NOTE TO READERS

This book can be read as a standalone, but if you haven't read the prequel, Kim Crosses The Line, you'll be missing out on the journey, which they say is the best part.

CHAPTER 1

Jessie sat on the edge of the bed, his muscles tired from being strained to their breaking point nearly all weekend. He watched Kim as she got dressed: slipping a pair of silky red panties over her hips, closing her matching bra around her supple back, adjusting her firm flesh in the cups so that it looked as though all of its creamy whiteness would spill out.

Kim was the definition of an English rose: porcelain skin, raven-black hair, blue eyes, doll-like and delicate features that seemed to have been crafted from the same fine ceramic as her skin. Here in Florida, she looked like the surfer version of her doll self: her curly hair was swept into beach waves by the salty air, and strands had picked up a very faint brown-red tint from the barrage of sun she had subjected herself to. A smattering of freckles had threatened to appear on her nose and the soft round of her shoulders. The pale tone of her skin was faintly toasted, except where the very small patches covered by her skimpy swimsuit gleamed white against her cream-almond tan. All of these things conspired to give her a glow, as though she had spent weeks in a health spa and just now returned.

Part of the flush of her cheeks, he hoped, came the attention - and deep satisfaction - he seemed to have given her over the weekend, as they had made love – tenderly and then filthy, filthy again and then tenderly - at least ten times since Friday night. He had lost count.

He was exhausted, but in a very pleasant way. And while he hated that he had to leave today, a part of him was a little relieved, because he was actually feeling sore from their exertions.

He admired a bite on Kim's shoulder as she smoothed oil over her skin. She was rubbing it seductively into her body for several minutes as he watched, his exhausted cock still managing to raise itself to half-mast. Her hands slid seductively along her toned thighs and over her flat navel for several sweet, long minutes before he realized that he had never seen her apply oil to her skin before.

"Is that new?" he asked lazily. He was so content it took great effort even to spit out these three words.

Kim looked at him in the mirror and stroked the length of one arm with one hand. She had a smile on her lips – a new smile, one that almost terrified him. But the terror was overruled by the sexiness of this new expression, and by all the very wicked ideas that the owner of the smile - Kim's alter-ego, Jade - came up with.

A few sensuous snapshots flashed through his mind, and blood drained from his limbs to the place where it had spent most of its time this weekend.

"What?" Kim had said, somewhere in the midst of his daydreams. "The oil?"

She drew her hand down to her breasts, and withdrew them from her bra one at a time, rubbing the oil into her skin and over her puffy nipples for much longer than necessary, while she looked at him with that same, self-pleased smile on her face. Then she withdrew her hand and sauntered into the closet without answering his question, because Jade was not the type to answer questions with much more than that mischievous smile.

She returned with a red sundress in her hands, one she had purchased that weekend during the single sustained break they had taken to stroll along the beach and up to the shops and restaurants down the waterfront from their home. It was an activity they had never partaken in when they had lived there together, and they both found it surprisingly quaint and fun.

"Maybe we shouldn't have moved back," Kim had mused softly, squeezing his hand and leaning her silky head against his arm as they had walked along the beach.

They had moved to Dillon Beach, Florida, a little over a year ago, in Jessie's pursuit of growing his business. It seemed like such a long time ago - Boston before they moved, Florida for the almost-year they had spent there, their marriage dusty and stale like a room in a house that no one attended to. Circumstances had changed and drawn them back to Boston. Kim, however, had elected to remain in Florida alone to sell the house, because she had a job at the university. She had revealed sometime over the hazy weekend that she no longer actually had the contract, and that she had stayed in Florida partly out of spite, not revealing to him that she actually wanted to go back home to Boston, because she had been angry about the number of changes he'd initiated to their lives.

It was a perspective he had never thought of at the time he had decided - unilaterally, he realized now - that they should move back: he had been so busy trying to make Kim happy with what he thought she wanted, that he had never really asked her what it was that she wanted. Her confession about the class had come to him over the pillows, in a lull among storms of ecstasy. He couldn't even be sure it had really happened, like so many other things that had transpired and transformed them in just a few short days.

"If you really want to," he had begun seriously, about to tell her that he would move everything back to Florida, if that was what she wanted. But Kim had shook her head by rolling it on his arm, interrupting him.

"No, no, it's a nice dream, but it has to end sometime," she had said.

Back in the bedroom at present, his departure time edging closer and closer, Jessie was rethinking that statement. Did the nice dream of Florida have to end sometime?

The dream wasn't Florida in and of itself. Florida had been, up until recently, more of a nightmare, a time during which their stale marriage had begun to crumble. The "dream" Kim seemed to be referring to was the "Florida" of their new relationship, one in which Kim took a lover almost half their age and teased him – perhaps realistically – with the promise of more adventures to come.

But as soon as he pondered the thought of "Florida" continuing with no end, a chill went down his spine, because Florida was a dream, but it felt like a dream that could, at any moment, slip away into an even more ghoulish nightmare. He felt a pang in his chest, the sense that control was slipping out of his hands. Kim was indulging him, indulging in his fantasies, but over the weekend, he felt as though the control over that fantasy had slipped through his fingertips and into hers. The change was making him feel uncomfortable.

Kim slipped the dress over her head. It was a slip-like dress, made of a flimsy material, but expensively crafted. She pulled it into place over her newly-toned curves and tugged at it to frame her breasts in the deep plunge of the collar.

"You look... really hot," Jessie said stupidly.

But she did look "really hot," and there wasn't any elegant way to say that.

Kim smiled at him in the mirror, and then her eyes drifted back to admiring her own figure. Her lips were still arched in a sensual smile.

Kim's appraisal of her own body stirred Jessie in unusual ways: on the one hand, he found it mesmerizing and erotic. But beneath his attraction to Kim's new eyes for herself, he could feel that pang of fear. He wasn't sure what he feared, or at least he wasn't able to articulate it: he liked that Kim's eyes devoured her own appearance the same way that his did. He liked the things Kim said to him in bed now, the way she moved, even walking to the closet, as though she wanted to draw cum from his balls with every movement she made.

The whole weekend had been a wet, slippery, sweaty montage of skin and creamy cum flung in ropes over Kim's puffed lips and raw nipples, while she told him over and over again about swallowing Hunter's cock, and the things she would do to her recent, young, lover again. The things she wanted to do with the black man from the gym. Enactments of those filthy acts.

It was exhilarating.

But as he watched Kim's body writhing in the red fabric of her new dress, and her mouth turned up in pleasure at the sight of her irresistible form in the mirror, and he thought of all the filthy things she had said to him, Jessie couldn't help but wonder if he had actually created a monster.

The fear deepened as they drove to the airport. Kim had the windows down – a decidedly un-Kim-like thing to do - and her hair was loose and blowing. She had asked to drive, which made more sense because she could just pull through Departures and let him out. Her words, not his.

Kim at the wheel felt forebodingly like a metaphor for the things they had just discussed, imagined, and done. He looked at her as she watched the traffic through the windshield, her hand resting lightly on the wheel, hair loose about her face. She was driving too carelessly, her mind somewhere else entirely, her smile too cavalier, and the propriety of the Kim he knew seemed to have dissolved.

“What are you going to do with the rest of the day?” he asked her, trying to sound casual and reveal none of his fears. After all, at the beginning of this weekend, it had been he, Jessie, who had coaxed Kim into accepting what she had done. He, Jessie, who had told her he loved it. He, Jessie, who had brought her to the place where she was now: a woman who wanted to sleep with other men to please her husband.

But now that she had been coaxed over that line, past the barriers of her worry and guilt, now that he had her right where he had thought he wanted her, his chest got tight thinking about the situation he had created. Their conversations had somehow gotten away from him, away from firm rules, away from reality as he'd known it just three days before. And now Kim was... well, she felt a little dangerous to him.

Kim did not immediately answer. They were on the freeway and the roar of the wheels on the cement was almost deafening. She was still smiling, looking in front of her, her mind, it seemed, somewhere else.

An icy finger of pain clawed inside Jessie's chest. What was she thinking about?

He was about to repeat himself when Kim leaned slightly toward him, and her right hand dropped from the wheel to his thigh. She raked her fingernails along the inside of his leg, the meat of her hand brushing deliberately against his cock, which was hard in spite of his fear. She grinned.

"I was thinking of seeing what Hunter is up to," she said.

His cock twitched beneath the fabric of his pants. She would have felt it: he could tell her no lie with his body. It turned him on, even if part of the turn-on was the cool stroke of fear licking up and down his spine. Was she serious? He couldn't tell. He couldn't tell if she had been teasing him, if everything she was saying was part of an act meant to turn him on, or if she really meant to do the things she had described to him as she arched her back and bounced on top of his cock like she had never, ever done before, her pussy gushing over his cock, splashing her sweet juices over his balls, dripping between his buttocks and down to his ass.

Her smile deepened when she felt him throb, and she pulled her fingertips together over the tip of his cock – or as much as she could touch through his taut pants – and then put her hand back on the steering wheel.

There was a flare of heat between them. This sort of thing happened all the time now, and it was the thing that gave his fears such a steam bath that he knew he wouldn't be confessing them any time soon to Kim.

"Unzip your pants," she said, almost at the exact time that he asked:

"What are you going to do with Hunter?"

She smiled, and he unzipped his pants and pulled himself out of the tangle of his boxers. She reached over with her right hand, her eyes still on the road, and her fingers found his cock.

Jessie stared at his wife, who drove the car with ease, her eyes focused on the road, her hair blowing in the wind, while her right hand stroked him languidly. He stared at her fingers, sweeping over the length of his cock and then closing around his raw head, which was bright red at the edges of his crown from nearly constant use all weekend.

“I told you about my fantasy, didn’t I?”

Jessie wasn’t sure. His abdomen was spasming, his brain was flashing images, real and imagined, through his consciousness at an intolerable rate, and he could feel himself simmering – almost to a boil, except for Kim’s languid strokes, which she seemed to be pacing deliberately just a hair too slow for a man who had already come so many times that morning.

His breath shuddered out of him, her fingers kept moving, and he saw her pleased smile in his periphery.

“The one about doing two guys at once?” she purred.

They were approaching the airport, and Kim drew her fingers over his cock one last time. “Better put it away,” she said, grinning. “Surveillance and all that.”

His cock throbbed, painfully, and he felt as if he had been smashed into a brick wall. His vision clouded for a moment.

Kim steered them into the wild circles of the airport overpasses. His flight, he thought blearily, was leaving in exactly one hour. There was no time, no practical way, to finish what she had started.

He even liked, on some level, that she had done that to him, and was going to leave him to wander through Check-In like this.

But her smile frightened him as well.

She pulled up to the curb. He had tucked himself clumsily away. He could feel that a fine sheen of sweat was on his skin as he leaned over to kiss Kim.

The woman in the driver’s seat did not seem like the same woman who had picked him up from the airport only three days ago. That woman had been riddled with guilt. That was the woman he had coaxed, and given drinks to, to get her to tell him again what she had done with the young neighbor. That woman had been stunned to hear the story of Len filming her with Hunter, and then sending the video to Jessie without telling her.

But somewhere over the weekend – and Jessie could not say where or when exactly it had happened – Kim had begun to smile in this particular way, and he had begun to feel that something quite different was going on behind her eyes. About that same time, she had begun to be more wild, more wet, more... unleashed... than he had ever imagined possible.

This new woman looked like Kim, and she smelled like Kim, and she still did very Kim-like things, like place a napkin over her lap to eat a grapefruit in the morning. But this new woman also said things like “unzip your pants,” while driving along the freeway.

She leaned over to kiss him. It was a fun, hungry, sexual kiss. Jessie put a hand up to her cheek, and closed his mouth on her lower lip, his eyes closed.

Kim purred lightly against his mouth, and when he opened his eyes she was looking at him with her mischievous, smiling, bright blues.

“You’ll remember the rules?” he asked her suddenly.

Kim closed her eyes and leaned back. Her lips were smiling. “I do,” she said. But her eyes were closed until the final instant of her promise.

They weren’t many, the rules. He hadn’t believed that they needed to be, not at the time they had “discussed” them. “The rules” had been part of a brief act of foreplay, quickly overshadowed by the wild sex they had immediately after pronouncing them. He had made the rules just days ago, but with a different Kim, and if he had been a more prudent man, or a man with a time machine, he might have revised them.

One: no sleeping with Len (Kim), or Michelle (him), because it could only lead to trouble and they were obviously up to something.

Two: Tell him everything.

Very vague, very loose rules, Jessie was thinking now.

Kim put a hand to his face, and ran her fingers sensually over his lip. “What’s wrong?” she asked him. Her voice was light and erotic: she didn’t really sound as if she wanted to hear what was actually wrong, or that anything was.

Not that Jessie felt capable of articulating what it was that was “wrong” at that moment.

He had things perfect now. His wife was wild, sexy, and engaging in a fantasy he had finally been able to admit to having. They had fucked more over the weekend than they had in the whole year preceding it. And it was hot. And they were talking to each other again, were back to loving each other again.

Kim’s eyes darted to the rearview mirror. “The cops are coming,” she said. “You better get going.”

Jessie had a thousand things he wanted to say, but instead he blurted:

“Kim!” and took her by the back of the head to kiss her passionately. “I love you.”

Kim smiled, purred again. “I love you, too.”

He looked in the mirror: the cops were indeed moving along the line of cars toward theirs, telling people to move along. Just in case they were terrorists, who for whatever reason hadn’t thought to arm their bomb until they parked suspiciously at the curb.

Jessie climbed out of the car. He had only a small carry-on, with almost nothing in it. He had returned to Florida in a hurry.

“You dropping off?” a cop drawled in their direction. Kim looked behind her and the sternness melted off the cop’s face for a flash.

“Well, get going, this is drop-off, not long-goodbyes,” the second cop chimed in.

The cops passed them and began to harass the next car in line. “Long-goodbyes is in short-term parking, y’all,” Jessie heard him say.

“Jessie,” Kim’s voice whispered sexily from inside the car. He turned around. Kim was leaning over the seat, her breasts dangling inside the yawning fabric of the dress, caramel nipples just visible. Her eyes were bright, her features more like those of the woman he knew to be his wife. She smiled sweetly. Her lips were slightly distended, and he felt the burn of them on his own lips like a ghost. The image of his cock encircled by her red mouth flashed before him, and his cock, already hard, ached painfully against its own casing.

“I’m going to get that stuff today,” she said.

As if she were picking up the groceries.

The cop was likely talking to the cars in front of them, but Kim rolled her eyes and smiled at Jessie. She put the car in gear, and her hand played with the shift in an undeniably sexy way. “I’ll try to get them in by tonight.”

She was talking, he knew, about the cameras they had decided to place in the bedroom. They had made plans to go shopping for them several times, but had been unable to leave the bedroom long enough to do it, and it had gone unmentioned for a full day, so Jessie was sure she had not been serious about it. Or that, like so many other things that had happened that weekend, he couldn’t be sure if it was a dream or had really happened.

His face remained stubbornly confused, his features unable to move into any particular expression, likely because he had no idea how he felt about it.

Kim, however, had already blown him a kiss and leaned back to her side of the vehicle. Her right hand was on the stickshift, and her thigh was visible, and then the car was pulling into traffic. Her fingers were above the roof as she pulled into the exit lane, waving.

Jessie stood there, dumbfounded, and the second cop raised his eyebrows as he walked back past him. He had gotten a good look at that little number, and he would probably have the same look on his own face if she had just dropped him off.

Whatever the story was.

“Move it on out,” he growled at the next car in line.

CHAPTER 2

The haze that had enveloped Kim's senses all weekend began to fade as soon as she got back on the freeway. The air was warm, the scent of the ocean intoxicating. The feeling that had overcome her – gradually at first, and then gripping her like a fist – began to scatter away with the ocean breeze.

“Jesus,” she said to herself, and put a hand to her face. It was hot. She looked at herself in the rearview mirror and gave a short, startled laugh. She looked wild. Younger than she had looked for years. And something – vitality, life, power, maybe all three – was pulsing beneath her skin. It was intoxicating.

She rolled up the windows and turned on the air conditioning to clear her head. Her skin was damp, and she could feel a flush in her cheeks.

A cool feeling began to sink slowly over her. It was the sort of feeling she had when she came down from the high of marijuana, the few times she'd tried it in college. Maybe it was just the hard surface of reality, made less bearable by the weightlessness of the high.

Just hours before, she'd been breathlessly excited by all the possibilities that had opened up in front of her. Jessie had given her permission to do things outside of their marriage, that weeks ago she would have paled at the thought of doing. In fact, just a week ago, she had felt riddled with guilt for even contemplating flirting with another guy, let alone actually doing what she had done. She remembered how she had felt after finally going through with it: the guilt, the fear that Jessie hadn't meant for her to actually go through with it, the possibility that their marriage would fall apart for real.

Those feelings had evaporated – slowly at first, and then boiling away, replaced by the intense thrill of exciting her husband. Jessie had not only been forgiving of her transgression, he had also really wanted it, and it had (if their weekend of wild sex spoke for his feelings at all) actually done what she had wanted all along: made her husband more interested in her than his business or anything else. He had ignored his phone all weekend, a first in maybe ten years. He had been absorbed by her.

And over the weekend, the relief had converted into something else. The feeling that she could enrapture Jessie was one element of it, and that was the element she was most willing to admit to herself. But beneath that “wholesome” motivation she felt something darker, in a place she didn’t like to delve into, and thoughts she didn’t like to think about for too long: she was excited by the power of her sexuality, and she was drunk on the excitement of being turned loose to use it.

Far below all of that was the even darker thought that she didn’t like to dwell on, and that was about Len.

Jessie had brought a video with him, sent by their “friend” Len. In her conscious thoughts, Kim didn’t even like Len. He was a seedy, testosterone-fueled, alpha-type, obsessed with himself and arrogant as hell. An electrifying tingle had traveled up and down her spine, though, when Jessie had shown her the video that Len had taken, and if she didn’t monitor her own thoughts very carefully, she found herself drifting off to fantasies that somehow involved him.

She had liked watching the video of herself. It was poor quality: not lit very well, and pretty grainy, but watching her own body involved in such an illicit, wrong activity had given her a very unexpected thrill. It had turned her on, and while she and Jessie had made love after watching it, she had imagined herself with another man, Jessie watching her from behind the slatted closet door, or looking in from the balcony.

Her mind had wandered to other places, too, even if she had tried to pull it back in. As they tumbled and fucked over and over again, she had imagined herself with Len, with the black guy from her gym, with Hunter and his friend, and – and this was the dark thought she liked to recoil from – she sometimes imagined herself with other men while Len directed them, directed her, told her to do unimaginably filthy things.

It wasn’t as if she had never had a fantasy in her whole life about doing something filthy with other men. Her fantasies for masturbation were often like watching porn: it wasn’t really her, and the men weren’t really anyone at all. She liked thinking about spankings and rough sex, anal sex and sucking a huge cock while on her knees... but it was more like watching other actors than thinking about it really happening to herself, or with any particular man.

Now, though, the fantasies had a new edge: it was her, and the men were real people, and a door had been opened to a new reality where, thrillingly and terrifyingly, those fantasies could be made real.

Her thoughts submerged for a moment in all of the possibilities, and doubts began to creep back in as her fantasies grew wilder. She wasn't really going to sleep with Hunter again, was she? And there was no way she was going to seduce the guy at the gym.

And there was no way, she thought plaintively, that she was going to have anything to do with Len. For one thing, it had been expressly forbidden. It was a rule she had created herself, partly to balance the rule that Jessie couldn't sleep with Michelle, even though Kim knew in her heart that Jessie didn't have any interest in that. Partly, she had made the rule for herself, to keep herself from going to that dark place, the one in which Len told her to splay her legs and let Jay fuck her like a little whore -

She stopped herself and made a frantic lane change, because she had almost missed her exit, and because her thoughts needed an exit ramp as much as her vehicle did.

She shook her head, at herself more than anyone. Stop thinking about Len. Maybe Len had been the real reason she had finally gone out to the beach naked to seduce Hunter, but he had only been what pushed her over the edge, not the whole reason.

She didn't want to sleep with him, she told herself resolutely.

In fact, she wanted very much to let Len know that she would sleep with anyone but him, the arrogant bastard.

In the back of her mind, a warning light flicked: this was just the sort of school-aged thought that made boys pull girls' hair. It was a sign she was unhealthily invested in what Len thought.

But Kim was getting good at something she had never thought she'd be any good at all, and that was turning off her warning lights, and muffling the little voice of reason in the back of her mind.

She was getting everything she wanted, even if she had never expected to want it this way. She was having fun, and it wasn't going to last forever. So she might as well enjoy it while she could.

There, she thought, turning onto the long road that ran parallel to the oceanfront along Dillon Beach. That was more like it. That was something her alter-ego Jade would think.

She rolled the windows down and turned off the AC.

CHAPTER 3

The flight to Boston was in a completely-filled Airbus A320, which had the effect of psychologically, as well physically, of making Jessie feel trapped in a coffin. He was no big fan of flying to begin with, but left alone with his sore, semi-hard cock and thoughts about his wife making him queasy by themselves, the drops and lifts of the crowded plane only made things more unbearable.

Jessie, her voice kept repeating breathlessly, right into his ear as though she were actually there, her hot breath against his skin. The hairs on his neck actually rose, as though he had been physically touched. I'm going to get that stuff today.

Kim, her weight settled on his hips and pelvis, the hot slick of her body squeezing his cock and rolling like waves as she ground her body into him. Kim, her lips stretched around his cock at the base, her blue-green eyes hovering over her stuffed mouth, her tongue sliding mysteriously against his shaft in her wet heat. Kim, legs spread and eyes distant, her thoughts on someone else as he filled her overflowing pussy with yet another load of cum. Kim, looking back at him from the wet sheets on the bed, her eyes locked on his while he thought of how her pussy would stretch for her black friend at the gym.

On the plane, Jessie closed his eyes as the plane dropped suddenly, and with it his thoughts dove into the deep and dark: himself, staring at the computer screen, replaying his wife being defiled by her black lover, his cum spilled uselessly on his thigh, listening to Kim's voice on the phone, telling him not to bother coming back to Florida.

It was possible, wasn't it? At the beginning of the weekend it had seemed unlikely to him that Kim would ever sleep with anyone outside of their marriage again. She had needed to be reassured that it was okay, and then they had watched Len's video and she had admitted to her tricky, complicated feelings for Len. She had, reluctantly at first, played a game of retelling, then inventing, her trysts with other lovers.

But over the course of the weekend, she had gotten bolder, and her mind had seemed to go to places without a need for Jessie to guide her there anymore. Places where she was fantasizing something even dirtier than what she was saying to him. It had seemed impossible that she would actually sleep with the black guy at the gym, then, but now it not only seemed possible, but it also carried a frightening risk with it: what if Kim became so obsessed by her new lovers that she just stayed in Florida? What if once you go black, you don't ever go back?

I'm going to get that stuff today.

The "stuff" she was referring to could only have been one thing, and he had been so shocked that she had mentioned it that he had been unable to say anything about it one way or the other. Had he been serious when he proposed it? He supposed that he had, but maybe because he hadn't really believed that Kim would actually go through with it. He had traced his hand lazily down her side and murmured something about getting video cameras and installing them, so that she wouldn't have to rely on Len's shoddy filming and she wouldn't have to tell him what she did. He had said this because she was giggling her way through the recounting of her sexual encounter with Hunter on the couch, which Len had not filmed, and had actually seemed to be having trouble telling him in great detail what she had done.

That had been Saturday night. Kim had been different as recently as that. He realized he hadn't believed that she would actually allow it, let alone go get the cameras herself.

It was not like Kim to take that kind of initiative about much of anything.

Jessie gripped the arms of his seat.

She wasn't going to actually do it, he reasoned with himself.

And even if she did: isn't that what he wanted?

He did want it, he wanted it like any fantasy: clean, cropped, without any complications.

Now that his real wife, in real life, seemed poised to install cameras to film herself screwing some other guy, it was exhilarating, for, sure, but in the kind of way dropping out of the sky in a plane was exhilarating.

Totally great experience.

Provided that in the end, you didn't crash.

When he arrived, sweat-soaked and wobbly-legged, at Boston Logan, he was not alone in immediately taking out his phone to check for messages.

But he probably was uniquely alone in having received messages from his wife, spaced about five minutes apart:

Got them.

Having Len install them tonight.

I remember the rules

Xoxoxoxo

He walked like a zombie from the plane, through the airport, and found himself driving home, so he must have found his way to the parking lot and then to his car, retrieved his keys, paid the bill, and set out into traffic, though he could remember none of those actions. He could only remember the numbness that consumed him, as though he had been stunned, and the images that floated through his head. Images of Kim, smiling, with her hands around Len's neck, her lips close to his ear, her legs wrapping around his waist, opening her body up to be penetrated by Len and all of his devious, raw masculinity.

I remember the rules.

Remembering rules was not exactly the same as following them. The cold bite of jealousy was settling in to nibble away at the lowest part of his abdomen. It made him delirious, hard, aching in the most pleasant way. And it infuriated him.

When he parked the car on the street near the empty apartment he had procured for their return to Boston, his fingers were gripping the steering wheel so tightly that he had to pry them off, and his fists ached from the exertion.

Maybe she had already decided to do it by the time she got home, because she didn't waste any time thinking about it or laboring over the decision. Which is what she usually did. In fact, her whole life had been a life of indecision.

She wanted the cameras. That much she was certain of. She wanted to see more videos of herself, and she wanted Jessie to see them.

And, with much the same out-of-body experience she had encountered when she had been basically dared by Len to sleep with Hunter, she had leaned over and told her husband she was putting them in today. To give him something to think about on the plane.

And now that she had said it, there was no turning back. Maybe Kim would have faltered, but Jade was not the kind to promise things like that and then back down.

The problem was: she didn't know anything about cameras, or installing them, or where to get them. And while she felt pretty bold about Hunter, and her husband, and maybe even Len, she did not feel bold enough – yet – to hire somebody to install video cameras in her bedroom, the kind that could stream to, say, another computer, and record.

But she parked the car and hopped out of it, strolled into her house, and paused only long enough in the kitchen to pour a glass of wine and have a mere sip of it, before she got her phone out. She began by typing a text, but stopped herself when she remembered that Len was a voice kind of guy.

As the phone rang, she twisted from side to side and looked through the window at the dark windows of Hunter's house. Christ, she was lazy as hell but those kids weren't up yet and it was almost twelve.

At least Hunter made up for it by being lean, muscular, and having a very healthy appetite.

"Len," she said, when he chuckled into the phone. His arrogant laugh only fueled the new vampy creature inside of her. She remembered, quite suddenly, that Len didn't know what had transpired over the weekend, or whether Jessie had told her about the video. He probably, she thought triumphantly, expected her to scold him and call him a jerk, and be offended by what he had done. Len, she realized with a flash of insight, got off on that very thing about her: making her uncomfortable, being crass so that she squirmed.

A feeling, not quite like any she'd ever felt before, but raw and erotic, curled around in her chest like a wisp of smoke. She smiled.

"I need your help with something."

There was a pause long enough for her to know that she'd thrown him off his game. "Do tell," he said casually.

“Well. I need to install something... video related. And I figured, you’re such an expert at that sort of thing, and Jessie had to go back to Boston, so...”

Another arrogant chuckle.

Kim’s lip curled in a semi-smile, semi-snarl. But she waited, her eyes on Hunter’s fence.

“You need a film crew?” Len asked, finally.

“Not so much,” she said calmly. “I need to get a whole system in. Can you do that kind of thing?”

Hunter’s arms, pulling on each other in a stretch, appeared over the fence, and Kim’s heart leaped. Her pussy was sore from having so much sex this weekend with Jessie, and she knew that her nipples still bore the tender swelling of hours of attention from fingers, lips, and teeth. Something coiled in her abdomen, as she thought of what it would be like to feel the thicker, bent shape of Hunter’s cock as Len chuckled again. “I’ll come by in an hour or so, Kimmy. We’ll see what we can do.”

