, get tested every other week, and I'm Eleanor's first man in years. If she's good with bare back, who am I to complain?

She releases that stored up breath all at once, as soon as I sink the very tip of my cock into her soft pussy. It's tight, but I push forward until the crown nudges into her.

"Uhh, God!" she moans. She starts to formulate something else, but then just repeats herself, faster this time. "Uh, God!"

I grin, leaning down to kiss her again. As we shift, I sink deeper. She tries to kiss back, but can't concentrate. Her eyes are shut tight. Her hands claw at my back. Her heel grazes along my buttocks as if considering whether to press into me.

"Just relax," I whisper. "Just focus on how good it feels."

"It feels...so...big."

I nuzzle her neck, seeking out her most sensitive of spots. I find one in the hollow space behind her ear and exploit it mercilessly. My cock sinks the rest of the way into her tightness, where I rest, letting her get used to my size.

"So full," she sighs.

"And you love it." I pull out an inch before pushing back in, my movements measured. They still bring a gasp from her.

"What are you doing to me?" she says.

"Oh, this is just the warm up, Elie doll. Just wait."

She looks up at me like a revelation, like she's having an epiphany, like she barely understands how she got here. I recognize it, even though I don't understand it. She came up here mostly because of her husband and his fantasy. She never considered how good it could be for her.

Just as that possibility dawns on her, I begin to really fuck her. I begin with short, tight thrusts, our skin slapping wetly. I grind my pelvis against her clit, against her mound, smooth skin on smooth skin. She moans at this, each time, as I pull away and launch another strike.

When her heel finally does dig into my back, I shift into the next phase of fucking. She wants it, and she doesn't want it light. I pull her other leg, her right, against my body, holding it over my shoulder. It opens her to me, makes her vulnerable, making her mine. Pinned in place, I smile down at her, glancing along her sweat-slick body. I pull back until just the tip of my cock is inside of her, pause for a beat, and thrust forward.

She exclaims something blasphemous that's lost in a moan. She closes her eyes, arching her full tits up, her head thrown back. Her sable hair is a sweaty halo across the mattress, a crown of asps.

I take her hand, guiding it down between her legs where my cock thrusts furiously in and out of her. She understands, her fingers seeking out her clit, playing with it, tickling my balls when she can. It's her left hand, I realize as her wedding band flashes in the low light. It has small diamond chips encrusted along it that catch and refract light as she fingers herself.

This woman is married, and right now, her husband is somewhere wondering what she's doing. He waits for her, part of him hoping that she's just teasing him, part of him hoping for more. I want to give her more. So much fucking more.

Eleanor comes first. I fuck her through her climax, driving it higher, louder. "Let it go, baby. Just fucking let it go," I groan with each thrust. Despite the earlier blowjob, my own orgasm builds. Something about the diamond ring, about being the man she needs me to be. About being her bull.

I snort at the word, then nearly lose it and start laughing at myself. Bull. Is that what I am? Is that what I want to be?

I pull out of her, flip her onto her hands and knees, and enter her from behind. At this angle, I sink deeper than before, and she cries out. Gripping her by the hips, I ride her hard, yanking back on her with each thrust. My arms begin to burn. She buries her face in the bed, unable to stave off her rolling climaxes, one blurring into the next. I feel her fingers between her legs, circling and slapping her clit. It warms my heart.

"That's it, Elie. Be a slut for me."

She moans something almost intelligible.

“That’s who you want to be, isn’t it? That’s why you’re in my room right now, and not with your husband?”

“Gah!”

“You project a prim girl. A proper one. That’s who you need to be. But deep down... deep down...” I thrust hard. “...you want to be naughty. You want to be bad. You want to be someone’s slut. Don’t you?”

“Yes,” she breathes. Least I think she does.

“What’s that?”

She moans. I slap her ass, leaving a red imprint. She squeals at the pain, and I feel her pussy tighten around me. She’s coming again. I spank her some more, drawing a grunt each time as she squirms through a messy, loud orgasm.

