To The Reader

A Summer Vacation was originally intended to be a short story in a collection (to be published soon, by five of the best authors in this genre). My own story got a bit long, and a few other things happened along the way, so I've decided to publish A Summer Vacation as a standalone novella.

My last two series were prolix, and very heavy, and very complex. This book is a drastic change from that tone; for me, it was a much-needed breather after such dense writing. This is a light-hearted story, mostly intended to capture the erotic excitement of summer.

As always, I hope you enjoy, and thank you for your continued support.

“Jesus,” Steve said. “This place.”

Helena placed her hand on his shoulder. “They have a lot of family money,” she assured him.

He had always known that, but for some reason, ten years out of school, there was more of a sting to their friends' opulence. Maybe because it contrasted so starkly with his own mediocrity.

Perhaps because that mediocrity itself seemed less likely, at this stage in life, to be temporary.

Helena and Steve were standing on a stone porch. A woman wearing jeans and a t-shirt but who nonetheless appeared to be a maid of some kind had led them through a labyrinth of marble-floored rooms, oozing with Persian rugs, ornate vases, and expensive-looking art, to stand here, overlooking the garden.

They had passed under a dramatic stone archway and into what Reza had referred to as “the yard.”

When Reza and Zahra had invited Steve and Helena for a barbeque at the new house they had moved into, they had described the place a little differently.

“It has a nice little pool,” Zahra had said.

“I made an outdoor kitchen,” Reza had told them.

And, in their most accurate statement:

“It has a lot more space than our last place.”

These were the non-palatial descriptions that had led Steve to believe he was going to be standing around on a nice wood deck, in a large yard with a good patch of grass. Because Reza and Zahra were reportedly “well-off,” he had expected some expensive landscaping and a decent pool.

Like Steve's rich clients in Cherry River.

This was more like fucking Versailles. It was not more than half an hour away from Steve and Helena's modest home in a nearby suburb, but it was a different world.

The stone porch where they were standing ended to either side of them in two stone staircases that curved around and let out, meters below them, facing each other. More stone pavement expanded toward the pool, which was not a typical residential pool, but a spectacular one, more suited to a five-star hotel than a residence. The floor of the pool itself was made of an expensive stone, and it stretched away for an improbable distance until it fell away at an edge, an infinity pool. Part of the pool curved around to a cavernous area with a waterfall tumbling down the same expensive-looking stone. Beyond the edge of the pool, below whatever man-made cliff was there, the immaculate coiffed trees and landscaping of an estate stretched away. It was all very wet, all very fountain-filled and green.

And this, in the middle of what was essentially a desert.

“Hullo!” Zahra's nearly-flawless, boarding-school English accent rang out from below, and Steve looked down to see Helena's old college friend (the couple were really Helena's friends, more than Steve's) waving from a deck chair.

It had been almost ten years since Steve had seen Zahra, and evidently the time had done nothing to her. At least from where he stood. Her raven-black hair shone in the sun like polished ebony, still quite long. Enormous black sunglasses, very glamorous, covered her eyes, resting on her petite nose, which she never hesitated to explain was “doctored.” Her full lips, painted so red that they could be seen from where they stood, moved beneath her glasses as she spoke quietly to a woman next to her. The woman Zahra spoke to was quite fit, and probably pretty, but next to Zahra she looked dull and dumpy, even with a mane of pretty brown hair and a pleasant figure.

Zahra's skin was an extraordinary toasted almond color, and it was everywhere: the bikini she was wearing seemed made of little more than strings. Her slender Persian frame was long. Her torso stretched between the small scraps of bikini, smooth, without a trace of fat on it; her legs were even longer, and they were firm but did not bear the tone of exercise, which Zahra hated. She was thin and fit by good birth. Evidently a long lineage of beautiful women, and her own insistence on rarely eating, had maintained her in pristine condition all these years.

Her legs were crossed at her slender, sexy ankle. She had not removed a pair of strappy heels that wound around her skin, faintly reminiscent of bondage and incredibly alluring. Steve's eyes were drawn to them, and he felt a flutter deep and low in his abdomen, stretching down into his balls. A submerged memory gripped him: Zahra's slinky walk, always in the highest heels she could find.

And she was about to do it in a bikini.

She rose from her lounge chair, and began to slink toward the staircase. Her olive-brown limbs glided sexily and sent Steve's pulse through the roof. She paused after a few steps, and without gesturing or saying anything, made it evident, in the way that Zahra made all things evident, that she was not going any further. They would come to her.

Helena went to the left, and so, feeling theatrical, Steve went to the right. Helena was scowling at him when they rounded their respective staircases and were facing each other. He took her hand and squeezed it.

He knew Helena was excited to see her old friends, but she was also filled with a certain amount of insecurity. Seeing Zahra in her stunning bikini, untouched by the effects of child-bearing, was probably stressing her out.

Women. Such strange relationships with each other.

Zahra had her hand on her hip, and she was biting her lower lip. She took off her sunglasses to better inspect them. With the brash honesty that marked her personality and which she claimed to be cultural, she delivered, deadpan:

"Look at you two. I expected you to be fat and gray like everyone else." Then she screamed, without taking her eyes off of them: "Reza!"

But the godlike Reza was already moving toward them, already in mid-stride. A similarly inky black head of hair, somehow thicker with age and without a single gray marring its raven-color, rested atop his hard-edged face. There was a certain regal quality to Reza's appearance. (He had been scouted by a casting director once for a role as an Arab prince, which he had declined as a matter of Persian pride.) He had a devastatingly handsome face, and a muscular body, also unchanged by time, that he was showing off without a shirt on. His chest was broad, but an adolescent leanness pervaded everywhere else on him. Effortlessly masculine and gorgeous, a perfect complement to his effortlessly feminine and gorgeous wife.

The pair gave off an air of good breeding. However classist and un-American it might have been to think such a thing, that thought always surfaced in Steve's mind when he was around them.

Steve gave a quick glance at Helena. She was smiling rigidly at Zahra.

But Steve knew. He knew Helena had taken a good long drink of Reza and his devastating body. He used to catch her doing it all the time.

He knew she looked at Reza. He would love to know what she imagined.

Zahra gave Helena a kiss on the cheek. Zahra wasn't a hugger, nor was she one of those women who squealed eight octaves above her regular voice when she saw female company. Zahra, in fact, always moved with a rich woman's liquid slowness. She was there to be looked at, her every move seemed to say.

What was more, she wanted to be looked at.

Reza went right for Helena, and took both of her hands and held them up. It looked like he did it to better display her body for his perusal. He seemed to drink her up, just as slowly as Zahra moved. Then he pulled Helena to him, and gave her a sensual hug.

Steve stared at Reza's bare skin against his wife's body. He had a sweet and errant thought, and looked away to avoid letting it get out of control and reveal itself in the form of an erection.

A college-aged kid, who looked like some kind of caterer, came by with a drink. Zahra took it without looking at him. She said something out of the corner of her mouth that sent the boy scurrying to a bar on the side of the pool.

"We're so pleased you two could come," Reza said. He always talked like this for a bit, overly formal, and then eased into his "casual" friendliness. "Do you want something to drink? Let's talk about old times."

Zahra rolled her eyes. "You sound like Count Dracula." To Steve and Helena: "He sounds like Count Dracula, he's taking the piss." She rolled her big brown eyes, thick with dark, long eyelashes, in Reza's direction. "Stop it. I already sent Thad for drinks."

Steve felt the familiar sensation of disquiet that he had always felt around Reza and Zahra stirring inside of him. It was an unusual feeling. In part, the presence of these two exotic and sophisticated beauties never failed to make his own life seem dull by comparison, and some of that feeling turned into a sour sense of inadequacy inside of himself. It mingled with an allure, an attraction, and a host of dirty thoughts. The combination made him feel seasick.

Zahra was now bringing an ice-cold drink, sweating with condensation, to her lips. She closed her full mouth around the straw, and Steve felt his cock twitch. He looked away, and unconsciously put his hand on Helena's elbow.

Zahra shook her glorious mane of inky hair after she had sucked the sticky red daiquiri liquid into her mouth. "Mmm," she said, and reached out a slender arm to put her hand on Helena's. Her fingers brushed over Steve's as she did. A burning sensation passed through him from the outside of his pinky finger, down his leg, and back up to curl inside his balls.

"I have something to show you," Zahra declared. She pulled Helena toward her, and the two of them walked away toward a cabana. Steve let his eyes fall on Zahra's tiny ass. The scrap of bikini she was wearing slid over her almond skin with each fluid step she took, revealing, in waves, more and more of her luscious bottom, until finally she swept a finger beneath the fabric in a quick, practiced movement, and stopped its ascent.

As soon as the tantalizing display ended, he realized what he was doing and quickly looked at Reza. He was surprised to find that Reza was also watching the two women walk away, with a similarly lascivious expression on his face.

Steve felt a familiar pang of guilt, and his cheeks flared with a hot blush as he remembered "the thing," from so many years before.

"Helena looks fantastic," Reza said, rubbing the tip of his thumb against his lower lip. "She hasn't changed at all."

This was only partly true, but Steve wasn't going to point it out. Helena hadn't changed much in appearance, and she had worked hard after each child to get her body back to its original shape: lean and athletic. But in spite of her efforts, she had curves where she had never had them before: a fullness in her breasts, a wider sweep from her abdomen to her hip, a slightly more rounded ass.

In truth, Steve liked her figure better this way.

She was taller than Zahra, even with Zahra in her heels. Helena's Swedish heritage made her a much larger person. But she was stunning: naturally blonde, though her hair was a shade darker from being inside so much, and pretty blue-green eyes. She had cut her hair to a shoulder-length bob, and was now, to Steve's relief, growing it out again. She was very pretty, Helena. No one would ever call her beautiful the way they would Zahra (people use that adjective about Zahra in hushed tone:

“beauhtifuhl.”). But Helena was, in the grand scheme of things, a very attractive woman.

And Reza's compliment – as strange of a thing as it was to say, so forwardly, and while running his eyes all over Steve's wife's ass – gave Steve a cheap thrill. Helena was still wearing a conservative sundress, and not the slinky high heels-and-bikini combo that Zahra was, but she was quite stunning in her own right.

Then Reza clapped his hands, rubbing them together. “Let's get you a cocktail, shall we? And then get caught up.”

His regal, “Count Dracula” act was gone. He started to walk in the direction of the bar, and Steve followed.

There were a number of other guests there already. They seemed quite at home, unconnected to each other, and were strangely not mingling much. Steve remembered this kind of odd vibe from a few of the couple's friends back in their school days. There seemed to be some kind unwritten rule among the ultra-wealthy that you don't have too good of a time at a “party.”

Also in keeping with their strange wealthy friends from long ago, Reza did not introduce Steve to anyone.

The boy who had gone to retrieve drinks at Zahra's request was walking toward them with a tray. He looked confused. Steve looked at the tray. A daiquiri, evidently for Zahra, and a small dark-colored drink that must have been intended for Helena, who liked rum and Coke, and a light brown liquid on ice that appeared to be whiskey for him.

He marveled at the way that Zahra, after all these years, seemed to have remembered their favorite drinks. Reza took the whiskey and handed it to Steve and waved the boy on to the two women on the other side of the pool.

“Thanks,” Steve said, and he felt sort of lame.

Reza took a sip of his drink. “So,” he said. “How are things? I think the ladies -” He cut himself off, and held his drink midway to his lips. His eyes were trained on another guest, arriving on the immense staircase at the back of his house. He placed a hand on Steve's arm, and the regal, “Count” act washed over his posture and face. “I apologize. I have to attend to this guest.” He knocked back his drink and set it on the table.

Steve watched Reza approach his guest, hands extended in that very mafia-like, Middle-Eastern way, ready to clasp both hands over one and hug at the same time. Then he looked around the pool. Zahra and Helena had disappeared in a cabana halfway down the immense length of it. The other guests seemed to be asleep with their eyes open.

As always, he felt invisible.

And somewhat inadequate.

He asked Thad for another drink.

Steve was quite loopy by the time Reza, Helena, and Zahra clustered around him at the poolside table where he had taken to drinking by himself and watching the pretty women who were lounging around the water. Even though many a skimpy suit abounded, not many of them dipped into the pool, which he had to admit was disappointing. After all, he loved his beautiful wife, but he enjoyed a good view of bare skin gliding through the water, emerging dripping wet. Luckily, a few women had settled on the edge of the pool to swing their pretty, sculpted legs in lazy strokes in the warm water, their swimsuit covers creeping up their thighs, patches of bright fabric between their legs the only thing stopping Steve's eyes from getting a full view of whatever was there between them. He guessed from the well-manicured nails and hair that whatever was there was either tidy or fully waxed.

And feet, which he didn't go so far as to fetishize, but certainly loved: bare, slender feet, gliding through the water, pretty toes painted to match their swimsuits.

So there was no need for the gang to cheer him up when they all sat down, though they seemed to believe he was sitting there, dejected.

They chatted about what they had been doing for the past ten years, but Zahra had evidently stayed in touch with Helena sufficiently that she didn't need to explain much of anything. It was funny; Helena rarely mentioned Zahra. When she had announced that the pair were moving back home, Steve had been surprised; it had seemed out-of-the-blue. Now he could see that the two stayed in touch quite often, and still shared that girlish half-speak that close female friends had.

Since there seemed to be no need for catching up, the conversation quickly turned to old times and places they had visited, and Steve felt the same sinking sensation and flush on his cheeks when the memories of his fantasies resurfaced. He tried to submerge them, and wondered if any of the three of them noticed his hot face, or his erection, or the queer look that had to be playing out on his face.

The fantasy had begun one night, long ago.

When Steve had started dating Helena, Helena and Zahra were “roommates.” Roommates in the sense that Zahra's belongings were in an apartment that the two shared. Zahra was quite a party animal, Helena had explained. It was something Steve found peculiar, because she was Iranian, and he had always envisioned – foolishly, it turned out – an Iran of oppressed women with their heads covered.

He had finally made this admission, one night when they had gotten a little stoned and were clustered around the very expensive table on the very expensive couch in Helena and Zahra's “shared” apartment – Zahra's mother was coming into town the next day, so she was pretending to live there again. Zahra and Reza both had snorted their drinks right of their noses and exchanged an amused look between themselves.

Zahra took a hit from a hookah, which Reza had rigged to smoke pot out of, and blew the smoke sexily through her two plump lips as she rolled her eyes skyward. A very mysterious, naughty smile was on her lips. “No, dear Steve. No. Tehran, at least, is not like that.”

Reza had leaned back on the couch with the same, smug-ish smile, and extended his arms over the back of it, one ankle crossed over his knee.

Helena, innocently enough, had bubbled: “So what is it like, then?”

Zahra brought a wine glass to her lips. “Well, I haven't been back in several years, of course.”

Reza had a grin on his face.

“What?” Helena had prodded them, sensing that they had some secret between them, which she always wanted in on.

And it was Zahra who spoke, but for some reason Steve's eyes went to Reza as she did. Reza, whose face had turned, and whose eyes were zeroed in on Helena, remorselessly.