Hunter turned toward her house and looked directly at her, though she knew he couldn’t see her through the slightly tinted windows into the darkness of the house. “K,” she said dismissively. “Gotta go, see you then, l-”

She was so very close to saying “love you,” out of habit, out of that place inside of her that simply ended conversations with men and moved on to something else, that she wasn’t entirely sure if she had cut herself off in time as she pressed the hangup button. Her stomach dropped for a moment, and she paused, her breath caught in her throat, the realization of what she had just done swirling around her in the silence.

The realization that she was actually going to do what she was about to do clawed at her from the inside.

The sore interior of her pussy throbbed on alternate sides as she walked, calmly and with determination, to the closed sliding door to her porch. The warning voice in her head was drowned by the sound of the ocean as she opened the door.

After all, she had already crossed this particular line.

Hunter had started to trot toward the water. She leaned against her balcony and rested her elbows on it, watching him run at the water and dive in. When he rose up and shook himself off, facing the house, she resisted the urge to wave at him. Jade was not the kind of woman who did silly things like that.

She made sure he saw her: he stopped still with the surf at his knees, looking in her direction.

And then, the thrill of sexual power licking at her insides like flames, she turned, and walked back into the house, leaving the door open.

Len stood in the foyer of Kim and Jessie's house, smiling and shaking his head.

He hadn't really expected much out of Kim the entire time he had known her, and the fact that she was one of the few women who had completely stunned him by a change in... shall he say, temperament... was exciting enough to last him a lifetime of spank-bank material and fantasies. Sure, he'd have loved to fuck Kim from the first day he met her, but nothing was fun if it didn't come to him, and he had never expected Kim to do that.

Or this.

He definitely had not expected this.

He was over an hour late, because he sensed that Kim had some kind of game going on with him, and though he hadn't given it much conscious thought, Len was the type of guy who exerted a lot of his dominance by very deliberately not giving a shit about anything. He was late to pretty much anything he had an interest in, sort of on purpose and sort of as a default.

So Kim, sweet and delicious little English Rose Kim, had been in the living room being the tremendously filthy little slut she was for quite some time, he reasoned. Because Len was fairly certain that some, if not all, of the reason Kim was fucking Hunter right now had to do with very much wanting him to catch her in the act.

Sure, he wanted to see it for himself, but Len was a patient man, and patient men wait quietly for their prey, until it walks right up to them and they can sink their teeth in, in a leisurely fashion. So, for now, he leaned against the wall and folded his arms over each other while he listened to the squelch of Hunter's cock sawing at Kim's pussy (or maybe, he thought deliciously, her lubricated ass... but that seemed a bit over-the-top for this newly hatched slutwife), which he could only imagine Jessie had abused thoroughly all weekend long and was therefore sore and throbbing and taking quite the punishment. From the gasping and moaning that was leaving Kim's mouth, it was clearly an enjoyable sort of punishment.

Hunter, for his part, was not extremely creative, at least in his dirty talk. "Oh, fuck," Len heard him say. "Fuck that's hot."

"Fuck me harder," Kim moaned. "I want it deeper."

Len leaned his head back against the wall and considered taking his cock out, but decided against it. It was much more fun to savor this scene and see what happened next.

“Oh, fuck,” Hunter said. “I’m gonna come.”

There was the sound of wet slapping, and Len couldn’t resist looking around the corner to see Kim’s legs flopping back and forth, pointed up at the ceiling, one foot on Hunter’s shoulder, her fingers curled around the back of the couch, as Hunter slammed himself into her and leaned back to yell as he fucked his cum into her.

There was some panting, some wet kissing, and then the sound of a friendly slap from behind the couch. Len pulled his head back as Kim popped up. “Okay, seriously. I gotta go. I have a friend coming over in like... an hour ago,” Kim said. “Chop, chop.”

Hunter sighed. “You banging this guy or what?”

Kim laughed. Len’s cock throbbed. It was the sort of thing he had never expected to hear Kim do, not in this context. “None of your business, remember?”

“Wham, bam, thank you -”

“You love it,” Kim said dismissively.

“This the guy from the other night?”

No answer from Kim. Len leaned against the wall, smiling, as the sliding door opened, their voices mingled again, too low to hear. The door slid shut.

He rolled himself around the corner and gave Kim a slow clap, secretly hoping to startle her. She was wearing only her underwear, her breasts free and bouncing with the sharp pirouette she was making away from the door. Len’s eyes went to her engorged nipples, well-used from the weekend and perhaps by Hunter. His prick strained against his jeans as he was assailed by the thought that it could be one or both of them. The scent of sex assailed his nostrils.

Kim’s arms rose to her breasts, but not as quickly as he would have expected, almost like she had meant to make that gesture whether she had seen him there or not. Her mouth fell open for a millisecond of shock, but the shape of it turned quickly into a very beguiling, almost painfully erotic smile.

Len’s stomach went hot-cold with a very particular kind of lust.

“How long have you been there?” Kim asked casually, dropping her arms, bending at the waist, and swinging playfully at the floor with a hand to scoop up a red dress.

“Kim,” Len said. “I’m starting to think you’re trying to seduce me.” His tone was half-playful, and, he realized, half-serious. Kim, Kim, Kim, he thought.

Generally, Len thought of himself as the sort of guy who had all women pegged, but Kim had really taken him by surprise.

His goals with Kim shifted suddenly, as though with the wind. He had largely been interested in getting Kim to slip up – hopefully with him – so that Michelle could achieve her goals with Jessie. He couldn’t really understand what Michelle wanted with Jessie, but he always gave Michelle whatever she wanted.

But now, he was intrigued by Kim for other reasons.

Kim slipped the dress over her head, and shook her hair out once it was on.

The old Kim – Kim from just a few days before – would have blushed, or flinched, or given some kind of indication that the truth in the statement was just beneath her skin, and she didn’t like to admit it, and so she would have lied and stumbled in doing so.

“I can see how you’d think that,” this Kim said, instead. She reached behind her to knot her wild, wavy black hair. She pushed her stray long bangs from her face, which was damp with sweat, like the rest of her body. “But seriously, this was unplanned.”

Kim shrugged. “Well, anyway. Can you help me or what?”

Len blinked slowly, savoring the sight of Kim in her little dress, with no bra on, her erect nipples pressing against the thin fabric. For a moment he almost wondered if she had a fever – or even more likely, if he did. He had forgotten why he was here.

And then it came to him. “So, let me get this straight,” he said. “You want to put... cameras? In here?”

For a few moments, he thought he might have rattled her, and he felt the slow turn of the strange power dynamic between them shifting back to its previous form, the time when he had very definite “hand,” in the parlance of Seinfeld. Kim’s face looked as if it might lose the mischievous glint in her eye, the smile, the control.

She put a hand to the collar of her dress, and ran her fingers along the hem. It was not an absent-minded gesture. She looked him right in the eye as she did it, before she swung her glance upward at the corners of the large living room.

“Oh,” she said calmly. “I was thinking the bedroom. But that’s an idea, too.” She was still moving her fingers along the edge of the dress, the pads of her fingers lingering on the skin just centimeters from her nipples. “So. Can you?”

She probably has cum snaking along the inside of her thigh, Len thought.

“I can do it,” he remarked, smiling. “What made you think of me?”

Kim’s stroking fingers stopped and hovered over her skin. Something about this question seemed to amuse her. Len enjoyed the pleasure of this surprising turn of events: he had been banking on Kim being fun for so many other reasons.

Kim rolled her eyes, but her mouth smiled even more mysteriously.

She was not going to answer the question.

“I want to get this done today, if it’s possible,” she said.

Len turned with her, admiring her ass as she walked in front of him to the foyer, where she snatched a purse from the side table by the door. His cock was throbbing, but he was a patient man and was going to see how this all played out. Len had reached a stage in life where he finally realized that it was much more fun to play chess with women than checkers.

He held the door open as she walked through it, and caught a faint whiff of her juices, mingled with the bleachy scent of Hunter’s cum.

Kim had a few drinks when they returned from the store, where she had dropped a considerable sum of money on video equipment and brackets, and then a hardware store, where she had purchased Len whatever tools he claimed to need for the job, rather than driving back to his place to get his own.

To ease the gnawing guilt that was creeping into her mind, she had played by the rules: she sent Jessie a message. She began by telling him about the purchase, and hesitated to tell him that she had asked Len to install them. She knew she had to tell Jessie that, and she wanted to, she really did.

But a small part of her didn't. Why was that? She couldn't get to the bottom of it, to what she wanted exactly from her game with Len. She didn't believe that she wanted to sleep with him. That wasn't what it was. So why did she hesitate to tell Jessie what she was doing? Why did she ask Len to do it at all?

She sent the second message five minutes later, telling Jessie that Len was installing the cameras. There. That was within the boundaries, even if it didn't feel like it was.

Still unsettled, still unable to figure out what it was that was bothering her, she sent Jessie a third message.

I remember the rules.

And then, a string of x's and o's, which seemed too trite after she sent them, almost careless, but by then it was too late to take them back.

By then, Len was driving them back from the store, and it was too late to undo what she had set in motion. She wondered why she was doing what she was doing, why she was playing with fire like this. Sleeping with Hunter had not given her the same thrill it had the first time – was it because it was allowed, sanctioned, lacking in the semi-illegality and risk that it had been made up of before Jessie had shown her that it was actually what he wanted?

But Len was in her house by then, standing on a ladder, being his usual arrogant self, like he knew something about her that even she didn't know. It was quietly infuriating, and she almost wanted to slap him for making whatever assumptions he was making, for being so obviously sure that he had her attention, for thinking that the whole reason she had asked him to install the cameras was because she secretly wanted him.

As soon as she touched upon that thought, she recoiled from it, and filled her mind with the sort of excuses and justifications she would make to Jessie, would make to herself. She had no choice but to ask Len: who else could she ask? Len was the only person who even remotely understood about the choices she and Jessie were making in their marriage. This was all new to her, and she didn't want some strange guy in here installing cameras in her bedroom. She wasn't that open about this yet. And Hunter certainly wasn't going to do it... so what choice did she have?

Jessie wasn't a particularly handy guy around the house, which was not something she had ever really thought, or cared, about, because they had plenty of money to pay for whatever they needed to be done. But sitting on her bed, watching Len on a ladder in an old gray-blue t-shirt of Jessie's and his expensive jeans, she could see the appeal of a man who worked with tools, a slight covering of ceiling plaster and sawdust sticking to his muscled, sweaty arms.

She could scarcely believe herself, and the way she was acting. For the whole afternoon she had been shamelessly flirting with Len. She still had no intention of breaking the rules that she and Jessie had made – and she was still certain she didn't want to, not even deep down inside, because Len was the kind of guy who would only be interesting, or interested, until he got what he wanted.

But it was fun. It was fun being free to do what she wanted. Not just free from the binding of their marriage, but free from her own conscience and self-doubt. She wasn't really sure when it had happened, but she felt as though a switch had been flipped.

She twisted her foot around and leaned back on her elbows. She was keenly aware of how she looked to Len, that her breasts were so firm and round that they barely lost their shape when she reclined, that the skirt had slid up to reveal even more of her lean legs, and that her carelessly strewn beach hair was sexy in its wildness. She liked that Len had seen her with Hunter. She had been hoping that he would, and sleeping with Hunter (which might have been a bit dull, the second time around, she was thinking) was made much better by the idea of Len standing in her living room and directing her to arch her back and slowly ride Hunter's column.

Len grunted and a piece of plaster fell to the floor. He tapped at the camera and then squinted up at it. Len wasn't the type to be chatty while he worked. In fact, he had said almost nothing as he installed the cameras, one by one, while she reclined on the bed and watched him. Every now and then he would look down at her, and they would exchange a heated look, perhaps even a smile, but he had barely spoken.

He came down the ladder and folded it up.

"That's it?" she purred.

She tapped her fingers on the bedspread, unnerved a little by the suggestiveness of what she was doing. What was she doing? Part of her wanted Len to crack, walk over to the bed, stand between her legs and stare her down as he unbuttoned his pants. What would she do if he did that? A shiver traveled up her spine: it was reckless, against the rules, and she knew that there would be no real way to stop him if things got to that point. The idea of feeling Len's cock inside of her, pressing against the soreness in her pussy was tantalizing and ominous at the same time. Her stomach gave a cool somersault. It was that precise feeling she was coming to enjoy far more than anything else...

They looked at each other for a steamy moment, and the feeling spread to her chest.

"So," Len said finally, pointing the screwdriver in his hand toward the laptop on her dresser. "The software uploads the video to the program I showed you. And that... can be shared with anyone you like." He smiled his arrogant smile, infuriating her. "Like I showed you."

She sat up. She had a thought, and was surprised that it was the first time she had thought of it, that Len, having installed all of this mysterious software, could have easily helped himself to the code.

"Anyone?" she asked, giving her hair a toss.

"Anyone with the code," he said cryptically.

Another burning moment between them. It was at this precise moment that she felt a slight catch in her chest, a feeling of guilt, and doing something wrong, finally catching up to her.

The problem was, it didn't feel like it had felt before.

Fun.

She imagined herself for a second, saying "How will I ever thank you?"

But something stopped her. She rose from the bed, her eyes still locked on Len's. He met her gaze, unafraid, and she felt overpowered. She broke away from his stare, suddenly acutely aware of how far outside her comfort zone she was. "Great," she said clumsily. "Can I make you a drink?"

Toying with Hunter had been one thing: he was young, he had never seemed particularly dangerous or frightening to her. With Hunter, she had been in control of everything, and the power had made her a little bit drunk. But Len was a man, a real man with alpha-male strength and the patience of a predator, and she could feel that radiating from him now. It was seductive, but she felt suddenly out of control.

Relief spread to her limbs like lukewarm water, eating up the tingling that had enveloped her, when Len flipped the screwdriver in his hand, tucked it into his back pocket, and sucked on his lower lip before saying, calm as pie: “I’ll take a beer if you have one. Then I got something to do with Michelle.”

CHAPTER 4

“Oh!” Kim exclaimed, as an answer to the phone. She sounded genuinely surprised that he would call her, which only made Jessie’s inner tumult turn more violent. For a second he was in freefall: fury, jealousy, and excitement battling for dominance in his body.

“I was just about to call you,” Kim explained. She must have said it almost immediately, but it felt like there were hundreds of years between this sentence and her surprised exclamation.

Jessie’s throat was tight, and he found himself unable to speak.

Jessie swallowed. “Yeah, no, yeah...I’m here. Just...” he looked around the apartment helplessly.

Kim had never been there, and the absence of her presence seemed suddenly highlighted, stark. He had unpacked boxes and placed objects where he thought she would have, but she had never arranged anything. The couches were new and bare. He had set the throw pillows next to them, on a night table. He hated the throw pillows; like every man he knew, he saw them as a ridiculous extra step to seating himself comfortably on the couch. The pictures had not been hung, because he was clueless about where to put them. The cupboards were open in the kitchen, because he had to search for everything he had placed in them, unnaturally, illogically... the coffee mugs were nowhere near the coffee maker, which was also relegated to a place on the counter that he found odd.

The place looked cold, bachelor-like. A feeling of loneliness flooded his veins: this is what his life would be like if Kim didn’t come home.

“Jessie?” Kim repeated.

“I just... spilled some water, sorry, I got distracted,” he said hastily. He looked accusingly at the beer can he had not spilled, or even opened.

“So,” Kim said, moving on, he thought almost bitterly, a bit too cheerfully, ignorant of his torment. “I put the cameras in. Well,” she interrupted herself, and paused, as though she might not want to say the next bit. “Len put them in. Like I said. Anyway, they’re in... I sent you an email with the link to the software, did you get it?”

His chest burned. Of course he had gotten it. Of course he had installed it and accessed the feed, which was not turned on. And of course he had stared at the black screen and the message that there was no input, his head filling the blank space with monstrous images of Len spoiling every inch of his wife with his filthy cum while she gasped and screamed in pleasure.

There was a long pause as he tried to figure out what to say.

“The cameras aren’t on,” he finally said. “So I don’t know if it worked.”

There was another long pause, while his insides crawled with ecstatic jealousy and sublime excitement, and raw fury.

“Oh my gosh,” Kim said, the way she talked to a pan that she was burning food on. “I forgot you have to turn them on.”

He could hear, faintly, that she was moving through the house. The floors were tile and hard, hardwood that echoed endlessly inside the modern walls. She had always hated that aspect of the house, so different from their cozy apartment in Boston, but she had never said it. “Here,” she said. “Just hang on...”

The screen blipped, and four dimly colored images of their room appeared on it, with Kim, still wearing her red dress, standing by a computer at the desk, as viewed from different angles. Her hair was pulled back in a loose and hasty bun, and tendrils of it fell about her shoulders. It was hard to tell if it was wet or dry. Jessie tried to scrutinize her grainy image. She turned to one of the cameras. “How’s that?”

The image moved just a fragment of a second ahead of her voice.

“You put in four cameras?” Jessie said. His tone was unrecognizable, even to him.

Kim’s mouth fell open slightly, and she looked around the room, her face turning to each of the cameras in turn. “I thought... it was... I thought you would, Len said you would like it,” she stammered.

And then she put her hand to her forehead. She seemed to be suddenly exasperated. She sat down on the bed. “Jessie,” she said. “What are we doing?”

The feelings of resentment and jealousy Jessie had been having deflated suddenly. “No, Kim, don’t be like that,” he said. “I’m just...”

“You’re being weird,” she said flatly. “I thought you would be happy... but now it seems like, I don’t know.”

She was looking around. She gave a sharp laugh. “This is crazy,” she said.

Where just seconds before, Jessie had been tormented by thoughts of losing Kim, he now felt tormented by the idea of Kim losing heart in what they were doing. He rushed to stop her. "Kim, listen, no. I'm not... it isn't that I don't like it, it's just... it's, you know. Well... crazy. And..."

And what? Terrifying?

"You seem like you're mad," she said.

"I'm not," Jessie said quickly. "I'm not, I'm not mad. I just... it just takes a little adjustment."

"Are you mad I had Len do it?" she asked bluntly.

Jessie would have liked, very much, to have had a perfect answer to that question, but it was unexpected. It was so unlike Kim to be so direct. Of course the fact that Len had installed the cameras was bothering him. Of course that had everything to do with the misgivings he had about what was, otherwise, exactly what he wanted.

But he couldn't find the right words to say exactly what he wanted to say. That he had spent the afternoon fantasizing about her trying out her new cameras on Len, breaking the rules they had established and doing it in the most filthy way imaginable. And that the fantasy had made him masturbate in the shower; he had even felt a pang of disappointment when the images had never really materialized. At the same time, the idea of it ripped at his heart and made him want to grab Len, and her, by the throat. How could he tell his wife that he had fantasized about that, and about fucking Len's cum right out of her, out of every hole, while she apologized profusely for breaking the rules?

Jesus, he was fucked up.

Kim had folded her arms across her chest on the bed. "Jessie, this is what I'm worried about," she said.

He sighed. It wasn't at all the way he wanted things to go.

"Maybe we should rethink this," she said.

"Kim," he said quickly, before she could say anything else. "That's not it, that's not... what I want. I'm not mad, I'm... this is what we decided. I still want it. I just..." He sighed. "I don't know. I don't know how to explain it."

"Are you mad about Len?"

He stared at her image on the screen. "Do you feel guilty about Len?" he retorted.

She looked up at a camera. "All he did," she said, almost angrily, "was put in the cameras."

There was a silence.

"I don't know how to do that, Jessie," she said, like a plea. "You know?"

His stomach turned queasily again.

"But you remembered the rules," he said quietly.

"Of course," she said quickly.

"And you followed them?"

His voice was odd, and Kim heard it. What answer did he want to that question? The real answer, a firm "yes?" Or did he want a teasing "no?" Or did he want Kim to say, "yes," in the same queer tone, telling him nothing about what she had actually done?

"What would you think, if I hadn't followed them?" Kim purred.

Jessie's cock was instantly, painfully hard. He screwed up his face and stared at his wife, who was lying back on the bed, one arm flung up above her head, playing with her hair. He watched her bring her fingers along the contours of her face to her lips, where she bit into a finger sensually before continuing the journey down her body, over the red dress that had caught at her hips and revealed her bare thighs and a glimpse of silky underwear.

Jessie breathed into the phone. That was all the answer Kim apparently needed. She smiled, holding the phone to her ear, and moved her hand between her thighs. "What would you think, if I had not only not followed the rules, but really, really broken them?"

She slid her hand under her panties, and, though Jessie could not see it, she dipped into her pussy, which he imagined was very wet.

"You think about it, don't you?" she asked him. "What did you think about? Me? Doing it with Len?"

Jessie's stomach was coiled up and filled with bile, which was a strange feeling alongside his throbbing cock.

"Tell me," Kim said. "Tell me what bad things you thought I was doing with Len. And I'll tell you if you're right."

She was looking into the camera in the bottom right of the screen, staring, as if she could see him. Her hand tugged her panties down, one side of her thigh, and then the other, and she shimmied out of them and scooted backward on the bed, dropping the phone next to her ear to pull them off. Her legs were spread right open, and he could see, even in the graininess of the video, her glistening pussy, overflowing with something. Was it Len's cum? His? Hunter's? All three? Or just her own excitement?

What had he imagined her doing with Len?

The words began to tumble from his mouth, and the grainy image became a blur, as she writhed on the bed, her fingers working on her clit, slowly at first, then furiously, to make herself come. He watched her, her eyes glued to the camera, wild and different in every way that he had ever seen her, her lips curved into that terrifying and gorgeous smile.

"You pulled him to the bed, and then you wrapped your legs around him, and he fucked your pussy while it was still full of cum, but then he told you to turn over, and take it in the ass, because your pussy was too wet. And you liked it, because all the cum in your pussy slid down to your ass, and he had you on your hands and knees until you came, and then he flipped you over again and put his cock between your breasts and made you rub his shaft until he came all over your face. And then..." Jessie's voice was shaky, his eyes glued to Kim's fingers as she rubbed her cunt between her legs and arched her back, her eyes closed, her mouth open, her breath ragged and distant through the phone. "He scooped up all of that cum and fed it you with his fingers."

There was a gasp over the phone, and Kim's legs snapped together as her body shuddered, and he watched her flesh quiver from head to toe as the orgasm shook through her. Her eyes opened, and she looked into the camera. Jessie's cock was in his hand, he didn't know how, but he had paused to watch her, and could feel the flesh throbbing in his palm. He was sure that in all his life, his cock had never ached this badly for release.

Kim drew the fingers of her right hand from her pussy, over her rumpled dress and abdomen, and placed them in her mouth. The sticky slurp of her sucking her fingers could be heard through the phone. Jessie shuddered. She lazily brought the phone closer to her mouth, turning to the side so he could hear her. "And then what did you do, Jessie, after I fucked Len?"

Jessie's hand had started working away on his cock, and his orgasm was surging up from inside of him. He was barely able to tell her, "I fucked... all his cum...out... of... your..."

Before he could finish, the words were caught in his chest and the room went starry as the most terrifyingly strong orgasm he had ever had gripped him, and his cum shot in thick, violent ropes, onto the table and the couch and the screen of his computer, across the image of Kim's splayed legs.

He didn't make a sound as Kim rolled to the side, and made a sound that was almost a laugh, and sat on her hip with her legs curled up next to her, pushing her loosened hair from her face. A grunt, almost a yell, escaped him, and he doubled over, cold and spent and half-nauseous.

Kim laughed – this time a clear laugh. “You okay?” she asked. She had a hand on her foot now, and looked like a teenage girl talking to her girlfriend on the phone.

“Oh my God,” Jessie managed to say. He was panting as though he had run a marathon.

“All Len did,” Kim said calmly, “was install the cameras.”

Jessie exhaled. He was relieved, of course. That was the main sensation.

Or was it?

He didn't know.

Kim took a breath in, as if she were about to say something, and then she looked around at the cameras again. Her mouth was open, poised to add to what she had just said.

“But, what?” Jessie prompted.

For a moment she was indecisive, her eyes on the camera, her lips moving almost invisibly.

“But nothing,” she said, finally, and then she laughed.

It was the sort of laugh you use to cover something up.

But Jessie would only realize that later.

Kim folded herself over and spread out on the bed. “I take it you're happy with the cameras, overall?” she said.

Jessie exhaled.

There were so many things they should probably talk about, but the energy to do it had been drained from him. Entirely.

Kim gave him a way out. “So... how was your flight?”

She reached out, across the bed to the dresser. And the screen went blank.

Jessie laughed. “Uh... yeah. Good. Good flight.”

Kim gave a breathy, sexy laugh into the phone. “I tried to make it as distracting as possible for you.”

“It worked.”

Another pause, but this one was less ominous.

“You really didn’t do anything with Len, did you?” Jessie asked.

Kim’s smile could be heard over the phone. “No.” And then she made a noise, almost like a “mmmm.”

“What?”

“Nothing,” Kim said. “I’m just messing with you.”

Jessie scratched his head.

“I slept with Hunter, though,” Kim said. “Again.”

Jessie spluttered. “But... I didn’t even get-”

“It was before the cameras.”

A drop in his stomach. As though he had dived from a cliff.

It wasn’t against the rules. It just seemed... so sudden, after he left.

His neck crawled again.

“Why? I mean, how did it happen?”

Kim gave a laugh that was almost dismissive. “God, I have no idea. He was just out there, and I was really, really sore after... you know, our whole weekend... and I thought I’d see what it was like.” She laughed again. “I have no idea why I did it, to tell you the truth.”

Jessie was stunned. He was turned on, even if it seemed impossible, and he was utterly stunned. This sounded nothing like Kim. Nothing at all.

“And was it... how was it?” Jessie asked.

“Truthfully?” she said.

It seemed for a moment as though she were about to divulge some kind of secret, something much deeper than what she actually said. “He’s kind of... inexperienced,” she laughed.

Jessie thought to himself that this should be good news. The only problem was, it didn’t sound true to him.

“Inexperienced?” he repeated.

He had no way of knowing that Kim had her fingers to her lips then, and was looking out at the beach, thinking of Hunter’s surprising skill as a lover, particularly when he licked her pussy. “Inexperienced” wasn’t the word she had been looking for, it wasn’t what she meant.

The problem with Hunter, she knew, but couldn’t quite articulate, was that he was “undangerous.”

“Do you really want me to seduce that guy at the gym?” she asked. Neither one of them would have been able to tell anyone how much time had passed as they sat in their respective, darkening homes, thinking of all the slutty things Kim had done, from different angles, for different reasons, with different feelings boiling inside of them.

“I...uh... I mean, if you do,” Jessie burred.

Kim was quiet.

“I think I want to do it,” she said at last.

Jessie’s breath was ragged as he sucked it in.

“You’re really okay with it?” she asked.

“I, uh... yeah, with the cameras, yeah.” He nodded. “Hell, yeah,” he said, to make sure he understood how really, truly, 100% he was keen on the idea, even if he was also really, truly, 100% terrified of it.

“Okay,” she whispered. He thought he heard a yawn. “I’m so tired, Jessie. I have to go to sleep now.”

“I love you, Kim,” Jessie said.

He would have loved to watch her all night, but he had no idea how to suggest it, so he said nothing.

“I love you, too,” Kim said. “I’ll call you tomorrow.”

“Goodnight,” he said, talking over her last words:

“After I go to the gym.”

But one or the other of them had already pressed their thumb to the phone to end the call, and so that was the way it ended.

CHAPTER 5

What did “tell me everything” really mean?

Did Jessie tell her everything? She knew that he didn’t. She could hear it in his heavy pauses, in the stuttering starts to sentences that he never finished.

And what was “everything?”

Everything she did? Or everything she thought, and everything she felt?

There was no way to tell someone all of that, she reasoned.

And so, things like... her “thought” that Len could possibly have accessed her video stream, and watched her masturbating with her husband on the phone, did not necessarily qualify as “everything.”