I pull free once she’s had enough, once she’s barely conscious. I roll her onto her side and slide into place behind her, spooning her, holding her lean body against my muscled one.

Running my hand along her hip, I tell her how sexy she is.

“Yet you haven’t come yet,” she says, although I hear the playfulness in her voice.

I kiss her neck and draw a sigh. “I’m not sure you could handle it yet.”

She giggles. “Such a gentleman.”

I scoff at that.

“Hey, if I have an inner slut, then you have an inner gentleman.” Her British accent makes that sound so much sexier.

“So you admit that you have an inner slut.”

“No dodging, Mr. Gentleman.”

“I’m not sure you understand what that word means. I just seduced another man’s wife back to my room. Not exactly the mark of chivalry.”

“You give yourself too much credit. Maybe I was waiting to be seduced.”

I caress her stomach, cupping the soft weight of her breast. “I know you were.” I brush her nipples, feeling the points harden at my touch. “You’ve been waiting longer than you realize.”

“I love my husband.”

“I didn’t say you didn’t. But you’re also looking for some added excitement.”

She sighs as I touch her, and for a moment, I think I’ve lost her to that. Then, she says, “He knows.”

I know what she’s talking about, but play ignorant for her sake.

“He knows I’m up here,” she explains. “He was watching us at the gala.”

“You told me he left.”

She turns, her brow furrowed with worry. “I’m sorry. I didn’t think anything would happen.” She takes a deep breath and rushes on. “He’s got this fantasy. It’s weird, I know, but he gets excited about the idea of me sleeping with other men. I’ve never done it. Never thought I would, honestly, but sometimes we play this game where I pretend to be alone and other men flirt with me while he watches.” It all comes out in a rush, but her eyes never leave mine. She ends by biting her lip and waiting for my response.

“Is he going to be a problem for me?” I ask. I realize only as it leaves my lips that it’s an honest question. If Eleanor and her husband are big donors, they could be a real problem for me.

She turns in my arms, facing me. “No, not at all. You’re his fantasy come true.”

“And not yours?”

She looks away, smiling sweetly. “Well, you're...unexpected.”

“Do you even realize how sexy you are?” I ask. “You make me want to do very naughty things to you.”

Her face reddens even more. “We’ve got a little more time.”

She thinks this ends after tonight. I know better, but don't contradict her now.

“I want to watch you ride me,” I say. “I want to watch your face as I fill you with my come.”

She laughs breathily. “I was supposed to get you to wear a condom.”

“I'm clean. I got tested just two days ago.”

“So am I.”

“So climb aboard.”

I roll onto my back as she swings her stocking-clad legs over my body. Her hand looks tiny as she holds my cock and places it against her pussy.

“I'm never going to get used to how big you are,” she says as she lowers onto me.

“Bigger than your husband?”

“Much bigger.” She giggles.

“I think you're already used to me.” We begin to fuck faster. She leans into me, her heavy breasts bouncing, her nipples grazing my chest. “That's it, let that inner slut out. Ride my cock. Ride it.”

She grits her teeth, getting into it. I steady her hips, driving up into her. She pushes up, throwing her long hair back as she nears yet another orgasm.

She's a goddess in my lap, another man's, but mine right now. A part of her will always be mine.

“Lean back more,” I say. “Trust me, it'll feel great.”

She bows backwards, reaching back and steadying herself on one of my thighs. At the new angle, I know that my cock will pass across her g-spot with each thrust. She feels it immediately, her breath catching, holding, holding, and then—

“Ohmygod!” It spills out as one word, then slower. Punctuated. “Oh. My. God!”

I thumb her clit and her cries blend again, this time more animal sound than human. She's so far gone that I'm surprised when I feel her fingers stroke my balls, tugging down. That's when I hear what she's saying—“Come, come, come”—the plea slurry and nearly shapeless. “Uh! Uh! Uh!”

I can't hold out any longer. I don't try. Yanking her onto my lap, I throw back my head and roar as I explode inside of her. She screams, meeting the intensity of my orgasm with her own.