“Did you know that in Iran,” Zahra purred like a cat, her voice low and sexy and her eyes suddenly alive with sensual mischief, “having a...what is it called...?” She turned her head slightly to Reza, who was still watching Helena, absorbing her reaction. Clearly, and obviously, getting off on the way Zahra's “secret” was affecting her.

“Orgy,” he said, and the word unfolded sensually out his mouth. His eyes were still on Helena. Steve turned quickly to his then-girlfriend, and watched her mouth open slightly, and then color creep into her cheeks.

But he was more interested in Reza. The way he was confidently leaning on the back of the couch, staring at Helena, undressing her with eyes, groping her visually as Zahra continued:

“Ah yes, orgy. Having an orgy is like a...form of political protest in way. It's very common.”

Helena stared, and then she broke out into laughter. “Oh god, I was almost believing you for a minute.”

Zahra shrugged. “It's not a joke.” She took a sip of her wine, and now the same, sexually predatory expression had changed her own face, and she looked out over the rim of her glass at Steve. Her eyes were amused, inviting. Serious.

Sexy as fuck. Anticipation had twisted in Steve's stomach.

Steve's eyes flapped almost helplessly between the two of them: Zahra staring at Steve, and Reza staring at Helena. Helena had taken the whole thing for a joke, but her laughter was dying down as the four of them looked at each other in silence.

Helena turned her head from one person to another. “I...you're not...serious?”

Zahra shrugged again and gave Reza a smile. “What's not to be serious about?”

Reza's eyes were still on Helena. He was now burning into her, and when she looked at him and met this intense stare, she quickly looked away.

“But you didn't...” Helena half-whispered to Zahra.

Zahra swished her wine in her glass, and folded her long legs under her. As she did, she flashed a bit of her black panties at the two of them, and she smiled wryly. She said nothing. Only smiled and raised her eyebrow slightly.

Helena, it was clear, was squirming uncomfortably. Her mouth was open, and she had no idea what to say.

The tension gripped Steve a different way though: he could feel a new desire inside of him, a seed being planted, an idea that would never really leave him after that moment, just continue to grow into a fevered fantasy that he had to keep to himself. It didn't come from the idea of an orgy, though that obviously had its merits. It didn't come from Zahra's panty-flash, or the idea of having sex with her – though these things, too, had their merits as fantasies.

No. The thing that he pulled out of his memory of that night, again and again, to spin into a fantasy, was the way that Reza looked at Helena. The way another man raked his eyes possessively over his girlfriend, who later became his wife. After he married Helena, the fantasy only intensified, actually, as if the designation “wife,” had a magical power of its own. He had no more than to think about how Helena was his wife, and imagine Reza looking at her like he had that night, to get hard.

And then he began to imagine Reza standing up and crossing the room. Sliding the straps of Helena's tank top from her shoulders. Dipping his dark hand into her shirt and cupping her breast.

And then he began to embellish that fantasy: to imagine Reza standing up, and crossing the room, and unzipping his pants, and holding out his cock for Helena. Who would smile sheepishly, and give Steve a sideways glance, before opening her mouth, shrugging, much as Zahra just had, and swallowing it whole.

The fantasy had gone on, all these years, from there. Steve had started to include other men, imagine other scenarios.

But Reza's stare, and Reza's prowess as a man, had been the inception of Steve's fantasy. It was still the most potent image he could conjure, the one he liked best. When he imagined a man ramming his cock into Helena, making her sweat and moan, and then filling her up with his cum – it was Reza he liked to imagine most.

Back at the table, ten years later, things were different. They were all married, Steve and Helena had kids.

But things were not so different, not really. Steve watched Reza smile at Helena, and he could see the same possessive lust with which he moved his eyes over breasts. And inside Steve, it clawed at his chest and wrung his stomach into knots. And his cock got so hard he grimaced.

“You okay, honey?” Helena said.

Steve raised his glass in a toast, because he doubted his voice at that moment.

The evening turned inky-blue, guests came and went, and Reza excused himself a few times to see the departing part-goers off to the door.

“So you're not doing anything this summer, then?” Zahra said to Helena, during a lull in the conversation.

Helena was taking a break before going back out into the workforce, something she wasn't even sure she wanted to do. With the kids finally old enough to send to a summer camp and their grandparents, she had a nice vacation stretching out in front of her. At Steve's suggestion, Steve thought smugly.

"You should come over here," Zahra said, setting her drink on the table next to her with a slight clang. Her voice seemed to have turned into an alcoholic beverage: smoother, a little slurred, rich and more Persian than usual. She held her hand to her forehead, almost as if she had noticed the sound of her voice herself. "I've had too much to drink," she stated, but her tone was not apologetic. More statement of fact.

"I have the whole day free for the summer," she continued. "I just sit out here at the pool and enjoy the sun. Sometimes I have a party," she jiggled a little in her chair, excited by the prospect of dancing, as Zahra had always been. Her firm breasts moved underneath the bikini, promising to make the whole thing come undone. Steve had to fix his eyes rigidly on the table to keep from staring.

"Every day you have a party," Reza said. He had the tone of an admonishing husband but he ended by smiling.

Zahra flopped back into her chair, a line of small gold bracelets jangling all around her. "Anyway, come!" She flapped her hand enthusiastically, and snapped her fingers, and treated them all to another wicked jiggling of her breasts in the skimpy bikini. "Keep me company."

Steve looked at Helena. She had the straw of her daiquiri between two fingers and Steve could see she was giving it serious thought.

That long-ago evening, and all the subsequent years of fantasy, swelled inside his mind like a bubble and then burst, and he felt his mouth opening and the following words tumbling out of it:

"It's a perfect idea, sweetie. You can get a tan, relax, clear your head before you get back to work..."

Zahra began to jiggle again, to Steve's peripheral delight.

"Have some fun, keep Zahra company..." Zahra sang. Her voice was low, with a peculiar nasal quality to it that made it powerful and sweet at the same time. There was also something about the way she smiled, burned into you with her green-brown eyes, and seemed to curve hypnotically as she made suggestions, that made Zahra more of a temptress than a human being.

Steve could see that Helena was helpless in her clutches, but she made a final effort to resist:

“I was...I don't know...I was hoping to gets some exercise in.”

“Oh god,” Zahra said, recoiling from the idea, and from Helena, as though she had set a severed head on the table. Then she smiled, and began her seduction routine anew. “We'll do more dancing. Dancing is exercise.”

“We have tennis courts,” Reza offered, in a way that almost made it seem like he was physically holding Helena's fingers around his racket handle right in front of them.

“Dancing,” Zahra repeated, and moved her shoulders provocatively. Steve tried, but failed, to tear his eyes away from the slippage of the black fabric over her nipples, which had hardened to tiny pebbles with her excitement.

Helena's mouth was open. Helplessly she shook her head and said, “I don't...I'm not very good at tennis.”

And then (and Steve would replay this over and over in his mind for many nights) Reza said something that Steve couldn't have scripted better if he had tried.

He turned to Helena, a skewer in his hand from a meat appetizer he had been gnawing on. His black hair was glistening under the lights that had flickered to life around them, the sculpture of his toned chest visible beneath his shirt. “I'll be here a few days a week,” he purred.”I can give you some lessons.”

Steve felt blood rush to his cock as he imagined the scene: Reza, his hard body pressed against his wife's body, guiding Helena's hand in a fluid sweep. Back and forth, while his chiseled arm stretched in front of her. Then back again with her own hand and the firm handle of the racket, to hug her close.

Helena looked from Reza to Steve, to Zahra, who was running her tongue along her teeth, shaking her shoulders and smiling.

“Come on,” she said. “Come and join me, tomorrow. I promise you'll have a good time, if you don't, your money back,” Zahra said.

Helena looked at Steve, who wanted to do something neutral like shrug, but instead nodded. God, please do it, he could hear himself praying silently.

Oh, it was a terrible idea. He didn't really want Helena here all day with the jiggling Zahra and the godlike Reza adjusting the position of her hips on a tennis court. He knew, as soon as his buzz wore off and he had some time to think it over, he would regret nudging Helena in this direction.

Helena shrugged. “Okay,” she said cheerfully.

Zahra raised her hands and snapped her fingers, and let out a shriek.

And that's how the adventure began.

Helena frowned at her car as she pressed the key-chain to lock it, looking behind her because it was a compulsion to see the lights flash. It was a nice enough Nissan Maxima, new, and she had even washed it recently. But next to the other sleek, black vehicles parked in the small area to the side of the house, it looked dingy and plain. And somehow old.

She adjusted the strap of her purse, which also felt dingy and old, and sucked in her breath as she looked at the magnificent front facade of the Tehrani's new home.

It felt silly approaching a door like theirs. It was twelve feet tall and looked more like the barricade on a fortress.

Helena took out her phone and dialed Zahra.

"Darling, don't tell me you aren't coming. I've already ordered you a shrimp cocktail and you know how much you love those," Zahra purred.

Helena smiled. Zahra should have been the kind of woman to annoy her. She was, after all, rich and spoiled, and represented most of the things that Helena (who had pursued labor law and had worked for unions before taking time off for the kids), detested about society. The thing was, Zahra somehow pulled it off without being unlikeable. It was something in her voice. She coated every sentence with recognition that she knew what she was saying was utterly ridiculous. She also had a magnetism that was undeniable.

Also, Helena knew, Zahra didn't enjoy getting her hands dirty at all but she threw a lot of money around to philanthropic causes. In the end, she probably did more good things for the world sitting on her lounge chair by the pool and swiping tens of thousands into this or that fund on her smart phone.

Helena laughed into her phone. "I'm in front of your house."

"Why are you calling me, then?" Zahra had a smile in her voice, but her tone and speed remained unchanged. Sultry. Steady. Unbothered.

"Your door is...I don't know. Intimidating me. Should I knock on it, or what?" Helena giggled.

"The intimidating door has a doorbell. Mercedes will let you in."

Helena pressed the doorbell. "Thank you."

“Are you going to be okay? Is the door still intimidating you?” Zahra purred.

Helena smiled. “I’m fine, thanks.”

“I’m by the pool, darling.” And then she hung up.

Zahra was emerging from the pool, somewhat inexplicably, by the time Mercedes answered the door and guided Helena to the back of the house.

Zahra smoothed her wet black hair down with two hands and reached for a towel. Helena could not help watching her pat the towel over her glistening body.

Zahra turned toward Helena, as though she expected her at that very moment. She tossed the towel and approached her, and then took her two hands much as Reza had. “Don’t kiss me, I’m all wet,” she told Helena. Her eyes moved over Helena’s clothing, as Zahra’s eyes always did with anyone she saw. There was no expression on her face as she did this: it was hard to tell if she approved or disapproved.

“Let’s relax first,” Zahra suggested, setting down on a lounge chair and reaching behind her to untie her bikini. She shook it free and tossed it over the back of the chair. Then she spun her legs around and reclined.

Helena hesitated by the lounge chair, watching Zahra shake her flawless body into position over the white fabric. Zahra had always sunbathed topless, so she wasn’t unused to it: they had once gone on a trip to Portugal together, and Helena had grown used to her doing this sort of thing with no compunction whatsoever. But Zahra’s body had not changed in ten years, not in a single way. Her breasts were still firm and high, her abdomen flat as a board, and her thighs tight and slender. Even before Helena had had kids, Zahra’s beauty had been intimidating.

Whatever, Helena told herself. She had spent a great deal of time looking at herself in the mirror in her suit: a tankini with boy-short bottoms that flattered her ass and, in her opinion, looked pretty good. Her stomach was not as flat as Zahra’s, but it had a nice rounded swell, and she was trim and in good shape.

She pulled her cover-up over her head and lay down next to Zahra, who seemed, already, to be in a reptilian trance in the sun.

Helena closed her eyes and tried to relax. The sun felt good. Okay, she thought. This was nice. This was a good idea.

The hot sun began to take over her body and her mind. She drifted into the sort of time-less, sunbleached state one gets into in the sun. Her head emptied of thoughts.

"I don't see how you can stand that suit," Zahra said, after what could have been a few minutes or a few hours.

It was true, the material of the suit was dark and had heated up and her skin was too hot underneath it.

She opened her eyes and looked at Zahra, jealous of her freed tits and her tiny bikini for a moment.

Zahra didn't move, or open her eyes beneath her sunglasses. "I have all kinds of suits I don't use," she said. "Do you want something else?"

Helena snorted. "I don't think I'd fit into -"

Zahra sat up, snapping off her sunglasses. "Oh god, that's the point, isn't it? To fall out of it?" She paused to read Helena's expression. Zahra had always been the more confident of the two (there was no one, in fact, that Helena had ever met who seemed more confident than Zahra). "Your figure is fantastic," she said, her tone almost annoyed. She reached out and grabbed Helena's arm with a talon-like strength that Helena only then remembered she had, and forced her to follow her into the house.

The upstairs of the house was unsurprisingly enormous, and they seemed to walk through hallways for an eternity before arriving at a room that, by the looks of it, had been given over entirely to Zahra's clothing. It looked like the inside of a high end retail store. Zahra dug into one of the many wardrobes, antique in appearance, placed around the room. "Here," she said, backing out of the deep closet and tossing a few scraps of clothing on a chaise lounge in the middle of the room. "Any of these will fit you. Try them on."

Helena knew better than to argue with her. She picked up one of the bikinis and held it up.

"Eh..." she said.

"Just try it on, if it doesn't fit, so much the better." She turned to her with a purple-blue suit in her hands, which Helena nearly lunged for because it was one of the few suits with more than a few square centimeters of fabric. She held it up.

"Hmmm," she said. "Yeah, so...."

"Oh don't be a spoil-sport. You have to try them on."

Helena looked around the room. She knew from experience that Zahra probably meant, try it on right here. She was as immodest as a full-time model about changing her clothes right in front of everyone, and she expected the same out of everyone she knew. Zahra was back inside the wardrobe so Helena hastily peeled off her tankini and slid the tangled straps of the bikini over her head. She pulled on the tiny triangles of fabric until they covered her nipples, just as Zahra turned around. "See?" she demanded. "Looks good."

"Well, the thing is," Helena began, holding up the bottoms. "I'm not sure the...uh..." she looked helplessly at her friend's inquisitive face. "Uh...the shave job that I've done--"

"Shave job?" Zahra screeched, scandalized, looking down at Helena's boy-cut shorts, right at the center of them, as if she could see right through her suit and appraise the very tidy job Helena had worked very hard to achieve.

Helena blushed.

"Don't tell me you shave anything. Dear god." Zahra held up her hand and tossed a handful of bikinis on the floor. She crossed the room and obtained a phone from seemingly nowhere. She held it to her ear.

"Get me an appointment at the spa. A wax. The moment it is possible." A pause. "Yes. We'll be by the pool."

She set the phone back in its sleek cradle. Then she shook her head at Helena. She crossed the room and fished a black bikini top out of the pile of clothing. "For now, just wear this, but..." she tisked. "You are going to have tan lines," she said, her eyes again moving all over Helena's shorts. "Oh well. Whatever you've done, Antoine can fix it."

"Antoine?" Helena said nervously. She was evidently in for a bikini wax, and she didn't really want a man doing it.