After all, it was only a thought. It might not even be true, and it was totally possible that she – a technical idiot – might never have even had that thought.

And if it turned her on, thinking about Len watching her, wondering what she was doing on the phone and who she was talking to... well, that was just a “thought” as well. It was not something she was doing. If Len had memorized the code, or whatever it was, and accessed the software, that was something that Len had done, not her.

She reached this conclusion several times as she turned the thoughts over and over in her mind.

So why did it feel so wrong?

Even more importantly, why did everything that felt wrong feel so good?

Take Hunter, who was, in truth, a gorgeous guy who was not at all inexperienced in the sack. The first time she had fucked him, it had been reckless and crazy, and dangerous, and it had been amazingly good.

The second time, Hunter himself had not been much of a thrill. Sure, he was hot, and she had slept with seven guys her whole life, most of them one-night stands, and all of them, except for Jessie, pretty terrible. So Hunter would have been placed definitively at the top of the list as far as pure physical ratings went, even the second time.

The guy was hot, and his enthusiasm was incomparable to Jessie’s.

Well... Jessie before this started, to be fair to Jessie.

But as she rode Hunter's cock on her couch that second time, the thing that had made her pussy clench and her body shake had not been so much what Hunter was doing, but the thought, behind her closed eyes, that any moment now, Len would walk in and see her, and see how beautiful she was, bouncing on Hunter's cock.

That thought had been so wrong, so deranged, so illicit, that her pussy had squeezed Hunter's cock hard and drawn his cum right out of him as she rode an exhausting orgasm to its shaky conclusion.

And when she had seen Len, standing there? It was as if the orgasm had been slowly rippling against the sides of a pan, dying down, and he had plunked a stone into the water, setting it raging inside of her again. Her pussy had actually throbbed, her skin had actually crawled, and she had closed her eyes for a moment as the thrill of it traveled up and down her spine and made her thighs shake.

Why was it that she couldn't bring herself to tell Jessie about these thoughts? She was pretty sure she didn't want to actually sleep with Len: she just liked the perpetual tension. So why not tell Jessie? She didn't love Len or want to leave her husband for him, or even fear doing any of that... so why couldn't she so much as imagine telling Jessie what she thought about him?

She touched her lips and stared at the ceiling. She didn't have an answer to that question.

Tomorrow, she would go to the gym and focus her efforts on Jay. That certainly gave her something to think about, and concentrate on. Unlike Hunter, who Kim felt she could manipulate easily, Jay felt like a challenge.

It wasn't just that he was older, and bigger, and somewhat intimidating just by virtue of being black. It was also that she sensed a guy like Jay would be a little less clueless than Hunter about the complexities of her relationship with him. Did she pretend to be having an affair with him? Or did she pretend to be single, and let her alter-ego, Jade, take over for her? How did she make sure she got him back here, to her house? How did she make sure the relationship – she smiled, thinking of how strange this next thought was, how completely opposite to the way she had thought when she was single – stayed purely physical?

She shivered thinking about the way Jay had held her hand in his at the gym last week, his strong fingers wrapped around hers, the electricity running along her skin and down to her pussy. “Suits you better. Jade. Can I call you that?”

She felt the cool, shifting, electricity in her chest of flirting with someone, of the danger of the unknown, of being attracted to someone but not knowing if he would reciprocate. The feeling had been so prevalent in her teenage years, and then faded away to oblivion after she and Jessie had gotten married. She had almost forgotten what it felt like. It was distracting, and it made her feel high. And a little bit queasy. It wasn't just thinking about Jay that did it for her, either. She liked thinking about Len watching her with the physically superior, well-hung (he had to be, right, with hands that size?) and formidably dark Jay.

And Jessie, of course.

But was she thinking too little about Jessie?

Did it matter? Jessie might want to believe that she was thinking more about him than anyone else, and there was no reason he shouldn't think that. And also no reason that he didn't have to.

The man who occupied most of her thoughts was a secret that she could easily keep.

She had permission to do just about anything else she wanted to.

She spent a lot of time planning out her encounter with Jay. She went shopping, and spent almost two hours searching for the perfect running shorts and top. She had never been one to spend so much time on workout clothing: running shorts were running shorts, and tops were tops. But she wanted the shorts to show her ass to its best advantage (which, she noted proudly, was not very hard because she had gotten so fit lately, albeit out of boredom). She usually chose tops without trying them on, but she wanted one that complimented her shape and her coloring.

At last, she found a gray-green top that made her waist look narrow without emphasizing the lack of perfect flatness of her stomach, which had a small swell that Jessie had repeatedly told her was attractive, but which she preferred to hide. The top made her eyes smolder and diverted attention from the softness of her belly, which was so very nearly flat it was silly. She was happy with her choice and bought a second one in blue, even though they were $80 each.

Whatever, she thought, giving her hair a flip. Jessie had revealed to her that everything he had been doing with his business had really been for her: he wanted her to spend the money he'd made.

Satisfied with that particular thought, she threw in a red top, because she had read somewhere that red makes people who observe it have more sexual thoughts about the person wearing it.

She was also pleased with a pair of black running shorts, made of a silky fabric that slid along her skin as she moved, because they did make her look very young, very athletic, and very sexy. A slit in the side parted as she took a long stride, and flashed her skin almost to the side of her ass.

Which was not the sort of thing she'd have ordinarily chosen, but for Jay, she wanted to broadcast very clearly what she had to offer.

She still wasn't sure what to tell Jay about her marital status, or what to do if he wanted to go on a "date-date," or even what Jessie wanted her to do.

She took a picture of herself in her new shorts and shirt, and sent it to Jessie.

Going to flirt with Jay today at the gym

What do you think?

And she waited, the phone in her hands, thinking, as she had begun to, that Jessie did nothing more now than think about her, and wait for her to send him a titillating message.

There was no reply for a few minutes, which peeved her a little, but Jessie was a grown man with a business to run and it was possible he was in the middle of such an endeavor right at that moment, she told herself. She gathered her gym things and gave a last look at her phone, then walked to the car and put her things away.

When there was no response from Jessie, she went back into the house to pour herself a glass of water, internally admonishing herself for being bitter toward Jessie for not answering her. She was acting like a child, needing constant attention.

She put a hand on her hip.

She would just go to the gym and Jessie would, of course, get back to her whenever he could.

She walked to the front door after setting down the glass, and told herself with a determined voice inside her head not to stop, not to do what she was thinking about doing, not to be an idiot and play childish games with childish, superstitious gambles in them.

Like the one she was playing when she sent the same picture and same text to Len that she had sent to her husband. A silly game, not even particularly articulated to herself.

A game something like this: let's wait and see who calls me back first.

It was like picking the petals of a flower singing "he loves me, he loves me not..."

So stupid.

She clutched the phone to her thigh and kept her eye on the car as she was walking toward it when she heard her phone beep with an incoming message.

Inside her abdomen her stomach twisted, a flutter seemed to try to fight its way from her chest.

Who would it be?

She lowered herself into the driver's seat, and smiled when she lifted the phone and read the message on her screen.

In the end, Jay wasn't actually at the gym. Kim did a lot of extra cardio without even noticing how long she spent on the treadmill, and subsequently, the elliptical machine, but as she scanned the reflections in the wall-to-wall mirrors, not a single dark figure moved through the gym.

Sweating and muscle-tired, but agitated mentally, she went to the showers, took a longer-than-usual one, spending extra time primping herself in the event she stumbled into Jay on her way out.

She realized, as she exhaled with exasperation while straightening her hair into a believable, but tidier, post-work-out ponytail, that she was annoyed. Annoyed because she had gotten herself wound up about Jay, so sure that her plans would unfold exactly as she imagined them, and she had finally been ready to jump in with both feet to... well, darker waters.

And he hadn't shown.

And now she was starting to second-guess herself, and then be annoyed with herself for letting doubts creep in, and she could feel herself in the familiar cycle of backing down from something she'd felt only hours ago very ready to do.

She hated when she lost her confidence like this.

She swiped at her mascara, which was slightly smeared, and appraised herself again, just in case.

But Jay was not to be stumbled into, not in the gym or the parking lot, and she sat in her car in a huff, clinging to the last moments that there could be a chance of her seeing him. But it was the afternoon already, far later than Jay ever went to the gym as far as she knew, and she was beginning to feel silly and desperate.

She took her phone out and looked at her messages.

Len, the first to get back to her about her plans:

You know what I think.

A shiver of electricity traveled between her pussy and her chest, back down again. Len's response, mysterious, gaming, coy... from a total asshole, she reminded herself ... made her shiver, gave her a delicious thrill.

Jessie's reply, on the other hand:

Are you sure? Tell me all about it.

was, well... not as hot.

Was it because they were married? Because there was no mystery or secret between them now that they had decided to play this game by a set of rules that she knew Jessie would always follow? She loved Jessie, she knew that she loved him and that, at the end of the day, all she wanted was for things to be good between them.

She would never give that up for any of this. Not for some cheap thrill with Len.

But...

She had permission to get cheap thrills with anyone but Len.

And she hated Len.

So why did Len's message pluck at something inside of her, why was Len's message the one she thought about the most, why was Len's game the one she wanted to play?

She didn't know.

But she found herself with the phone next to her ear, her mind spinning up a web of intricate lies and half-truths, the ringtone in her ear, and on the other end of the line, it was not her husband who answered her call.

CHAPTER 6

“So listen,” Kim said, giving her hair a toss in the light spring breeze. She felt remarkably in possession of herself, acutely aware of her body, her sexual appeal, the sexual gray-green of her eyes, as though she could see the flush on her cheeks and the sexual animal beneath her skin from where Len sat across from her at a beach restaurant not far from the first bar they’d gone to together. Her choice of venue was deliberate: she wasn’t sure how much she trusted herself – or Len – behind closed doors.

He looked smug, but she could tell that she was disarming him a little. She had been so direct, asking him to come here and give her advice. Kim was enjoying her new powers, or maybe it was only that she was aware of them. Len was still playing Mr. Cool, but she knew she had his full attention, as long as this was the game she was playing.

Except, she reminded herself – except, that Len was off-limits.

Len was a game she was playing, she reminded herself. A game that would not cross any lines or break any rules she had made with Jessie. Maybe she was bending the rules a little, talking to Len, but she was doing it all in the name of turning her husband on, so... would he mind?

The fact that it was fun for her didn’t mean she was doing a bad thing.

She leaned forward on the table and let her eyelids get heavy enough to be sexy. She worked one of her plump lips underneath a tooth as though she were indecisive. “Did I ever tell you about this Jay guy at my gym?”

Len’s eyes lit up, there was no denying that, even if his features remained as calm and arrogant as ever. Kim could almost see his circulation change. It gave her a rush whenever she could take Len by surprise like this and she could almost sense his cock getting harder from the things she said. It wasn’t something she was going to actually test out, with her hand, under the table – but she thought about it.

What would it be like to put her fingers between his legs and feel the contours of his cock, twitching with her every word?

Her pussy throbbed.

Len looked amused. “‘I’m-going-to-flirt-with-Jay,’ Jay?” he asked.

She nodded. “He’s black,” she said, and enjoyed the ripple of energy that traveled from her, through Len, and flared inside of him. She could feel it.

“Go on,” Len said, when she did nothing more than observe him behind the curtain of her black eyelashes.

She twisted her drink in her hand and lowered her eyes, letting a coy grin take over her mouth. It really was too easy, she was thinking. Too fun, too sinfully delicious, playing this part. She should stop.

But she didn’t. In fact, she was stunned to hear herself acting as she said the next part:

“Well, I want to, uh... you know. Since me and Jessie have said that we’re doing this... open relationship thing. I kind of, uh... want to try out, you know...”

She rubbed her nose. Even if she was feeling powerful and sexy, saying that she wanted to sleep with a black guy, just because he was black – that was harder. She took a sip of her drink.

Len helped out.

Eagerly.

“Big black cock?” he said helpfully. He leaned back in his chair, giving her an impressed smile that gave her a perverse little thrill. “My, aren’t we moving quickly?”

His arrogance snapped her right back into the game. Kim smiled.

“Okay, the only thing is,” Kim said softly, and her skin started to tingle with the sheer joy of what she was doing, the thrill of doing something bad, telling a lie, causing mischief.

Inside her chest, her better angels made a feeble attempt at her conscience, but the mischief won out.

“I don’t think Jessie is so much into it,” she lied. A white lie, the kind that she could later blame on bad communication or having made assumptions or misread Jessie’s tone. Who was to say that she didn’t have the impression that Jessie wasn’t into it? No one could read her mind.

“You know?” she finished.

Len’s eyes gleamed. Kim could tell that he was calculating something in his mind. “Well,” Len said. “That makes Jessie a bit of an idiot.”

Kim looked out at the water, pleased with his reaction. She didn’t know exactly what she wanted from Len, but she knew it was something like this very conversation she was having.

“So our arrangement is this: I can do pretty much anything... except specific people...” she cast a meaningful glance at Len, as though he hadn’t already figured out that he was so deliciously verboten. “As long as I tell him about it. Jessie, that is. And I want him to be able to watch it, so it has to be... you know. In the bedroom.”

She watched his face carefully, looking for a reaction that might give away, definitively, whether he had watched her masturbation scene or not, whether he was planning to watch her performance for Jessie or not. She thought she saw his arrogance flare beneath his skin, but Len was so extraordinarily full of himself it was hard to know what the cause of it was.

She did know this much: Len was now thinking of himself, and the fact that he was taboo. She could tell that it gave him a thrill, made him competitive, gave him an edge and a hunger that made him deeply attractive to her. If she played her cards right, she could make herself that unattainable prize. At least, as long as she decided to play the game that way.

“Where the cameras are,” Len said with a smile that made Kim’s stomach go cool.

“Where the cameras are,” she said floridly. And matched his smile. Their eyes met. Were they both thinking the same thing? She decided she preferred not to know.

Len’s body was pulsing beneath his skin. He was staring openly at her, and his hand fell lazily across the table. His fingertips traced along the deep cut in the chest of her red sundress, the same one she had worn when she had dirty-talked for her husband. He stroked her skin, very lightly, as his fingers passed along the neckline, making her hair stand on end from the nape of her neck to her wrists.

Was this over the line? She wondered, and a pang of guilt splashed inside of her for a brief moment before she let it go – and the quickness with which she did it made her feel guilty afresh.

But not enough to stop. Not when her skin burned like this, under his touch.

She brushed a stray lock of bangs from her eyes with an undeliberate gesture that Len found enthralling. Her eyes smoldered behind the dark mascara she had applied.

“You sound like you need my help with something again,” Len said, stroking her left breast along the neckline a few times, languidly, as if he already possessed her or was so sure that he would that he felt he could dip his hand into her dress if he wanted to – it was just his own whim that stopped him.

Kim lifted his hand calmly and massaged his fingers, in front of her face. She kept her eyes on his, amused by the fact that she was sure she felt his thigh twitch beneath the table. This is over the line, she thought as she did it, but the thought flitted around like any lost insect, and just like a lost insect, it settled or was gone and she ceased to think about it “Well, actually,” she said. “I’m a little... I don’t know. Shy, of this guy. Or, not sure how to start up the conversation with him. Or something.” She let go of Len’s fingers and sat back in her chair. “Maybe I’m not sure if I want to do this at all,” she said.

This was untrue, a very definitive calculation designed to induce a reaction from Len, to perhaps measure his interest in her. Why she cared about that, and got off on sizing it up, was not something she could explain to herself. But she knew, as she spoke, that she very much wanted to do “this,” and she also knew that she was here telling Len about it because she very much also wanted to do... this. Drag his eyes along with her wherever she walked, flirt close to the forbidden.

Len was staring at her lips now, because they were inches from his fingers. She had begun to stroke the length of his digits with four fingers, one on each cardinal side of the column of his flesh, the way a porn star would massage a cock before placing her lips around the head.

Len was silent, obsessed with what she was doing for a moment, while his cock became rigid.

“You seem pretty sure of yourself these days,” he said, and then cleared his throat, his concentration broken by slippery, soaked thoughts of Kim’s pussy bursting open for black cock. Kim dropped his fingers and folded her arms, leaning forward, smiling.

“I am,” she agreed, and was pleased that Len became more intrigued by her every sentence. In fact, it was giving her confidence each time she pretended to be confident and managed to get a reaction like this one. “But I really do need your advice about... just...”

She laughed, and looked down at the table. “Okay,” she continued, “so... how do you and Michelle, like... tell somebody what you’re up to? Or do you? Or what?”

Len’s features changed as he regained the upper hand in the conversation. “I see,” he said.

“I’m seriously asking,” Kim said. This part was genuine.

“What are you worried about?” Len asked, scoffing slightly. Then: “Have you ever fucked a black guy before?”

Kim looked away, her face red for a moment before she got herself under control. “No,” she said. “But it isn’t that-”

“Uh-huh, not that, what’s ‘that?’ ” Len talked over her.

“ - I just don’t know how to get things started. With him. You know, without telling him a bunch of... too many lies...”

Len was shaking his head, making a sound of disbelief. “Ahhhhh,” he said. “Kim. Kimmy.”

“What?” she exclaimed, slightly annoyed. She held her hands out helplessly. “I don’t know what to say.”

“What did you say to Hunter?”

She looked at Len for a moment, almost icily. “Nothing,” she said. She hadn’t had to say anything.

“Exactly,” Len said, as if the matter was closed.

Kim squinted at him to let him know she still wanted more information.

Len gave his drink a swirl, a hard alcohol of some kind Kim could not remember because she hadn’t listened when he ordered. “Look, Kim, is this guy a man? Like, he has a dick?”

Kim glared at him.

“Then you’ll be fine. Just show him you-”

“I can’t – first of all,” Kim interrupted herself, “not every guy thinks like you -”

“ - they do -”

“- but second of all, I can’t just... walk up to him in the gym naked.”

Len squinted at nothing in particular to the side of their table and shrugged, as if to say that she could do just that.

“Ugh,” Kim said, tossing a napkin on the table. “I thought you were going to be serious.”

Len looked at her. “Oh, Kim, Kimmy, Kim,” he said. “I am serious. I am.”

“Not everyone is as big of a slut as you are,” she said icily.

Len leaned his head back and smiled in appreciation of the joke. Then he looked at Kim. “Not yet,” he said.

Kim rolled her eyes and started to stand up.

“K, k, k, Kim, wait,” he said. “Don’t get all, eye-rolley on me, I’ll help you out. Happy to do it,” he said. “Even though it benefits me in no way whatsoever.”

They exchanged another pregnant look. Kim did her best to look doubtful. She had no idea what she was playing at, really. She felt like she was careening down a roller coaster, half the wheels off the track.

Len watched her for a while, and then sucked in a deep breath, as if he’d just remembered something.

“I’ve got an idea,” he said. “When is Jessie coming back down here?”

Kim’s insides fluttered, afraid of whatever Len was cooking up but far too interested in it to stop herself. “A few weeks,” she said quietly.

“Too bad,” Len told her.

“Why?”

Len relaxed in his chair. “Well, we have sort of a... get-together coming up. Next weekend.”

Kim narrowed her eyes. “Get-together.”

Len squinted and made a playful face. “That kind of get-together,” he said. “I have someone you can meet.”

Kim was thrown off by this. It was one thing to be teasing Len, by asking him about some much-needed logistics for taking a new, black lover... and quite another to be stepping this... deep... into Len and Michelle’s personal lives. “Uh... I don’t think that -”

“You can just go and watch. Together. Lots of people do that. Maybe it will give you some ideas.. but more importantly, you can meet Michelle’s lover Mike. Who is black. And he would probably be happy to talk to you... both of you, one of you... about the etiquette of asking for BBC, for your husband to enjoy as much as you.”

Len waved his hand dismissively. And grinned. Arrogantly.

Kim did not want to reveal that she felt like she was in a little over her head. There was the fact that this conversation very definitely, quite assuredly, did way more than border on being totally, unforgivably racist. And then the fact that her head was spinning, trying to imagine what kind of “get-together” Len was having at his place, and what it would be like to go there...

“I don’t think Jessie...” she began.

What would Jessie think? The idea of going to some orgy party was a little too outrageous for her... but who could say what Jessie would think?

She never would have guessed they'd be doing what they were doing now, or that Jessie would get turned on by seeing her fuck other guys.

"Let me take care of Jessie," Len suggested, when she didn't speak for a long time.

Kim laughed, as though the idea were preposterous. "Oh, okay," she said.

Len slapped the table. "So it's done. If I can get Jessie to go, you'll go. Great."

Kim's mouth fell open slightly as she realized that Len was pulling one of his usual "bargain" moves, in which you felt as though you had just agreed to something, even though you knew you had not, but you had no proof and no willpower left to fight against him.

He lifted a finger to get the waitress's attention – who, Kim noticed, was more than happy to come to their table.

Kim had another unsettling feeling twist in her chest. But it seemed too late to do anything about it: Len had already moved on to ordering himself a big breakfast, and he seemed to consider the matter closed. In much the same way that she had felt she couldn't let Len "win" when she had marched onto the beach naked to sleep with Hunter, she didn't want to back out of whatever it was that she had wildly and recklessly agreed to here.

She sipped her drink, holding the straw between her fingers in a way that she knew was very sexual, and Len stole a look at her out of the corner of his eye, even as he flirted with the waitress. He winked, and then turned his attention back to the young, petite woman, which had the effect of infuriating Kim, for reasons she had a difficult time explaining to herself.

She looked out at the ocean and kept her cool. She didn't want Len, she reminded herself.

She just... wanted Len to want her.

It was a really strange obsession. She didn't even like thinking about inside her own head, which was just about the last place where anything was private.

She fished her phone from her purse and looked at it under the table, as though she had just received a text. "I gotta go," she told Len, standing up.

Len turned his attention away from the retreating waitress, who had obviously been overcome by his charms. Kim refrained from betraying the sentiment of – not jealousy, because that would be the wrong word for it – and met his gaze with a smile. "So you're taking care of Jessie," she said. "For...what...? The guy, the... what?"

"The party, Kim. You're going to come to it and meet a friend of mine."

He had somehow gotten back the control in this set of exchanges. He had a smug expression on his face, confident that he would get Kim to do something he wanted her to do.

She was silent, unsure of what to say.

She had never agreed to go to any party.

But part of her was a little interested...

Jessie would never actually go. He was too embarrassed.

Len's arrogant smirk became more arrogant. "Maybe some other friends as well," he added.

Kim gave a shake of her head, trying to look nonchalant, sure that she did not. "Right," she said. "Well, like I said, if you can get Jessie to do it, then..." she shrugged. "I guess..."

"You could always come by yourself," Len said casually.

Kim looked at him, her breath caught in her throat. She wished she would say something, and say it quickly, for as every millisecond passed, Len was getting more and more confident that he had her entranced. The thought of going by herself was enthralling.

So wrong.

She had to run all of this past Jessie.

She shook her head, and tried to recuperate her coolness by yawning and looking at her feet.

Kim was annoyed that this made another flame of lust flicker up inside her chest, and that ripples of it pooled in her lower abdomen, very low, right into the aching contours of her pussy.

"Try... getting him to go," she said uncertainly.

"Okay," Len said, wickedly. "I'll try. But if he can't make it down here... this would really be a lost opportunity. For you."

Kim's body gave a slight, erotic shudder, and Len puffed up even more.

He really was infuriating, Kim thought, and she was infuriated by her own reaction to him.

"I don't know, Len -"

"Kim," Len said. "Tell you what? Leave it to me. I'll talk him into it."

Kim shrugged uncertainly again. “Yeah, uh... I’m not sure I really trust you, Len. No offense.”

Len grinned, and winked at her. Or at least she believed that he did, when she reflected upon it later. It felt as though all the oxygen had been sucked from the air, and her next breath did nothing to satisfy her hunger for air. Something kicked inside her chest.

“Then you’ve figured out the best part,” Len told her happily. “Haven’t you?”

Kim’s stomach dropped, and she felt light-headed. She had nothing to say to that, just a blinding anger that he had her so figured out, that he was saying something true, and that she had let him overturn her control of the conversation by hijacking her with this “party.” The party that she wanted to go to alone, wanted to go to with Jessie, wanted not to go to at all. All of these things were true at the same time, and it felt like her competing desires would tear her apart.

Len smiled. “I’ll talk to your old man,” he said. “And get him on board. How’s that? But you have to do me a favor, Kim, if you want me to help out.”

Kim arched an eyebrow and folded her arms reflexively over herself after she stood from her chair, as though to leave. “What’s that?” she asked, her voice faint, trembling. She hoped Len couldn’t pick up on her excitement, the lurid appeal of these ideas that she couldn’t wash from her voice.

What would she do for Len?

Better stated: what wouldn’t she do, if he just asked her for it? She half-wanted his “favor” to be of the most sordid kind imaginable. Would she do it, if he asked her to suck his cock in the men’s room?

Her lip quivered and she had an urge to wet her lips, which she resisted. Why was he getting to her like this?

“The favor,” Len said airily, “is that you don’t go running to call Jessie and muck everything up.”

She cocked her head. “How do I know you’re going to actually talk to Jessie, and not just lure me to your party alone?” she asked, and she was pleased with herself for at least making the effort to throw a punch at him. She smiled sweetly. She felt slightly back in control.

Of whatever this game was.

Len smacked her down with a quiet smile, his eyes revealing how entertained he was. “Well,” he said carelessly. “I suppose you don’t, do you?”

Kim brushed her hair from her face and tried to smile nonchalantly as she reached down and picked up her small clutch from the table, managing to look calm as another electrical, inexplicable shiver went through her.

She met Len’s eyes, and she jutted her chin forward. Scarcely able to believe herself, she said airily:

“I guess that’s part of the fun, isn’t it?”

Len raised his water glass and winked at her. “Indeed it is, Kimmy. Indeed it is.”

She turned to leave.

“Hey,” Len protested. “You stickin’ me with the bill?”

Kim almost turned around, was almost gripped by the person she used to be, because Len had rattled her right back to her old self for some reason. But she stopped her body at the last minute, and edged between some of the chairs, her hand raised to wave at him backward. “You ordered more food than me,” she said.

Which made her feel a little better. That, and the fact that she managed to get to her car without looking back.

CHAPTER 7

Len flirted with the waitress, out of habit more than anything, but his mind was elsewhere, on Kim.

He didn't have any party planned, necessarily... it was quaint, almost too tantalizingly delicious, that Kim thought he was the sort of guy who would have a "party" of that kind planned out and so conveniently scheduled at this particular time.

Kim was fascinating him, though, and so if a party was what Kim desired (whether she realized that herself, or not), then a party is what Kim would get. He wasn't entirely sure what game she was playing, but she was turning out to be much more complicated than he had ever imagined her to be.

He paid the bill and took out his phone, dialing his wife, who was out of town on her own business.

"Heading to a meeting," she answered the phone, sexily, happily. "Have you lost something?"

"I just had the most interesting breakfast with Kim," he told Michelle.

"Kim, Kim-and-Jessie, Kim?" Michelle said coyly. She purred. "Do tell."

"Do you think you could make a party of some kind happen by next weekend?" Len asked.

Michelle huffed. Child's play. She could make a party happen in five minutes if she wanted to.

"A real party," Len clarified. "A party with one of your better friends. A nice, dark friend."

There was a pause, and Len took a moment to appreciate that his wild, beautiful wife was probably sitting in an Uber, warming up between the thighs at the idea of having a very specific kind of party.

"Don't tell me you talked Kim into this?" she said, finally, a smile on her lips that came through the phone.

"I wish I could tell you what I've talked Kim into," Len said. "But if you can invite some friends, I'd say she's very... open-minded."

He had already told Michelle about Kim's newfound appetites, her forays into hotwifing, her surprising enthusiasm for it. Michelle had not disguised the fact that she had her sights set on Jessie, and maybe even something more playful with Kim, and Len knew that Michelle's interest was piqued by the possibilities.

"Should I invite Mike?" she asked him.

"Please do. And anyone else you can think of, just to make it look like a legitimate sort of... uh, party."