I fill her, and keep filling her. She gasps with each throb of my cock, with each burst of come. Her moans give way to an incredulous laugh. “How much more do you have in there?”

“What can I say? You bring out the best in me.”

She rolls her eyes, but keeps laughing, collapsing onto me. We embrace with the closeness of lovers, the shyness and awkwardness gone. I want to fuck her again, right now, but know that it's time to let her go. To get back to her husband and tell him just how naughty she's been.

She senses the end, too, cuddling for only a couple minutes before pulling away. “Well, that was a lot of fun.”

I kiss her. Ask her for her phone.

“Why?” she asks suspiciously.

“Just to put my number in there.”

“And why would I want you to do that?”

“So you can text me when we should meet again.”

She shakes her head as she grabs her g-string, pulling it on. “Sorry to disappoint, but this was a one-off.”

One-off. So British. “Then don't text me back.” I rise off the bed, but don't join her at our pile of clothes. “But I bet you will.”

“Do you now?” She's more amused than annoyed, but I like the newly kindled fire in her. I wonder if this is how she acts with her husband, rather than the coy woman I seduced.

“I'm almost positive.”

“And what makes you so sure?”

“Well, after you relive tonight with your husband, he'll want you to do it again. So will you. And next time, we can take pictures.”

She considers it, intrigued. I swing my legs off the bed, and her eyes go to my half-erect member. “Give me your phone, Elie. I'll take some pics now of you sucking my cock. A taste of what we can do next time.”

I have her. She reaches into her purse and retrieves her mobile.

End of part one

Bull

An excerpt from Bull's Eye 2: Exploring the Hotwife Fantasy

[Unknown Number]: You were right. He's into it.

[Unknown Number]: This is Eleanor, by the way.

Two weeks have passed since the gala, since I took Eleanor Heller back to my room and officially made her a hotwife. Which, I guess in the parlance, makes me a bull.

I chuckle at the term. I've been with a lot of women over the years, but I've never thought of myself as a bull. Not until this past week, when I started reading about the hotwife lifestyle. The idea has grown on me. Elie was fun. The blonde from the Marriott, Manhattan, would have been fun, too. Why not give this thing a try?

I enjoy fucking. I get off on the wrongness that comes with taking another man's wife, as surely as Elie got off when I kissed her for the first time. That the husband knows—that he, too, gets off on it—introduces an added challenge to the mix, sparking a sense of competition in me.

These husbands want me to do something to their wives that they cannot. That's not the challenge, though. I know I can do that. No, the challenge is to make their wives believe it, too. To convert them from just humoring their husbands' fantasy to craving it themselves.

I add Eleanor Heller to my contact list, but wait until the end of the day to respond. She needs to stew.

[Me]: Elie! I was wondering when I'd hear from you.

She responds almost immediately. I imagine the English woman sitting in her home in a short, silky nightgown, staring out at the moon-drenched gardens of her inevitably large estate. I think of her nipples pressing hard and visible through the thin material. I think of her swirling her fingernails along the pale, white skin of her inner thigh.

She was hot, and not in the way that my one-night stands normally are. There was a sweetness to her, an innocence to her freckled cheeks. Even her body, despite her full breasts and curvy ass, was slender in a soft way that spoke to good genes more than hard work.

[Elie]: :P That's not my name, you know.

[Me]: It's not the name of the proper woman I met downstairs at the gala, but it's definitely the name of the girl who begged for me to come inside of her later on.

I stir at the memory. I can still feel her newly shaved pussy wrapped around my cock as I hammered her from behind, as she cried out, moaned, gasped, begged.

[Elie]: I can't believe I let you do that. Ronald was so pissed!

And then, immediately after, a follow up text:

[Elie]: Well, at first, anyway. Now he seems to get off on it. It's...odd.

From what I've read, that sounds about right. The husbands in these arrangements always seem so conflicted. Like they can't seem to make up their mind whether they want it or not. That's part of the excitement, though—the sense of being out of control.