Zahra scowled. "What do you want? Some old Russian woman doing it? Antoine is the best." She waved her hand at Helena and clickety-clacked out of the room in her high heels.

Not knowing what else to do, Helena switched the skimpy blue top for the even skimpier black one. She gave herself a glance in the mirror. With Zahra out of the picture, she could say with confidence that she looked good. Her stomach was nearly back to its original shape, though her waist seemed a little wider than so many years ago. And her breasts definitely looked better. She had always been a little flat-chested; better off in an A-cup and filling it just a little too much. Now she felt legitimate in a B-cup. While most women complained about maternity taking a toll on their breasts, she had to admit she preferred the roundness it had given her.

Her hips seemed more...well, wide. But the effect wasn't all that unpleasant. She turned and looked at the line of her body as a profile. Her ass and legs looked great from running up a hill by their house. She did it twice, running back down and then back up. It had paid off, and she admired her hard work in the form of a small, round bubble of her buttocks and the line of muscle definition from the top of her thigh down to just above her knee. Not an ounce of cellulite marred her legs.

She was no Zahra, but she looked good enough for this bikini.

Not entirely sure what she was in for, she followed Zahra out of the room.

“There,” Zahra said with satisfaction. They were back at the house, settling into the lounge chairs by the pristine pool. No one else was there, the sun was hot, and Helena was glad to be back at the pool.

Admittedly, she was also quite pleased with the way Zahra's tiny blue bikini – they had returned to the first one – looked on her. She gave her full breasts a glance, and smiled.

“Not so bad, right?” Zahra said, waving at the slightly red skin in the center of Helena's legs, where the infamous Antoine had waxed her.

“Oh god,” Helena complained. “That was one of the most awful experiences of my life.”

Zahra handed her an amber bottle of lotion seemingly produced from nowhere. Zahra was one of those women who seemed to be toting an invisible alchemy chest behind her wherever she went. “Put this on, it will calm your skin.”

Zahra settled back into her chair and began pouring oil all over her own body from another bottle she had snatched out of the air. Helena watched as her toasted almond skin turned shiny with each sensual sweep of her hand.

“It only hurts the first time,” Zahra said. “I cannot believe you've been shaving so...barbarically...all this time” she said. She held up a finger. “Never. Do that again. And really at some point you should just laser that.”

Helena leaned back in the chair and poured the liquid into her cupped hand. It was thin like water, cool with some kind of alcoholic content. She struggled to get it to her inner thighs, but that wasn't where the real pain was.

It did feel relieving.

“Get it on everywhere,” Zahra said, waving her fingers at Helena's crotch.

Helena stared at her for a moment, looked around the pool to make sure no one was there, and then pulled her bikini bottom away from her skin sheepishly.

“Like that,” Zahra said, impatiently, waving her hand in approval.

Helena shrugged inwardly, and dumped the tonic on her bare pussy. She couldn't even believe it as she looked down at it – it was completely waxed. It gave her an utterly pre-adolescent look. It was honestly a little twisted. But she also liked it.

The cool liquid (for Zahra, in addition to toting an invisible medicine chest around behind her, seemed to magically keep it cool as well) slid over her freshly-bared and hyper-sensitive skin like ice-cold silk. It drained between her folds and mingled with her hot wetness. The cold astringent kissed her clit and she shuddered with a small wave of pleasure. She used her hand to rub the liquid over her skin.

“See,” Zahra said, not asking a question. “Better.” She fanned her fingers out as she waved at her this time, like a witch content with a spell. Then she adjusted her glasses, and wiggled her shoulders, and said no more.

The sun was hot and eventually cast a spell on Helena. She relaxed into that feeling of not knowing how much time is passing, a kind of meditative state.

In the back of her mind though, she was quietly enjoying a little fantasy or two about her summer.

Nothing too risqué. Nothing she would ever really act on. But all the bare bodies, the young, fit men, the summer fun and the carefree parties without kids – it was all very seductive.

And Helena loved to flirt. She had done it at the first party, and remembered how much she liked it. She had remembered that she was pretty, that she was funny and that men liked to talk to her. She had also caught many a guy scanning her body, resting his eyes on her plump breasts.

Something about being around Zahra again brought out even more of this compulsion than ever. Zahra, who flirted with everyone. Zahra, who managed (as far as Helena knew) to keep her marriage intact while she flirted constantly with disaster. She and Reza sort of seemed to get off on it.

It was a dynamic she had always enjoyed watching between the two of them, though she didn't understand it that well. And she would rather die than bring the subject up. She knew she would sound like a silly prude.

Of course, she was married. Of course she would never actually cheat on Steve: she loved him too much for that. And Steve and she didn't have the same kind of relationship as Zahra and Reza.

But she had to admit: she enjoyed a good flirt. A little appreciation from other men. A little bit of male energy around her to get her excited...

"I'm going for a drink," Zahra said suddenly, interrupting the silence and Helena's slow daydreaming thoughts.

Helena propped herself up on her elbows. She had the overheated sleepiness that came with having sat in the sun for too long without moving, and she felt a trickle of sweat down her spine. Zahra's skin was glistening with a light sheen of sweat, thousands of tiny, sweet droplets shining on the swell of her breasts. Helena watched as a single droplet gathered momentum, formed a small drip, and snaked between her breasts and down to her stomach.

Zahra reached over and tapped her playfully with one hand, and for a second Helena was worried that Zahra had seen her staring. "You stay here. I'll bring it. Tea?"

"Sure," Helena said, absent-mindedly. She slid back onto the lawn chair.

Zahra returned shortly, with a very cold, tall glass in her hand.

Helena was thirsty, so she gulped the cold liquid.

"Oh my god!" she exclaimed. "This is full of booze!"

Zahra smiled unapologetically and swung her pretty legs up onto the chair, which she had adjusted so she could sit up.

Helena had her mouth open to protest, but then she decided not to. After all, this was her vacation. The only chance she would get to have her own thoughts and time to herself, and a long-island iced tea at two in the afternoon.

On a Tuesday.

What was the harm?

She set the drink down and adjusted her own chair so she was sitting up. The alcohol was already creeping through her, licking at her from the inside. Already she could feel herself loosening up, ready to flirt.

Zahra smiled.

Helena was home already when he came home from work, and she was busily cleaning in the kitchen.

“How was it?” Steve asked. He didn't really have to hear it to know: Helena was relaxed, flushed with the freshness of a day in the sun, and humming a pleasant tune.

Maybe a little too relaxed?

Steve tried his hardest to dismiss the thought. Helena was on vacation, and there was no reason to let his mind wander off thinking accusatory, mean, terrible...erotic...thoughts.

There was something different about her, though. Even from behind, even with nothing more than her back to go on. Her hair was swept up in a loose ponytail, but that wasn't unusual. She was wearing her swimsuit cover-up, a sexy number of black crochet full of tantalizing holes and knots...but he had seen that before.

“Lovely,” Helena said.

She turned around, and the “something” that was different met Steve right in the face: underneath the swimsuit cover-up she was wearing nothing.

Well, almost nothing, he realized as he looked harder. A few blue strings criss-crossed her skin and came together in a knot at the top of her neck, and he could see little patches of blue fabric beneath the cover-up. Very little patches. Mostly her saw the curve of her flesh as her breasts rose from her chest. Her abdomen was bare, and he couldn't see lower than that because of the counter, but if the top of her swimsuit was anything like the bottom, well...

It was a long way from the tankini she'd modeled for him a month ago, before she knew she'd be spending every day at “Palace Tehrani.”

He stared, and his mind went to the Tehrani's house. He wondered if the usual consortium of men were there, watching Helena in her tiny bikini. Lusting after her. Looking at the underswell of her breasts.

It made him both aroused and bitter to think about it.

She looked down at where his eyes were planted and smiled. “Oh. Yeah. Zahra made me get a new suit,” she explained, as if the explanation were of the sort that one could not argue with or ask questions about.

Which really, if anyone knew Zahra, they knew it was true. If it occurred to Zahra to “make you” get a new suit, then there wasn't much you could do about it.

“It's...” Steve said. It was hot. Fucking hot. Hotter than he had seen Helena dress in...well, ten years. But the another, competing emotion got the better of him.

Jealousy. Before he could even think about what he was doing, he heard his voice saying:

“Did you...drive home like that?” he said. Or go somewhere else? he thought. A shudder flashed through him as he pictured his wife slinking through the grocery store in that get-up.

He instantly regretted it, and he knew he had it coming when Helena's eyes flashed at him in anger. “And what if I did?”

She turned around and began to place dishes angrily into the dishwasher, her body rigid. Steve, instead of trying to save himself, craned his neck to get a better look at the bikini bottoms.

Dear god. Definitely a Zahra creation. At the very least, they were not a thong. They barely met that distinction, however. Only a tiny triangle of material covered the sweet hollow between her buttocks, and the tiniest portion of her rounded butt.

“No. No,” he said quickly. “You look great. You look fantastic. Just...it's very...you know. Risqué.”

Helena dropped a dish into the dishwasher carelessly. “Right. Risqué. Too risqué to drive in a car with tinted windows from one place another?”

Steve rolled his eyes skyward. Dear god, he wished his brain would catch up to his mouth one of these days. Just a one-second lead would do it.

“No, you're right. I'm sorry I said that. I just...it took me by surprise...” He was flailing. Desperate, he flung this at her:

“Your ass looks great.”

She dropped another dish into the dishwasher without saying anything, but he felt like she did it more humorously.

Somehow, he could feel a thaw.

“You need a filter,” she said, finally.

Relief.

She turned toward him and tapped her fingers on the counter. “And my ass does look great, doesn't it?”

“Yes.”

Helena took a step toward the counter, and Steve felt like pinching himself to make sure he wasn't dreaming, because she seemed to do it sexily, and she seemed to be flirting as she leaned on the counter toward him. Her breasts pushed together to make a full, poofy ledge of fleshy pillows, and the motion pushed her skimpy bikini down, revealing the tops of her nipples. Not only that, she seemed to know that's what she was doing. She smiled provocatively.

Now it isn't to say that Helena never did this sort of thing, she just didn't do it usually at seven pm on a weekday.

“And that's not all,” she said. “Zahra made me do something else, too.”

Like any man would, Steve felt a rush of lust pour over him like a cauldron of boiling oil. The things that went through his head, naturally, were of the dirtiest kind, and Steve had a whole bank of images that included his wife and Zahra, ready-to-go since the Tehranis had told them they were moving back to the area. The first one that flashed through his mind was of Zahra's long, sharp tongue sliding expertly along the very wet inner folds of his wife's cunt.

It went on from there.

“Did -” Steve coughed. His voice was coating the back of his throat like syrup. “Did she?” He punched himself in the chest.

Helena smiled. And it was very evident, from the type of smile that she smiled, that she was smiling at the dirty thoughts she seemed to know had just gone through his head.

Unusual.

But like any man, Steve wasn't going to spend too long remarking to himself on how unusual it was or pondering what was going on.

No, Steve was marching bravely forward to whatever dirty, bad thing Zahra had made his wife do, hoping it was as dirty as he imagined.

Of course his wife hadn't been splayed on Zahra's lounge chair, getting her pussy licked while she sucked Reza's cock.

And yet...

Just before she pushed herself away from the counter, the black crochet sliding over her bare skin and the scraps of blue fabric, she seemed to...

She did, didn't she?

Wink at him?

“Let's go out in the sunroom,” she suggested suddenly. On her way out of the kitchen she snatched two wine glasses and a bottle of wine – sitting there ready – from the counter.

“Sunroom” was a tender euphemism for a strange porch the previous owners had tacked on to the house, and enclosed, but not insulated. Only two of the windows worked, so it was hot as hell in the summer and cold as hell in the winter. They had optimistically maintained a small table and a lounge chair in the space, for the two weeks a year it was actually pleasant.

Steve followed Helena to the sunroom. Her cover-up slid from one shoulder and exposed a swatch of her skin. Faint, summery smells wafted to his nose as he followed her: chlorine, coconut, and then some other, expensive-smelling shampoos and soaps.

It was a little too hot in the room this evening, but Steve didn't care. Helena set the glasses down and poured two glasses of wine. Then she stretched out on the lounge chair.

Seductively.

Steve sat down next to her in a poolside chair. There were big, waterproof cushions on the chairs, and they seemed to be from the seventies. It was always a little uncomfortable balancing on them.

“So?” he said casually. His eyes moved up and down Helena's body. Damn, she looked good.

She brought the wine glass to her lips. “So,” she said. She smiled. Her eyes were playful.

Steve felt his cock filling, his whole body pulsing with interest. He wasn't sure what to do. He didn't want to jinx his good luck.

He watched in both fascination and shock as Helena tipped her head back and pretty much downed the whole glass of wine. Then she leaned back onto the lounge chair, her hands above her head, her whole body elongated in a feline stretch.

Steve almost choked on his wine.

“Do you want to see what Zahra made me do?”

Part of his mind raced to find a clever thing to say, but most of his mind and all of his body were paralyzed. Helena was already sliding the swimsuit cover up and over her body. For a moment Steve had a sinking sensation that Zahra might have told her to get a tattoo or something. Who knew?

The bikini looked insanely hot on her, once she was freed from the cover-up. Her new curves, layered over her wiry frame, were taut and inviting. The crochet top of the suit barely covered the round hills of her breasts, so the delicious swipe of her skin where it rose from her flawless chest was completely exposed. He drank the sight in.

But not for long, because she moved her hands down the sides of her body, dragging his eyes with them. Her fingers slid along the gentle, firm curve of her waist and then her hip, and tangled themselves in the spaghetti straps of her bikini bottoms.

She was grinning seductively as she twisted the straps in her fingers. They tied together at the crest of either hip, with frail knots that he was silently begging her to pull on his mind. She seemed to know how much he wanted that very thing, and she teased him for several moments, pressing her fingertips together on the tips of the strings and making it look as though she was going to pull on the fabric. Instead, she let the string slip from her fingers as though she were only stroking it, the way he longed for her to stroke his cock.

But finally, she tugged on the strings, and they unraveled. He watched them as they disentangled and slid along her skin, undone. But the small patch of crocheted fabric moved only slightly, slipping just a little along the smooth skin of her pubic bone.

It was at that moment that he remembered that she was showing him something, and he may have been a little ahead of what he was about to see. But maybe not. Her pretty fingers moved underneath the fabric, and he watched them, hidden from his view by only the tiniest scrap of material, touching herself, maybe even stroking her clit.

And then she gave the fabric a flick, and it fell open.

Steve sucked in his breath. Her skin, smooth and white, went on and on, forming into the soft lips of her labia, and then disappearing in a streak of bright pink into her gash. Utterly, completely bare.

He blinked.

Again he was struggling to find something to say or do. Helena, however, took the lead, and the beautiful bare pussy began to transform before his eyes: the slit of pink opened up, like a blossoming flower, as she spread her legs and held them open by the knees, her eyes large with her own excitement.

And it wasn't just her eyes that were excited, he noted: the unfolding red-pink skin of her cunt was glistening with her arousal. She let her fingers slide into her own folds, her wedding ring glinting against her pink skin.

He blinked again. Was this really happening?