He could hear the driver of her car telling her they had arrived wherever she was going.

"There isn't any other kind. Okay. Leave it to me, I have to go."

Len was about to hang up when Michelle tossed out a final question.

"Hey... is she coming with Jessie? Or without?"

Len grinned. Who knew?

But Michelle had already thought about it and decided, as Michelle often did, that it didn't matter. "Never mind," she said, the excitement in her voice evident. If one word could be used to describe Michelle, it was "adaptable."

"I gotta go. More later?"

"More later," Len answered.

"Okay, love you."

Michelle's phone, Len knew, had already been hung up on him, so he didn't say it back.

They didn't really need to.

Jessie was wary of answering the call from Len, and he stared at the screen of his phone while deciding whether or not to answer it. He had no idea what game his wife was playing with Len, and even less of an idea of how he felt about it.

But Len had called twice already, and didn't seem likely to just give up. Besides, a million fantasies had already flitted through his head at the speed of light: Kim was calling from Len's phone to tell him she had Len's cock deep inside of her; Len was calling to let him listen to him fuck his wife in the car; there was an emergency and he was missing his chance to help because he was afraid of what Len might be doing with his wife.

He picked up the phone and slid the green answer icon to the right.

“Hello?” he said, almost faltering. How did you answer a call from a man who had installed video cameras in your wife’s bedroom, a man who you thought was probably fucking your wife at that moment? And then there was Michelle...

Len laughed at him. “Hey bud,” he said sarcastically. “It’s me, Lenny.”

Jessie’s mouth was dry, his ears straining to hear anything that might be going on in the background of Len’s call. He thought he heard a woman laugh, and his heart skipped a beat before he realized that it was not Kim’s laugh. Glasses clinked, and it slowly occurred to him that Len was in a bar or restaurant.

Was he with Kim?

“Relax, buddy,” Len said, as if reading his mind. “I don’t have your lovely wife here with me.”

Jessie said something that was meant to sound like “Good,” but came out as mostly garble.

“She’s already explained to me that I’m off-limits,” he said. “But I did have a very interesting conversation with her this morning.”

There was a silence.

“I’m sure she told you all about it already.”

Kim had not called, or even texted. Jessie swallowed. “What do you want, Len?” he asked.

“So I’m sure you know that Kim has a thing for the guy at her gym. The black guy.”

Jessie nodded, before he realized that Len couldn’t see him. “Yeah. She told me.”

“Man,” Len said breathily. “That’s something else. Not what I expected from Kim right out of the gates, but she’s really something, isn’t she? You’re a lucky guy, Jessie.”

Jessie’s stomach was doing flips.

“What do you want, Len?” Jessie repeated icily.

“Calm down, buddy. You’re getting all cagey and there’s no need for that. You’ve entered a great new chapter of your life, trust me.”

Jessie sighed, because he wasn’t sure what else to do. Len made him more nervous with every conversation they had. He very much wanted Len out of his life, on the one hand. And he very much wanted to hear what Len had to say, on the other. Some part of him, a part that slithered like a cold, reptilian force in his chest, wanted Len to be on his knees on his bed right now, with Kim's body encasing his cock right up to his balls, while he casually talked to him about... what?

"Kim is having some trouble," Len said, obviously enjoying the art of dragging this conversation out. "Asking this guy, what's his name? Jay? To do her bidding. But you knew about that, I'm sure. Anyway, I've got a great idea, I think, for all of us."

Jessie's vision felt blurry and his blood pressure had notched itself up to thumping-in-his-ears-level. He couldn't do much more than expel a shaky breath and wait for Len to finish. Just when, exactly, was Kim having these heart-to-heart conversations with Len?

He couldn't find the words to confront Len about it, so he let him ramble on.

"I'm having a little party at my house, next weekend," Len said. "And I thought, maybe the two of you could come, just to... observe, if you want. Kim thought it was a very good idea."

Jessie was sure his voice would be shaky if he said anything else, so he growled the best that he could and emitted two staccato syllables. "Oh, yeah?"

"But she also tells me that you're not in town that weekend..." Len said suggestively.

Jessie narrowed his eyes. "I'm not."

Len clucked. "So, I have a proposal for you in that case. You could," he said, with the tone one reserves for suggesting an idea they think is bad, "hop on a flight and get down here for this party, sit chastely with your wife maybe watching Michelle fuck her friend Mike... and see where things go from there."

Jessie was unable to speak again, the image of Michelle taking a black cock in the ass as she famously liked to do bleeding into his vision until it felt like he was actually looking at her do that very thing in his office.

"Or," Len said brightly, "you could just... miss your flight, say, and see what Kim gets up to when you're not around."

Jessie stared at the wall opposite him. "What?" he managed to say. "What are you, what are you... why are you...?" Jessie spluttered.

And indeed what was he...?

Len chuckled. "Jessie. Buddy. Look. I'm seriously just trying to help you out here, okay? If I wanted to fuck your wife... well, I do sort of want to fuck your wife, but that's evidently a no-no and I am nothing if not a guy who can take a hint. But I've been living the dream for so long now, and man, seriously... I just want to help other people have the same thing I have. You're lucky. Your wife is..." he let out a low whistle. "An animal. It's unexpected, I gotta say. But you can't let it go to waste buddy. It pains me to see you two kids fumbling around with this when you could be enjoying the finer things. It's like I told you: Michelle and I wasted so much time being 'good' in our marriage when we had compatible tastes. I hate to see someone else make the same mistake."

Len gave Jessie a chance to respond, and then continued, as if he'd been contradicted. "Man, seriously. I just want to get you the same things I have."

Jessie still didn't know what to say. Sure, it would have been nice if he could believe Len, and let go of all his hang-ups, and trust that everything would be fine if he and Kim just started acting like Michelle and Len... but deep down inside, he felt wary of two things: one, that Len was up to something else entirely, which was a feeling he could not shake. And two, that this was not a happily-ever-after scenario, no matter what Len said. Surely the guy lived in a state of worry, that his wife would start loving black cock and leave him?

"Of course," Len was adding, to fill the silence, "if I get to see Kimmy taking a big black cock in the ass while I help out, then... no loss on my end."

Jealousy, and rage, gripped Jessie by the throat. He opened his mouth to say something (he would later wonder what), when Len chuckled again. "Don't get in a huff, buddy," he said. "You know I'm right. Just think it over, tell me what you want to do, and in the meantime, I'll... make sure Kim comes to the party no matter what. Okay?"

Jessie was trying to make words leave his mouth, and his chest felt like it was plummeting through his feet, when he realized that Len had ended the call.

He stared at the phone, seeing red.

And then, his imagination began to bleed into his thoughts, stirring him up to a new high. He felt sick as he let the thoughts crowd into his consciousness, imagining himself telling Kim he would be there, that he would join them, then Kim sitting in Len and Michelle's house on a couch, watching an orgy with black men, and slowly, slowly, losing her resolve to wait for him. He imagined Len approaching her where she sat primly, her eyes rigid, her pulse fluttering at her neck so that anyone who looked would see that it was racing. Len, taking her ankle in one hand and sliding her toward him, pressing the foot up to her ear and slipping his fingers into the wet slick of her pussy, making her eyes roll in the back of her head even as she feebly protested, “Len...”

You could just... miss your flight, say, and see what Kim gets up to when you're not around.

Jessie clenched his fist around his phone. He already knew what Kim got up to when he wasn't around.

He liked what Kim got up to – with Hunter, not Len – when he wasn't around.

He was waiting on pins and needles for Kim to get up to something with her gym friend, there in their bedroom, so that he could see it all for himself.

He closed his eyes, his hand wrapped around his pulsing cock.

He stroked himself until he came, sweat building under his collar, the bleak awfulness of what he was doing the farthest thing from his mind until the last drops of cum splattered on his floor.

He began imagining Kim with Hunter, Kim gingerly taking her black friend Jay's cock in her hand while sitting on the edge of their bed.

But the thoughts that pushed him over the edge and made him come with a gasp were much, much darker than that. Kim, her eyes getting wider and wider as she watched Michelle perform ruthlessly slutty acts for her husband while Kim watched.

Kim, so caught up in the scene in front of her that she barely flinched as Len slipped a hand over her thigh, and a finger beneath her panties, and then sliding that finger into her hot liquid cunt.

Kim, getting finger-fucked by Len, long before she realized what was happening.

Kim, her face aghast, turning to look at Len, her legs spread, his fingers buried in her pussy...

Kim, deciding that she has already done something bad, giving in, letting herself get fucked every which way by Len and the larger-than-life “Mike.” Fucked full of other men's cum, screaming and moaning as they pummeled it into her.

Kim, lying on Len's couch, after hours of filthy sex with all the men at the party. Kim dripping with cum, her nipples red, her mouth puffy, her throat sticky with cum, her fingers feebly feeding the spilled ropes of cum on her face into her used mouth...

It was that thought, above all others, that made him spray three fierce spurts of cum all over his carpet.

Kim stared at her phone, wondering if she should call Jessie and tell him everything that had just happened with Len: that she had gone to him again for help, that she had been invited to a party where presumably she would see Michelle and Len being swingers, whatever that meant, and that Len seemed to be playing some game with her, asking her not to talk to her husband about those plans.

The right thing to do, of course, would be to tell Jessie about this conversation.

But doing the right thing would puncture a hole in the... what would she call it? Fun? Excitement? Allure? ... of whatever she was up to with Len.

It wasn't like she wouldn't, eventually, tell Jessie about the party.

She would see what Len did, and then she would go, and if Jessie was there he was there, and if he wasn't, he wasn't. She wouldn't do anything there. There was no rule between them about watching someone else have sex with another partner, or even Len... and she would tell Jessie about it in the end, just like she had told him about everything else. Well, pretty much everything else...

She held the phone in her hand. Anyway, she consoled herself, she deserved to know what kind of game Len was playing, didn't she? And the only way to find that out was to see whether he invited Jessie to the party or not.

She was walking down a dark and scary corridor of her mind, looking into the doors one by one... but she stopped herself before she peered into the scariest one of all: what did she want to happen?

She looked over at Hunter's house, to interrupt her own dark thoughts. The house had the yawning, vacant feel of no one being home, but that didn't necessarily mean anything when a bunch of young bachelors lived there.

She could release some of the twisted energy she felt by popping over to Hunter's place.

She scowled. She didn't like admitting it, but the idea of having sex in Hunter's trashed-out house full of pizza boxes and beer cans turned her off.

She could lure him over. She had purchased a sexy black swimsuit with her new running gear.

She realized that Hunter didn't quite do it for her. He was missing something.

Now that she had permission to sleep with him, to do all she wanted, his appeal had diminished somewhat. Sure, it was good, and she wasn't thinking about never seeing him again... just... it was missing the sensation in her chest, the rush of adrenaline, the wild and risky high that made her thighs shake and her head spin.

She looked at her phone again.

She would not call Len. She should, but would not, call Jessie.

She felt like she was going to explode. Sitting in the house on a calm sunny day, she felt bored again. Just like before. And the thought of having sex with the beautiful Hunter no longer appealed to her.

She decided to go back to the gym. Not because she thought Jay would be there, but because she actually felt like she had to get rid of the energy almost bursting inside of her.

She ran five miles in under an hour, which wasn't going to win her any cross-country championships, but wasn't exactly jogging, especially after all the cardio she'd done earlier. There was, at least, a very tangible health benefit to all this drama, she thought.

She wondered if this was how guys felt all the time: thinking so much about sex that they had to go do some exercise. If so, that was crazy, and it also gave her a little more sympathy for men.

She was still buzzing with a lot of disorienting energy, so she walked for a few minutes and planned to keep running – maybe she would need another six miles – in the hopes that something would develop among all of the simmering pots she had on the oven.

She looked down to adjust the speed on the treadmill, and when she looked up her heart stopped cold in her chest.

Jay was looking back at her, grayish-green eyes piercing in the chiseled blackness of his face. He had his trunk-like arms folded over his chest, and he pressed his lips together, making them redden so that when he released them, they were bright and drained slowly back to the chocolate-purple they were normally.

He said nothing.

The shiver of lust ran from her chest to her pussy and then snaked back slowly, while Kim just looked at him.

The old Kim would probably have slapped at the console of the treadmill, made the machine go faster, and fallen off the back end of it. Or said something stupid.

It was like watching herself from outside of her own body as new Kim – Jade, that is – continued to run, meeting Jay's stare (not easy, it was almost intolerable), smiled mischievously, and then, calmly, reached for the console and brought herself to a walk, all while Jay stared at her like a wolf eyeing its prey.

She pulled an earbud from her ear. The treadmill slowed, she smiled.

And she waited. Waiting, Kim was noticing, was a delightful activity, if you had something to wait for.

"You trying to avoid me?" Jay asked, finally.

Kim pulled out her other earbud and stopped the treadmill. The runner slowed, and she walked coquettishly until it stopped.

"You owe me a drink," Jay said, a slight smile on his lips. "And now you comin' here at night. Another man might think you're avoiding him."

Kim brought her towel to her throat and dabbed at it, enjoying the way Jay's eyes were glued to her, still wolfish, almost sinister. Her pussy throbbed, and inside her abdomen the cool, illicit feeling snaked through her.

"I don't have any cash," she heard herself saying. "But I'm not avoiding you."

"No?"

"No." She felt like she had been thrown up into the sky and was hurtling out into... something. "So I guess I'll have to make it up to you some other way."

Kim had never talked to anyone like this in her life. If she had heard it out of context, she might have laughed at it: it was so over-the-top. But Jay's eye twitched slightly, his head cocked almost imperceptibly to the right, and his lips quivered with the beginnings of a smile. All signs that he, Jay, was just as surprised to hear Kim talking like this as she was.

“Okay,” he said, nodding. “I could accept some other form of payment. What is it you have in mind, Miss Jade?”

His eyes fell, suddenly, as though he had just remembered something he needed to check, to her left hand. Kim knew, somehow, even with that brief glance, that he was looking for her wedding ring. His eyes were back on hers in such a flash that she was sure, if she hadn’t been up to the things she was up to these days, she would have missed the look.

Jay just stared at her.

Her heart fluttered rapidly, and the cool feeling swelled in the lowest part of her belly.

So Jay had noticed the ring before. She could tell that he had.

And now it was gone.

And he hadn’t missed a beat.

Did he care that she was married? And what did it mean if he didn’t?

His eyes were burning through her in the amused silence. He did the same thing with his lips, sucking them back onto each other slowly, giving them a tidy lick. “So? How you gonna get me back?” he asked, breaking the silence. He put an arm up to the bar of the treadmill, and she let her eyes wander salaciously over his biceps.

She had a few brief thoughts flutter through her mind: she should try to get Jay back to the house if she was going to do anything...of that sort, she should text Jessie.

She was being too crazy to be believed.

But all of these voices went quieter and quieter, while she smiled back at Jay, put a hand on her hip, and flipped her ponytail back. All of the worries she had had about approaching Jay were getting fortuitously knocked down, one by one.

“What if I get you... a drink at another establishment?” she asked. “One that takes debit cards?”

She heard her own voice, and visualized the way that she batted her eyes flirtatiously, the suggestiveness of “drink” vibrating in her ears as though she were watching a movie instead of openly flirting with this man.

Who was not her husband.

Jay laughed silently, and Kim saw that the suggestion of sexual favors had not imploded when she said this.

He shook his head slowly. "I don't have a change of clothes. Can't go out lookin' like this."

Kim couldn't help her lips parting and her face melting into confusion. What did he mean by that? Her mind raced.

What was she doing?

Jay was silent, smiling. He had, Kim noticed, the same arrogant look that Len sometimes got. Like he knew what she wanted, and would just bide his time until she came around to him.

She was right at the edge of doing something that she couldn't take back, she realized, and a slight panic rose up in her throat. Jay's body was covered in a faint sheen of sweat. She could smell his skin, the heady scent of his sweat beneath the deodorant and soap he used, all of it different than anything Jessie used. She could practically feel the heat radiating off of him, and her mind snapped to imagining the feel of it on top of her body, so viscerally she almost felt it.

It was right within her reach, right then and there, and she knew it: she'd barely have to lift a finger to get Jay to take her home. All she had to do was suggest it. Her lips parted again, and her breath caught in her throat. Her eyes fell onto Jay's arm, and the sheer size of it made her legs feel weak.

This guy was not like Hunter. This was a very different game.

"I could..." she began, and then she balked. What was she about to say? I could come over to your place while you change? I could give you a blow job in the car? Was she actually going to have sex with this man? She hadn't expected to see him here, hadn't expected this interaction at all. And now that it was here, it was almost too much.

She wished she'd had more time to... what? Think about it?

Jay was still looking at her intently. Her unfinished sentence seemed to have gone unnoticed. He accepted that they were both thinking the same thing, or something similar, at least: he had no clothes, they would have to go somewhere where clothes didn't matter, take a shower at his place... something like that.

Her thumb moved to her ring finger. The motion was unconscious, but the movement caught Jay's eye. His gaze traveled down to her hand, this time slowly, letting her know that he saw it.

"Where's Mr. Jade this evening?" Jay asked.

Out of town. That was all she had to say, and then the rest would take care of itself. Half of her wanted to say it, to just will her mouth to tell him, and then he would know what the score was and that would be that. She had a feeling a guy like Jay could make things move in pretty much any direction he wanted to. Just say, “out of town,” she told herself. Take the plunge.

But so much of what she’d said to Len was true in a way: not that she knew for sure how Jessie felt about her fucking a black guy, but for herself. She had never even flirted with a black guy. Once, in university, a black guy in her dorm had chatted her up over coffee and then she had never called the number he had given her on a scrap of paper.

She thought of this now, and knew that there was more than a small slice of fear coursing through her.

All of these thoughts happened in her head like lightning, and Jay was still waiting patiently for her answer, as if he knew that he had actually asked her a different question, and the answer he was waiting for was whether she was the kind of woman he thought she was. In reality, he had just asked her if she wanted to fuck, and all she needed to do was say yes or no.

She expelled a quiet, careless laugh through her nostrils, to buy herself some time. Her eyes felt like they were all over the place. She was definitely losing her composure, but Jay was losing none of his.

Then she let her eyes drift back to his. “Uh, he’s, uh... coming home. Later,” she lied. With a smile, and a suggestive one at that.

What kind of answer was that? The kind, she thought nervously, that almost closed the door but left just enough room for it to be wedged open again.

Jay’s smile didn’t change, but the sentiment behind it did. Maybe it was something in his eyes. Kim knew it was predatory, rising to a challenge. Her stomach was full of shards of emotions, all of them jostling together to make her positively sick. And turned on. Her skin felt like it was on fire.

“That’s too bad,” Jay said, finally, pushing away from the treadmill.

Kim felt the same kind of disappointment she often felt in herself, when she really wanted to try something but just... backed down at the last minute. She hated the feeling. “It’s too bad you don’t have a change of clothes,” she said.

“I guess I’ll have to trust you to get me back some other time,” Jay answered, almost immediately, almost as if he were reading a script that he himself had written. He was smiling.

“Yeah,” Kim said, and felt stupid, but she was glad to see that even as Jay stepped back to let her off the treadmill, he was still devouring her with his eyes.

She stepped down and the floor felt like it would spin out from under her. Once she was on the floor, the full height of the very black man she was flirting with loomed over her, and she felt the electrifying feeling of being at once afraid of him and insanely attracted to him.

Jay put his hands on the opposite ends of the towel strung over his neck. He leaned closer to her, and she let him, unable to stop her eyes from half-closing in pleasure as his cheek nearly touched hers. His breath was hot against her skin, and the vibration of his voice felt like fingers nipping at her earlobe. Her pussy was wet and convulsed with an ache as her mind went lustily to the idea of his cock again.

“And I guess Mr. Jade wouldn’t want Mrs. Jade buying me a drink, would he?”

Kim’s eyes fluttered open, and she found herself looking him boldly in the eye. Her lips smiled, and she felt out of control of her own body, especially her mouth, as she heard herself say, for reasons she wouldn’t be able to fully explain to herself later:

“Mmm...” as though it was neither a “yes” nor a “no.” She dropped her eyes. They were still standing very, very close to each other, and the pull of his masculinity built and ebbed like a tide: in various fractions of seconds, she wanted him now, and then was just as suddenly afraid of him.

“I’ll... have to get you back some other time, I guess,” she said. Her voice sounded husky. Jay’s mouth twitched and his lips made another arrogant, lustful smile.

“Too bad,” he growled.

Kim lost her nerve completely, and stepped to the side. She smiled at him as she walked toward the showers, her heart pounding, feeling a bit like she was completely drunk. She wasn’t sure if she nodded or not, but she was sure that Jay had an interested expression on his face, still, and so she continued to play her part.

Whatever that was.

“How I know I can trust you?” Jay called out to her, amused.

She thought for a second of giving him her number, but her head was spinning and she needed some time to really think about what she was doing. “I always pay my debts,” she told him, over her shoulder.

He didn’t say anything back, so she turned to look at him.

He was still watching her, arrogant smile, hands on towel ends, body glistening like a porn star in basketball clothes.

He jerked his chin up, giving her a nod. And she smiled back.

If she hadn’t felt quite like she was drunk while she was on the gym floor, she felt slammed as she rounded the corner into the shower area. The locker room was filling up with the after-work crowd, and she didn’t feel like she could meet anybody’s eye. She stumbled to the showers and almost fell down getting out of her clothes, which she left in a pile by the shower curtain before stepping into the shower and turning on the water. It was cold for several seconds, which was good, and as she waited for it to warm up with her eyes closed and her heart pounding, she realized she didn’t have a towel.

So she stood there, staring at the cinderblock wall painted white, for the noise to die down in the locker room so she could hurry to her locker for her towel.

This gave her plenty of time to reflect on the totally insane conversation she had just had, the way she had flirted with the possibility – the very real possibility – of taking a total stranger back to her house and having sex with him.

While her husband, and maybe Len, watched.

She shook from a sudden shiver, even though the water was hot. She smiled, her fingers on her lips, thinking about Jessie glued to the screen. Jessie, sitting in his many meetings, looking right at whoever was speaking but only seeing her, as she screamed and wrapped her legs around Jay. Jessie, burning with jealousy and unable to get her out of his mind.

And then there was Len.

Her stomach flipped again.

The locker room was quieter. She peeked out from behind the curtain and saw that a few people were in the section near the restroom, but she had a pretty clear shot for her locker.

She stepped out quickly, and then, as she hurried across the tile floor, it occurred to her how utterly ridiculous it was that in a locker room for women, a woman like her - who had fucked her next-door neighbor to impress her husband and an old “friend” for whom she had some weird obsession, a woman who now had cameras installed in her bedroom and had almost just fucked a strange black man – should be rushing to get a towel.

So she slowed down, and walked regally to the locker, pulling the items of clothing from it slowly and setting them on the bench deliberately, while stark naked and dripping wet. She smiled when she caught her reflection in the mirror.

She looked fucking hot. So why not flaunt it?

“I thought you were leaving thirty minutes ago.”

She knew it was Jay: she had felt a tingle on the back of her spine since she caught him in her peripheral vision walking out of the gym area toward the exit. She hadn’t looked back, partly because she didn’t want to be too obvious, partly because she wanted to see what he would do.

She turned around to face him, smiling, as she unlocked her car with the fob. “Took a shower,” she said. Smiling again. She wanted him to think about it, and he was.

“That’s a long shower,” he said. Still walking toward her.

Why did she do it? Was it because it seemed to be falling into place, like a line of dominoes, as though she had no way to stop it anyway? Because he was going to stand next to her car door, and she knew it, and he held her in his eyes so that she couldn’t sit down, or get away? Was it because she really was turning into a wild slut? She didn’t know. But for whatever reason, she said to him, as he drew nearer and nearer, and she was still standing by her open door, not getting in, rotating to face him, eyes smiling:

“I’m a dirty girl.”

Inside her head, her conscience was going apoplectic.

What?!

He was very close to her now. Close enough that she could feel the heat of his body. Too close to be any kind of accident, any kind of anything except for what it was. Then his skin was touching hers. It was dry and hot, and the muscle beneath it was hard everywhere.

“I figured,” he said, and then his entire body was against her. Not hard, not jamming her between him and the car. Just covering her, with barely the pressure of a film on her skin. But his hand was further down.

He kept his eyes locked on hers, and she stared at him, her smile frozen, her lips trembling. She could feel his erection through the sundress she’d put on, and it was everything she’d expected, almost a cliché. His fingers were slightly calloused, gentle to the touch, moving up her inner thigh.

She blinked, slowly, and all agency drained from her body. She could feel her lips trying feebly to make a word, a word that might object to what he was doing, but they failed at each turn. The fingers brushed over her panties, and by the way the skin tugged on the silk, she knew they were wet.

“I just want to remind you, I expect you to get me back. Some time when Mr. Jade isn’t around.”

His fingers slid away, and he brought them to just below his nose, inhaled, and smiled, before sucking on the very tips of his fingers. “See you soon?”

Kim smiled. It was all she could muster. And then she fell into the car, and closed the door, as Jay walked away, the muscles of his back rolling visibly beneath a light sweatshirt.

“Oh my God,” she whispered.

In her haze, she applied her foot to the gas pedal instead of the brakes, forgetting that her car was automatic, she supposed. If anyone would have been behind her as she backed out, she would have run them over.

“Fuck,” she hissed, and slammed on the brakes, then threw the car into drive and left the parking lot, sincerely hoping that Jay had not witnessed the level of distraction he had brought her to.

CHAPTER 8

“So,” Kim said, smiling. She knew Jessie was watching her as well as talking to her, so she was lying on the bed with her panties off and a loose shirt just barely grazing the bottom of her ass. She moved her feet a little more than she needed to as she kicked her legs playfully, so that the shirt slid a little more down the slope of her ass with each kick, until it pooled at the small of her back.

“So,” Jessie said, and she liked how entranced he seemed. The power she was wielding over the various men in her life was intoxicating. She wondered every now and then if she was getting a little full of herself.

But the thought was short-lived.

“So, are you coming tomorrow, or what? You’ve kept me in the dark long enough.” She swung her legs with a bit more force and let them part ever so slightly, so that Jessie would have a nicer view. In a moment she would roll onto her side, and then her back, with her leg crossed over, and then, maybe, she would open her thighs and give him a real show while she told him about Hunter (while she imagined, in Hunter’s place, Jay, and his enormous manhood).

She was looking forward to Len’s “party” now. She hoped she wasn’t being too obvious about her enthusiasm. She wanted to see for herself how Michelle dealt with a huge, muscular black man. She wanted to watch, to see how it looked, to feel Jessie’s reaction for herself, with her own fingers and lips and body.

“I’m coming,” Jessie said. “But my flight gets in at eight.”

“Hmm,” Kim said. “That’s sort of... late...”

Was it late? Was arriving at nine, after getting from the airport to Len’s, for an orgy or a sex show or a sex party, or whatever this was... late?

“Well, I was thinking... Len was thinking... you should just go, and I’ll join you as soon as I get there.”

Kim’s arms tingled. She pictured herself, alone, on the couch, watching Michelle suck on cock while Len watched Michelle, and then Len turned to her, slowly, and watched her instead. Her skin tingled and her pussy welled up with juices.

“I...” she began. “I... yeah, okay,” she said. Then she brought her fingers to her mouth. “It’s just...”

Jessie was quiet, then he gently prodded her forward: “What’s up?”

He was showing he cared, but she could hear in his voice that he dreaded her backing out at the last minute. She smiled into her fingers. She knew she was doing this to him on purpose, and it was fun.

“I just don’t...” she sighed, and she could almost feel the tension on the line as Jessie waited for the end of her sentence. “What do I wear?” she asked finally.

Jessie’s relief was audible. “Oh. God. Oh, yeah. I, uh, I don’t have any idea.”

“A dress?”

Jessie laughed. “Um... maybe this is one for Michelle and Len.”

“I don’t want to show up in my leather chaps with whips if it isn’t that kind of party.” Kim said sarcastically.