I like things ordered. I'm a huge fan of being in control. It's probably one of the reasons I've never fallen in love. Takes a certain level of insanity to do that. These guys take the insanity further. I don't understand it, but I'm willing to take advantage of it.

[Me]: Send me the photo. I want a copy of my own.

For example, Eleanor Heller, wife of Ronald Heller, would never send a man she barely knows such a lewd picture. Ronald Heller, husband of Eleanor Heller, should have made her delete the photos immediately after seeing them. But I'm not dealing with Eleanor and Ronald. I'm dealing with their wilder personas—wild because of me.

[Elie]: You can't share it with anyone.

[Me]: Of course I won't.

I won't. I'm not that kind of guy. I don't need a trophy room to enjoy receiving trophies.

The photo comes through a moment later, and it's just as pornographic as I remember. I took the photos at the very end of the night. She was on her knees, staring up at the camera where I held it. Her soft brown hair was tied back into a tight ponytail, keeping it out of her face as I buried my cock to its shaved hilt in her mouth. It took some work, but we got her to take me fully, all nine, hard inches of my maleness. Her mascara had begun to run and tears glistened in her large, bright eyes, but she looked so fucking pleased with herself.

[Me]: So hot. Can't wait to feel that again.

A minute later, she responds that she can't wait, either.

[Me]: How about next Saturday night. I can keep the night open if you promise to show me a good time.

[Elie]: Let me check with my husband.

[Me]: Don't keep me waiting. My calendar fills up pretty quickly.

It's a cruel thing to say, but my cock is doing more of the thinking than it should. I really can't wait to see her again. I'm already thinking of new and exciting things I want to do to her.

[Elie]: I won't keep you waiting.

She gets back to me an hour later. We're on.

Acknowledgments

This one's been in the works for so long, there's no way I can thank all the people that I need to thank, so let me hit the highlights.

First, thanks to Kirsten McCurran, who first came up with the title, "Bull's Eye," and then so graciously allowed me to use it for this series.

Thanks to Ben Boswell and Max Sebastian, as always, for reading older drafts and helping me shape the pacing and narrative of not just the series. Thanks for KT Morrison, who inspired the structure of this series (and is just inspirational in general!). Thanks to Arnica Butler, another amazing author, for making up the fake social networking/dating app "DeBauch", which is featured prominently in this series.

Thanks to my beta readers, as always, in particular Javi, who helped me work through a sticky point in book 4.

Thanks to my wife, not only for giving me the space to write and publish these books, but also for taking me to romantic comedies at a young and impressionable age, which indirectly inspired so much of this series.