“What do you think?” she said, and she said it more like a sexy growl.

The wine glass that was in Steve's hand very nearly slipped from his grasp. He caught it, but most of the wine tipped out.

Helena seemed pleased with this reaction. She smiled, and her eyes drifted down to the bulge of his cock, pressing out almost painfully against his pants.

He set the wine glass down hurriedly on a table, and fumbled to get himself out of his pants. As he did so, he was stunned to see Helena – Helena who normally wanted to read a book, wrapped in a muumuu, in bed until she fell asleep before 9:30 – sliding her finger into the wet folds of her pussy, and playing with the tight button in the center of her wet petals. Her eyes were between his legs, expectantly, the whole time.

But when his cock was freed, she reached for him, and instead of closing her hand around his member as he desperately wanted her to do, she placed her hand on his head and pushed gently. The message was clear, and it was very unlike her, but Steve did not hesitate to lower himself down to where her spread legs met in all of that raw, gushing, shaved flesh.

Her scent assaulted him halfway to her pussy: the sweet, honey-like, tangy scent of her juices. He placed his hands under her ass, and the firmness bought with her workouts greeted his palms. He pulled her to get better access to her cunt, and placed his two thumbs at either side of her, pulling apart the smooth white outer lips. For a second, though, he indulged in stroking them, and the sensation of her utterly smooth skin sent a shudder through his body.

He could feel the precum oozing from the tip of his cock. He was so hard it ached, and he felt like he was going to explode. Still, he wanted to run his tongue over the slippery-smooth inside of her pussy. He moved in, and started from the outside, teasing her. She squirmed in his hands as he ran his tongue along her outer labia: some of her juices had smeared that far, and his tongue met with the sweet tang of her excitement. He felt her breath catch in her chest and it turned him on even more.

He licked the inside of her next, where her flesh turned to silk and was soaked with her juices. He heard her gasp slightly, and she tried to moved her body to get her pulsing clit directly under his mouth. He held her firmly in place, enjoying the tease.

He made a few circles around the raw center of her pussy, working her up, making her pant. Then he directed his gaze up her body as he finally closed on her hard clit, and massaged it with his tongue. His upper lips was closed around the smooth skin over her public bone. He watched her flat stomach undulated with pleasure as he moved his tongue in rhythm up and down her clit. Her body turned hard in his hands and she strained against his grip, eager to rub herself against him. Her juices were gushing into his mouth and all over his chin now, and she was becoming wild in his hands.

Her hand dug into his hair and pulled on it, and she arched her back as much as she could as she began to go over the edge. Then she screamed loudly as her body shuddered with the first, hard wave of her orgasm. Her legs began to trembled and her feet kicked wildly. Steve felt her juices gush over him, sweet and sticky.

He continued to lap at her pussy, until she began to twist violently beneath him, and she pulled hard on his hair to lift his head away from her. Her face was flushed, and he felt the supreme pleasure he hadn't felt for so long, of having made her come hard, like that, licking her sweet pussy until she screamed.

He moved up along the chair, and he felt her hand on his cock. She grasped him firmly – hungrily – and this, too, was a long-buried sensation that almost sent him over the edge. He watched as her eyes moved hungrily over his cock, devouring him with her gaze so that he could almost feel her eating him, swallowing him whole...

But that was too much to hope for, wasn't it? He kept moving over her body, ready to plunge his cock into the depths of her overflowing pussy.

For a moment it was difficult to understand what was happening: as he rose up along her body, she moved as well. He was too far along her torso, and started to move down again, but she tugged gently on his cock and then he realized what she was doing. He braced himself on the back of the lounge and looked down to see his wife holding his cock so that she could run her tongue along the length of his shaft.

He reached down and untied the knot at the nape of her neck and freed her breasts to complete the spectacular view he had. Her eyes were trained on his, his mouth was open and she was now making her way to his balls. And beneath this scene, her full breasts and her hardened nipples, and then below, below where he could not see but the image burned forcefully through what he could see with own two eyes: below, where her pussy was smooth and gushing with excitement.

Helena swiped her tongue over the tender skin of his ball sac, and then she sucked him inside of her mouth. Her tongue worked against the hard center of his balls, sending jolts of erotic pain through his entire pelvis. He grasped her hair but she didn't relent for a moment. Then she made her way again along his shaft, nibbling at the contours of his cock, until she arrived at his head and sucked his glans into her mouth.

She held his shaft with one hand and popped his head from her mouth. She looked down at the precum that was boiling out of him, and she moved his cock along her lips, smearing his cream over her mouth.

Steve would have loved for this seduction to go on forever, but he could feel his pent-up lust frothing inside of him. He wanted to get inside of her, and feel his balls slapping against her smooth cunt.

But Helena was unrelenting, unusually unresponsive to the nudge he was giving her to slide back up the lounge. She was typically happy to wrap up sucking on his cock, and so he was too shocked to move when she took him completely inside of her mouth, and kept going, all the way to the base of his cock.

"Oh god," he said. His hand made its way to her head, and he held her against him, but she didn't resist the pressure. Her tongue moved to massage his shaft, and he gasped. He was all the way in throat, deep to the point of gagging her, and she was just sucking him in further.

She pulled back, and gasped for air when his cock flopped out of her mouth. She kept a hand on his shaft and stroked him. The sight of it all, and the thought of her bare pussy, unleashed something inside of him, and he had his mouth open to her that he was going to come when she opened her mouth again and gobbled him up.

"I'm coming," he gasped.

Helena, though, did a most unusual thing, and seemed really just to smile – though it was hard to tell because her lips were wrapped around his cock and she had sucked him deep inside her again. Steve felt the burst of his cum splash against her throat, and swim around his cock in her mouth, but she just continued to suck on him. Sucking it out of him, like he was a straw to her favorite drink.

After he had squirted the last loads of his cum into her mouth, and she had sucked his cock clean, she let her head fall back on the lounge chair, and she gave out a laugh. The kind of laugh a person gives to herself when she's been very naughty, but isn't the least bit sorry about it.

Steve rose up on his knees, and then slipped and fell onto the floor trying to adjust himself around Helena's splayed, naked body. She giggled at him, but didn't make a move to cover herself up.

"Jesus," Steve said.

Helena twirled a strand of her golden hair and said nothing.

After a while, she stood up and slid her swimsuit cover over her naked body, so that all of her bareness peeked out through the crochet holes. She poured them both another glass of wine.

"I think those guys are having a party this Friday. Or maybe Saturday. Anyway, you should come."

"So you're having a good time, so far." Steve managed to say. An unsettled feeling was coming over him. It was an incredible sexy, scene, what had just transpired. And he wasn't going to say he hadn't enjoyed it. But it was a lot more...well, sexual...than Helena had been in a long time.

What did he mean by that? He wondered to himself. What the fuck did he think?

After all, she had just shaved her pussy. The kids were gone. She could finally relax. She had gone to a spa and she looked hot, and it had made her a little randy.

Why couldn't he just accept his good luck, and move on?

It did seem strange though, for a person to transform so much in a single day.

"Honey?" Helena was saying, and her tone was insistent. She must have asked something several times.

"Uh..." Steve said, and he could see from her face that he had been pretending to be paying attention. The bad feeling, a sweet-and-painful feeling, snaked through him again.

It was fifty-fifty at times like these.

"Yeah, sure," he said.

After all, if there was one thing Steve loved to believe about himself, it was that he was an optimist.

So she went back to Reza and Zahra's the next day. It was as if she couldn't stay away.

She knew she was hoping for something. Something more than just a poolside tan.

There were thoughts in her mind that she didn't dare give total license to. Fantasies that her fueled her wild romp with Steve. She had the feeling of exhilaration that she used get, long ago, when she met a new guy or flirted with someone...and who cared, as long as she never acted on it? It was improving her sex life, with her husband, and she hadn't done anything.

She had only imagined.

Or let the faint taste of expectation rise up inside of her mouth.

She didn't have to wait long for that something – that something she never really gave a name to – to happen.

The next day, she was sunbathing topless. She had watched Zahra take off her top. With an unusual impulsiveness, she had decided to do it as well. She had told herself it was because she didn't want tan line, and because the sun felt so good. Deep down inside, though, she knew it was another desire. A more dangerous, sexual desire. A desire to be like Zahra in some way, or have a man see her lying there with her bare tits in the sun, covered in little sweet beads of sweat, her nipples soft and aching to be made hard inside someone's mouth.

God.

She had fallen asleep, with a towel on her head, thinking all of these benignly dirty thoughts.

Something moving around the pool had disturbed her. Not enough to wake her up completely, but enough to give her the sensation that Zahra was no longer next to her, and someone else was moving around. A heavier person. A man.

For some reason she decided to pretend to be asleep. She barely opened her eyes, and peered through her eyelashes. Zahra was indeed gone.

She moved her eyes toward the pool.

Through her eyelashes, she could see the figure of Reza moving along the opposite edge of the pool. She could see that he was pulling at his shirt, then lifting it over his head. She could make out the lines of muscle that she had all but memorized, thinking about them so much. She fought the urge to open her eyes fully, and take in his body.

Then her heart stopped, as he hooked his thumbs under the top hem of his shorts, and pulled down to slide them off.

She could feel her breath catch in her chest, and a tidal wave of pleasant queasiness rose over her and pressed her down into the recliner. She was grateful that it felt heavy. It was all she could do to keep her eyes from flying open. She forced herself to close her eyes fully, even though she doubted that he could see into the shadow cast by the towel, even if she had opened her eyes fully.

The dark place between his legs was burned into her mind. She had seen it clearly, even if her eyelashes obscured her sight: the full, long shape of his cock, hanging between his legs.

Jesus, she told herself.

She let her eye open just enough to see him again, and when she did he was already in mid-air, leaping from the edge of the pool. Her eyes moved all over his body, but he was too much in motion for her to drink in the sight of him. He cut into the pool gracefully, with barely a splash. Now she could only see his arms, rising out of the water to swim in smooth, athletic strokes.

She shifted in her recliner, knowing that he couldn't see her now.

She felt an ache between her legs, and she was shocked at herself.

She'd always been attracted to Reza: she held the personal belief that any woman who said he wasn't attractive to them had to be lying through her teeth. But she had always managed to confine it to a non-sexual, flirty place inside of her. Now she was squirming on her chair, worried that the evidence of her excitement might somehow slip out of her bikini bottoms.

God. She was here all alone, with her top off, in the skimpiest bikini she had ever worn.

Where the hell was Zahra, anyway?

Get control of yourself, Helena, she thought. Reza is used to women sunbathing topless, his own wife does it all the time in front of everyone she meets. Also, his own wife is gorgeous. So keep calm.

But why was he swimming naked?

Maybe he does that all the time, she thought.

She knew she should do something: stop pretending to be asleep.

Jump up and cover herself up, walk calmly into the cabana and make herself a drink. She imagined herself doing it: standing up, slipping on her top, walking around the pool, giving him a wave to let him know she was awake. Calm as ice as he waved back with his cock beneath the water.

She imagined all this, but she remained where she was. What's worse, she was actually hoping he had taken a nice long look at her. She knew her breasts looked good. That they were full and round, and her nipples were big and pink and eye-catching.

She heard the sound of his body moving through the water, swimming laps. She forced herself to breathe slowly, like the dead, as she heard the dripping of water and the shift of a reverse splash, as he drew himself up and out of the water. Her eyes fluttered half-open and then all the way as she saw that his back was to her as he rose from the water. She delighted in his muscled back, and then...oh god. His bare ass. Tight, well-rounded.

What was she doing?

She closed her eyes again and steadied her breath, which had quickened.

He moved like a cat, so she had no idea where he was or what he was doing for a few moments. Then she felt the cool of a shadow on her body, across just her legs.

And he – for it had to be him, right? Who else was there? - just stood there. She knew he had to be a few feet away from her. Was he looking at her? The cold of his shadow felt like a searing flame across her legs.

Was he still naked? She wondered. She both hoped that he was and that he wasn't.

After a few moments, it was clear that he could be doing nothing else but staring at her. He was still, not dressing, not toweling himself off, not moving at all. The only thing he could be doing was standing over her, looking up and down her “sleeping” body, taking in the sights of her breasts, her stomach, the patch of bikini that covered her freshly-shaved snatch. The patch of bikini that she could feel soaking through with her juices.

Every muscle in her body wanted to move. It was as if his stare was sliding all over her body. She could feel her nipples getting hard, and wondered what he would think of that. Could a person get hard nipples if they were asleep? Did he know she was awake? She wished she could see through her eyelids. She wanted to know if he was standing there naked, if maybe he even had his cock in his hand...

A shiver went through her as she let her imagination run wild, imagining that he would stroke himself off, just looking at her. That at any moment she would feel the hot splash of his cum on her skin.

A thought like this, she knew, should have disgusted her. Or outraged her. Instead, she found herself thinking of it in a loop, over and over again. She found herself hoping he was naked, hoping his cock was hard and in his hand, hoping he was looking at her hardened nipples, hoping that he knew that her swimsuit bottom was soaked through with her own lust.

How long did this go on? She would wonder about it later. It felt like an eternity, a torturous erotic eternity. And then the cool patch of his shadow slid off her leg, and the hot tongue of the sun crept back over her.

She waited for ten minutes before she dared to open her eyes, just a crack. She couldn't see Reza anywhere.

Then Zahra's voice. "Oh hey, honey," and some laughter. The laughter of flirting, the trailing away of their voices. Reza was taking her somewhere, probably, to fuck. And the idea that he was doing it after standing over her, Helena, sent a shiver up her spine. Her skin prickled with excitement and another gush of juices wet her swimsuit bottom.

She sat up, and found herself alone. She hastily put on her swimsuit top, though why she was so motivated to do so, she wasn't sure. Then she went to the pool and lowered herself in. She wanted to cover up the fact that her swim bottoms were soaked. She glided through the warm water to the opposite side of the pool and hung onto the concrete edge.

The sound of the water falling in Zahra and Reza's "cave" overpowered them for a moment, but after a while Helena heard them over the dull roar of the water: the unmistakable squeaks and squeals of a woman who was having something sexual done to her.

Helena felt another surge of arousal. It layered on to the dull ache that had nestled between her thighs already. She looked around her, and cocked her ears so she could hear better where the sounds were coming from.

There was a cabana near the cave-end of the pool. Surely they were there. Helena listened.

She could feel her mind thinking, and she almost couldn't believe the idea it was coming up with. She wouldn't.

And yet, her body seemed to be taken over by another person. She felt like a puppet, and the puppeteer was some crazy, slutty woman. Her limbs were moving, pulling her through the water in the direction of the stairs at the south end of the pool where the cabana was. Her mind was calculating how long it would take for her footprints to dry up on the hot pavement after she walked closer. She was thinking of excuses for being there, for being behind the cabana if she got caught. Her neck turned her head and her eyes sought out maids or gardeners who might see her. But the vast yard was empty, and the windows of the house were hollow eyes.

Emboldened, Helena took a towel and dried herself as she walked toward the cabana. She looked behind her. In the sweltering heat, her footprints had nearly baked away on the stones, which were dark and porous and swallowed up water.