Jessie was stunned, and he gave her a laugh, but she had thrown him off a little with this particular kind of wit. “Yeah, no. You wouldn’t want that.”

“No.”

“No.”

“Although...” he ventured. “It wouldn’t be the worst thing.”

“I’ll go ahead and check with Len.”

She could almost feel him bristle through the phone. “Yeah, check with Len,” he said.

The tone of his voice was hard to read, a mix of egging her on, sexual thirst, and annoyance directed at Len, or her “checking with Len.”

“I will,” she said huskily. “I’ll also ask him what time I should be there.”

There was a silence.

“You’re just going to watch, right?” Jessie asked. Again, his tone was confusing.

“Is that what you want me to do?”

Her own tone, she realized, was not exactly bullet-proof for guessing purposes. Why couldn’t they just say what they felt, what they wanted?

She pictured it: Jessie telling her, robotically, that it would be fine if she slept with Len or some other guy at this party, provided it was once and only once...

That wasn’t appealing.

This was appealing. The cold feeling of danger and illicit actions that lingered between them.

“I hear there’s no stopping you if you want something,” Jessie said cryptically.

She looked up at the camera as she rolled to her side. She had the remote in her hand, and slowly opened her thighs to Jessie’s silence, so she knew that he was watching her. She had his complete attention. She drew her fingers down her front and right to the edge of her landing strip, before she lifted her right arm lazily.. and turned off the cameras.

There was an audible shudder on the phone.

“Kim...” he breathed.

“I’ll see you tomorrow,” she said sweetly.

And then, she hung up the phone.

She texted Len, because she didn’t feel up to playing his games. She asked him what to wear, and he told her to use her imagination, which briefly inclined her to wear her Halloween costume from three years ago, which was a hot dog costume.

Instead, she went shopping.

She wasn’t planning on doing anything more than watching, unless it was with Jessie, but it didn’t hurt to have her underwear ducks in a row just in case.

And she might as well look for the sort of dress that would be appropriate at a party where people intended to fuck each other, even if that wasn’t what she wanted to do. A dress that was very sexy, sort of casual and sort of dressy. So she would fit in to whatever went on there.

She wasn’t a big fan of shopping, so she felt instantly tired, and she wasn’t finding any good dresses. She had gone downtown, to the more expensive stores along the streets of the financial district, because she assumed she would find something there for reasons she couldn’t really explain to herself once she got there. She briefly considered calling Michelle, but decided against it. She had her phone out and was standing in the middle of a large walkway, when someone came to rest in front of her.

She had assumed it was someone passing by on his way to the offices in the buildings above: it was lunch hour, he was wearing a suit, as she had determined from his shoes. So when he came to a stop it took her a moment to realize he was not moving, and by then she was sure she didn't want to call Michelle anyway. She looked up.

Jay, looking quite different than she had ever seen him, was looking down at her from his towering height. He was wearing an expensive gray suit, with a purple shirt and a darker purple tie, giving him an expensive, suave, and sinister look all at once. All of which, along with the surprise of seeing him there, made Kim feel like she was going to faint. She sucked in a deep breath of air.

"Shit," she said slowly, when too much time had passed for neither one of them to say anything. "You scared the shit out of me."

He squinted nowhere in particular, into the sun. "Now here I was thinking you were avoiding me," he said calmly.

"I never, ever shop here," Kim said, actually excited and perplexed by the coincidence of it. "I literally never do." She laughed.

Jay smiled, lips together. "Must be a sign."

She shifted her purse, a little nervously. "I have to get a dress," she explained, unbidden. "What are... why are you here?"

"Work," he said, and his voice indicated that this was the final word he would say on that.

"Oh," Kim plowed ahead anyway, "What do -"

He was shaking his head, slowly, his eyes glued to hers. He didn't want to talk about it. Her voice faded away before the question was complete.

"I really have to get a dress," she said, "or I'd..."

"What's the dress for?" he said.

The question was simple enough, but it came across to her so sexually that she felt like he had curled a finger inside of her and stroked her g-spot.

He was closer to her than before. The air left her lungs as though he had squeezed it from her. "A party," she said, almost in a whisper.

"Cocktail party? Work?"

She shook her head. "Different."

Jay narrowed his eyes and his lips turned up. "Who are you dressing up for? Mr. Jade?"

Her mouth opened, and her eyes fluttered ever so slightly, and she saw that he already knew that she was dressing up for someone else as soon as she retreated from nodding, and shook her head almost imperceptibly. His mouth curled in a wolfish grin.

“This store,” he said, lifting his arm without taking his eyes off her, before turning to look a ways down the street. “Pasha’s. That’s where I’d go if I were looking for a dress for... uh, someone else.”

He pressed his lips together as he turned back to her, almost like he was challenging her to say or do something.

He waited. He put his hands in his pockets and lowered down to her ear. “I gotta go,” he said, and the gravel of his voice raked along the skin of her neck and almost made her shiver visibly. “There’s a red one in the window that someone else will definitely love.”

And then he walked past her.

“I hope I’ll be seein’ you at the gym,” he called back.

Kim stood, glued to the spot, her heart racing, unable to believe what had just happened, and wishing the moment had never ended, until passers-by began to get annoyed at having to move out of her way. When she whipped around, he was entering a building across a square, phone to his ear. He did not look back.

She squinted at the store. And then looked back again.

Her mind was a whirlwind. What kind of job did Jay have that allowed him to be out strolling around at noon, in the financial district, and at the gym for hours on end by the university? What kind of guy was he, that he thought he could just... just... assume that she would be buying a dress for someone else. She had said something else. She was sure of it.

And she was definitely, she thought, walking shakily into a different store, not going to actually do it.

The store she had walked into was a store full of expensive but dowdy clothing, probably targeted at rich women over sixty. The kind of starvation-thin, rich women who seemed to populate Florida like palm trees, lips stuffed with collagen and skin unnaturally, seamlessly tan. She gave the store a lengthy perusal, to the bemusement of the staff, who did not try to help her, before leaving and walking through two more stores and seeing nothing, her mind driven to an almost unbearable blankness. The only thing she was sure of was the acceleration of her heart, the twisting and slithering of the snake in her abdomen, and the lingering residue of guilt that it left everywhere in its wake.

That, regardless of kind of show she was putting on for nobody in particular, she was headed eventually to Pasha's.

When she walked in, her stomach dropped. It was exactly the kind of overpriced store full of dresses for very young women that intimidated her. There were hardly any racks, and on them only a few dresses hung, as though the place had been cleaned out. In fact, she knew from experience that this was the kind of store where you had to talk to a salesperson, who would probably look down her nose at you, a little like you were pre-shopping Julia Roberts in Pretty Woman. She was trying to call as little attention to herself as possible and get out (this was not a store with a bell, after all), when a very sleek-haired Asian woman who seemed far too tall for her heritage spotted her and glided toward her. Directly. Smiling.

"You are Jade." It was more of a statement than a question.

Kim stopped in her tracks, unsure what to say.

She wasn't Jade, she thought. And yet she was. She pondered how to respond, but the girl gave her no time. "It's right back here." She raked her eyes up and down Kim's body, looked briefly concerned, then instantly appeased. "I think it will fit you. The fitting room is back here, come and try it on."

She turned, obviously expecting Kim's compliance, and so Kim followed her through the stark store, into a small doorway that opened up into an enormous sitting area. A waif-thin and stunningly beautiful girl was seated on a couch, wearing a black robe. She looked up expectantly, and the Asian girl waved her away, so she returned to her phone. "No need, Krista," the Asian woman said. Barely turning to Kim, she explained. "Our model."

She stood in front of a door with practically an entire sitting room behind it. "It is just here, I have both a six and a four, better the larger one so we can take it in as necessary."

Kim looked at her and began to protest, though she wasn't sure what she was going to say. But the Asian woman had a no-nonsense air about her, and she made a gesture and gave Kim such a look that she felt she had no choice, no choice at all, but to step into the dressing room, where two red dresses that almost gleamed with expense were hung along the wall.

The door closed.

The dress was perfect, and just the feel of it against her skin was making her wet, as if wearing the dress was transferring Jay's warm, dry hands straight to her flesh, clinging to her body, enveloping her in his powerful, musky, sweaty -

Kim closed her eyes. What in the actual hell was wrong with her?

There was a flattery, a fun, sexy feeling to being objectified enough by Jay that he had known that this dress would look as good on her as it did. It was a more expensive, clingier, classier version of the red sundress she'd bought with Jessie (and even something about that, about the similarity but the richness of this dress, compared to the other, gave her a fluttering feeling in her lower abdomen). It complimented her perfectly, setting off her skin, the blush of her cheeks, the darkness of her hair, the curve of her new body. The back dipped too low for a bra, so she would have to wear it without one, her spine waiting to be touched by Jay's large black fingertips, as he prodded her gently forward to the bedroom...

She flipped up the tag.

"Oh God," she laughed. "Okay, no."

That solved that. She carefully extracted herself from the dress and hung it up, changing back into her clothes and still smiling as she pushed her bangs from her eyes to straighten herself out.

She stepped out of the dressing room, where the Asian clerk was waiting, staring creepily at her. "It fits?"

"I, yeah, oh, no, this is a great dress -"

"Wrong size? Maybe you need measurements? I can tuck it in."

"No, uh, no, look, it's beautiful, fits fine, just... "

"I'll wrap it up for you." She headed, business-like, to the dressing room.

"Oh! No!" Kim almost shouted. She laughed to distill the tension. She waved her hands and felt a burn of embarrassment creeping over her cheeks. "It's really just too expensive, really. I just needed something for a _"

"Mr. Smith has already charged the dress to his account."

Kim blinked at her. "I... uh..."

"So this is good? No tailoring, just as it is, yes? I'll wrap it up for you. Anything else?"

The woman was already taking the dress down, marching to the cash registers, leaving no room for argument.

Kim stood helplessly in the dressing area, watching everything as though in slow motion.

It really was a nice dress.

Jay had paid for it.

It was all very, very wrong. On many, many levels.

But within twenty minutes, she found herself standing by her car, lowering the pink and gold bag into the passenger seat, the red dress encased in tissue paper and a box, tied with string. Her panties were soaked, and she couldn't be sure whether it was being treated like a high-class hooker by Jay, or the thought of how she would have to repay him, or the idea of telling Len all about it, or the fact that Jessie would never believe any of it, that was making her so wet.

CHAPTER 9

I'm coming to get you. Be ready.

Kim stared at her phone.

She was pretty well into the wine anyway – well enough into it that she felt helpless to make a decision, and tell Len not to pick her up, or even tell him she would be ready – but not so deep into the wine that she was completely relaxed about Len picking her up and taking her to the party.

She was in the dress Jay had purchased for her, and thinking seriously about taking it off and putting something else on, but standing before her clothes she felt exasperated and, to her own self-disdain, a little bit like crying. There was the dress she had bought with Jessie, but she'd worn it before, and there was the black dress that no longer fit her. Jeans seemed inappropriate. Wearing Jay's dress felt vaguely wrong – even if it did look amazing. Jessie would notice it, when and if he ever got here, and she would have to explain where it had come from. The idea of explaining what had taken place this afternoon was daunting: she didn't quite believe it herself.

Len would notice the dress for sure, and even if she didn't have to explain it to Len, he would think she had gone out of her way to wear the sexiest dress she could find, which would give him ideas. Again, she found herself in the curious position of both wanting him to have those thoughts, and not.

She started to unzip the dress, changed her mind, and went downstairs to drink two glasses of wine as quickly as she could.

The “party” had been slated to start at eight. So she had been ready for quite a while. Adjusting her dress, her underwear, her makeup. Drinking, staring at herself in the mirror, asking herself what she was doing. She felt a little ill, was constantly on the verge of backing out, and intermittently excited.

At about seven-thirty, Jessie had texted that his plane was delayed. He would keep her posted. She had answered him with a text, asking him to text her as soon as he knew when he would arrive, but so far had received nothing back from him.

Desperately, she had called him. His phone had not gone straight to voicemail, but he hadn't answered. Not knowing what kind of message to leave, she hadn't left one. Instead, she had sat in the kitchen, unable to make a decision, getting drunk and wondering if she should go to Len and Michelle's, if she should take off the dress, if she should just go over to Hunter's place and blow all of it off.

Hunter was a much easier decision to make: hot, uncomplicated, and stamped with approval by all concerned.

But boring.

She had sat there, looking at her phone while Len called twice. She had remained motionless, indecisive, and then, finally tipsy enough to actually relax. She had concluded that she would just sit there and see what happened.

Len's text had prompted her to run upstairs and look for a different dress to wear, but she had despaired. Now she was drunk, unsure of herself, and Len was evidently coming to get her.

The doorbell rang and she didn't answer it, but Len had evidently expected this and strolled in almost immediately after ringing, shutting the door loudly and whistling cheerfully. He seemed to know she would be in the kitchen, because he walked there without calling her name.

His whistle turned into a low whistle of approval when he saw her. "Damn!" he said. "That's some dress."

Kim took a sip of her wine. "Jessie's plane is delayed," she slurred.

Len smiled. "Kimmy. You've gotten a bit toasted. What's wrong? Nerves?"

Kim was infuriated, as usual, by Len's arrogant attitude, and she felt that same flicker of showmanship at the back of her neck that had prompted her to stomp onto the beach naked to hunt down Hunter. She was about to say something flippant, when something Len had said sent up a red flag of warning: he already knew that Jessie's plane was delayed. Or he would have reacted to her statement, somehow.

"How do you know?" she asked. Her speech, she noted, was a little slurred.

"You're a little dewy-eyed, Kimmy, if you don't mind me saying. But I like it. I like that -"

"About his flight," Kim corrected him. "About Jessie's delay. How did you know?"

Len put his hands in his pockets. He looked a little like one of those guys in a movie who has just been caught out by the clever detective. “I... didn’t,” he said, with a grin that was deliberately calibrated to let her know that he, in fact, did know about Jessie’s flight, and was lying to her now and wanted her to know it.

Kim leaned her head back. She had no idea what to do. She knew what her body wanted her to do, but her mind felt boxed in by all the intrigue she had created, all the games Len was playing. She wanted to fuck Jay, but she was afraid to. She had taken his dress, and she was wearing it, and the idea of wearing a dress that Jay had bought her to a sex party without her husband present and while Len was watching her watch Michelle was so sordid it made her skin crawl... but she didn’t really, really want to not do it either. And the wine was taking its toll on her reasoning.

“The guy at the gym bought me this dress,” she said to the ceiling.

Then she tipped her head down to gauge Len’s reaction. She was pleased that even the cucumber-cool Len registered impressed surprise. His eyebrows were up.

“Don’t tell me you already fucked that guy,” Len said, finally.

Kim shrugged and reached for her purse. Confessing the provenance of the dress to Len had taken the edge off of something; she didn’t know what. The fact that Len so obviously knew about Jessie’s flight was buzzing around in the back of her head like an irritating fly. It meant something, but she didn’t know what. She had ingested far too much wine, and now she was incapable of thinking straight. “I think I should maybe go to bed,” she said, laughing.

She stepped off the stool. Len seemed confident that she was joking, which annoyed her, but she was a little too drunk to feel it deeply. “You’re such an asshole, Len,” she told him, sliding her arm into his. “You’ve got such a smug, smug... little fratboy look on your face, you know that? Like you know I’m going to come with you.”

“The ladies love it,” Len said merrily.

She stopped. “I don’t think I should be at this party without Jessie,” she said.

This was definitely true.

“You didn’t hear from him?” Len said. “He’s coming. Late.”

“So you did hear from him,” Kim said accusingly. She pointed a finger at Len.

A look flitted across Len's face. He smiled, and it was hard to say what kind of smile it was. "I won't lie. I am supposed to come and get you. But I have not heard from Jessie this evening."

Kim looked at him. It was some kind of riddle, but there was no way she would come to understand it, in the state she was in. "What the hell is that supposed to mean?" she finally asked.

Len took her by the arm. "It means, let's go to the party, and maybe everything will clear up for you."

Kim shook her head, but she found herself walking with Len anyway.

"I just want to clarify," she told him, as she put on her seatbelt, "that I am only there to observe."

"It's just a party, Kim," Len said, grinning as he put an arm on her seat back to look behind him. "Just have a good time."

Kim went quiet, and the drive seemed to take a very long time for the first few minutes, like the world was passing by in slow motion. She checked her phone again, and dropped it into her purse with obvious disappointment when there was nothing more from Jessie.

The less Jessie communicated with her, the longer she was away from him, the more she seemed to sink into this world. Florida, not Boston, a sexy slut and not a loyal wife, a woman who let men buy her dresses and got drunk every night before flirting shamelessly with guys almost half her age. The kind of world where she was free to suck almost any cock she liked. The kind of world where she rode in fast cars with Len, late on Thursday nights, to go to parties where people would, presumably, be fucking...

"Tell me how you ended up with this dress," Len said, before she could turn to him and tell him to take her home.

Kim closed her eyes. "I haven't even told Jessie about it."

"But you didn't sleep with him."

She didn't answer. Her head was swimming.

"That's a fucking expensive-looking dress, Kimmy."

"It's an eighteen hundred dollar dress," she said, without opening her eyes.

Len snorted. "So you did fuck him."

Kim's head felt like lava, but her spirits, as they often did when she was drinking, buoyed for no reason at all, and she had a brainstorm. It was a little muddy, but she thought she had a good plan as she slurred:

“I did. I fucked him right in our bedroom and Jessie watched the whole thing. Now I don’t know if he’s mad at me or not.”

Kim was not the kind of person who told lies ordinarily, so the words felt odd leaving her mouth and she almost felt more guilty than she did about the other things she’d done. Leaving things out was one thing. Making things up entirely was another.

Her brain felt like it rolled inside her head again: why was it she had said that?

Len looked over at her. “You didn’t,” he said. He was smiling his self-assured smile, telling her rather than expressing disbelief.

Kim narrowed her eyes, trying to recall why she had told the lie to Len. And then it hit her.

She smiled, her mouth open, and looked out the passenger window. She tisked.

“What?” Len asked.

She shook her head. “Oh, Len,” she said.

He waited.

“You showed your hand,” she told him.

The spark of excitement that ignited in her chest was almost unbearably good. Her mood shifted again, to almost euphoric, even while so many dangerous lines were being drawn right around her.

Playing games, she thought to herself, making her mouth turn up in a sexy smile that in turn made Len’s cock visibly thicken, was a lot of fun.

A lot of fun.

“So I did,” Len said.

And so, while everything else might have been completely unclear, Kim could be sure of two things: one, that Len was watching her on the cameras he’d installed, and two, that he was impressed with her that she had figured it out.

Which made her very oddly happy. And aroused.

Jessie didn’t like telling Kim lies, even if they were white lies that would hurt no one, and even if they were lies told with the end goal of making his fantasies come true.

Sort of.

Or would she have her lips around Len's cock, and look over at him guiltily just as Len grasped the back of her head and emptied his load into her throat?

He sat in the new apartment, staring at the walls, jerking off when he imagined scenarios with enough detail, jerking off mostly to scenarios in which Kim broke their rule and swallowed Len's cock, or let him pound her pussy in wild positions. Why was it the thought of Kim fucking Len, looking Jessie right in the eye as she did it, that made his cock swell instantly? Why did his thoughts always turn to that painful image, again and again?

Why was he setting a trap for Kim to fall right into that exact scenario, and hoping she did it, while he simultaneously hoped that she wouldn't?

He had never purchased a ticket to Tampa arriving at seven-thirty. He hadn't shared his plan with Len, but he sensed that Len would know, when Kim told him that Jessie was going to be late, that Jessie had planned it all along. It had been, after all, Len's suggestion, in a way.

His stomach sank as his phone rang, Kim's pretty face appearing in the circle next to her name. She was probably indecisive. Likely calling to ask if she should go to the party or not.

He knew Kim had a strange attraction to Len, and thinking about her going to the party ahead of time sliced through him like a razor. He wondered if she would, and he didn't want to actually answer the phone and tip her in one direction or the other.

So he let the phone go to voicemail.

And waited, trying and failing to keep his thoughts from wandering to the painful and erotic images of Kim bouncing on Len's lap, his cock buried in her pussy, the sloshing of it loud in his ears.

Kim took a glass of wine from Michelle and smiled woodenly. Michelle was saying something to her about her dress, and Kim was answering her, but her mind was all over the place. Her face felt hot, and she was resisting the urge to fold her arms around herself and try to disappear into the woodwork, as well as trying to keep her eyes from darting all over the place out of curiosity.

She didn't want to look like what she was: a person who had never even thought parties "of this kind" actually existed until about a week ago.

The wine turned out to be champagne, which Kim hated, but she drank it anyway, grateful to have something to do with her hands. Len had guided her into the party with his hand flat on her back, right where the dress dipped low, so his skin was hot on her spine and his hand was the only thing she could feel, as he steered her through the house, introducing her to people.

Everyone had clothes on. Everyone had clothes on and looked extremely normal, but somehow Kim could feel a difference in the ambiance of this party. It was hard to say what was different about it, compared to other parties. It was just the vibe: the potential for sex was hanging in the air somehow. Everyone touched each other in a lingering way, just a little longer, a little more suggestively, than at an ordinary party.

Everyone – men and women – that Len introduced her to had moved their eyes salaciously over her body, and then smiled, and then said something like, "I hope to see you later."

She had found herself very unexpectedly grateful to Len, who had shook his head and commented that she was just an observer at each of these interactions. It only made her feelings for Len more confusing, since he was being unexpectedly thoughtful (not a word she'd have ever thought she'd consider using in relation to Len). She felt protected by him, rather than annoyed into her senseless, almost competitive state with him.

Michelle was gushing about Kim's dress. Kim was trying not to look around, but she wanted to see what was happening around her. How long would the party be like this, just a regular party with people talking and drinking? Would they... she didn't know, play games, or ring a bell, or clap hands to indicate that the party was "that kind" of party? Not knowing was making her stomach coil even tighter.

“Kim,” Len announced suddenly, “got this dress from her gym guy.”

Michelle was drinking some champagne and raised her eyebrows over her glass. She was wearing a white dress that looked as if it had been painted onto her, and Kim was noticing for the first time that it was made of a pearly, semi-transparent material that Michelle’s tan skin showed right through. Her nipples, tiny pebbles in a large round sea of aureole, were completely visible through the material. Kim’s eyes dropped briefly to Michelle’s lower body, but she wasn’t brave enough to linger there and find out if Michelle was wearing any underwear, or to look directly at whatever was showing through the fabric down there.

Her neck burned. She focused her eyes rigidly on Michelle’s bright blues, framed by an intense, slutty amount of black mascara that gave her a vaguely whoreish appeal.

“This is the black guy?” Michelle practically screamed, sending a hot flash along Kim’s cheekbones. “The one you’re not sure about? Did you fuck him already?” Her eyes moved over the dress again. “You did.” Michelle talked fast, answering her own questions. “I can’t believe what a little slut you’re turning out to be – no?”

Kim was shaking her head, and Michelle had finally noticed.

“He bought you that dress and you didn’t even fuck him yet?”

Michelle smiled and took a gulp of champagne, shrugging in a way that Kim interpreted as “nice work.”

Kim took another glass of champagne when it was offered to her, and stood awkwardly for a few minutes, not sure what to do.

“Oh, there he is,” Michelle squealed, extending her arms toward an arriving guest. Kim took advantage of the moment to drop her eyes to Michelle’s crotch, where she saw that Michelle was not, in fact, wearing any panties, and that Michelle did not have any pubic hair, and that the dress was, in fact, more transparent than she had originally thought. In fact, it was more the color of an inexpensive plastic bag, somewhere between transparent and white, than anything else.

Watching Michelle bounce as she embraced a large, beautiful black man who had headed straight toward her, Kim found herself casting an odd wish into the universe: that her own dress were somehow sexier. She looked, she was starting to realize, out of place. Everyone around her was dressed like Michelle. Perhaps that had been the vibe she couldn’t put her finger on before.

Almost as if he had read her mind and wanted to reassure her of something, Len's finger traveled pleasantly up her spine and then back down again. A wave of gooseflesh washed over her shoulder blades and the back of her right arm, which made her cringe, hoping Len hadn't noticed.

But Len was leaning forward, his free hand out to grasp the hand of the black man. "Hey man," they each said in turn, smiling. Michelle snuggled herself into the crook of the black man's arm.

And then he turned his gaze to Kim, and a wave of wild arousal and near-vomiting queasiness washed over her at the same time. "And who is this little doll?" he asked. His eyes moved up and down her body in such a heated way that Kim actually felt like her dress was being peeled away from her skin.

"This is a friend of ours, Jade," Len said, giving Kim another stroke on the back. Len's hand felt good, reassuring, sexy – and Kim felt terrible for not moving it, or pushing it away, because it seemed like it was over the line. She didn't want to give Len any ideas, but she also didn't know how to stop him.

Or really want to.

Michelle, meanwhile, looped an arm around the man's neck and pulled him down close to her lips to whisper something in his ear, which made him smile without taking his eyes off Kim.

The stare reminded her of Jay, even if this guy had dark eyes and not Jay's stunning green-blues.

"I'm Mike," he said, after taking another leisurely walk up and down Kim's body with his eyes. Michelle's hands were all over him.

The image was jarring, because Kim had always known Len and Michelle as a married couple, and now... this.

But at the same time, it was also not as jarring as she would have expected. It almost seemed natural. Maybe there was a way for this sort of thing to work. She stared at Michelle's white dress against Devon's dark suit and dark skin, as his hands moved with familiarity over Michelle's body. A thumb lingered on the nipple beneath the fabric.

Len's hand shifted on her back, and then slid away. Kim turned to look at him, and saw him leaning further and further from her to speak to another woman, thin and pretty but not quite as sexy as Michelle or Kim herself, in a black dress. The kitchen, where they were standing, was getting crowded.

Or maybe it just felt that way, as Kim's drunkenness took a quantum leap and she felt suddenly quite high.

Much higher than she should have felt from that one glass of champagne, which she looked down at in her hand and saw was only half-finished.

She looked at Michelle, who was smiling at her strangely. "Let's see what Mike thinks," Michelle shouted at her, because the noise in the room had gone up considerably.

Or had it? Vaguely, somewhere in the back of her head, Kim was starting to realize that her drink was probably spiked, though with what she didn't know, and her body felt impossible to move at the moment and her mouth felt as though it had never, ever done anything but smile pleasantly at people.

"What's that?" Mike was saying, his eyes on Michelle's body, his hands moving along her lean torso and then lingering on her nipples through the fabric of the dress. Kim stared at the way his dark thumb made slow, delicate circles over Michelle's nipples. She could almost feel his fingers on her own.

"Is there any way that Kim here scored that dress without fucking somebody?"

Mike looked over at her, his hands still all over Michelle. "I thought your name was Jade," he said.

Michelle murmured, laughing: "Jade's her alter-ego."

Mike made a sound something like, "uh-huh," thick with disbelief. "Is Jade a bad girl?" he asked her.

A breath left Kim's chest and caught in her throat. Her lips, she had no way of knowing, were glistening with the gloss she'd applied on them, and her gray eyes were especially seductive in the dim light she was standing in. She did, in fact, look just like a doll with the expression on her face, and Mike was thinking about how nice it would be to perform utterly filthy sex acts on her until she looked like a ragged whore.

Mike was waiting for her to say something, and when she didn't, he just smiled at her and brought a glass to his lips as Michelle whispered something else in his ear. Kim felt like she might fall over, and stepped back slightly, when Len caught her.

"I feel really drunk," she told him, still smiling. Len had both of her elbows and was giving her a gentle smile.

“Mich,” he said to Michelle. “What’s in this?”

Kim looked at Michelle, who brought her hand to her mouth in a caricature of a gesture indicating she had made a mistake. “Shit,” she said, not sorry at all. “There’s X in that.”

Kim had a sensation travel through her body that she supposed should have been outrage, became terrified for a millisecond, and then laughed.