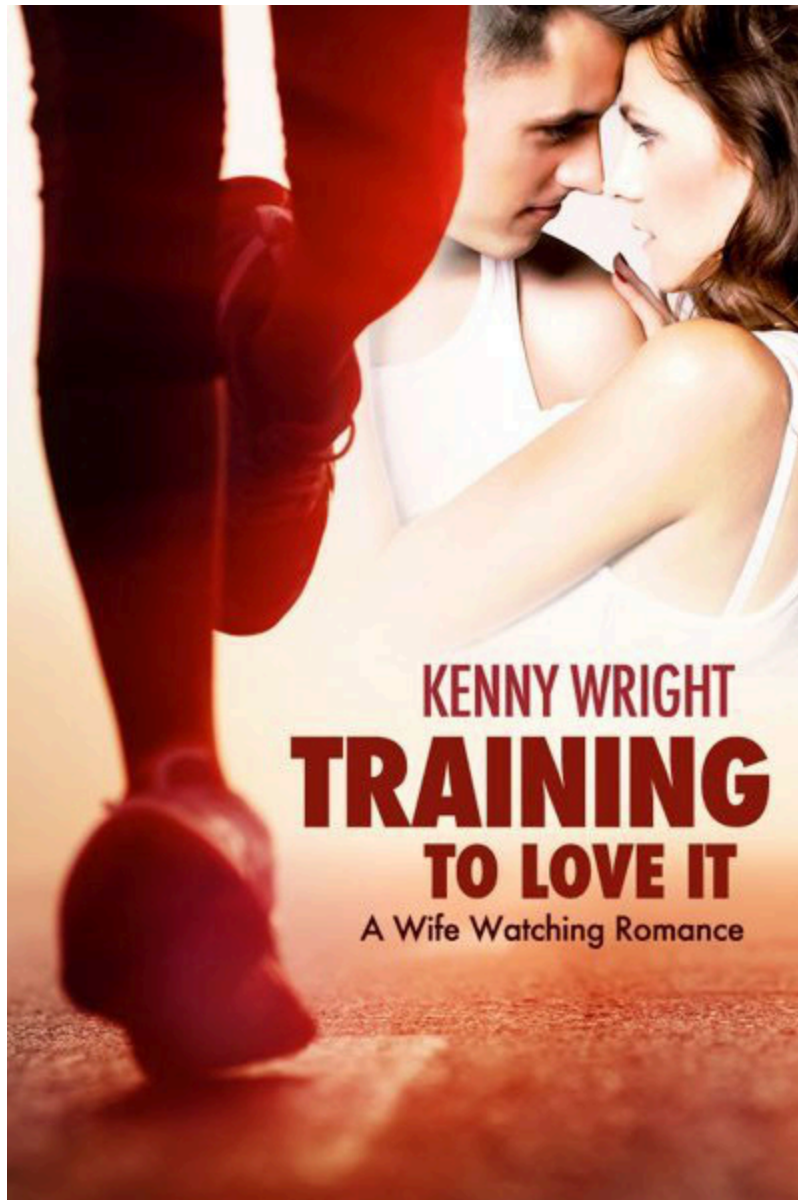

And thanks to you, reader, for not only paid to read, but took the time to read, and if there's one thing I've learned over the years, time can be a much scarcer resource than money.

Cheers!

Also by Kenny Wright

Like what you just read? Check out these other books by Kenny Wright (or browse my catalog at <http://www.kennywriter.com/books/>).

Training to Love It Series (3 books)

Can a wife-watching fantasy be trained?

When Erin comes home from the gym and lets slip that her new personal trainer is a man, Tom doesn't know how to react. When he overhears Erin admitting that she's attracted to AJ, her trainer, he becomes even more confused. He wants to be supportive, but he feels jealous. He wants to be understanding, but he doesn't even understand his own feelings. Every time he thinks of Erin with AJ, his heart begins to race. Every time she says his name, his breath catches in his chest.

AJ ends up pushing more than just his wife's physical limits. As Tom watches this newer, stronger, more assertive woman emerge with each training session, he realizes that this other man is pushing the limits of their marriage and their happy life. How far would they go for a fantasy? And whose fantasy is it? And what happens when things go too far?