She could not believe what she was doing, even as she did it. She walked straight to the cabana, the towel very loosely around her body, and then she stepped around the side. There was a door on the east side of the cabana that led to a descending set of steps, where a hot tub was carved into the rocks at the bottom.

The windows of the cabana were open, and so Helena could hear every ragged breath as she approached. Zahra's moaning, then, as she got closer, slurping and stickiness.

There may have been a time in Helena's life when she would have run away from these sounds, or had the decency, at the very least, not to creep toward them. But her pussy was actually throbbing, and her body was tingling with an arousal that she had never felt before. She crept along the side of the small building and lowered herself to a crouch.

She heard Reza's voice, low and tangled in the difficult sounds of Persian. Helena gathered courage and peeked into the room.

She jerked her head back, and processed what she had just seen. Then she looked back in, unable to look away.

Zahra's legs were the first thing in her line of sight. She was crouched on the cabana's chaise lounge, with her ass toward the door where Helena was peeking. Still with her heels on, her feet twisting a little in obvious pleasure. The string of her bikini was off the side of her snatch, the dark pink folds of her gash were pried open by Reza's fingers. He was knuckle deep inside of her, with one finger playing with her clit. Zahra's ass was in the air and her head was down, in Reza's lap, bobbing over his cock.

Helena sucked in her breath. She wished she could see the details of his cock, and Zahra's mouth moving over it. She looked at Reza's face: he was watching his wife as she sucked on his cock, his eyes trained on where her lips must have been. His mouth was moving and he was speaking to her in low tones. Helena didn't know Persian, but she knew it was dirty as hell, whatever he was saying.

She could hear the slurping of Zahra's blowjob. Reza's fingers made sticky sounds as he began to fuck Zahra with his fingers, his arm relaxed over her back.

Helena wondered if he was thinking of Zahra. Or if he was recalling the woman he had just ogled by the pool.

She slid her hand between her legs, almost without realizing she was doing it. Her fingers pushed aside the scrap of bikini and dipped into her dripping cunt in search of her own clit. She rubbed herself lightly as she watched, and her climax rose up inside of her quickly. She paused, not wanting to come just yet. Her face was flushed and she was sweating; she could feel the droplets of sweat rolling down her body, between her breasts, licking at her like a tongue.

She heard Zahra's muffled moan and watched as Reza's fingers became coated in her sticky cum.

She felt herself getting closer to the edge, and she began to stroke herself furiously to get there. But she couldn't take her eyes off of the couple.

And then, Reza lifted his gaze.

Right toward the window.

His eyes met Helena's.

Didn't they?

She felt herself coming at that very moment, She thought she saw him smile, but she threw herself back against the wall, out of the view of the window, and bit into the flesh of her hand to stop herself from screaming with her orgasm. The sucking sounds continued inside the cabana, for just a few moments, and then she heard Reza groan, and give out a yell. More dirty Persian.

Helena struggled to her feet. She was dizzy with her orgasm.

She ran to the pool, as quickly as she could without making noise. She dove in, and stayed underwater as long as she could, all the way to the other end. Her body was tingling, the water felt sensational around her, like silk. Her thoughts raced: what the fuck had she done?

When she finally came out from under the water, she was still alone. She swam under the water again to the other side. Still no one. God, what was going to happen?

Reza's stare still burned through her.

When she came up a third time, Zahra's black heels were in front of her.

Helena looked up. Her stomach twisted in fear. How could she explain herself?

"You there," Zahra said, and Helena felt like her chest was being squeezed. "Mermaid. Do you want some lunch?"

She was smiling, one hand on her hip.

Helena looked around. Reza was making a drink at the bar.

She almost believed, for a moment, that she had imagined the whole thing.

"Sure," she said, and Zahra, in a typically Zahra move, turned and walked over to a chair and sat down in it, as though the act of asking the question had been too exhausting for her to continue without taking a break.

"I had the worst time of it with Suisse Bank," she complained to no one in particular. She adjusted her sunglasses.

Reza appeared and handed her a drink. Then he turned to Helena. On his face was a smile. Friendly. Unreadable.

"You. You should wear a lot of sunscreen if you're going to fall asleep in the sun like that."

And then he winked.

Helena's mouth feel open.

Luckily Reza had walked away, and Zahra had turned her face up to the sky. "Oh Reza," she said. "Don't nag. White people know all about sunscreen. And go tell Haley we need some lunch, will you? I can't be bothered."

Reza disappeared after lunch, and Helena could feel that she was both grateful and disappointed. Grateful, because she could feel herself thinking and acting in ways that almost scandalized her. And disappointed, she supposed, for the same reason.

They had returned to the pool, and Zahra had been called away by Haley, the mysterious jean-clad “maid” and chef, who had brought her a phone.

Helena had settled back into relaxing, trying to steer her thoughts away from the brewing naughtiness in her head.

And then.

“Is it true?”

Helena had to fight hard with her body to keep the shudder that went through her from surfacing in a way that Reza could see. She probably wasn't successful. Just the smooth sound of his voice was enough to drive her wild.

The thought went through her head was that Reza wasn't supposed to be there. It was why Helena had allowed herself the indulgence of actually relaxing by the pool. With her top off.

Right? That was why she had done that, wasn't it? Not because she had secretly hoped he would come back and see her again?

Now her heart was racing, and she was positive this kind of start was terrible for her health. She fought to remain calm, and keep her eyes closed, and behave more like Zahra.

Zahra. That's who she should be thinking about. And Steve.

And not herself, not the fact that she could feel her pussy throbbing already, just from the caress of his voice over her skin.

What had he asked her? How should she act?

A long and awkward pause unfolded why she struggled to come up with a reaction.

She pushed her sunglasses into her hair and smiled at Reza, who was standing over her and took her opened eyes as an invitation to sit on the edge of her lounge chair.

“I thought you weren't...here,” she said. She realized she was topless, and resisted an urge to cover herself.

Reza gave a glance back at the house, as though he read her scattered thoughts and plucked, from all of the things she was thinking, the thought about Zahra. Zahra her good friend, whose half-naked husband was sitting on the lounge chair, tan and sculpted.

“Zahra's going to be on a conference call with the bank for a bit,” he said casually.

Helena's pulse began to race even faster, so fast she felt dizzy. Her stomach twisted, her insides went cold and hot.

There was no denying, though she tried very hard, that she wasn't having the same immature thoughts about Reza that she had about many a boy when she was an adolescent. That in spite of the way it would violate her wedding vows, and her friendship, she liked to sit in the sun and fantasize about Reza running his eyes all over her again, and that he secretly was attracted to her, and then even more intense fantasies than that. She liked to think of all the places she could hide away with Reza and feel more than just his eyes on her.

But now? Now that he was right here? Staring at her? And she was topless? And Zahra was “on a conference call” just a short walk away, in her giant house full of windows?

Now she knew she should do something, like stand up and get in the pool. Or put on her top. Or something. Anything.

Instead her thoughts were empty, and the only thing in her mind was the acute awareness of Reza's thigh being pressed to her ankle. The heat of his body was stirring her up sexually, a sexual pleasure that was somehow radiating from her ankle, running along the inside of her thigh, and pooling between her legs.

She found her voice, remembering he had asked her a question.

“What?” she croaked. “is..is what true?”

She watched as Reza produced from seemingly thin air a bottle of sunscreen and poured some of it into his hands. Was this actually happening? She couldn't tear her eyes away from his big, strong hands rubbing the sunscreen together. His face had an expression of...what? Pure confidence? Desire? Satisfaction? Control It was hard to say, maybe all of these things were mixed into the face he wore as his lightly smiling lips said:

“That white people know all about sunscreen?” And then her motioned with one hand, and she knew that he wanted her to turn around, and let him put the sunscreen on her back.

What she couldn't believe is that she did precisely that.

Reza's hand was smooth and gentle, but an undercurrent of wild strength was below the surface of his touch, electrifying Helena's skin. She felt an involuntary spasm ripple through her. It traveled around to the front of her body and turned her nipples hard. But she was lost to the sensation of his hands on her back.

"It seems to me you haven't reapplied," Reza said, but it sounded more as though he had something like, it seems to me I want to lie you down and fuck you.

Okay, she thought to herself. Okay. This is just a friendly application of sunscreen. After all, people need someone to apply sunscreen to their back. Friends do it, you can ask a kid to do it...so by itself this is not specifically sexual.

Of course it was not racing through her body in any kind of asexual way. She realized she was holding her breath.

His hands were moving in strong circles, ever-closer to her ribs, to places on her body that were not the sorts of places..well, the sorts of places a person couldn't reach herself with sunscreen.

As he rubbed the lotion into her neck, he stroked the lobe of her ear with his thumb, and her skin came alive with gooseflesh. Had he done it on purpose? Did he see, and did he know what effect he was having on her?

Obviously, by now.

He rubbed his thumb on her other earlobe, and Helena heard her breath escape her.

Helplessly, she closed her eyes. She knew she should do something, but as his hands moved around her ribs and inward on her chest, toward her nipples, she wanted him to touch her so badly that she was powerless to stop herself or him.

He cupped her breasts, and rubbed her nipples gently, as though he were still trying to sustain the illusion that he was clinically applying sunscreen. Helena felt herself lean backward and her back touched his hot skin. He moved his hands down the length of her body, and then he paused, making a big show of putting more sunscreen on his hands in front of her.

Helena tried to force herself to think about what she was doing, how plain in sight it was, how wrong...but she could only think of the white lotion on Reza's fingers, and how he was going to return to where he was last applying the lotion...down her torso, so close to the strings that held her only piece of clothing in place.

He rubbed the lotion along her sides, down to her hips, and under the strings of her bikini. She shuddered as he did, and she felt his breath on her neck as he slid his arms beneath the strings. He turned his hands inward, and his fingers stroked the super-sensitive skin of her inner thigh, down close to her ass, then back up. She felt her clit throb. She had never wanted anyone to touch her more than she wanted Reza to keep going, to keep digging beneath the fabric, and into her flesh, and then to push her onto her hands and knees and fill her up with his huge cock...

But suddenly, the sweet pleasure of his hands slid back up, out from under the bikini strings, and up her torso. "I think that should do it," he said, in a low voice, and she felt him standing up.

Moments later, Zahra came trouncing out of the house, yelling in Iranian.

Jesus, thought Helena, as she unsteadily reclined in the lounge chair and pressed her knees together. What the fuck was she doing?

Zahra bitched by the cabana to Reza for a few minutes, and then came over to sit down by Helena.

"Darling," she said, her voice like syrup. "I have to go into town and talk to these idiots at the bank. But you stay here if you want."

Helena looked over at Reza, at his muscled back and his firm thighs, at the roundness of his ass in his shorts. A shudder went through her as she remembered the feel of his strong hands on her thighs.

"I...no, you know what, that's good, I should probably...go home sometime..." she said. She jumped up, wrapping a towel around her in a flustered desire to have some modesty. The whole spell of the crazy afternoon was wearing off as oxygen came back to her head. She threw her swimsuit cover on and slipped her feet into her flip flops.

Zahra looked at them in disapproval. "Tomorrow we'll get you new shoes," she muttered. "Okay then. I will see you soon," she said.

Helena waved at Reza as she left, and, as though nothing had transpired at all, he raised his hand to her. "See you!"

She drove much too fast at first, while she tried to fill her head with thoughts about her husband. How much she loved him. How she needed to put the brakes on all of this somehow.

But her thoughts turned, and she started to drive slower and slower, as she lost herself instead in the memory of Reza's touch, his staring at her body.

After all, it was just fantasy.

After all, she hadn't done anything yet.

After all, getting some sunscreen rubbed on you wasn't exactly adultery.

She drove right past her exit, and was miles down the highway before she realized what she had done.

Steve discovered on Friday that what he had optimistically agreed to after his delicious romp with his wife and her bare pussy was a party on Friday at the Tehrani's. And to stay over, so that everyone, as Helena put it, "could have a really great time."

As the remainder of the week went on, Steve found himself enthralled with the new Helena: relaxed, sexually excited, and dressed to kill. But he couldn't help feeling as though something was also slipping out control. Maybe her, maybe him. Even though he was enjoying that she wanted him to eat her out on the couch or the sunroom lounge chair, and that her skin was smooth as glass and that she was walking around the house in skimpy bikinis, he couldn't help but feel disoriented by his "new wife."

Friday rolled around, and Helena was already dressed when he got home.

"Hurry up," she said playfully. "I'm starving and they have these great appetizers planned."

"You look..." Steve struggled for the right word.

She looked fantastic. She was wearing a black and white striped dress. It was skin-tight, the stripes were vertical, and the collar dipped so low near her breasts that he was afraid a slice of her nipple might be revealed if she moved wrong. She had given him a little spin, and her round ass warped the stripes in the back in such a pleasant way that Steve was certain no man would be able to stop staring at the shape it made. The dress ended mid-thigh, so it was not too short, but its almost conservative length somehow only made it sexier.

Helena didn't wait for his adjective. She placed a hand on her hip and turned back to the mirror. Steve watched her own eyes travel over her body, and he was surprised to see no traces of the critical scowl that normally turned up as she appraised herself. Instead, she glowed. "It's great, isn't it? Zahra was throwing it out, and so I snatched it up."

It was easy, and quite pleasant, to imagine Zahra inside of this dress. It was also easy to see her taste in it. Fashionable. Some strange hint of Eastern in it. Expensive. Not quite slutty, but almost there.

Like Zahra.

“It's...hot,” Steve said lamely.

Helena leaned toward a mirror in the kitchen with a lipstick tube in her hand. “I'm thinking of wearing this,” she said, and Steve watched as a stain of red-orange filled her full lower lip. Then her upper lip. She pressed them together and looked at him in the reflection in the mirror.

His eyes wandered to her ass, to the stripes that curled where her ass rose and fell.

“It looks great,” he murmured.

“The lipstick,” she said. “Not my ass.”

Steve snapped back at her face.

It looked great. The lipstick. And her ass.

“I...is it a little bit...?” he stammered.

“What?” she said, turning around and looking at him.

But the question was not tinged with her usual lack of confidence. She was not holding a tissue in her hand, ready to wipe it off. She was almost challenging him.

Steve stared at her.

She shrugged at his silence and turned back to the mirror. “I like it,” she said. And she gave herself a smile.

The party was just as Steve had both feared and hoped it would be: full, throbbing, boozy and fleshy, and ready to tip over any moment into wildness. It had that vibe from the moment they arrived. Skirts were short, very young girls were floating around in the pool and shrieking, and nothing was standing still.

Helena left Steve alone almost immediately after arriving. “You're okay here, right?” she said, but she seemed distracted. Her eyes were on the pool, almost as though she were searching for something. Or perhaps it seemed more like she was at a frat party for the first time in her life. “I'm going to go look for Zahra.”

Steve leaned on the bar and attempted to look as cool as everyone else did. There were a lot of Persian-looking people at the party, and quite a few people who looked much younger than Reza and Zahra. He scanned the guests on the side of the pool. He could see that some of Reza's business partners or law partners or whatever else he had his hands in, were here as well. But they had the relaxed look of being well into the bottle and ready to let loose.