Michelle put her hand on Kim’s arm. The sensation was unlike any she had ever felt, and Kim stared at her arm as Michelle moved her hand along her bare skin. “You didn’t have very much,” she said sweetly. “Just have a good time.”

Len’s hand was on her back, and it felt twice as delicious as Michelle’s as it made slow circles on her bare skin.

Fuck, she remembered thinking. She had no idea what was going to happen next, but she was pretty sure it was going to be out-of-bounds.

There was absolutely no word from Kim after eight o’clock, which Jessie considered both ominous and deliriously sexy at the same time. He checked his phone as soon as they had landed, and his heart fell when he saw that she had not called or messaged.

Didn’t she care where he was? Or was she so distracted by something – or someone – at this party that she had forgotten her husband completely?

He was shaking as he rented a car, so much so that the attendant seemed reluctant to give it to him. “You had anything to drink, tonight, sir?” he asked, the keys in his hand, his hand a fist resting on the counter.

“I’m angry,” Jessie had said dully.

The guy handed over the keys.

Jessie drove in a fugue state: he was at Len and Michelle’s place without any memory of how he had gotten there. A few nice cars were scattered around the place, and there were low lights in most of the windows. The front door was open, as if someone had left it that way while rushing in or out. Music, unidentifiable and low, emanated from somewhere in the house. It had a little bit of a college party feel to it, except in a much, much cleaner and far more expensive house.

The hallway and the kitchen were empty. Wine bottles were scattered everywhere. Jessie could see through the windows to the backyard, where three people were balled together on the porch having sex. It would have been a sight to make him stay and watch ordinarily: there was a redhead with enormous breasts bouncing on top of a less attractive man, his stubby cock visible as her heart-shaped ass lifted from his thighs. The sleek contour of a pretty woman with long black hair was kneeling at the side of his face, his fingers digging into the cleft of flesh along her spine. For just a second, his heart stopped beating, but the contours of her body were not like Kim's at all, her skin was too dark and her hair was too long.

Too much, he thought, moving into the house. This was all too much. He wanted to find his wife and get out of here. This had been a nice fantasy, and he had liked what he had seen on the video, and had hoped to see Kim with Hunter in real life somehow. Maybe he had even secretly wanted to see her slip up and sleep with Len, but this party was way too out-of-control, not what he wanted at all.

He wandered around the first floor, looking for Kim's sleek black hair, finding nothing in the many rooms. He moved upstairs and found the doors locked, but the sounds from inside of them did not sound like Kim.

Not really, anyway.

He spun around, having no idea what to do, when a door opened suddenly and a girl he vaguely recognized smiled at him. She was naked, with only a cheap-looking amulet on a leather string tied around her neck. Jessie tried to keep his eyes from wandering over her nubile body as she slid past him, smiling, touching his chest. "You're late," she said.

Jessie glanced into the room, and saw that there were two figures on the bed, naked as well. He turned to the blond, who was walking calmly down the hallway. "Hey," he said, in a whisper. "Hey -"

She turned to him and held a finger up. "I gotta pee," she said, and started to turn.

"Have you seen a woman, really blue eyes, pale, black hair? Anywhere? Or Len, or Michelle?"

The girl looked at him quizzically as she turned the knob of what he supposed was the bathroom. "I think they're out at the hot tub," she said, as if she didn't believe that they were at all. She narrowed her eyes as if she suddenly didn't trust Jessie, who must have looked odd in his button-up shirt, pants, and shoes, when everyone else was stark naked.

Jessie rubbed his forehead, trying to remember if Len had a hot tub at all. His stomach dropped: had he walked right past his own wife, after all,

and not recognized her?

No.

He continued down the hallway, peeking into rooms. Some rooms were locked, and he didn't feel like barging into them until he had no other choice: who knew what – or who - was behind them? In others, people were draped over each other on the floor and the bed, passed out, or nearly so. And in yet other rooms people were clothed and talking, as though it were any other ordinary party and waiting for a free bathroom. In one bedroom, two guys and a woman were sitting on the bed listening to radio static.

He wiped sweat from his brow and hurried downstairs. Why, why, why had he listened to Len? This wasn't the kind of situation he wanted to find his wife in. As he passed group after group of people who had either just had, or were still having, sex, or were otherwise too stoned to start, it became almost impossible to believe that he was going to find Kim in anything but a very uncomfortable position.

Outside. The air was cool: inside the house had become hot and humid, rank with the scent of sex. He passed the still entangled love triangle on the lounge chair: the long-haired woman had moved herself to a seated position on the man's face and the redhead was now licking his cock with short laps of the tongue, as if it were a lollipop.

Jessie's cock twitched: it might be making him nervous, but it was still turning him on in the most primal way imaginable.

Where would he find Kim? And what would she be doing when he did?

For a moment he imagined that the upturned face of the woman on the porch was Kim: Kim with her eyes half-closed in ecstasy, her hands pushing her breasts together, another man's tongue darting into the wet folds of her pussy.

But he kept walking.

The backyard, which he had never been into, he realized, was a lot larger than he had imagined. The garden was lush, and the path twisted and turned, opening up to gazebos and a pool, a small shed, a patio with dining furniture and couches, a striped pool cabana... everything but a hot tub.

Lights cast their glow on plants bordering the footpath; it gave him the eerie sensation of being on the grounds of an expensive hotel. He became disoriented very quickly, turning back on the same places he had visited already, his heart starting to pound in his ears.

A high, lilting voice pierced the relative quiet. Until then Jessie could only hear the ocean, mildly crashing on the beach, and his own blood thumping in his ears. “Oh my God!” and a splash. The voice was cheerful, drunken, tinged with a millennial-speech uptick at the end.

Michelle.

The voice laughed, Jessie followed the sound. The path continued to dead-end in sheds or air conditioning units or gates to the beach. His sense of sound felt distorted.

And then a shriek.

Michelle again. Behind him.

He whirled around and there the hot tub was, strangely in the very middle of the large yard. He had no idea how he’d missed it, except that large palms surrounded the area, obscuring it for what it was. The glow and the shifting reflections of the water should have been a dead giveaway, though.

He took the first turn into the area through the bushes and charged toward the large tub surrounded by a deck, but when he saw the unmistakable ink-black hair of his wife, spread on the surface of the water around her head, he stopped.

There she was.

His heart pounded slowly: doing what?

Suddenly, without thinking about it, he was retreating: his feet were taking him backward, tucking him behind the bushes, carrying him like a leopard through the fronds of Len and Michelle’s wacky fake jungle.

To watch.

His heart was still pounding, but differently now. Kim was in the hot tub, her black hair wet and slicked back against her scalp. Jessie squinted. Her shoulders were bare, no swimsuit straps clung to her shoulders. The white of her skin could be seen refracted on the surface of the water: nothing but white, shifting in distorted triangles and ovals of water, but the whole picture appearing to be: Kim was naked.

More importantly, more chillingly, Kim was seated between Len’s legs. Len was leaning backward on the deck surrounding one half of his hot tub at the level of the lip, which Jessie saw now was the same deck that led to the front of the house and which connected to the one on which the trio he had seen earlier were stationed by the door.

He had been wandering around for no reason, but that hardly mattered now.

Jessie saw it all in pieces, snapshots, each one of them jarring him like a punch in the gut: Kim's face was unusually blank, staring in front of her, looking a bit sleepy or drunk. Len leaning back on the deck, his bicep flexing and relaxing, whatever he was doing invisible but also clear – he had his cock out and was stroking it just inches behind Kim's head.

Michelle laughed, drawing Jessie's eyes to her. She was to the left of where Jessie was hiding like a voyeur. Her hair was dark from the water, her tan glowing, her breasts bouncing just to the level of the water and then up. A chocolate arm was wrapped around her body, fingers spread out against her throat, tipping her head back against a dark shoulder. Thick purple lips nibbled at her throat. Jessie saw all of this in his peripheral vision, because his eyes were fixed to his wife's vacant stare, and Len's flexing bicep. Len's eyes were focused on the bouncing figure of his own wife.

Jessie felt sick, but he continued to stare at the terrible scene on the other side of the hot tub: Len stroking himself right next to Kim's head, while they all watched Michelle bounce and splash on the dark man behind her. Michelle put on quite an acoustic show; her voice alone would have been enough to get most men off. She squealed and gasped, and then flung an arm around the black man. "Oh," she gasped. "I'm ready, I'm going to come all over your big, thick cock. Fill me up!"

It was over-the-top, porno-quality fake-sounding, but it seemed to do the trick for everyone. Len's abdomen flinched and his mouth fell open. The black man groaned and the water in the tub splashed violently as he thrust himself hard inside of Michelle, who howled in obvious pleasure.

Kim's eyes went wide, her mouth falling open a little.

Jessie's stomach was cool with jealousy, his skin on fire with arousal. So far, he thought, with a dry mouth, Kim was following their rule, as closely as possible without breaking it.

But almost as if his thought had floated into the air and been snatched by Len, Len leaned forward and pulled Kim's hand from the water. Her eyelids dropped as though he were sucking on her clit rather than taking her by the hand.

Len shifted to the right, turning slightly, his erect cock now visible to Jessie. It was pointing straight up, a great, veined, blunt instrument, thick and stout. It was inches from Jessie's wife's face.

Len still had her hand in his and was stroking it with his fingers. Len was no longer looking at Michelle and the black man, who were gasping out the final spurts of their orgasms.

Len was looking at Kim, all the while stroking his cock rapidly, in the final moments before he went over the edge.

Kim was still staring at the couple in front of her, her eyes glazed, her mouth open. She barely seemed to have registered Len's change of position, or that he was jerking off right toward her face.

Jessie watched, knowing what was going to happen next and not wanting it to. Yet he allowed it; he did not have the self-discipline to stop it. He couldn't say why he remained fixed to the same spot, silent, not interrupting, even if a cry of pain was tearing apart his chest.

Len brought Kim's hand to his cock. Kim's eyes were consumed by the black of her pupils, and she seemed to not even register the movement of her hand, the placement of her fingers around Len's cock.

But Jessie did. As Len wrapped his wife's hand around his dick, Jessie felt each finger dropping into place on Len's fat shaft like a kick in the chest... and the groin.

But he stayed where he was. Watching. Hoping to see more.

Len used Kim's wrist as a handle to pump her hand up and down his shaft. Jessie stared at his wife, who was still transfixed by the black man and Michelle, who were now kissing and caressing each other through the last shudders of their orgasm.

Was Jessie hoping that Kim would turn to Len, begin to move her hand, staring up at him with wide, affection eyes? That she would open her mouth wide, to receive the spurts of cum that would erupt, any moment, from Len's cock? Was it fair to let anger burn through him when Kim barely seemed to register what was happening... and when he was enjoying it so much?

Len was sitting with one leg up on the deck now. He had turned his body to face Kim from the side, his other leg in the water. He used his freed hand to reach for Kim's chin, and turn it toward him.

Jessie stared as Kim's vacant gaze drifted toward Len. She blinked slowly, her eyes taking in the sight of her hand on Len's cock. Her plump lips, open and wet, were just inches from the crown of Len's dick, which was shiny at the end with precum.

Her mouth moved. Jessie couldn't hear her words, just her voice: it was small, and whatever she said came out sounding like a question.

Len smiled, and touched her cheek with his fingers. His other hand dropped to her fist, which was still grasping his cock but not moving.

Jessie's breath stopped in his chest. In his peripheral vision, he saw that Michelle turned toward her husband, pushing herself out of the hot tub, her skin glistening and steaming in the cooler air. Her lover joined her, his hands still exploring the wet and slippery contours of her body.

They were both watching Kim now.

Kim, who seemed to be transfixed by Len. Kim, who was letting Len move her hand along his shaft but with disbelief in her eyes. Kim, whose eyes had dropped to Len's shaft and were staring at it like she had never seen a cock before, a slight smile on her lips, confusion playing out somewhat on her features.

Jessie could see that she was far too intoxicated for any of this to be strictly "fair," and he knew the right thing to do would be to intervene – if he really meant that Len was off-limits, if he really didn't want her to sleep with him.

But he was enjoying, in some perverse way, watching Kim stare at Len's cock. Len was pushing and pulling her by the wrist, slowly, and her fingers were sliding along the length of his dick without resistance.

Len looked down at Kim, his face becoming contorted by his approaching orgasm. He reached to her forehead and tipped her head back slightly, shifting his hips forward so that his cock was hovering closer to Kim's lips.

All the while, almost as though she were in a trance, Kim let his gentle pressure move her hand.

Jessie's insides were boiling, his limbs aching to move and burst in on the scene. But he was frozen to the spot.

Then, suddenly, Len grasped Kim's hand beneath his own, pumping his dick with Kim's beneath his on his shaft. He groaned, and his cum spurted out in enormous gushes. The first thick splash went over her head, but a long rope of it fell onto her face. The second burst of cum went right to her cheek and began to dribble down her white skin as a shiny, sticky river. Len pinned her hand tightly around his cock, pointed his dick down as he stood up on the leg that had been hanging in the water, so that he hovered over her face. The last bit of cum fell into Kim's open mouth.

Len stood over Jessie's wife, panting, his cock twitching the final splashes of cum onto Kim's lips and chin. Kim stared, as if she couldn't quite understand what was happening.

And then, as Jessie watched, dumbfounded and horrified – because Kim was never a particularly cum-savoring kind of girl – as Len placed his fingers in the creamy white cum and swiped it to Kim's lips. He fed it to her, two or three fingers at a time, his mouth giving her low, inaudible instructions, and her lips closing on his fingertips as if in reply.

Kim was definitely on some kind of drug, because she was far more enthusiastic about this than seemed realistically possible. Jessie's cock ached. He was as hard as he had ever been in his life, and he felt like someone had kicked him in the heart with spiked shoes. Part of him wanted to tear Len to pieces, spit on his wife and call her a whore, and the other part wanted to watch her lick cum from Len's fingers like this for another painful fifteen minutes, while he jerked himself off in the bushes if he had to.

Kim, however, suddenly snapped out of her trance, and looked around her, as if she just realized where she was and what she was doing. "Oh my God," she said.

But Len put his fingers into her mouth with a pearl of cum on them, and she still closed her lips on the tips of his fingers, confused or not.

Len pushed his fingers through her hair, probably rubbing some of his cum into it. He smiled at her. "It's okay," he consoled her.

"Jessie," Kim mumbled. "When is Jessie coming?"

She scrambled suddenly to her knees, the water at her waist. She turned around to face the deck chair. When she rose out of the water, Jessie was somewhat relieved – and somewhat disappointed – to see that she did have underwear on - but no bra. "Shit, when... oh, my God. Where'd I put my phone?"

Kim had a semi-hysterical, voice on.

Len pushed her hair off one shoulder and the touch of his hand turned her around to sit back down in the hot tub. "Don't worry about it," Len said. He cast a sinister glance at Michelle before tipping his head to lick Kim's ear. "He texted me, he'll be here in a bit. Don't worry about it."

Kim brought a hand to her face and felt her cheek, up to her hair, where she must have felt the slick of Len's cum. She seemed not to believe what she had just done, because she was staring into the water.

“Okay,” Len said, suddenly, in a fatherly tone of voice. He pushed himself up. “Time to get this one out of the hot tub.”

“Oh no,” Michelle whined. She licked her boyfriend’s ear. “We were just getting started.”

Len was snapping on some swim trunks. He grinned at Michelle. “I’ll be back,” he assured her. “Come on, Jade. Let’s get inside and find you a place to crash.”

Michelle made a pouting sound. “What about Jessie? Is he coming, or not?”

Len smiled at his wife but didn’t answer her. He had leaned over the hot tub and hooked his arms under Kim, and was pulling her from the water as though she were a small doll. He pulled her with ease out of the water and up to the deck, placing her on her unsteady feet.

Kim took a step backward: now that she was standing it even more obvious that she was quite intoxicated. Len put her arm around his shoulder and then scooped her up in one smooth motion. “Back in a minute,” he said, and started to walk toward the house.

Jessie wasn’t sure what to do. His cock was so hard he could barely walk. He wanted to follow Kim and Len, and see if Len was planning more than to just put Kim to bed.

Michelle propped her elbows on the edge of the hot tub, facing the bushes that hid Jessie from the hot tub view. She was turned to face her black lover, though, and gave him a sexy smile. They began to kiss again, tongues darting in the air between their lips. “Wait,” Jessie heard Michelle whisper in a throaty voice.

He took a few steps backward and the cool breeze from the ocean crossed over his face, breathing fresh air into his lungs. The spell of watching Michelle with her lover, which in turn made him imagine his own wife with her own black lover, had broken momentarily, and Jessie collected his thoughts.

He trotted quickly around the bushes and toward the porch, scrambling up it and running toward the house, where he could see Len’s figure retreating toward the center of the home, where the stairs were.

He lost sight of them. He ran toward the large windows and sliding doors, his eyes fixed on the last place he could see the back of Len’s head and his wife’s flopping legs. But by the time he was inside the house, and rushed to the stairs, they were gone.

The stairs were long and wide: surely Len would still be on them, and visible, if he were carrying her up there. Jessie hesitated, a hand on the banister, his heart hammering at his head and his vision going blurry with rage, fear, desire, disappointment, arousal. He was about to start dashing upstairs when a fleshy movement caught his eye. He looked down and to the right, where stairs leading to the basement could just be seen, and Kim's pale skin against Len's arm was visible in the crack of space that allowed Jessie to see where they were.

He ran around to the left, and then the opposite side, and was panicking to find no stairs descending. He circled back around, and only when he was back at the foot of the stairs up did he see that behind a leather sofa a small walkway between the stairs up and the back of the couch allowed someone to access more stairs beneath the staircase to the second floor.

Down he went, his mind moving quickly and his body moving like syrup.

The lower floor. He had never been there, never thought about it, even though it must be there, because guests had to walk up several flights of stairs to get to the front door. It was cooler here, lights were on haphazardly, Jessie reached the floor and saw that a long hallway led to a room at the end, where he could see the corner of a bed, and Kim's foot on a white silk sheet, and the shadow of Len moving in the room.

He could hear Len talking to Kim, and the slurred speech of his wife, but not what they were saying.

He neared the room, stepping lightly, determined to stop whatever was going on, but not wanting to do it just yet... not just yet....

He reached the wall about five feet from the doorway, where he could see in. Len had his back to the door, Kim was reclined on the bed.

Len was tucking a sheet up to her chin. Then he put a finger to her lips, and Kim stared at him. She turned her head, and smiled, and then rolled her head from side to side. "I'm not supposed to..." she said. Her voice was slow and thick.

It was hard to get a read on what Kim was doing: she shook her head and said no, but then she returned to looking at Len with a flirtatious expression on her face. "I can't," she told Len, who had moved his fingers down her throat. She caught his hand just as it passed over her breasts and started to pull the sheet away from her body. The silk moved over her erect nipples like creamy gold, and Jessie was disappointed when she stopped Len's hand from revealing it all. "Jessie..." she said. "Where is he? I thought he was coming?"

Len tried to pull at the sheet again, and Kim caught his hand again. She shook her head. Jessie stepped closer to see better.

"Come on," Len purred. "You don't really think Jessie wants you to follow the rules, do you?"

Kim looked perplexed: her mouth fell open. She was staring at Len, who had pried her hand up and was gathering the sheet in his fist to pull the material down. The edge of it slipped over her nipples and snaked down to her torso.

Kim looked down and reached up to catch it with her other hand. "What?" she said. "I don't...of course he does."

Len brought the hand that was not bunching up the sheet to Kim's shoulder, and she eyed it suspiciously but didn't move away from it. Len's fingers stroked her soft skin, down to her collarbone, tracing a path right between her breasts.

"Len -"

"I happen to know that Jessie wants you to break his rules," Len purred.

"Len -"

He was tugging with his finger at the center of the sheet. Kim's hand dropped to stop him this time. Her eyes were on his.

"Why else would Jessie not even try to get here on time?" Len asked.

Kim did not release her sheet, or move her hands, but her lips closed and she narrowed her eyes for a moment.

"Wh – what?"

Len left the sheet, and when he did, Kim pulled it up to her chin with her hand. The sides dragged to loosely cover her breasts.

Len appeared to be giving up. He gave Kim a playful pat on the side of her bottom, and stood up. "Jessie never even had a ticket, Kimmy. He might have a ten o'clock ticket, but if that's the case... where is he? He wants you to be here alone, he wants you to break the rules. He just doesn't know how to ask for it."

Kim was staring at Len, open-mouthed, and had said nothing. Jessie saw Len's shadow moving, and realized he was walking toward the door. Jessie stepped back quickly and felt the cold of another room behind his back. He stepped into the darkness of the room, which seemed to be unfinished, smelling dank and like cement. He stepped back further, until he felt something at his feet, and hoped he was far enough into the dark that Len would not see him when he walked out.

If that's what he was doing.

A long few minutes passed, during which Jessie was afraid to move, and he could hear Len's voice, low and deep, and not Kim's contra-alto in response. Jessie was about to step toward the room again, convinced that Len was managing to seduce Kim after all, when he heard the door click closed and for a freakish second was falling through the sky, ready to vomit or scream.

But Len passed by right in front of him, just as he decided to step forward, stopping Jessie's heart inside his chest and freezing him to the floor, blood pounding, for a full five minutes.

Cold inside, he finally forced his feet to move. He didn't know where to go or what to do. When he reached the hallway he looked to the left. It was empty, and Len seemed to have gone up the stairs. The sounds of the party trickled into his head, through the ringing of his own tense blood pressure and the thumps of his own heart in his head. His body felt as though it were being moved by someone else as he walked toward the end of the hallway where he knew his wife was, behind the closed door.

The only light came from the end of the hallway where the stairs led back up to the house. He fumbled around for the door handle, found it, and turned it slowly. When it reached the end of the turn, he paused, wondering if he wanted to open the door and confront his wife.

He closed his eyes, and pushed the door open slowly.

Kim was lying on the bed, the sheet over her body, her head to the side and one arm draped casually over her head. Her eyes were closed and she appeared to be asleep. She looked like an angel. He stared at her for a few moments, waiting to see if she would stir, or open her eyes. But her face did not flutter, or move, and he walked toward the far end of the bed to stand over her, where Len had been, presumably, sitting or standing when he had been talking to her.

"Kim," he said. His voice was soft, low, and only when he heard himself did he realize: he didn't really want to wake her, though he couldn't be sure why. Maybe he was afraid to face her, maybe he didn't want to make anything he had seen a reality.

Maybe he wanted to see if Kim would tell him the truth, the next morning.

She didn't stir. She was leaning on one hip, with her legs curled in a u-shape that left enough room for someone to sit. He lowered himself cautiously onto the bed. It was slightly damp, confirming that Len had been sitting there. "Kim?" he repeated feebly.

Nothing. He reached for her forehead, and traced his fingers over her skin. She was cool and smooth, but his fingers distinctly felt the patch of slightly rough dried cum that Len had so carelessly wiped from her skin. The cold, sensual jealousy that he had felt wound itself around the center of his body and squeezed, and his already hard cock throbbed painfully.

Jessie stared at his wife, thinking nothing that could be considered a fully-formed thought. Flashes of what he had seen appeared and dissolved in his mind: Kim's hand on Len's cock, the cum on his fingertips being fed to her, her lips closing around Len's fingertips. Len's voice: Jessie wants you to break the rules...

He rose, unsure of what was motivating him to do so quietly, creepily, not wanting to wake his wife.

And then he retreated from the bedroom, giving one last glance at his wife as though he would catch her with her eyes open, staring at him.

But she was still propped on the pillow like an angel, lips slightly parted, well and truly asleep.

He closed the door as silently as he could, and then walked down the hallway in a daze, not knowing where he would go, or what he would do.

When he emerged from the basement, the living and dining rooms were occupied by more people than he remembered being there when he had descended. They were wearing clothes, or robes, and standing around or draped on the couches, as if it were a very normal but sensual party. His head was spinning.

No one paid him much attention as he wandered to the kitchen, where he found a bottle of whiskey on a counter littered with bottles, and he found a glass half-filled with melting ice so he poured some into it and drank it quickly with a shaking hand.

He looked out of the windows at the backyard, to the cluster of palms and ferns that fenced off the hot tub. He would never know how he got from there to the hot tub, and the things he passed were just a blur. He had poured another drink and finished it by the time he reached the deck and stepped down to head to the hot tub, the steam leading him toward it.

“Jessie,” Michelle’s voice purred, before he even saw her. He had just cleared the plants and the scene was opening up, materializing before him. Michelle was stretched out in the water across the lap of her black lover. She pulled herself up by his neck and turned around, seated against him like he was a chair, and smiled. “There he is,” she said, her eyes locked on his.

To his right, Jessie was aware of Len. Standing, swim shorts on, tattoos glistening. He was turning toward Jessie, holding a glass.

“Buddy,” he said, extending his muscled arm. “You are really late. Give me that glass, I’ll get you a drink. Kim is out cold, I’m afraid...” he was saying.

Michelle was laughing mischievously. Her eyes were on Jessie, her hands sliding down the muscled arms of the black man behind her. “I gave her something in her drink,” she was bubbling. “Accidentally. I’m so sorry.”

Michelle was anything but sorry. She was naked, and her big, beautiful breasts were perched just at the surface of the water, nipples erect. Her lips were distended and rubbed clean of the lipstick she usually wore. Beneath her eyes, her mascara had left a dark, clean smudge like a purposely applied smoky eyeliner. She looked incredibly whoreish, still beautiful, but slutty as fuck. And she was smiling at Jessie like she wanted to consume him.

Len had taken the back of Jessie’s hand in his own, gripping firmly beneath the glass. The weight of the empty glass Jessie had been holding went away, and an ice-cold, heavy one replaced it.

Jessie tore his eyes away from Michelle to look at Len.

Len set Jessie’s empty glass on the table, took up his own glass of brown liquid with no ice, and looked at Jessie over the rim as he took a sip. “I’m afraid you’re a little late for Kim,” he said congenially. “But you should take a dip in the tub.”

Jessie was shaking inside of himself. “What did I miss?” he heard himself saying.

Michelle leaned her head back against her black lover, who brought his mouth to her neck and sucked on it. She laughed, a low purr from the back of her throat. Len sniffed and took a sip of his drink.

“Come on Jessie,” Michelle said, her hands moving under the water. “Just come into the hot tub and relax.” She brought a finger up and beckoned him.

Len turned and sat down on a lounge chair, an amused expression on his face. He set his drink down on the small table next to him. Jessie looked to him for some clue as to what to do, but he was staring at Michelle and her black lover, and seemed as lost in what he was watching as a man watching a football game.

Michelle turned toward her lover and started to kiss him. Their kissing was the sort of kissing people do for show, or at least it seemed that way: graphic, wet, tongues outside of their mouths. Feral.

Jessie’s cock robbed his limbs of all the blood that remained in them, and he started to feel dizzy. He backed up, unable to take his eyes off the pair. His calves hit a lounge chair, and he sank onto it, sitting on the edge of it, his elbows on his knees.

If Michelle and her man knew or cared that they were being stared at, it didn’t show. She was climbing on top of him, and they were kissing wetly. Jessie could see the shape of Michelle’s ass in the shifting water: small and hard, her legs on either side of the thick black trunks of her lovers thigh.

Jessie watched, frozen in place, not able to imagine extracting himself.

The black man’s hand slid into the pale-colored crack of Michelle’s ass, fingers probing, sliding along her flesh. Jessie stole a look at Len, who was watching them seriously now, an erection tenting his shorts.

He wanted to leave, in some ways. If there had been a way to extract himself without notice, he might have. But he was mesmerized. He stayed where he was, the alcohol he had pounded going straight to his head.

Suddenly the black man grasped Michelle and they emerged from the water. Michelle was wrapped around him and he lifted her easily even after her weight had risen out of the water. “I’m hot,” Jessie heard him say. Michelle made a noise and let him walk her across the hot tub to the edge closest to Jessie, where he set her down on the deck, fingers still slipping between her buttocks, fondling the pink eyelet of her ass that Jessie strained to see but could not.