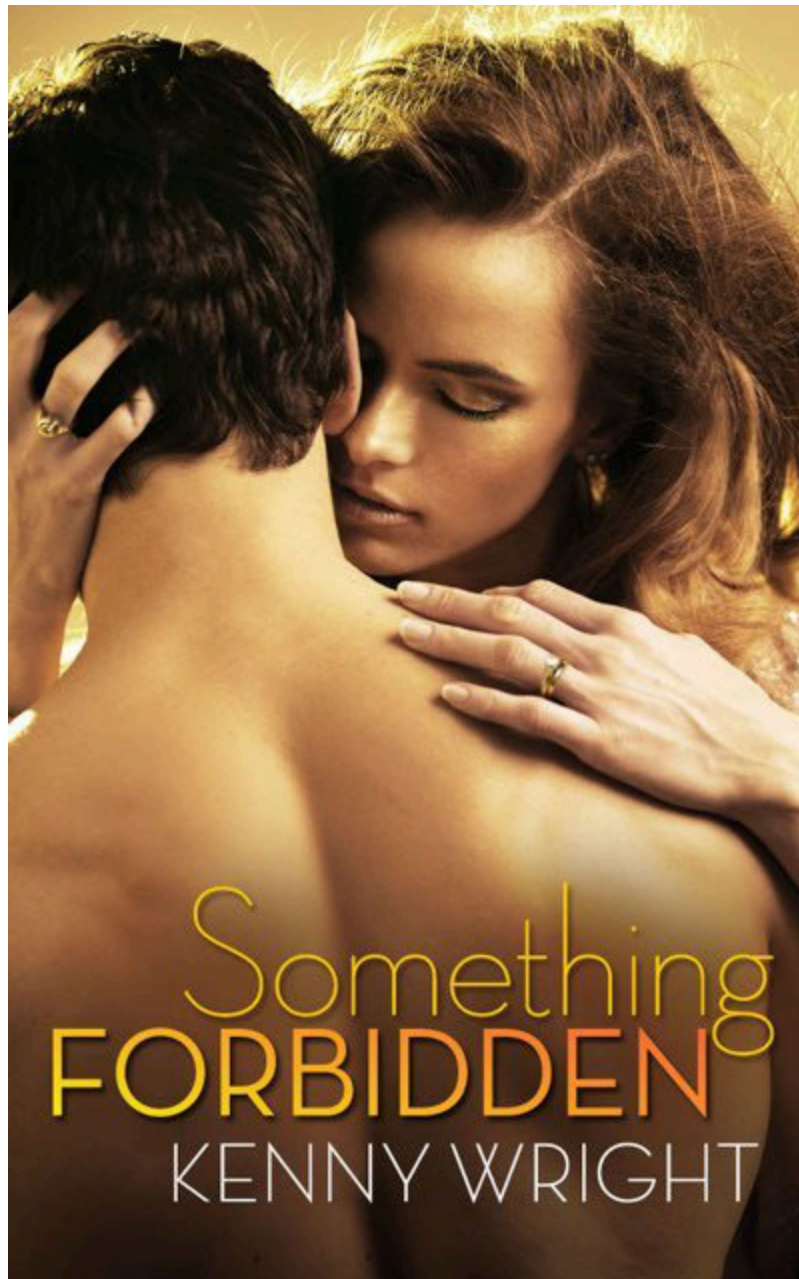

Training to Love It

Training to Love It 2

Training to Love It 3

Forbidden Series (2 books)

Wife-watching. Swinging. Consensual infidelity. These are not concepts that Maxwell Callahan understands, let alone fantasizes about. Max has a great life: husband, father, successful bar owner. He has no plans to shake it up.

And then he witnesses a couple play a dangerous game of pick-up in his bar: the wife gets picked up, the husband watches. A seed takes root and starts to grow. What would it be like to watch his beautiful wife, Katie, in the same situation?