Steve ordered a drink from a bartender, and was shocked and pleased to find out it was an open bar. Jesus. The money on these two.

Then he saw them. His wife and Zahra, standing together, laughing near the edge of the pool.

It surprised him, because it was actually his striped wife's figure that pulled his eye to where they were standing. From the distance, her figure was silhouetted and looked flawless. Like a stretched hourglass. Even standing next to the very sexy Zahra, she looked incredible.

But she also wasn't alone. Steve watched with a mixture of fascination and horror as Helena put an arm on a man's bicep, tipped her head back and laughed, and then tipped a shot glass of clear liquid into her throat.

As if she did that all time.

Steve had a thought, and it burned as much as it excited him: perhaps this was his real wife. The real Helena. Maybe she had always been like this, always flirting, always doing naughty things with Zahra. Maybe she had always been misbehaving, and hiding it from him. Maybe what he was seeing here was not a conversion of his wife, but a dropping of the facade.

Steve swallowed. Helena was standing close to the man, and then she moved even closer, her breasts brushing against his body as she leaned in and told him something in his ear.

Steve felt his cock pulse to life. It was too good to be true: this was his fantasy coming to life.

He should be happy.

But he felt a current of pain running through him at the same time. She was actually doing this. He blinked. Someone had put on some music, and the guests were starting to dance. Including Helena. The man she had been flirting with slid his arm around her waist, and they began to move to the music. It was a fast, upbeat tune, with some kind of Eastern-sounding tones to it, so they weren't dancing dirtily.

They were just very, very close.

The stripes of Helena's dress accentuated the sexiness of her swaying hips, her bouncing breasts, and her grinding ass.

Was he actually seeing this?

And the worst part, or maybe the best part – it was hard to tell – was that Helena wasn't even looking around for her husband. She was just grinding against the crotch of another man, right there in front of everyone, and she wasn't even looking around for him.

The man had his hand across her stomach now. She had turned to shake her ass against his hips. The back of her dress dipped low and showed off her bare skin, and that man's breath was probably against her spine right now. His eyes were dipping right into the fabric, looking through it to imagine what her ass looked like underneath the dress. She had one hand up and he was holding it, and her ass was bumping into him occasionally. He had to have a hard-on, Steve thought. She had to feel it, against her ass when she rubbed against him.

Did she like it? Was she doing it on purpose?

Steve tore his eyes away from his wife, and to the other guests at the party. Everyone was dancing. Everyone was dancing like that.

It was just for fun, he told himself. Everyone was just having fun. Flirting. Engaging in a little summery fun. That was all.

He caught sight of Reza, though. Speaking in low tones to a man by the bar cabana.

With his eyes, inarguably, on Helena as she danced.

That same, intense, possessive expression on his face.

Steve felt like he was getting punched in the stomach while someone stroked his cock. The feelings were clawing at each other and tearing him apart.

He moved to an empty table that had been pushed into a darkened corner by a raucous group. Around him, the music began to get louder, and so did the people, as they became drunker.

He watched the scene unfold. Soon enough, someone pushed a scantily-clad blonde into the pool, and then more people went tumbling in after her. People began to peel off their clothes, whether they were headed into the pool or not. The dancing got closer, dirtier.

But mostly Steve was watching his wife. In all honesty, he was sort of enjoying being tucked away in at the shadowy table, forgotten about and free to be a voyeur. Free to watch as the pretty girls began to strip off their clothes. Free to watch his wife, who seemed to have forgotten him, as she danced with one man after another. His cock was hard and oozing with precum already by the time a guy, who seemed very young, began dancing with Helena in nothing more than his wet swim trunks.

Helena was still clothed, but in that skin-tight dress there was nothing left to the imagination. And she was pressing herself flirtatiously against his bare chest, her head back, her cherry-red lips open as she laughed at whatever he was saying.

Quite a few men had positioned themselves on a low wall next to where everyone was dancing, and they all had their eyes on Helena. After a while, it was only Helena and one other couple dancing in the patch of grass. Steve watched as his wife swayed her hips and bucked her ass and put on a show that would have made a stripper proud.

Surely she knew everyone was watching her.

He knew he should probably do something else besides sit there, watching her, and watching the men who were watching her. He knew he should do something besides idly ponder whether or not his wife, all these years, had only been submerging her true self, and was now just being who she really was.

And why he liked that so much.

But he was paralyzed. His cock was solid and aching, and if he was honest, he was enjoying the scene more than he was hating it. He had a curiosity – a painful, almost sickening one – to see where this was going to go.

At some point though, after dancing quite wildly and sexily, Helena saw Steve and walked – a bit unsteadily – toward him. She pushed her sweaty hair from her face. “What are you doing over here all on your lonesome?” she slurred.

Steve shrugged.

“Well,” she said. “I’m going in.” Then she spun around and walked toward the pool.

It took a few moments for the words to sink in. Steve gave an uneasy glance at the pool, where quite a few girls were getting naked, and at his wife’s low-dipping dress, and the lack of lines that might be underwear.

He was suddenly compelled to act: this was all fine and good when she was dancing clothed, but naked in the pool was too far.

He stood up and trotted behind her. As he did, he realized he was a little more buzzed than he had thought. Helena was standing by the edge of the pool, and Steve saw one of the guys grin as he looked up and probably caught a glimpse of what was – or wasn’t – under her dress.

Steve grasped Helena’s elbow. “You’re not -”

She looked at him strangely, then rolled her eyes. “Oh god, of course not. I have a bikini in the cabana,” she said, and started to wrench her elbow away from him.

Steve wasn't sure if he was disappointed or relieved. Even as Helena had started to say “of course not,” he had been imagining her peeling her dress from her body, right then and there. No underwear on, just stunningly naked. Still in her heels. Colored lights splayed across her breasts.

Helena slinked away to the cabana, and Steve stood there, looking and feeling a bit like an idiot, as the many guests around him began tossing their clothes about and jumping into the pool.

He sensed someone standing next to him, and he turned to see Zahra, topless, holding a drink and looking out at the pool with amusement. Without taking her eyes off the many laughing, splashing girls, she held her drink close to her chest and said:

“You aren't getting in, I take it.”

She turned to him as he shook his head. She didn't have shoes on, so she was quite a bit shorter than usual. Steve's eyes dropped, against his will, to where she was rolling her ice-cold drink across her bare breasts as though she needed to cool down. Her nipples pebbled when the cool glass rolled over them, and the condensation kissed her skin and beaded on her flesh. A single drop of ice-cold water gathered on her left breast and slid down her skin, along her side, and into the dark fabric of her tiny thong.

“You always were a bit of a downer,” she said, playfully. She held out her drink, and he took it from her without thinking about it – Zahra had that sort of commanding effect on people. She took three sexy steps towards the pool, before she stretched her magnificent arms over her head, and dove gracefully into the water, on the side of the group of splashing guests.

Breasts bounced everywhere, and the ladies squealed and splashed water at each other.

Steve looked around helplessly.

He then saw what he had not seen before: only half the party was really this wild. Plenty of women were still clothed and sitting in deck chairs, caught up in conversations with men or a group of people, like an ordinary party. The panic that had been building up inside of him, that the party was disintegrating into an orgy, released. He also felt a pang of disappointment, but really it was more relief. Reza, who was still standing by the bar, lifted a drink toward him in salutation, and Steve raised his empty glass.

Reza's eyes suddenly flicked away from Steve. Behind him. And Steve knew what he was looking at before he turned around.

Helena was emerging from the cabana just then. She had put on yet another new swimsuit. This one was red, and almost couldn't be called a suit at all. Two strips of red fabric sliced down her front side in a v-shape, just covering her breasts as they cut down to her pelvis and only – only just barely – covered her snatch. In fact, if she hadn't been totally shaved, she couldn't have worn the suit. Even a landing strip would have been peeking out of the top of the “v”.

Steve's jaw dropped, and he had the sense around him that Helena had sucked all the air out of every man's lungs. The shape of her breasts was totally visible, the neat curve of her abdomen, and the firm roundness of her ass was undoubtedly hanging out the same way from behind.

Steve moved toward her, resisting the urge to pick up a towel from a nearby chair and cover her up.

His mouth emitted a few syllables, wanting to tell her to cover up, wanting to tell her how hot she looked, wanting to ask if it was really her suit...but instead he just kind of grunted.

She gave him a twirl. The back of the suit was not much better, but at least a swatch of fabric held the v-shape in place across her back, and a slightly thicker v covered – again, only just – the crack of her ass and a tiny bit of the round hump of flesh around it.

“You like?” she asked, winking.

“Hey Helena,” Steve heard Reza call. “Nice suit.”

Someone else whistled.

“You look stunning, darling,” Zahra said, from the pool below them. Her black hair was slicked back like an otter, and she was floating on her back, giving Steve a nice view of her breasts under the shimmering water.

Just like that, Steve was forgotten. Helena sat down on the edge of the pool, and kicked her feet playfully in the water. Then she glided out to where Zahra was, and their wet bodies seemed to merge in the water, sending a ripple of pleasure through Steve.

He wiped his eyes, and backed away slowly, toward another shadowy chair, content to watch his wife as she glided through the pool, glistening, touching other women. And to watch Reza's eyes on her, enjoying her scanty red swimsuit, and all the flesh it revealed.

And there he sat. The party droned on around him and he let his fantasy take over his thoughts again and again, as he watched his wife in the pool. It seemed to him as though all male eyes were on her, and though he knew he was deliberately seeking out the expressions that made him the most jealous, and spinning up the intensity of his thought for his own perverse pleasure – it was also true. His wife was a gorgeous blonde, bouncing in a pool full of gorgeous women, and most men were choosing to look at her.

Think about her.

And imagine her suit falling right off.

“It's cool, this door locks.”

Helena was laughing, and it was evident she was pretty drunk. The party-goers had broken off into couples after about an hour, and Steve had watched his wife with both hope and fear as she emerged from the pool with another couple. By then, he was wild with lust and imagining extremely filthy things. But Helena, to his equal relief and disappointment, had sauntered across to him and leaned over. Her skin had been cool and small rivers of water snaked over her skin and between her dangling breasts. “I know where we can sneak away,” she had whispered.

And she had led him to one of the cabanas near the pool.

Steve's cock was so hard he could barely walk. He reached behind him and fumbled with the lock, but he was still trying to move into the room and grasp at every part of his wife as he did it. He was also a little drunk, and he made a mess of the whole thing, tripped, and fell into the darkness.

Luckily he had a soft landing on some kind of couch or cot or bed.

Helena laughed, and then she was next to him. Her hands were seeking out his body, getting under his shirt, fumbling with his belt. Her skin was still wet, and she was a little cold. He felt the slap of her wet hair against his skin, and the cool fabric of her suit.

As his eyes adjusted to the semi-darkness, he saw that there was a window above them letting in a little light, and then the nearly-naked form of his wife's body became better visible. She looked silver in the dim light, and her skin glistened. Her wet hair snaked around her neck and shoulders, and her whole body looked fresh and new. He fumbled to get his clothes off.

“Shhhh!” Helena hissed suddenly, and she rose up on her knees to peer out of the propped window.

Steve pulled his shirt over his head and listened.

At first he heard nothing, but then at the same time that he saw Helena cover her mouth and drop down to rest her ass on her heels, he heard the unmistakeable sound of a couple, murmuring. Skin slapping together, moans. The sounds of people having sex.

Helena pointed toward the wall, and her eyes were excited, but she was too...mortified by something to look. Steve rose up cautiously, and Helena slapped her hand on his forearm but not in any real attempt to stop him.

From the window there was a view of the back of another cabana and then a slice of the pine trees that shaded the path and the area where the hot tub was. And he could see the hot tub itself.

And the people in it.

There was not much mistaking the slender, cinnamon-tan colored body of Zahra, or her inky black hair, even though she had her back to the window and so all that he could see was the heart shape of her ass where it flared away from her narrow waist.

This was the first thing he took in, and then the surrounding picture came into focus, piece by piece.

It was so lewd, so unexpected and yet expected, that his mind had a hard time delivering the message to his body. For a moment he stopped breathing.

Zahra was on her knees, and her head was moving back and forth, without shaking her wet hair, which stuck to her back. Her skin was wet and beads of water clung to it like sweat. They glistened in the low light that hung over the hot tub. Her face was bobbing over the center of a man, and when she pulled back, Steve could see his flopping balls, slapping against his own thighs with the momentum of Zahra's sucking.

But the torso that rose over her head was pale, and covered in light-brown hair, and the man who stared down at her with his mouth open was not her husband.

But there was more. Zahra's slender arm was outstretched, to her right, and her fingers were clasped around a big, huge, cock.

And this man was Reza. Tan, dripping wet, shiny and completely naked. Steve stared at his cock, and Zahra's fingers moving up and down his shaft. It was a dark, fat piece of meat, uncircumcised and hard enough to push the swollen glans and foreskin tight against the veined surface of his shaft.

Steve stared.

Helena tugged on his arm, but he continued to watch. She rose up next to him on her knees, and her eyes grew wide as she took in the scene.

It was only then that Steve looked over at her. He wondered what she was watching. She seemed to have her eyes on Reza's cock as well.

And then he indulged in a thought, that she liked the look of it. That she was imagining holding it in her own hand.

He turned back to the scene. Zahra fell onto all fours and turned toward Reza. They now had an excellent profile view of his cock as it sank into her mouth and stretched her lips wide. Helena's eyes widened as the whole, huge thing disappeared into her mouth. They could both see that the bulge of his cock was pressing against her throat, sliding up and down her neck.

The man she had been attending to before shifted his weight around, and moved to where Zahra's naked ass was.

Steve felt Helena tremble next to him, and he looked over at her. She was staring with a strange expression, one he had never seen before. Lust, and fascination. An unexpected, hungry look as she watched her friend suck her husband's cock and align her small ass with the tip of the stranger's thick shaft.

The stranger moved his cock up and down Zahra's slit for a few strokes, but he didn't waste much time before thrusting his fat member inside of her. For a moment Zahra's body ping-ponged between the two of them as she fucked backward into the stranger and then slid her mouth down her husband's cock.

She reached a hand up, and placed it on Reza's cock, and let his thick meat slide from her mouth. Her lips moved, and the low treble of her voice rumbled but they couldn't hear what she said. Then Reza placed a hand on her head and pushed her back onto his cock.

The two men fucked her for a bit more, and then Reza said something. The man smiled, and gave her two more hard thrusts, before he slowly pulled his cock from inside of her.

Steve heard Helena suck in her breath., and her eyes were wide with anticipation.

Steve moved behind Helena, taking a chance that she would let him. She didn't move, or even seem to notice him, and so he slipped the red fabric at her neck down her body. It rolled over her shoulders and her breasts popped out. He moved up against her back after ripping off his own shirt and pulling down his pants and boxers.

Helena continued to stare at the scene in front of her, and Steve slid his hands over her breasts and pulled himself closer to her. His hands slid down her body, then under the remaining red strips of fabric and into the v-shaped area it covered, until his fingers sank into her hot, soaked flesh.