They were at this for a while, while Jessie stared. He was starting to feel strange, lightweight, something other than drunk. Michelle lay back suddenly, the spectacular length of her body on the deck, her legs dropping off into the hot tub, the black man between her thighs. She made a catlike noise and a feline stretch with her arms above her head. Her breasts were firm and barely pooled on her chest. A black hand slid along her navel and between them, up to her neck, taking her chin in a firm grip as he pushed his hips against the center of her spread legs.

Jessie's eyes moved from Michelle's breasts in disbelief to the place between her legs, where he just managed to see a dark, thick column of flesh sinking into her. Michelle moaned and grabbed his arm with her hands as he pushed himself in deep.

He fucked her slowly, and it seemed like time had slowed or sped up, Jessie couldn't tell which. He was feeling stranger by the second and suspected that he, too, had been given whatever Kim obviously had ingested, wondered what it was, but found that he barely cared. The scene was so surreal, and he didn't want to leave it anymore. It wasn't really happening, he remembered thinking. It couldn't be.

Michelle sat up after a while, and clung to her man, his fingers sliding again along her ass. She was talking to him, saying something dirty, but Jessie could not understand it even if he could hear it. He was sure of neither.

The black man looked right at Jessie, and smiled.

Then things happened in very quick succession. Michelle was turning again, the black man was staring at Jessie with a grin, Michelle was on her hands and knees and crawling toward Jessie.

He stared at her as she rose up to her knees, the full glory of her body so spectacular that he lost his thoughts completely for a moment. Water snaked down the curves of her magnificent body and his eyes drifted to her bare pussy, the engorged gash of it swollen from the attentions of her lover, the skin around it smooth and shiny.

It took him a moment to realize that he had set down his drink, and that Michelle's fingers were working on his belt, his zipper, sliding over the contours of his hard cock while she smiled. The sensation of her touching his cock was like nothing he had ever felt before. He was sure his cock was going to explode.

Her fingers were on his bare cock now. He looked down to see that she had freed him, that his cock was erect in his lap, and her hand was wrapped around it. The head of his dick was wet and shiny with precum, and when the memory of Kim's hand on Len's cock flashed through his head his whole shaft surged in Michelle's hand, and she smiled.

Her lips were close to his. The black figure behind her had his hands on her wet body. Jessie dropped his eyes again and saw the black fingers curled from underneath, plunging into Michelle's ripe pussy. A sticky sound pumped rhythmically.

"Mike is going to fuck me in the ass," Michelle said, and Jessie's cock seemed to hear it before his mind did, pulsing against the pressure of her hand. This was so wrong, so not what he should be doing, but Kim was asleep, and Kim was a slut, and he didn't feel like he could move any part of his body. He could only feel his cock, pulsing and thick, and hear Michelle, who was still whispering close to his lips. "...because Len likes to watch me take a big, black cock in the ass and be a good little fucktoy. And I..." she paused to smile, "am going to suck your cock while he does it."

There wasn't much to do, he could hear himself in his own mind, somewhere feeble and getting dimmer with each passing second. It was too late, she was already lowering her head, getting on her hands and knees... "Mike" was already placing a large black hand on her lower back, holding his cock in his right hand and drawing sticky pussy juices from her slit to her asshole. Jessie's eyes moved maniacally from Michelle's mouth, and her black-streaked eyes, to the huge column of meat that Mike was pointing at her ass. It looked too big to even fit in her pussy, and yet it had.

He felt something wet and hot on the rim of his crown, moving along the ridge of it. Michelle was looking up at him, her tongue tracing a line around his throbbing head.

...be a good little fucktoy... Michelle's voice breathed dirtily in his head.

Kim's vacant stare washed over his vision, her hand on Len's cock, cum on her lips...

Mike pushed his pelvis forward, and Michelle's eyes closed slowly as her mouth fell open and her hand gripped Jessie's cock tightly. She didn't squeal, just breathed out on the head of his cock with her mouth open as the whole length of Mike's dick sank into her. "Oh!" she exclaimed, when his pelvis came to rest against her ass.

She opened her eyes, and looked up at Jessie. Her grip relaxed, and she smiled. Her eyes were wet, threatening to water over, and then Mike began to draw his cock slowly from inside of her. He grasped her hips, and thrust hard into her ass.

Michelle's eyes watered over, just a tiny tear from each corner of them, and she gasped, but her mouth grew into a wide, filthy smile, and her tongue left her lips, wet and busy, licking Jessie's head as Mike thrust into her a few more times. And then, her eyes on Jessie again, she opened her mouth, and took him inside of her, the heat and moisture of her mouth enclosing his cock all the way to the base.

Jessie fell back on his palms on the lounge chair, his abdomen spasming uncontrollably as his senses were overwhelmed. Michelle's body was jerked back and forth by the hard thrusts of Mike's shaft. He stared at her, and she met his eyes, and then he looked at the meat sawing away at her tiny hole.

It wouldn't be long before he exploded... he sucked in his breath as the orgasm coiled in his pelvis and balls. Michelle's eyes seemed to smile, and she released him, dropping her hand to the ground. His cock bobbed at her face as Mike pounded her from behind. The head of Jessie's dick hit her on the forehead, against her cheeks, and she lay her tongue out flat to lick his column. "Oh! Oh fuck, it's so big, oh!" she squealed.

She looked over at Len, who Jessie had forgotten was even there. He was smiling, had his hand on his own cock and was stroking it lazily. "Take it you little slut. Take a big load of cum in your little slut ass and then let Jessie fuck your mouth full of cum," Len said.

Jessie watched as Michelle smiled, and licked at Jessie's cock. "You want to fuck my mouth full of cum, Jessie?" she teased him sweetly.

Jessie stared at her, scarcely able to believe what she was saying.

A deep current of guilt ran through him, and his balls strung tight like a drum as Michelle raked her fingers over them and smiled:

"I want you to fuck it right into my throat."

Jessie's eyes went wide. Mike was slapping his thighs against Michelle's ass rapidly, hard, and the sound of it was almost grotesque. "Hold it just like that, you little whore, that's it, I've got a great big load of black cum for your tight little ass, I'm gonna stretch it out till it hurts," he was saying.

It was so lewd, so filthy, and Jessie could hardly believe himself as his hand went to Michelle's head, his fingers winding into her damp hair. Cradling her head, he shoved her mouth onto his cock, and he felt the contours of her throat as he bumped against her palate and she shifted to accommodate him, all the way down. Mike slapped against her harder, and Jessie pushed her face down, her chin hard against his balls, rocking slightly with the motion of Mike's thrusts. Jessie pulled Michelle up by the hair, and pushed her down again, thrusting his hips up as the orgasm boiled up from inside of him.

Mike was still slapping against her so fast now it was obscene. Jessie stared at his hands on Michelle's head, felt her tongue shift against his cock, sensed her gag slightly, and then he yelled as his cum burst into her throat. He felt her swallow – a wet, meaty pressure against his cock - drinking him up.

He released her head and she slurped as she let his flaccid cock fall from her mouth. Her eyes were watering, her face a whoreish mess, sweat, water and saliva glistening on her skin and lips. She looked up at him and smiled as Mike fucked her wildly until he yelled and buried himself deep, exploding, just as he had promised, filling her ass full of cum.

Reality was slowly sinking down around Jessie, as though from above: he had his cock in his hand and the scene was unfolding much like the moments after jerking off to a porno. Except that the porn star had put her mouth on his cock, and swallowed his cum... there was no escaping what he had just done...

But Michelle was not done. She leaned back against Mike, sitting on his knees as he rested on his heels. She reached a hand up to run her fingers up to his head, pulling him down to kiss her. She guided his right hand to her pussy, to her clit, and moaned as Mike took up a rhythm, stroking her with one finger while he plunged two fingers into her pussy.

Jessie stared at the scene in front of him, mouth open, his eyes fixated on the still-hard black cock he could make out beneath Michelle's squelching pussy. She leaned back against Mike's chest and brought a second hand up to his neck, to brace herself as he worked on her pussy, bringing her to a climax that made her tight abdomen roll like waves.

She squirmed on Mike's lap as she moaned and shuddered, enjoying the waves of her orgasm with intense pleasure, her eyes closed, her mouth twisted in her ecstasy. Mike slid his fingers from her pussy and brought them to her mouth. Jessie watched Michelle suck her own pussy juices from Mike's finger, her tongue slipping around the base of them the same way she had wormed around the base of Jessie's cock.

He had forgotten all about Len – in fact, time seemed to have stopped and he had forgotten about everything except the scene playing before him.

Len's voice gave him a jolt, then, when he growled from Jessie's right:

"Get over here you little slut."

And then he turned his face to Jessie. Jessie dragged his eyes away from Michelle, who was rising to her knees, pushing her sweaty hair around sexily, smiling. The fat black cock of her lover Mike was still inside of her, no matter how high she rose, it seemed to be never-ending.

Len was smiling at him, but had a hand extended in Michelle's direction and was beckoning her to him.

"You should imagine," Len was saying, and his voice was arriving to Jessie's mind as though through a syrup, "what it would be like if you were me, and this was Kim."

Mike had spun around, and was slipping down into the hot tub. His cock, it turned out, eventually did come to an end, and Jessie regretted not seeing exactly how long it was, how deep inside of Michelle's ass he had been.

Michelle, meanwhile, was crawling on her hands and knees toward her husband's chair. Len returned his attention to his wife. "Stand up," he ordered.

Michelle rose to her feet, smiling, and gave Len a slow, three-hundred-sixty-degree turn, holding her hair up for him to see the bite mark on the back of her neck.

Cum slid down the insides of her thighs, her nipples were red and swollen, and her slit was burst in the middle, no longer a neat line, but a distended, abused red fruit.

She stepped toward Len, who sat up to reach for her and push her around so that she was facing backward. "Let me see that ass," Len said.

Michelle climbed onto the recliner, placing one knee on either side of Len's extended legs. Jessie sucked in his breath, hardly able to wait for what he already knew he would get to see.

What it would be like if this was Kim...

Jessie stared, and his cock inflated violently, as Len put his palms on the two spheres of Michelle's ass, his thumbs pointed toward the center, where the evidence of her ass-fucking was nestled as though she hadn't just taken a huge black cock inside of her. His stomach felt cold as he did, in fact, imagine that instead of Michelle's tanned buttocks, the ass in front of him was white and slightly smaller, and that instead of Len's fingers, his own were pressing into the crack and pulling apart the flesh. He sucked in his breath as Michelle's asshole was revealed: gaping, red-rimmed, and dripping cum.

Len plunged his thumbs into the hole, and Michelle gasped. Len was pulling at her gape, tugging it open, making it gush with cum.

Michelle repositioned herself, lowering her ass toward Len's lap. Len's cock was so hard it was pointed straight up, and Michelle had only to reach behind her and push it slightly to guide the fat head to her stretched asshole.

She lowered herself slowly, cum from her filled ass rolling down the sides of Len's cock as she slowly sank onto him.

Jessie sucked in his breath and felt a pressure on his chest, thinking of what it would be like to sink his own cock into his wife's ass – her ass filled with the cum of another man.

Michelle rode Len reverse-cowgirl, while Len watched his shaft being pumped by his beautiful, used, filthy wife. Jessie stared, aware of Mike in the hot tub, staring, wondering how he could leave, how he could get in on the action, how he could go back to Kim and wake her up and convince her to come out here... his mind was flying.

Len reached up and put a hand on Michelle's shoulder, stopping her as she bucked on his cock. "Slow down, baby," he said.

Michelle paused. "Oh, I want you to come in my ass!" she complained.

"Yeah, you like it in the ass, don't you, you little slut," Len said. "But I want to fuck your little whore mouth."

Jessie was frozen in disbelief – this was the lewdest thing he'd ever seen or imagined – as Michelle smiled, rose onto her knees, and let Len's cock slip from inside her stretched ass. She looked behind her, toward Jessie. "Maybe Jessie wants to fuck me," she said suggestively. "I want some cock in my ass."

She was turning around, walking toward Len's left side, between him and Jessie's chair. She cast one hopeful look behind her, and Len spun around to sitting, facing Jessie. Michelle lowered her head and began to work on Len's cock, as Len held her head in his palm, looking over his slut wife at Jessie.

Michelle spread her legs so that Jessie could see her gaping ass, cum still occasionally oozing from inside of her.

He had never fucked anyone in the ass, and like a lot of people, it was a sexual adventure he wanted to have, but this was... this was Michelle.

Len was grinning at him. Jessie felt like he couldn't move. He looked over at the hot tub, where Mike was sitting, arms along the back of the bench, eyes fixed on Michelle as she sucked Len's cock clean of the cum from her ass and then drew on his shaft to make him fill her mouth with more.

He swept his eyes back to Len, who was grinning. "Please, man," Len said. "Do me a favor, and fuck my wife's ass. It's what she wants."

But he was distracted by Michelle, and leaned back to let her do her thing while he watched her.

Jessie stared at Michelle's ass.

"Better get in on that man," Mike said from the hot tub.

Jessie felt his body moving. He was sitting up, now he was standing, pulling his pants up as he did so. Michelle released Len for a moment and wrapped her hand around Len's cock to look up and back at Jessie. "Oh Jessie, come ooon," she said. "I want to feel my ass full."

Jessie's whole body felt numb. Len was no longer paying attention to him, Mike's voice was saying something, but Jessie's ears were ringing and he couldn't hear it.

He stumbled away, shaking his head, fastening his pants. He felt wildly drunk, disoriented. His feet were taking him back to the house, into the kitchen, down the steps, down the hallway.

He opened the door.

Kim was still lying, angelic, on the bed.

His cock was pulsing, painfully, against his underwear and pants. He let them drop to the floor. He shut the door, and fumbled in the darkness for a lock, which he found. Then he fumbled more for a light switch, and was pleased to find a dimmer and that what it turned on was recessed lighting. For a moment he was going to leave the light on, but a thought came to him in a flash, and he glanced around the room to get his bearings before turning the lights off.

He crawled next to Kim on the bed, and ran his fingers over her face, where Len's dried cum was still scratchy. The sensation was like lightning on his fingertips, and his cock was painfully hard. Memories of the scene he had witnessed played out in his head, in the darkness, the only light a feeble one from a window high on the opposite wall.

"Kim," he breathed, guilt about Michelle and anger about Len searing through him as he smelled the faintly bleachy scent of Len's cum on her damp skin. “Kim, it’s me.” He slid his fingers under the sheet, finding her bare skin, the silky thong that nestled between her buttocks. He stroked her clit and her ass through the fabric while breathing on her neck. “Kim, wake up, it’s me.”

Kim was stirring, but the murmurs she made indicated that she was still mostly asleep.

Jessie continued to explore her with his fingers, moving up to her breasts, then down again to her panties, beneath them, into the very wet juices of her pussy. “Kim,” he said.

Where the idea came from, he would never know. He was just doing it, before he even thought about why, or what would become of it.

“Kim,” he growled into the back of her neck. “It’s me.”

He ran his fingers over her earlobe, as his other hand found the eyelet of her ass, and drew her juices around it in a circle. “It’s Len,” he added, and a jolt of pleasure and pain snaked through him.

Kim made a noise, and moved her head a little.

But her body did not move away from him.

Jessie wondered how awake she was, if she knew that it was really him, or if she was even in a place of consciousness enough to think about it. Her bottom pressed against him as he dipped his fingers into her pussy, and stroked her hard clit. She rolled over and her legs were easy to butterfly. Jessie slid the sheet from her body and kissed down the length of it, pulling her thong away, struggling to move it down her limp body.

He finally settled for pulling it aside as he explored her pussy in the dark with his tongue. She was wet, her pussy juices tangy and sweet, and he enjoyed the darkness as he felt around her throbbing flesh with his tongue, waking her up, thinking of whether she knew it was him, or if she thought it was Len.

Her hands fell to his head, and she moaned. He massaged the face of her clit until he could feel her muscles tensing, and she was pushing him to her pussy.

Her body became more alive, and her mouth began to make words, but they were a string of useless pieces until she moaned, slurring: “Oh, Len, oh, I can’t, I can’t...”

Her hand, however, was still clinging to his head and pushing him to her pussy, and her legs were flopped open for him to lap at her.

She sat up suddenly, violently, so at first he thought she was coming, and pushed him to her, and then violently away. “Oh my God!” she whispered sharply. “Oh my... oh my God. You can’t... what are you doing?!”

Jessie rose up on his knees, and pushed her down, noting that for whatever she was saying, and whoever she thought he was, she did not resist him much. His cock throbbed. He wondered if she could see him: his own eyes were still not adjusted to the darkness.

He kissed her, pushing her juices into her mouth.

Her body went from rigid to limp, to rigid again. “Jessie?!” she said, catching herself at the end of her question, maybe because she realized how incriminating it was to act surprised that the man who awoke you by eating your pussy and kissing you was your husband.

He pulled at her panties, feeling the racing of her heart, the sudden dampness of her skin as her body reacted to the mistake she’d just made. Had she heard him tell her he was Len? Was cold guilt running through her veins as she lay back for him and let him plunge his cock into her wet pussy? Was she remembering now that she had Len’s cum drying on her cheek?

“Who did you think it was?” he growled into her ear.

But Kim did not answer. She just wrapped her legs around him, and pulled him deep inside of her, her hands pulling at his hair and digging into his shoulder.

He wondered what she thought about, as they fucked themselves to a blinding orgasm quickly.

But he knew that he was imagining her, instead of Michelle, doing everything he had just seen on the patio. And then, when the flash of her holding Len’s cock in her hand raced across the screen of his imagination, he boiled over, and thrust deep inside of her. He was angry, and jealous, and it was the hottest fuck he had thrown into anyone, ever.

It felt a lot like waking up at a party at university. It took a long time for Jessie to figure out exactly where he was, and for the memories of the evening to reconstitute themselves. Kim sat up when he opened the blinds, and then closed them quickly because they let out to the front yard. They were both naked and disheveled, and his head felt like someone had poured hot lava into it.

Kim held her own head. “Oh my God,” she said. “I feel terrible.”

This stung, even though Jessie himself felt terrible. “It was still a really...” he began to protest. But then he wasn’t sure how to finish the sentence. Fun night? Hot night? Those things were true, but the memory of the very bad, bad thing he had done surfaced and sent a wave of guilt slamming into him.

He looked at his wife. She was looking at him with a peculiar expression, like she felt guilty – and she should, about Len – but also queerly accusatory. As if she could read Jessie’s transgressions on his face.

He felt uncomfortable.

“That was wild,” Kim said, and her expression, and her voice, were very odd, but she was smiling, and looking around for her clothes. “I think I need you to find my dress,” she said. “It’s a red one, shit. I really need to find it.”

“Okay,” Jessie said.

Kim looked at him and laughed. “What if we say,” she said coyly, “‘What happens at Len and Michelle’s, stays at Len and Michelle’s?’”

Jessie opened his mouth.

“And then, go get brunch.”

It was too perfect. He knew that. Too easy of an out. But did he want to confront her about what she had done with Len? She was probably high, probably didn’t even remember it. And if she did, then he would have to admit what he had done with Michelle.

To be fair, he had also come here late, after lying to her about when his flight got in, in order to see the very thing he had seen.

Kind of.

God, it was murky.

But now this. Maybe, just maybe, this was Kim’s way of saying exactly what she said: it was a one-off, they could both get away with it, and leave it behind, and have brunch.

Jessie was the sort of man that knew things weren’t that simple.

But, weren’t most men aware of that? They were all optimists at heart.

“I think that’s a perfect plan,” he said.

Stark, raving, lunatic optimists.

CHAPTER 10

Kim stared at the message she had typed to Len, and chewed on her lip. She thought, briefly, about involving Michelle, but Michelle had... well, both fallen and risen too high in her estimation. And Michelle, she thought with a grin, was not really part of her plan, anyway.

She paused, thinking through her decisions, her thumb hovering over the “send” button.

Her heart was like an icy-hot fist in her chest.

She had thought it through a hundred times since Len’s party. She had things figured out now, she knew what she wanted, what Jessie wanted, and what Len wanted.

This was what she wanted to do.

But there was no going back, once she set all of this in motion.

A flicker of doubt flamed up inside of her, and she closed her eyes and pressed her screen to snuff it out. Her heart dropped through the floor, and her pussy clenched.

I need your help with something her text read.

She opened her eyes, set down her phone, and poured herself a glass of wine. Through the window, she could see Hunter’s house, starting to wake up for the day.

She probably had time... she mused to herself.

But her phone buzzed, and there it was:

Anything you want

This was it, she thought.

But she was smiling as she typed:

Come over. I don’t want to do this by texting.

Was she being too obvious? Throwing herself at him too easily after so much cat and mouse?

Maybe.

But it was too late. The text was sent.

Len let himself in, which didn't surprise Kim at all. She was sitting on the back porch, drinking a glass of wine, doing her best to seem as disinterested in Len as possible. She had been hoping that sitting there in her skimpy suit would attract Hunter over, so that he would be there when Len arrived, but the boys seemed to have gone out for the evening.

Len stepped onto the porch. "You know you really should lock your door," he said, in greeting. She lifted her sunglasses as he sat down on a footrest/table next to her, lifting her glass of wine and handing it to her. "You gonna make me a drink, or what?" he said cockily.

He was wearing a white shirt, the tattoos on his arms looking particularly manly today, his muscles coiled beneath his skin. It was really too bad he was such a jerk, although she had to admit to herself, finally, that something about his assholery attracted her.

She glared as she swung her legs over the side of the recliner and faced him. He let his eyes take a leisurely walk all over her body, and his mouth formed an arrogant smirk as he agitated a little. She stood up.

"What do you want?" she said, with mock iciness.

He slid a hand up her leg, as naturally as if he had permission to do that very thing, as though he had already concluded that she was having him over here to fuck him, and now he could touch her like that.

A shiver ran along her inner thigh, and she moved it away from his hand. "Drink," she said, slapping at, and missing, his hand.

"Whiskey," he said, looking up at her, amused.

She smiled, and sauntered into the kitchen. She knew her ass looked good in that suit, so she made sure to sway it a little.

After all, Len might be cocky, but she was not the type to... do whatever this was. She just hoped she had what it took.

She was behind the counter already when Len strolled in.

"So," he said, prompting her to tell him what she was up to.

"Soooo," she sang. Then she lifted her eyes from the glass she was arranging. "It's not what you think," she said.

Len smiled. "I'm not thinking anything, Kimmy. You're a damsel in distress and I'm here to help you."

She looked at him thoughtfully. She wondered if maybe he assumed she had forgotten what had happened that night at his house. Maybe he was just playing the same game as always.

Maybe he'd forgotten.

Or maybe none of her hazy memory of stroking Len's cock, or licking his fingers clean of his cum, had ever happened.

Sometimes, if she thought for too long about her memories of that night, she began to doubt almost all of them, right through having sex with Jessie. She knew it was real that she had been there, and she knew Jessie had taken her home, but as to the details between those bookends, she couldn't be positive about any of them.

But she'd been down this road before, she told herself quickly. She had decided that she remembered what she remembered, and she knew what she knew, about Len, about Jessie, and about herself.

The decision was made.

She unscrewed the whiskey and started to pour.

"The rules still stand," she said as she poured, looking at the whiskey. "So don't go getting any ideas in your head."

Len sat down on a barstool in front of the counter. "I am a man of ideas, Kimmy. I thought that's why you asked me here."

She smiled. She opened her mouth slightly, as though to say something, and then hesitated.

Coyly, she waited. If she gave Len enough rope, he'd tie himself up in it. She was sure of it.

"So what is it that you – or is it Jade – need my help with?" Len said finally.

A particular kind of satisfaction swelled in her chest.

"Okay," she said, and she poured herself a glass of whiskey. "So, it's this. I, uh, you know, after your party... I kind of want to go through with this thing with Jay. You know. The guy at my gy-"

"Oh, I know," Len said, his lip curling slightly. Glee was in his eyes, making them glitter. She could see that he was very impressed with himself for bringing her over to the – no pun intended – dark side. She had to restrain a smile. Len was going to think himself very clever, almost a puppeteer, right to the end. But he had no idea what she had come up with.

She almost couldn't believe it herself.

Kim cleared her throat. "So, uh... yeah, I'm kind of, I don't know. Embarrassed to say this. But, uh... I'm sort of afraid to, like, just... invite him back here. Alone."

"Why's that?"

Len looked as if he already knew the answer to this question, and only wanted to hear Kim say it. And if this hadn't been a game of her own, she probably would have been infuriated by the barely hidden smugness on his lips.

Instead, she feigned a bit of fluster, and bit into her thumb, before casting a look at Len. She was pleased to see that her words, on her expression, simmered visibly beneath his skin.

"I don't know. He's big. He's a stranger. He's... black. I'm sort of... intimidated by him."

She was looking at Len's face, but felt a triumphant rush as she saw the movement of his cock in his pants.

Len nodded, his smile even more obvious. "So what is it you want me to do?"

Kim stared at her glass.

She gave it a good few turns, drawing out the suspense. It surprised her how much she enjoyed playing games like this, seeing the effects of her teasing and scheming play out physically on a man like Len. Her spine tingled as she thought about the whole big picture, and she felt a little drunk.

"Okay," she said, and she had to will herself not to rush out with it, not to sound rehearsed. "You have to promise me that you won't tell Jessie."

She looked at Len. The gleam in his eyes practically flashed at her.

"I'm the soul of discretion," he said, lifting his glass to his lips.

"It's... technically very much against the rules," she said.

Len's cock swelled, and Kim caught it in the corner of her eye. Very satisfied with herself, she leaned closer to Len. "Here's my plan."

Putting everything in place for Len and Jessie, while tricky, had been the easy part. The trickier thing was Jay, and getting him to do exactly what she wanted him to do, no more and no less.

It was almost two weeks later that she put her plan into action – two weeks, because it had taken that long to align each piece of the tableaux she had created. She went to the gym on Monday, and ran for hours in the window of time that Jay normally appeared, but he didn't show up.

Her insides went into a freewheeling spin: without Jay, the whole plan would be a little pointless, and she had never thought for a moment that the downfall of her scheme would be that Jay just never showed up at the gym.

She returned on Tuesday, without reporting Jay's failure to appear to Len or Jessie.

She ran for an hour, and walked on the treadmill in a daze for another forty minutes, as she watched the gym in despair for the sight of Jay's black skin, damp with sweat, anywhere in the facility.

She dressed, trudged to the car, her chest crushed with disappointment, wondering if she could go shopping downtown and run into him the same way she had before, or if the dress store would give her his contact information. She was searching for the phone number on her phone, walking, and so when she heard his voice behind her she dropped the phone and jumped.

Electricity snaked over the skin of her back.

"I thought you ghosted me."

She clutched her gym bag to her chest and tried to pick up the dropped phone with grace. When she saw him, the carefully practiced act she'd been so successful at with Len started falling to pieces. "Hi. Hey, hi. Shit. Clumsy... I..." she wiped a strand of hair from her forehead.

Jay was wearing his usual gym uniform of gray shirt, loose black shorts. The shirt was clean, clinging to the defined muscles of his chest. He was moving closer to her, and she had no idea where to put her eyes. The memory of what she had seen at Len and Michelle's party elbowed its way into her mind, and her cheeks flushed so much that she could feel it.

"How'd your cocktail party go?"

"My... cocktail...?"

"Party, yes," Jay said, amused. "Did everyone like your dress?"

Her face flushed again, and her insides were in such turmoil that she felt she might just melt away right there in front of him. She needed to get herself under control.

Get it under control, Kim.

Remember what Len told you.

Remember what you want.

“The dress was... a huge hit,” she said sweetly, and felt herself righting the ship. Or at least steering it away from disaster.

“You looked good in it,” Jay said. More statement than question.

Kim opened her mouth to say something, hesitated, and then put a hand out to his arm. “I, uh... I haven’t seen you around, so I’ve been wanting to... you know. Thank you. For the dress.”