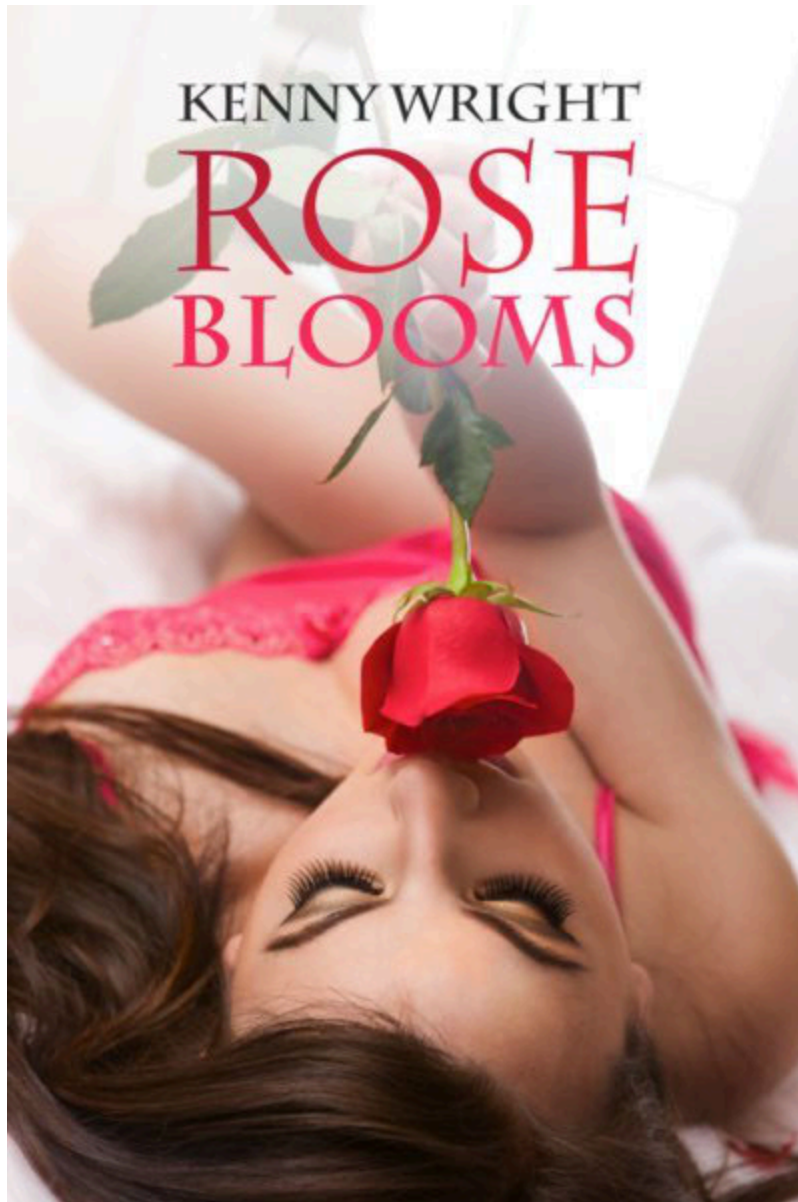

Smart, successful, yet a little conservative, he never thought Katie would entertain such an idea...until she does. This suburban couple is about to take a wild ride as they turn fantasy into reality. Don't miss this marital adventure as Katie and Max try something forbidden.

Something Forbidden

Nothing Forbidden

Rose Blooms

When Rose and Andy Shaw learn that their neighbors have separated, they are shocked. Jordan and Louis always seemed so...normal. Like them. Only their neighbors weren't normal. Louis has a dark fantasy, one that eventually pushes his marriage to the brink. He wants to share his wife, Jordan, beautiful and blonde, with other men.

Andy and Rose are reminded of a time early in their relationship, when their sex life was riskier and things were more exciting. When a new man enters their lives and starts to push Rose's buttons, they wonder if they are more similar to their neighbors than they want to believe.

Find out what happens when Louis's fantasy rubs off on Andy and Rose discovers that Jordan has secrets of her own. Discover how vibrant this rose blooms.

Find Rose Blooms online

Annie's Affair

She cheated, and it turned him on.

Travis never thought his wife would cheat on him. Never considered it once in nineteen long years of marriage...until Rick entered their lives.

Travis never thought an affair would turn him on...until he found Annie's diary and started reading about his wife's attraction to her new, younger editor. Confident and attractive, Rick made his intentions clear. He wanted Annie, and she responded. She was tempted. She was attracted. She was conflicted.

Suddenly, Travis is able to see Annie the way Rick does—the way he used to before his perception was dulled by the long years of marriage. Annie is an attractive, smart, fun woman, with an adventurous side ready to be unleashed.