Her body trembled. He looked up and saw that the strange man was now slowly, slowly, sliding his cock into Zahra from behind. She arched her back and threw her head up, and Steve realized then that the man was entering her ass. He stared at the girth of the man's cock, and imagined how he must be stretching Zahra's tiny asshole to its limits. He wasn't even sure how so much meat could fit inside of her small torso.

But the best part, undoubtedly, was the gush of juices that flowed over his fingers from inside his wife, as her pussy pulsed with excitement.

He pulled down on the fabric, and the red strips slid down her arms, taken down to the couch by the rest of the suit that he peeled away from her.

He looked down at the pile of fabric bunched over his wife's calves, her pale round ass rising up over it. The insides of her thighs were wet with her excitement. Her body was hot and her breath was ragged, but she didn't move her eyes from the scene in front of her.

Steve slid one finger into her pussy, and then a second. He added another, and then a fourth, until he was slowly fucking her with his hand. She gasped and rutted up against him, but her eyes stayed on the scene in front of her. She was so wet that his hand met no resistance as he plunged deeper and deeper into her.

A wail from Zahra forced Steve to lift his eyes to the hot tub scene, and he felt his cock nearly burst as he took in what was happening: the trio had shifted positions and Zahra was now lying on top of the man who had his cock in her ass. He was leaning back on his elbows, and she was lying on him as though he were an armchair. But her legs were suspended in the air, propped open by Reza's strong arms, and Reza's body was rising and falling over her. Steve stared at the space between her legs, where he had a not perfect, but very graphic view, of her two holes, filled to the max, being stretched and pummeled by two cocks at the same time.

Zahra leaned her head back and screamed, and then looked down at the cock moving in and out of her pussy.

Steve pulled apart his own wife's legs, and guided his stiff cock to her smooth entrance. Again, the bare feel of her drove him wild when he felt it with the tip of his cock. He was almost over the edge already, so he slid into her slowly, and began to move back and forth as slowly as he could.

Because the scene below them was still playing out.

The three of them changed positions again, and Zahra got her knees into the hot tub, resting on the bench along the edge. Then she bent over the edge, with her ass in the air. For a moment it was on display to the two of them: her reddened asshole was gaped wide and throbbing closed.

But it would not get the chance.

The stranger went in first, as Reza watched – and Steve noted that he watched with the same expression that he watched Helena with – as the stranger slid his cock into Zahra's ass – his wife's ass – and began to ram into her while she let out a low moan that was garbled by his punctuated thrusts inside of her.

The man pulled out, and stood pointing his cock over Zahra's back. Ropes of his cum splashed over her buttocks and her back.

And then it was Reza's turn.

Steve was lost the moment he let himself have the thought of entering his own wife – in the ass or the pussy – when she was hot and sticky and stretched out from another man who had just fucked her. Would his cock slosh around inside of her, like it was now, only even more? What did it feel like to get inside of a stretched, sloshy cunt after watching another man take your wife?

He bit into Helena's shoulder as his orgasm shredded through him.

He was sure he felt Helena clench around him around the same time.

Reza yelled, and it covered up the muffled screams of Helena, who had to yell into Steve's hand as he pummeled the last of his cum into her.

“That was...”

Helena, for the first time since she had begun coming to her friends' house, looked slightly bashful. She covered her face with a pillow. “I know.”

Steve pulled the pillow away from her face. “What do you know?”

She bit her lower lip. Steve was cold with anticipation. He wanted so badly for her to say the right thing here, for what had happened to be a gateway to something else.

But Helena seemed afraid to say anything.

“Did you like it?” Steve said quietly.

She nodded.

She smiled.

This may have been the most erotic moment Steve could remember, that wasn't right in the middle of sex.

She smiled. Invitingly.

Then she wrenched the pillow from him and covered her face. “I know. It's just so...”

He pulled the pillow away again, laughing. He was actually relieved that some remnant of Helena's pre-Tehrani personality was showing through: a little bit of bashfulness after all of her brazen, over-sexed behavior lately. “It's just so naughty?” he prompted.

She gave a light snort and nodded, then tried to pull the pillow away from him.

“Well, it is,” she insisted. “I mean...I knew Zahra was...but I didn't think she was...” Helena jerked her head in the direction of the hot tub.

They looked at each other.

“How about this...” he said slowly, feeling like he was moving around in the dark for something, but had finally found a clue that helped him make sense of where he was. Like he might actually find something, if he just kept moving patiently...

“How about we just...we just share our fantasies? Maybe it was like a chance to...I don't know. Do something new.” He looked at her. “I thought it was really hot.”

She giggled. “Me too,” she whispered. And it was evident there was something else.

Steve tried to keep his hope from making him just start blabbering incoherently.

He should probably just leave it, he thought.

Helena cocked her head. “Hmm,” she said, and her voice was a sexual purr, to Steve's delight. “So, do you have more fantasies?”

Really?

He grinned, a little bashfully. “Maybe.”

She reached toward him and put a hand on his chest. Her fingers moved up and down his skin, and she smiled. “Okay. But I don't do anything with animals.”

They laughed. Then Steve decided to plunge. It was likely the best opportunity he would ever have for sharing the secret he had kept from her for so long.

His heart beat for a moment in the silence, and he could feel it. It was like holding onto the edge of something, just before you jump.

Helena's face turned serious as well, as she saw that his own face had gone still and he had left the jokes behind.

“Okay, so I have one,” he said softly. “A real one.”

She opened her mouth, and he could see that she was possibly planning to make a joke, but thought better of it. “Okay,” she said instead, and her lips closed together to show she was listening, seriously.

He looked up at the ceiling. “Okay, don't...it's sort of strange, but remember, it's just a fantasy, I just...”

He looked back at her when she didn't respond. Helena was waiting patiently.

In fact, maybe she looked a little...excited?

“I have this fantasy about seeing you with...”

He suddenly felt the need to laugh, and he wiped his face, as if he were covered with sweat. His chin was covered with a weak stubble, he needed to shave.

“What is it?” Helena said. But her voice was different. Like she was....no it couldn't be.

Like she was getting off on this?

Steve's optimistic side, which often got him in trouble, brightened.
“Okay,” he said. “I want to see you with another man.”

Helena's mouth dropped open a little.

But just a little.

Not wide, not in shock, not even, he noted, in surprise.

“Not really,” she said.

He looked back up at the ceiling and rocked back and forth on his ass a little. He sucked in his breath. “Uh...well, since we're being honest...well, yeah. Yeah. Really.”

It suddenly hit him, almost like he had run into a wall, that he was actually having a serious conversation with his wife about this.

She looked incredulous when he looked back at her. But not disbelieving, not horrified. She was smiling, and then she shook her head. “I don't...know what to say.”

He reached for her hand, and caught her arm instead. He gave a quick squeeze. He didn't want to do any damage to the house of cards he was building. “Look. Don't...we don't have to say anything right now. It's just...a fantasy, right. You don't have to act on it, I don't have to act on it...it's just -”

“But do you want to, also? Like swingers or something?”

What was the expression on her face, he wondered?

“It's going to sound crazy,” he said, deciding to be largely honest...I mean, of course he thought about fucking Zahra, what man wouldn't? But that wasn't the center of it at all. It wasn't the thing that really got him fired up. “But it's really just more about...you. Like, you with another guy and me watching.”

Now her mouth fell open a little further.

“And not you, with another woman?”

He shook his head, slowly, to give it emphasis.

She let out a strange laugh. “I don't believe you,” she said.

“Why not?”

“I just...” she was smiling, and shaking her head, and she folded her arms. “I don't get what...like, what do you get out of it?”

Steve closed his eyes. He pinched the bridge of his nose.

“I don't actually know,” he said finally.

“But you'd want me to do it.”

He nodded.

“Like, actually do it.”

He nodded again.

She leaned forward. "So if I went out and...I don't know...had sex with..."

And here she paused, but Steve's cock turned hard as a rock because she paused for far too short of a time, far, far too short, to have not already been thinking of this name:

"Say, Reza? I had sex with him and you would just watch, and that would be...?"

"Hot," Steve offered, his cock now directing him far more than his brain. His cock, the most optimistic of all his body parts, was now surging with hope aplenty.

Helena sat there, cross-legged with her arms folded, and the most strange expression on her face, for what seemed like an eternity.

Then she let a sound escape her mouth. It was not a laugh, or a huff, or a gasp, but some kind of combination of those three things. And then she smiled.

"I...have to...you're serious?"

"As a heart attack."

"Serious-serious?"

"It couldn't -"

And then they were cut off, by the lilting and screeching voice of Zahra, shouting back at Reza's soft and barely audible baritone in furious Persian, and then quickly sweetened:

"Lovelies, Reza says you have made some kind of golf appointment." More Persian. "I don't understand," her voice continued, moving away from the cabana, and muttering, though in English so apparently to be heard, "why this golf can only be done in the morning. Oh god, I have such a headache."

Her heels clacked away toward the cabana with the bar.

Steve and Helena smiled at each other.

"To be continued?" he said.

She shook her head lightly and smiled. "I guess so," she said.

The week after the party, Helena told Zahra she had appointments on Monday. She both desperately wanted to return to the pool, and also wanted to avoid it.

Avoid the temptation, that was now even more of a temptation, of Reza.

Steve had seemed almost apologetic when she told him on Monday night that she hadn't gone over there.

"I didn't mean to..." he said, and then seemed unable to finish the sentence.

"No," Helena had said, and they both knew it was kind of an awkward lie. "No, I just...I can't spend every day by the pool. You know."

They looked at each other.

And then suddenly, they both started laughing.

"It's actually sort of awkward," she admitted.

Steve shook his head. "Look, I'm really sorry, I shouldn't have...said anything, and it's not like....I mean, obviously you think it's pretty weird -"

"I have to tell you something," Helena said. She was almost surprised by herself. She felt a sudden need to confess to everything that had happened at the pool with Reza.

It was actually perfect. It was a test. A test of whether or not Steve was serious in his fantasy. Whether or not he would really like it, or he would get mad. Because that's what had been troubling her, she realized.

"So...I didn't know what to say when you told me about your...idea," she said. "Um...because...well, there was something I didn't really tell you. About Reza."

She watched his face. She watched his body.

His expression was hungry.

They looked at each other.

"Did you sleep with him?" Steve finally said, and his voice was a half-whisper.

Helena studied his face. "What if I did?" she said.

She watched the reaction that washed over him. She let her eyes drop to his burgeoning erection.

It seemed, at least from the way he seemed parched and aroused, that he was actually turned on by this.

And something inside of her quivered with a new desire. It was arousing her, too.

In such a different way than anything ever had before. She got onto the bed on her knees and walked on them to his side of the bed, where he was breathlessly staring at her. She playfully started to unbutton his shirt. “What if I didn't sleep with him, but I let him do something else?”

She could feel her husband's body shudder beneath her hands. She grinned. She hadn't seen Steve this turned on in a long time. Not since, she realized, she had begun going to the pool.

She had believed it was her bikinis, and that her own libido had been stimulated by...well, the sun...but now she saw that Steve had been more attractive, and attracted, because of his fantasy.

And she liked that.

She pushed his shirt open and leaned in to brush her lips over his chest. She fluttered his eyes up to him.

His mouth was slightly open. He was obviously a little shocked, but she saw that he was recovering. He placed a hand on the strap of her camisole and fingered it. “Wha...what? What did you do?”

Helena couldn't help herself. A poker-hot flush streaked across her cheeks. “Do you really want me to...?”

Steve held her by the shoulders. “Trust me when I say this,” he breathed. “I really want you to.”

Helena took a breath, and then she decided to plunge in. What was wrong with it, after all, if they were both into it?

“It's what I let him do,” she said, and she enjoyed the shudder that went through him, the way he sucked in his breath, and the pulse of his cock that pushed it against her leg.

“What did you let him do?” Steve breathed.

“Well...” she said. God, she really hoped he was okay with this. “I was just sitting out by the pool. All alone.” She reached her hand into his pants and curled her fingers around his cock. She used her other hand to unfasten his button, and push the material off his hips. His cock throbbed in her hand. She could feel that precum had drained into his boxers, and she swept her palm over his head to smear some of it down the length of his shaft.

“And Reza came over to me and offered to put some sunscreen on.”
She felt his cock throb again.

“I was topless,” she whispered, “so I was a little embarrassed. But then I really needed some sunscreen, and he already had in it his palm, so...what could I do?”

Steve peeled her cami away from her shoulders until her breasts popped out of the top. Her nipples were hard and she knew it pleased him. She could tell that his fantasy was genuine, that he was enjoying the idea of her nipples being hard because she was telling a story about Reza. Almost as much, if not more, than he enjoyed the sight of her hard nipples.

“And I let him smear it all over me. He started on my back-”

Another throb.

“But eventually he moved around, until he had my breasts in his hands. It was so inappropriate. But I just didn't...stop him...”

Steve was kneading her breasts now.

“Did it turn you on?” he said.

“Yeah. It turned me on,” she breathed. “I...well, I also forgot to mention that earlier in the day I saw him. By the pool. And I saw...”

Steve pushed her down on to her back, and pulled her pajama shorts away. She was so wet herself that she could smell her own juices, and she felt her skin rub against the slickness, which was several inches down her inner thighs.

Steve looked at her. “Did you see his cock?”

As he said this, he wasted no time in thrusting himself inside of her. He was wildly hard, and she gasped. “I saw it,” she said, and she felt his cock thrash inside of her. He was starting to shake with the exertion of stopping himself from coming. She ground her hips against his.

“I saw his cock and it was so big,” she said, and her voice was reduced to a panting squeal as she started to rise over the crest of her own orgasm. “It was a big, thick cock and I couldn't stop thinking about it while he rubbed lotion all over my body!”

The words seemed so cliched, but they sent Steve right over the edge, and he yelled loudly as he hammered himself inside of her. Her own screams joined his as she came. He fell on top of her, and lay on her body, panting, before rolling slightly to the side.

“That was amazing,” she said softly, but Steve's answer was barely intelligible because he was already dozing off.

Almost as if it was fated, there was of course another party at the Tehrani's that weekend. Helena mentioned it and Steve said they should go, and the conversation was casual, though the subtext burned in the air between them. She could tell by the flush that came over herself, and came over Steve, that they were both thinking the same thing:

Maybe this would be the night.

But until much later in the evening, it seemed like it wouldn't be the night. There were a lot of guests, and no one was wearing bathing suits. The spirit of the party was much more somber than the one the week before. Hardly anyone was in the pool.

Helena decided to treat Steve, at the very least, to plenty of flirting, and so she laughed and talked to a lot of men, tossing her hair and batting her eyelashes. She wore a short black skirt and a form-fitting red-orange shirt, new acquisitions that let her smooth tanned skin hang out everywhere, bare and summery and exciting. The shirt cut low across her chest to reveal plenty of her breasts, and she enjoyed the way men's eyes were drawn to her bosom almost involuntarily.

Or some of them just stared, which ordinarily would have bothered her, but she was feeling bold and knew Steve was watching, so she drew her finger along the neckline of the shirt and rubbed her oiled skin.