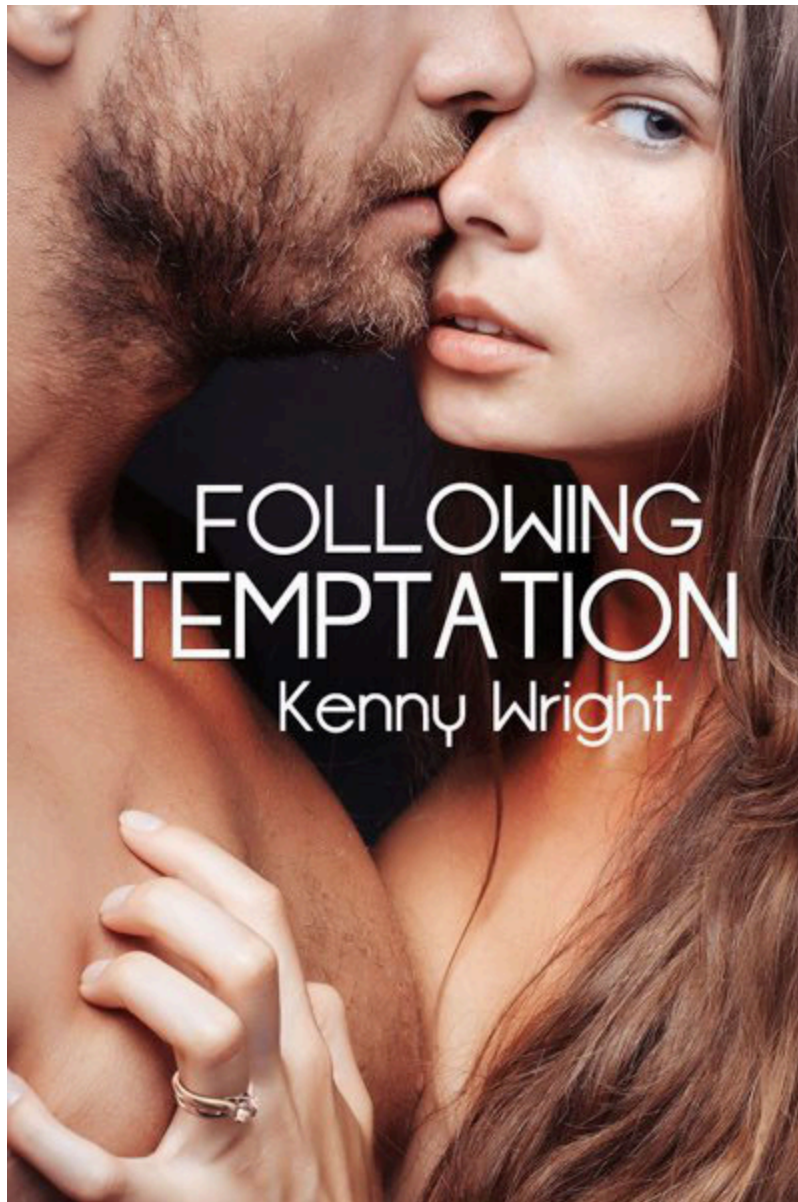

Travis never thought he'd want to watch his wife sleep with another man... until he did. And then it became his obsession.

Annie's Affair follows Travis as he witnesses his wife fall into the arms of another man, and becomes just as complicit in the betrayal as his wife.

Find Annie's Affair online

Following Temptation

Temptation waits just around the corner. Follow and see where it leads.

Life is good for Michael and Laura Richards, if a little stale. That is, until Michael follows his neighbor, Dane, to the house of the married Jessica, and watches Dane take full advantage of the voluptuous brunette. Michael shouldn't watch, but he can't stop himself, and the veneer of his sleepy suburb peels away to reveal its naughtiness.

Michael confesses the adventure to his wife, Laura, and the couple embarks on a journey of sexual awakening, following Dane and Jessica into a world that is as uncomfortable as it is irresistible. But there are layers within layers, and when Laura befriends Jessica and learns that not everything is as straightforward as it seems, just how far is she willing to follow her neighbor? Prepare yourself for a tale of voyeurism, naughty neighbors, sexy wives, and illicit temptation.

Find Following Temptation online

Browse all my books at kennywriter.com, hotwifebooks.com, or any major online bookstore.

About the Author

I'm just a guy who writes what I like to read: steamy, explicit erotica that's just crazy enough to be true. I write romantic erotica. I write about characters that I like, and endings that feel natural. I write stories where husbands watch their wives get naughty. I write about MILFs and erotic games and loss of innocence. I believe in a world where men read and appreciate erotica, and hope to contribute to it word by word.

Find me online at www.kennywriter.com, or follow me on Twitter at @kennywriter. I also operate eroticaformen.com, which may or may not look like crap right now.