She was really getting off on the idea of Steve watching her, sitting at his pool table and staring at her as she stroked her leg or placed a flirtatious hand on someone else's. She could feel her excitement slick between her legs, and she was not wearing panties, so her thighs glided against each other in the slick proof of her arousal.

But now that they had essentially leaped at the fantasy, and narrowed it down to Reza, it all felt like a meager appetizer. She knew what she really wanted, and what Steve really wanted. And like most things in her life, she had made the decision that she was going to do it and there was no looking back.

It was hard to wait.

She would never find out what changed at the party that night, around ten o'clock. Maybe someone handed out pills, or the boring guests went home. The music changed, or people just finally got drunk. But people started to get into swimsuits. Then they started to sit by the pool with bare feet dipping into the water.

And then Zahra had passed by her, and given her a glance that almost seemed to be complicit. Zahra was utterly bare, and she slipped into the pool and stretched her naked body out. Then she called out from the center of the pool:

“Hey everybody! Let's enjoy my bloody pool for once! No clothes in here!”

And just like that, everyone was stripping and jumping into the pool.

Helena sat down next to Steve. She slid her top over her head, and set it on the table. She looked at Steve. “Well?” she said. “It looks like our chance is coming. You really want to do this?”

Steve looked at her for a moment. “Do you?”

She stood up and slid her black skirt down. She was pleased to see how hungry it made her husband look when he saw that she wasn't wearing any underwear. She knew he could see that her skin was already damp, and that he knew there was only one way for that to have happened. “I want to try,” she said. “I can't make any promises.”

Steve just gaped at her.

“Okay then...well...should I do it?” she said.

His mouth opened and closed, almost comically, with no sound emerging, before he squeaked, “Uh...yes.”

“Okay.”

“Okay.”

“You have to come find me, then,” she said, playfully.

She kicked off her shoes. Even without her shoes she knew she was tall, and that her body was goddess-like, pale in the light, and she looked stunning. She surveyed the pool, and the men standing by the side of it. A few tamer girlfriends or wives were frowning at the scene, but some were trying to talk their husbands into the water.

And then she saw him. The pool was so large that a person could find a space to be alone, and that's what Reza had done. He was standing, naked, in the middle of the pool, a distance away from the others.

And his eyes were directly on her.

They met, and they stared at each other. The message was clear, clear to anyone who was looking. As Steve was undoubtedly doing. Reza was far away but she still felt that she could see his eyes moving up and down her body.

And her husband behind her, enjoying the scene.

For a moment she felt terrified, as though she had flung herself off a cliff.

But then she shrugged, mostly for herself. Reza kicked away from his position and swam on his back toward the waterfall cave.

You only live once.

Helena strutted down the side of the pool to where there were gently sloping steps, so that she could enter the water slowly, teasing Steve just a little more. And then she waded toward the waterfall, without looking back. Her body was tingling with a sinful sensation, and she didn't want to see it if Steve's face betrayed any doubt, or a second-thought. She didn't feel like herself as she moved through the water: she felt like a new person, determined to get something that would have been taboo. Should have been taboo.

And it felt great.

When she reached the end of the pool where it disappeared into the cave, behind the waterfall, something in her chest fluttered with one last, tiny bit of doubt. After all, maybe she had misread something.

She ducked beneath the water, and the sound of the falling water over her head drowned out her second thoughts.

The water in the pool under the waterfall came up to just cover her nipples. As she moved, it lapped against the delicate frontier between her areola and her regular skin, and her nipples were almost instantly hard. She moved her hands in front of her to help pull her through the water.

Reza was sitting at the edge of the pool, staring at her as she moved toward him.

She couldn't hear anything beyond the cave: the waterfall canceled all but the most wild noises – an occasional, drunken shriek – and the water obscured the insides of the cave as well the out. Only the colored lights were visible through the stream of water.

But she didn't look back to confirm any of this, or even really think about it, because Reza's intense stare was pulling her in like tractor beam.

Her pussy was throbbing and she was breathing quickly to supply her quick blood with enough oxygen.

She knew she should probably stop, and she tried feebly to send a signal to her body to freeze. If she got no nearer to him, if she only stopped moving her arms, then she could jump from one foot, and float on her back, under the waterfall and away.

But she moved closer.

Closer still.

Reza's stare moved from her eye to her nipples. The sweep of his eye titillated her almost as much as if he had swept his fingers over the hardened ridge of her nipple. Then he searched in the shifting water for the shape of her body, and the same sweet sensation that had caressed her nipples caressed her core.

She was within reach of him now, and she let her fingers graze his knees.

It was only now that she let her eyes fall to his legs and what was in between them. She had been so caught up in his gaze, in what he was doing to her own body, that she had seemingly forgotten that nearly everyone had stripped, and that perhaps he, too, was wearing nothing.

She was disappointed to see the dark black material of his swimsuit draped between his legs, and sticking to his skin. But in the center of his legs, a large bulge revealed that he was not scanning her body with indifference.

She was drunk, and she knew that she was being a little reckless. But it gave her a high, after everything that had transpired between them until now, to let her eyes linger on the shape of his cock in his suit.

Then she lifted her eyes.

There was a pang of guilt, when she saw his smile. And then she reminded herself that she was doing this for her husband: he had seen her go in here. He had asked her to go in there.

She hoped he would be able to watch her, and she gave in to a little worry about whether or not he would find a way to do so. But she dismissed it: it was Steve's job to find a way to see her. The idea that he might not, that she might be crossing the line if she did this and he couldn't find a way to watch, was sort of exhilarating.

Reza kicked a foot. "What brings you in here, then?"

Helena moved forward, again feeling a little as though her body were acting on its own. She watched her fingers curl around the elastic of his swimsuit, and tug at it. She watched the material peel away, and the dark, hard meat of his cock spill forward and out of the material. It almost stood, but the sheer weight of it made it tip forward. His legs moved apart, and she moved forward. The tip of his cock was very close to her lips now, and she had her eyes on it. She liked to look at him, up close, and imagine the feel of his cock in her mouth, inside her, along her thigh.

Reza took his cock in his own hand and pointed it toward her. She hesitated only for second, and then she opened for him and took his cock into her own mouth. She could taste the bitter precum at the end of his glans. It streaked down her hard palate to the back of her throat.

She was pleased to feel the ripple of pleasure in Reza's abdomen, and hear a sigh from him. She lifted her eyes to see that he was looking down at her, his mouth open slightly and an expression she had never before seen on his face swimming on his features.

She pushed herself to go further. She wanted to really take him inside of her. She had fantasized about this, had daydreams in the sun about it, and now she wanted to actually do it.

A thrill went through her when, after a while, Reza pushed off of his hands and took her head in both hands to pull her deep onto his shaft. He began to move her forcefully up and down on his cock. She had only to open wide and let her throat be filled. He pushed deep and she gagged, but she was enjoying his sudden, fitful dominance of her. She could feel his legs and torso straining against his own skin as she sucked on him.

When she felt that he was getting too close, she slowed and let his cock pop from her mouth. She reached up with a cool hand and grasped the girth of him. His cock was thick and warm in her hand, and when he flexed beneath her touch she felt a ripple through the large vein along the length of his shaft.

She looked up at him, and guided his cock to her mouth. She wanted to buy her husband some time to come and watch her. She wondered what he would do; if he would sneak in, or just walk beneath the path behind the cave-area that led down to the hot tub. She wondered if someone else would wander under the waterfall, and see her with Reza's cock in her hand and her tongue lapping at the swollen head of it. She almost hoped they would.

She teased Reza, making a long and languid swirl around his head, running her tongue over the hard ridge of his glans. The pool water tickled her nipples, and her skin turned bumpy with excitement. Reza slid a hand behind her neck, under her wet hair, but he didn't push her down onto his cock. She ran her tongue down his shaft, and then lifted his heavy meat to lick his balls – smooth and hairless, like her own throbbing cunt. She nibbled at the taut skin that surrounded his hot sacks, and then she opened wide to pull them inside of her mouth. They were too big, so she could only get one side of his sack inside of her mouth, but she relished the pulse of his cock in her firm grip as she sucked on him.

Then she ran her tongue back to the tip of his cock, along the underside of him, and when she placed her lips again on the crown, she found the tip of his cock slick with his bitter precum.

She looked into his eyes as she opened her mouth again and slid down the length of his cock.

But she wanted more. She pulled back, and gave him a look that she hoped he would interpret correctly.

And he did. In a flash, he had grasped her biceps with each hand, and was lifting her out of the water with ease. He pushed her, like a heavy doll, to one side and got her legs over his lap. His hard cock rubbed against her abdomen, and she was worried, about how he positioned her, that he was going to give her some kind of spanking. But then she felt his fingers pulling her apart, and probing into her slippery folds. She arched her back as she tossed her head back and emitted a light moan. His fingers found her clit, and slid over it in practiced, easy movements, until she came so quickly she had no time to stop herself.

But he was far from done.

Steve had risen from his chair when his wife disappeared beneath the waterfall. He didn't have very many options: he could slink around, or he could be bold. He could hardly believe what was happening, and more than his own lust, he was sure that his pure curiosity was driving him to walk around the pool to the far end, and then down the steps to the hot tub.

Then plan from there had been to walk back up, along the steps that branched and went into the cavernous underbelly of the waterfall, where he knew that Reza and his wife must be.

But when he got to the hot tub, he froze.

Because of the color of the expensive rock the hot tub was made of, he had not seen her: Zahra's body was nearly the same color as one of the olive-tinted rocks. She was floating on her back, with her full tits rising out of the water and her lithe body shimmering beneath the clear surface. For a moment she didn't look real. Steve froze.

But Zahra had evidently been watching him descend the steps. She rose to a seated position, and on her face was a wry smile. She fluttered her long, lean arms around her, as though she were swimming, even though she was seated.

"The only clothed man at the party," she said. She had a look of amusement on her face.

Steve had no idea what to do. His cock was throbbing and he felt that he was losing precious moments of his fantasy, which was surely in full swing by now, just feet away.

"They're in there," Zahra said. Or perhaps asked. The tone of her statement, or question, was strange. It certainly reflected many things: that she knew; that she didn't care; that she found his predicament amusing.

Her mouth turned up at one corner and she jerked her head slightly in the direction of the stairs that led up to the cave. Then she kicked out her feet, and began to float in the hot tub. "You had better not wait too long," she said.

But after Steve started to walk up the stairs, the whole scene seemed so surreal he could not resist pinching himself to make sure that it wasn't a dream.

Once under the arched entrance to the cave, the scene became too real and too lewd to be a dream. He was standing in what was probably a shadowy enough area to not be seen, but he immediately forgot his desire to hide and watch when he saw Reza's figure seated on the edge of the pool, and between his legs the slick wet blonde hair of his wife. Reza's hand was on the back of her head, and her head was moving up and down as she sucked on his shaft.

Really. That was the only thing he could be seeing.

He felt as though he might crumple, and he reached out a hand to steady himself on the rocks to his left side. He touched his cock through his pants, and it was sore to the touch. He could hear the sound – or he thought he could hear the sound – of Helena's slurping as she sucked on Reza's cock. He saw her twist her head as she lifted the thick slab to lap at his balls.

And then, very suddenly, she was across Reza's lap, and Reza had his fingers inside of her. From where he was, Steve could see Reza's big fingers prying her open and digging into her pink flesh. He slipped one finger inside of her and used the other to stroke her clit. Helena must have been very nearly at the edge after sucking his cock, because she yelped and threw her head back in no time at all. Her legs shuddered and she twisted on Reza's lap.

He pushed her onto her hands and knees. There was a nice view now, almost sideways and behind, of his wife's pink slit, and her rounded ass. And Reza's thick cock as he held his member in his hand and slid the head of his cock up and down the sloppy-wet folds of Helena's cunt. Helena's feet twisted as she fought not to pull away from him: Steve knew from experience that her clit was throbbing painfully with her orgasm and she was sensitive to the touch. But she remained obediently on all fours as Reza teased her.

At that moment, Steve felt a tug at the belt of his pants. He didn't even need to look to know that it was Zahra, so he didn't. He couldn't pull his eyes away from his wife, and the thick cock that was sliding wantonly up and down her engorged slit.

Zahra's hands were hot, and vaguely Steve wondered what she was going to do, but his thoughts were almost entirely trained on Helena. Reza pushed her knee open further, so that her cunt was better displayed both for him and for Steve.

Steve felt Zahra sliding his pants down, and then he looked down just in time to see her wicked smile as she opened her mouth. Still amused, still so casual. Her small breasts were glistening wet and she was stunningly gorgeous, her red mouth open below his cock and her hand wrapped around his shaft.

But he wanted only to look at his wife as Reza plunged inside of her. He jerked his attention back to the scene at the other end of the pool edge. Just in time to see the meat of Reza's cock spreading her open, until her pussy was wrapped tightly against his flesh. And then, inch by inch, he disappeared inside of her.

Zahra's mouth was hot around Steve's cock, and he could feel his own orgasm boiling up inside of him. But the sickening feeling in his stomach held it back, as he watched thrust after thrust from Reza's huge cock slamming inside of Helena. Helena moaned and ground against him, driving his cock further inside of her. Then she fell to her chest and let him pound himself into her. Her body slipped on the rocks as he fucked himself deeper. Bursts of her cum and excitement gushed from between his cock and the walls of her pussy. Her moans became agonized as she came again, and then her body went limp. Reza grasped her hips and pounded her like a piece of meat.

It was this final act, the way that Reza was using her like a limp doll, that sent Steve over the edge. Absent-mindedly, he grasped Zahra's hair and grasped it as she sucked his cum from his cock. He yelled as he came, and he felt the hot liquid of his cum swishing in her mouth, but he never took his eyes off his wife's limp body as Reza fucked her harder and faster, and her legs spread further apart. He was holding her now by the hips, with her knees lifted off the ground. Her legs bounced, her feet limp. He gave her the hardest pounding Steve had ever imagined a woman taking, and then finally, he groaned, and dropped her to the stone floor. He pulled his cock from inside of her and knelt above her body as ropes of his hot white cum streaked over her ass and her back.

It was then that the reality of their situation came into focus: the laughter of other people in the pool was growing closer. Steve looked around helplessly, and Zahra looked up at him. Her smile was wry as she used a long fingernail to wipe the corner of her mouth, and she hopped to her feet, still smiling, and trotted back to the hot tub.

Helena sat up on her heels, and looked a little alarmed as she glanced at the waterfall. Reza gave her a playful slap on the ass, and with the same nimble, carefree hop as Zahra, he stood up and walked toward the entrance to the hot tub.

Not knowing what else to do, Steve stood there, his pants down, and his mouth hanging a little open.

Reza patted his shoulder on his way past, then skipped down to his own wife.

Steve looked at Helena.

She shrugged, and smiled, and it relieved him. She slid into the pool and floated closer to where he was standing.

"You'd better get your pants off," she said.

He must have looked nervous. Helena cocked her head. “After all that, you can't skinny dip?”

She shook her head, and floated on her back toward the waterfall. “I'm going...” she sang.

The voices of other party-goers were getting closer to the waterfall. His wife was floating away. The only other way out was past Zahra and Reza.

Steve shrugged. He took off his clothes and stood by the edge of the pool.

Might as well jump in.