This was a statement so filled with innuendo that Kim had to actually bite the tip of her tongue to stop herself from saying something like “..by paying you back for it,” or “that wasn’t what it sounded like.”

Because she wanted it to sound like this: she wanted to pay him back for the dress.

With her body.

“I bet that dress looked good on you,” Jay said, sucking on his lower lip. He had moved even closer, and Kim could smell the scent of his skin. Her pussy throbbed. This was the perfect setup, she was thinking. She was about to get exactly what she wanted, all she had to do was not freak out.

But standing so close to a dark man like Jay, with the heat of his body and the steel-solid bulk of his body so close to her, she felt the urge to run away from the very scenario she had been hoping to create.

She smiled. “It did,” she managed to say, seductively. She hoped Jay didn’t detect the wobble in her voice. She kept her eyes firmly on his.

“I wouldn’t mind seeing that dress on you.”

Kim shuddered, and hoped that it didn’t show. It was exactly the opening she needed.

Don’t babble like an idiot, she told herself.

She took the time to count to five before she leaned in toward him. “So... you know that I’m married, right?”

Jay did not respond to this, not a nod or a shake of his head, or even a flinch. He knew. He just didn’t care.

Kim looked down at her feet. The thrill she had felt with Len was awakening inside of her, and she didn’t want Jay to see it in her eyes. “So, going out somewhere would be kind of, I don’t know... risky,” Kim said slowly.

These were lines that Len had fed her, a script that Len had written. She was acting her part superbly, and the words, she could sense, were working just the way Len said they would.

And why wouldn't they? As Len had said, no man was going to turn down a hot chick who said she just wanted to skip dinner and a movie and get straight to going to her place.

Jay was waiting. He had the patient expression of a jaguar, watching his prey, waiting for her to simply curl up inside his jaws, because that's what she was about to do.

"My husband is out of town this weekend," she said. "So... I was hoping to show you that dress. Maybe at my place?"

Jay's mouth smiled, only barely. He nodded.

He'll see exactly what's going on, Kimmy. Don't think you're the first white woman that's been after his cock because he's black. And trust me when I tell you this, Kimmy: no man gives a shit why it is some hot chick wants to fuck him. A hot chick wants to fuck you. End of sentence, end of thoughts.

"I was thinking Saturday," Kim continued. "Maybe... come by around eight?"

Jay was putting his hand into his gym bag. He took out his phone. "Better get your number, then."

Kim exchanged numbers with him by sending him a text:

Jade

She liked how he smiled, a little malevolently, sexily, darkly, when he read it. "Jade," he said. They looked at each other.

"Okay," Kim said, and then, more for herself, so she would leave before she stuck her foot in her mouth or somehow wrecked the intense sexual tension that was evaporating the air between them. "I have to... go."

"Look forward to seeing that dress," Jay said. He seemed to be even closer, because now Kim had to turn her head up sharply to look at him. Another snarl of arousal coiled in her abdomen and made her heart accelerate, another lewd visual from Len's party flashed through her mind. She didn't know, because she couldn't see her own face or smell her own skin, that she looked like a ripe fruit ready to be bitten, and that he could smell her arousal, faintly, under the light sweat that was soaked into her shirt.

"Off," Jay said, at some point in this disturbingly hot scene, and his hand was under her chin and igniting her pussy, as though his fingers were right down her panties and not on her neck, before her mind could even catch up with what he meant by “off.”

The dress, off, she thought, and could almost feel it slipping from her skin the way it had at Len and Michelle’s party, when she had agreed, druggedly, to take a dip in the hot tub.

The dress, off, Kim was thinking, as Jay’s lips, warm and dry and large, brushed over her own and plucked her insides into a vibration from head to toe. He sucked her lower lip into his mouth, where it was wet and hot, and she felt the tiniest graze of stubble on his chin, scraping over her own. Close to her, he smelled masculine and musky and different than any man she had ever been close to, and against her thigh she felt, definitively the contour of a very sizable appendage, not even fully hard.

Jay was already turning around, had already leaned back and said, “Saturday,” and walked toward the gym, when Kim collected herself enough to know what had happened.

The scratch of his stubble still burned on her chin. The back of her car was hot against her skin; he had pushed her into it without her even noticing. Between her legs, her pussy was so wet she could feel the slick of it as she walked unsteadily around her car and opened the door, so she could fall in and sit there, watching him walk into the gym, her heart pounding in her ears.

Step 3, she thought. Check.

Jessie usually worked on Saturday, or at least made an appearance in the office, more out of boredom than anything else. This Saturday, he arrived at seven-thirty after taking a run in the dark at the park across the street from their new, empty apartment.

Thoughts of Kim had kept him awake all night, his blood pumping furiously in his arteries, boiling in his veins. In his ears there was a ringing between the audible pulses of his heart. His chest was a place where shifting sensations felt like he was on fire and then suddenly turned to ice.

He gave some thought to calling Kim, to hearing her voice and her reassurances, to asking her if she could sleep when she had planned what she had planned for this evening. Was she lying in bed, thinking of Jessie? Or was she thinking of Jay, this muscular, tall, ebony man who was athletic and rich and had dreamy gray-green eyes set in his dark face?

Closing his eyes had only made things worse. When his eyes were closed he relived the scene at Len and Michelle's party, but this time, with his own wife's ass slapping against Mike's thighs, his own wife's eyes wide with astonishment at how big and thick Mike's cock was, his own wife slurping on cock after cock while a big black man fucked her asshole to a gaping, oozing mess.

He hated the thoughts but he jerked off to them; he wanted to see this depraved scene Kim was planning for him and he did not. He wanted Kim to be doing it only for him, only because she knew what his darkest thoughts and feelings were and she wanted to satisfy him, and yet he wanted her to be doing it for herself. He felt like a lunatic.

No one was at the office, not even his trusted gay assistant, Stew. He hadn't called him in, or given him any indication he would be there. He didn't want Stew popping in and asking him work-related questions when all Jessie would be doing, he knew, was staring out the window and waiting for the time for his part in Kim's plan.

"You're cutting it awfully close to the wire," Kim said, when she opened the door.

Len let his eyes move up and down her body. The dress Jay had bought for her really was a winner: her pale breasts were framed so nicely by the cut of the collar that it took a lot of restraint not to reach out and peel the fabric from them to improve the view. He lowered his gaze and took in the stockings. So she had gone with his advice. Good girl.

Everyone liked a pair of thigh-high stockings. Personally, he was not a garter man, he preferred the thick lace edging that held them to the thighs. He thought about asking what she'd gone for, but changed his mind before he opened his mouth.

Every now and then, he liked a surprise.

After all, he had told her: "Surprise me."

Len had, as he often did, just let himself into the house. Secretly, he had been hoping to catch Kim doing something naughty, but she appeared to have just finished getting ready herself.

Len sat down calmly at the kitchen bar. "It's seven-thirty," he said.

"I said eight," Kim shot at him.

"He's not going to be here at eight," Len told her calmly. He watched as she poured him a whiskey, enjoying the fact that she did it now almost as a habit, with a familiarity that implied so much more than just a friendly relationship.

He took a sip and looked at Kim over the edge of the glass. Every time he saw Kim he wondered exactly how far he would get with her – and it wasn't a matter of whether, but when, he would feel what it was like to be deep in Kim's throat with her smoky eyes staring up at him, or find out how tight her pussy was. That was all very pleasant to think about, and it would all be better if he could turn her into a raging slut wife who craved black cock while he waited on it. Because while fucking Kim was a goal of his, so was getting Kim to swallow a huge black dick because he wanted her to, and he was getting very close to achieving this second goal.

The important thing was, Kim and Jessie both believed it was their own idea.

Kim swallowed a few gulps of whiskey and looked at the glass. "You're right," she agreed.

"Nervous?" Len asked. He sounded genuine because he was: Kim had no way of knowing how hard it made his cock to think about how this was the first time she'd ever done a black a guy, and how nervous she was, and how she'd sat there attentively listening to him explain to her how to get a big cock all the way down her throat. If someone had told him Kim Young would be sitting across her kitchen table from him, listening to that advice like she was in a class, he would have bust a gut before he bust a nut. Sweet, prissy, napkin-on-her-lap Kim, eyes big and interested as he told her the best way to get a load of cum down her throat.

He wondered if she remembered licking his cum off her fingers. He pressed his fingertips together and felt his cock grow firmer as he thought about her hot little tongue around the tips of his middle and index fingers.

Kim was wiping a finger over her lower lip. She was a quick study, that Kim. Everything she did now she did in the sluttiest way she could think of, and he knew it was all designed to drive him crazy. But that was fine. He could wait Kim out. He could wait until she came crawling to him on her hands and knees to suck his cock.

In the meantime, if Kim wanted to fuck Jay the Big Scary Black Man with him on hand in case she needed rescue of some sort, so be it.

He thought about telling Jessie, but then he had decided to keep that one in his back pocket for some future time when he could maybe blackmail Kim into something he really wanted. Something very, very slutty, some line she might not cross without a little extra pressure.

Although, to be fair to Kim, she was becoming a pretty dirty girl pretty quickly.

"I think it's going to be okay. It's like, now that I know you're around, I'm not even worried about it." She gave a shrug, and it was almost a little too bimbo-like to be believable.

Len shook his head and smiled. He couldn't tell with Kim, sometimes. It could be her that was taking him for a ride.

He grinned. Oh well.

He looked at his phone. "Cameras are on?" he asked, getting down to business.

"Cameras are on," Kim said, and she was tracing her fingers over the counter thoughtfully.

"Better text Jessie and make sure it's all good."

Kim took out her phone and texted Jessie, while Len watched her. She had a little grin on her face, and he wondered, but never dared ask, if she knew or suspected at least, that he had helped himself to the code to her video software and had watched her masturbate for her husband.

Kim was no idiot, but she was also no good at lying, so he would never be sure without asking her, and the thought was sort of fun for him as an unknown.

"Okay," she said, holding the phone in two hands breathlessly. "Jessie says it's good. Oh!"

She wiped her fingers over the screen. "And Jay is coming."

Len reached for the bottle of whiskey and pulled it toward himself. "I like to have a drink," he said, smiling. "Where do you want me?"

Kim pushed her hair over one shoulder and leaned her elbows on the counter. The dress dropped and he had a fine, beautiful view of her breasts, the creamy white of them, the caramel pools of her aureole. She had her fingers close to her mouth again, and her eyes were wet and wide. "Well," she said, in a low and seductive voice – quick study, Len noted again – I don't think you should be in the bathroom, you know, because he could go in there. So what if you're in the guest room?" She smiled. "I've sat down behind the door and if you leave it half-closed you have an angle right to the bed."

Len smiled. He took his drinks and walked upstairs. "I'll go see."

"He's probably like thirty minutes away," Kim said, as he started to walk toward the stairs. "You don't, you know..." she was typing on her phone, presumably to Jessie, unable to finish her thought because she was occupied by whatever she was saying. She finished, brought the phone close to her chest, and smiled at Len with what – he would realize later – was something like relief. "You don't have to be up there just yet, I mean. But you can. If you want to. It's... up to you."

Len would later think about how that moment had seemed a little off to him, and how he should have known then what he would find out later, but his dick was too hard and his mind too far ahead on the way he would get to see Kim fuck a black man, through a crack or not, that the thought fluttered through his mind and evaporated, and he walked upstairs.

It seemed like an eternity before they finally came upstairs, but it really wasn't. There, in the dark, cramped as he was behind a door with only a sliver of space that allowed him to see the bed, he was hot and growing impatient.

And then he heard them coming.

Jay's voice was low, and his appearance no surprise when the man whose baritone was echoing all over the house appeared in the bedroom. He was enormous, and hard muscle stretched against his expensive shirt, which had already been loosened by Kim in the twenty-some minutes she had spent downstairs, offering drinks and flirting, pretending that anything other than sex was going to happen between them tonight.

Now, the flimsy pretense of "dinner" was over.

Kim had been worried about the cameras getting noticed, and so Len had blocked the red light with a piece of electrical tape. But a man who has a married woman practically throwing herself on his cock isn't going to take a look around for cameras, especially not if that woman is as hot as Kim.

Or maybe he did see them, and he didn't give a shit.

Kim surprised him by climbing onto the bed right away, legs apart, hair loose, lipstick slightly smeared and giving away that this big black man had been sucking on her mouth downstairs in those lost twenty minutes.

She gave her hair a toss, and let her hands travel down her body to the hem of her dress.

Jay was unbuttoning his shirt. "I see," he was saying, though what exactly he saw was anyone's guess. That Kim was more of a slut than he had imagined? That's certainly what he was seeing for himself. His cock pulsed, but he left his clothes on and left it alone: he didn't want to miss a second of the arousal he felt from just watching. Kim was turning out to be much more of a performance artist than he ever could have imagined, and he couldn't quite believe what he was seeing.

Jay's suit pants dropped to the floor with a heavy thud. His legs were thick like tree trunks, and the dress shirt that covered his ass billowed as he unbuttoned it and peeled it from his shoulders.

Kim, still perched like a whore on the bed, her hands playing with the hem of her dress, watched him, and her gaze scanned the chiseled muscle of his chest only briefly, before settling on his cock, at which point her eyes widened visibly.

Jay had his cock in his hand, and from this angle it was hard to see it exactly – but based on how far Jay's hand was moving as he stroked himself lazily, it was a considerable appendage.

On the bed, Kim looked up at Jay, and for a moment it looked like she was going to back down, because astonishment bordering on fear flickered in her eyes. "I've never..." she said, and then her eyes went back down to his cock. "I've never been with a guy... so big."

"You never been with a black guy, either, have you?" Jay asked.

Kim looked at him, and her mouth turned up slightly as she shook her head almost imperceptibly.

"That's all right," he told her, walking his knees up onto the bed, cock still in his hand. "We'll take it nice and slow."

He dropped his cock, and it bobbed slightly but came to rest burgeoning in front of his hips, and now he could see that it was thick – thicker than Michelle's lover Mike's, and sizably long, smooth and almost purple, with only one gnarled vein marring the otherwise perfect contour of it. It was going to stretch Kim wide open.

Kim's eyes had come back to it, and she was staring. Jay took her hand with his giant, black paw, and her porcelain doll-sized hand disappeared in his grip until he placed her fingers around his column, and let go of her hand.

"That the biggest cock you ever touched?" Jay asked, watching her face.

Kim said nothing, just stared at the big cock in her hand and nodded weakly.

Jay's other hand appeared on the opposite side of her face, and touched her lips, before pulling down on her lower lip until her mouth hung open.

His cock was aching now: he wasn't sure he could watch this entire scene without blowing up.

"You're gonna suck on that cock for me, aren't you? You want to taste it."

Kim stared at him, mesmerized.

"Take that dress off for me, first, baby doll."

Kim let go of Jay's cock, and he moved his hand lazily to hold it as she slid her hands down to her hem and started to pull the dress up and over her head.

She wasn't wearing a bra – it was the kind of dress that looked better without it, and Kim's tits were spectacular and firm, and bouncing a little as the fabric tugged them upward and then slid away from them. Jay's hand stopped the slow stroking of his cock for a moment as he appraised the red silk thong, the red lace that wound around her thigh-high stockings.

She had gone with the thigh highs, he noted, and not the garter. He liked the choice.

Jay was making a noise of approval – who wouldn't? - and his hand moved to her thigh, where the lace top of the stocking wound around her leg. His hand was dark as char against her white skin and he could hold her whole thigh in his grip, which he did, maybe just to show her that he could, before he slid a finger under the lace and along her inner thigh. He moved his fingers back up, over her skin, along the hem of her panties.

Kim, maybe after seeing Michelle's shaved pussy, had evidently taken herself for a wax, because Jay murmured, "That's what I like, a nice bare little pussy."

Kim seemed a little lost as to what to do, so her hands were hanging loose at her side as Jay plunged his fingers beneath the fabric and played with what was beneath her undergarments for a moment. His hand traveled to her left breast and he swiped a thumb over her nipple, making it rise to an erect, tiny column before he rolled it between his thumb and forefinger, hard enough to make Kim gasp slightly.

Her breath was making her rise and fall slightly, but Jay had pushed his fingers into her pussy and held her impaled on his hand.

His hand traveled up to her neck, pushing her hair to one side as she had done earlier that evening. Back to her lips, playing with her lower lip again, slowly, while Kim stared at him with a dewy expression, captive to his alpha stare. And then his fingers wound around the back of her head, entwined in her dark tresses, and he leaned back on his ankles as he pushed her head down toward his huge cock.

He bent her over neatly, his thick black arm long enough that he could keep his fingers buried in her pussy and push her ass up toward the ceiling with one arm, while pushing her head down to his cock with the other.

But he must have been holding her head by the hair, suspended, because her lips hovered over the tip of his cock, just grazing it. His left arm, the fingers of his hand deep in her cunt, flexed, and Kim gasped audibly.

“Lick it for me,” Jay growled. “Give it a little tease.”

Kim’s tongue left her mouth, pink and tiny, to swirl around the shiny, wet, head of Jay’s cock. Beads of precum were bubbling from his hole, and she was lapping them up with her licks.

“Now kiss it,” Jay told her. Kim obeyed, planting her lips in two pretty pink pillows around his dark meat.

“You think you can swallow the whole thing?” Jay asked her. “Hmmm?” He moved his hand in her pussy, and the sound was audible even in the hiding place: Kim’s pussy was sopping wet. Jay played with her pussy for a while and then slipped his hand from inside of her, eliciting a moan of disappointment from Kim.

“Don’t you worry,” Jay growled. “Daddy’s gonna make you scream. But first you’re gonna try to get all this cock in your mouth. You gonna be a good girl?”

Kim looked up at him, and responded by licking his column from the base to the tip with her eyes on his.

“That’s what I thought.”

Kim grasped his shaft in her hand, and brought her mouth close to the end of his cock, but Jay stopped her with a tisking, “ah-ah-ah.”

He took her hand and pulled it behind her, then, jerking on her thong underwear enough to make her gasp as the fabric sliced into her gash, he tucked her hand into the stretched fabric, pinning it to her back. “No hands,” he growled.

Kim could only support herself with her other free arm, and so she leaned on it as Jay steadied his cock so she could open her mouth and take him into it.

She swallowed the first four inches of him quickly, her lips stretching wide and her cheeks puffing with the effort of breathing. As the next few inches of his cock disappeared into her mouth, she slowed down, and a ripple traveled along her abdomen as she gagged. Jay pulled on her hair, sliding her mouth up a few inches of his cock before freezing her in position there. “Take it nice and slow, but you can do better than that.”

Kim slid down his cock again, her nostrils flaring as she struggled to manage breathing, and paused at the same place she had struggled before, before descending the great meaty column another inch.

“Come on,” Jay urged her. “Keep on going. You can do better than that, little girl.”

He pushed on the back of Kim’s head, and her stomach rolled again as she gagged. But she kept going, taking another half inch into her mouth. By then, she had swallowed a good six inches of cock, which was enough to get her to the base of an average dick, but there were still four or five inches of purple meat to go before she would even look like she was swallowing Jay’s cock completely.

She pushed up against Jay’s hand, and he let her release his cock. She was panting, gasping for air, and she looked up at him, saliva falling down her chin.

“That all you got?” Jay taunted her. “You can do better than that, baby doll. Come on now, take it all in...oh yeah, there we go...”

Kim had started again down his cock, and this time, she meant business: there was no gagging as she slid further and further toward the base, stopping when about two inches of his dick were still visible between her lips and the fat, tight drum of his black balls and a trim patch of black pubic hair. “Keep goin.’ All the way down.”

She slipped up a little, breathed heavily through her nose, and then, with the help of Jay's hand on her head, she edged closer to the base of his cock.

"That's good, that's pretty good, yeah, I can feel that all the way in your throat, you like that, don't you? You like a big, black cock in your throat?"

Kim made a noise, somehow affirmative, muffled by the meat in her mouth.

Jay slipped his fingers through her hair and palmed her head, pushing her toward him while he thrust his hips up. The entire length of his cock rammed into Kim's mouth and disappeared into her lips. She made a muffled sound, but he held her in place and moved his hips back and forth to fuck his cock deep into her throat for a long, filthy minute or so, almost to the point that it seemed like Kim wouldn't be able to breathe and would actually choke on his cock.

He released her head and pulled her off his dick, letting her gasp for air. Kim looked up at him, her mascara streaked and her lips swollen slightly.

"You like that cock?" Jay asked her.

Kim responded by licking at it, and then working her way down his shaft again, without the pressure of his hand. Jay grinned, pleased with himself, and leaned back on his fists so that he could have a better view of Kim sucking his cock. "Look up at me, while you do that, baby. That's it, look at me while you suck that cock."

From the vantage point, it was hard to see but easy to imagine the view Jay had, of his dark cock disappearing into Kim's throat and her smoky eyes hovering over her obscenely stretched lips.

Jay interrupted this long scene by pulling back on her hair. "That's good," he cooed at her. "You been a real good girl. And now I'm gonna make you come all over my cock. You want that? You want to feel my cock in your pussy?"

Kim nodded, and smiled at him. He had her by the hair still, one hand still twisted behind her back. Now that he had lifted her to her knees again, the tight strip of thong cutting into her pussy could be seen. Jay dropped a hand and pulled at it with one savage jerk. The fabric ripped, Kim gasped, and the scrap of fabric slid down her right thigh.

"Get on your back, spread those legs for me," Jay told her.

Kim dropped to one hip, and then lay back on the bed, parting her legs slightly. Jay tapped at the inside of her thighs, pushing her legs apart wider. “Come on, spread those legs, let me see that pussy...” he sucked in his breath. “Oh yeah, that’s a pretty little pussy, that’s nice and tight...”

He dropped his hand between her legs, and played with the glistening petals of her cunt, while Kim wrapped her arms around her knees and held her legs open for him.

Her pussy was a tiny gash, even spread open like that, compared to the huge, throbbing bulb of Jay’s cock. Sticky sounds emerged from her pussy as he rammed a few fingers inside of her, making her open her mouth to gasp and her legs bob slightly as she strained against her own arms.

Jay was finger-fucking her now, but his thumb was working expertly on her clit, and Kim’s eyes were dropping half-shut as she let out a guttural moan of pleasure. She lifted her head and looked at Jay’s fingers – or maybe his cock – as he pleased her.

But suddenly he stopped the movement of his hand, and she howled in disappointment.

Jay grinned. “You want some cock now, baby?”

“Yes,” Kim gasped, pulling her legs apart wider.

Jay raised his eyebrows, so she added, “Please.”

Jay tapped the heavy head of his dick against her pussy, making a wet splay in her juices and sending a shudder through her. “You sure you can take all this cock?” he teased.

“Please,” Kim whined.

“Your husband don’t have a big dick, does he? You gonna be able to take my cock, baby doll?”

“I can take it,” Kim moaned.

“You want it?”

“I want it,” Kim moaned. “I can take it all. Please.”

It was absolutely spectacular. Kim, talking like a dirty whore and begging for black cock. He never would have suspected that she had it in her, but seeing her in action now he realized she was a natural slut. This must have been what she wanted all along.

“Ohhhhh!” Kim gasped as Jay sunk the first few inches of his cock into her pussy. “Oh, oh, it’s so big, I don’t know -”

“You can do it. Spread those legs for me baby, just relax and let me slide it in, oh yeah, that pussy’s so tight, mmmm, a little bit more, you can take it, that's it, that's it baby doll just let me fill up that pussy, damn, that's tight, don't move, baby, I ain't done with you yet..."

The thick inches of Jay's cock sank slowly into Kim as she squealed and tossed her head. She let go of her legs and moaned, arching her back, and Jay took up her flailing limbs at the knee to push her open as he sank all the way into her. The squelching of her pussy turned to the sound of crushing fruit at the end, and Kim howled and tipped her head back. "Oh my God," she panted, "oh, fuck."

But in spite of the sound her pussy had made, and the enormity of the cock that was inside of her, pinning her so that she could only move her head and her arms, she was moaning in pleasure and smiling.

"Mmmm," Jay was saying, moving his hips slightly as he pushed his full weight onto Kim to nail her, spread eagled, to the bed. "Don't move, don't move baby, that pussy's so tight I'm gonna blow inside you and I ain't done yet. Shh, shh, shhh..."

Jay drew his hand over her forehead, then down to her lips, pulling her mouth open possessively. "That's it, just lie there for a minute and feel that big cock filling you up. You like that?"

Kim made another incomprehensible noise, but she did like it, she loved it, you could tell by the way she had let her legs flop open and the sweat rolled off her body as she tried to still her squirming hips.

Jay started to roll on top of her body, his black flesh undulating over Kim's startling white, his cock deep in her squelching pussy, making Kim gasp and scream. She pulled her legs inward to wrap around his torso, but he was too built, too large, for her legs to meet, and they flopped open after a bit with the effort.

Jay may have claimed to be about to blow his load in her tight pussy, over and over again, but he was not... not really. He pulled her hands up above her head, attacking her lips and her mouth with his own as he continued to slowly fuck her. When she came, screaming, he swallowed her cries and let her stiffen beneath him with a wild orgasm. But he continued to fuck her, faster now, even as she shuddered beneath him and tossed her head. "It's too much," she complained. "I can't take it! Oh!"

But in almost no time at all, Jay had worked her back up to craving him again. The sounds of her pussy sloshing made it sound like she had a pussy full of cum, but Jay's dick was still hard as a rock when he rose up on his knees, dragging Kim's limp body with him, to pull her up and down his shaft by the hips.

He slapped her on the ass. "Turn it over," he said. "Get on your hands and knees, I'm gonna fuck you like a little whore."

He slammed his cock into her pussy once she was in position, and Kim lifted her head to scream but arched her back just like a whore and threw her hair around like a little slut who wanted it hard. Jay began to slam into her so hard that puffs of air escaped her mouth with each thrust.

"You like that, don't you, baby? You like it like that, come on, come all over my cock for me, get that cock nice and wet, that's it."

Jay reached down and beneath his cock to swipe up some of the glistening juice that was pouring down her thighs, and brought it to her asshole, moving his fingers over the taut eyelet as Kim thrust backward onto his cock to make herself climax.

Jay pushed her ass apart and let a drop of saliva fall from his mouth and onto her ass. Kim was crazy now, slamming herself against his pelvis and moaning as she tried to climax again. She was so obsessed with fucking Jay's cock that it was anybody's guess if she even noticed when he pushed his thumb into her asshole.

He leaned back and admired Kim fucking his cock with his thumb in her ass, palm on one buttock. Kim squealed and muttered expletives as she rode him harder and finally came again, thrusting her ass firmly against him and screaming loudly while her body shuddered.

Jay slid his thumb back and forth slowly, while Kim panted and shuddered out the final waves of her orgasm. When she had finally recovered a little, she looked behind her as Jay slipped his cock – which looked twice the size it had at the beginning – from inside her pussy.

He twisted his hand and sank two fingers into her pussy with a spurt. They were sticky and wet with her cum, and he placed his fingers next to his thumb and started to work them in.

"Oh!" Kim squealed, and she bucked slightly and tried to scoot away, but Jay dropped a hand to her lower back and squeezed her into submission.

"I don't... I never..." Kim panted. "I don't think I can..."

"You're telling me your man never fucks your tight little ass?" Jay asked, with a grin.

He plunged his fingers in as he asked, and Kim's eyes went glassy as her mouth fell open, but she stayed as she was.

“That’s it... that’s it, baby doll... no, you done this before, that’s how you do it, just relax...”

Jay had three fingers inside of her now, and Kim was stunned, but her expression had changed from one of sharp pain to curiosity in short order.

“Nah, somebody’s fucked you in the ass before,” Jay was saying.

Kim shook her head. “It’s too big, I can’t do it,” she gasped.

Jay pushed further inside of her, and she gasped.

He grinned. “Nah, you like it, see? You’re gonna be all filled up full of black cock and I’m gonna cum in your ass, and you’re gonna like it so much you’re gonna be begging me for more.”

He slipped his fingers from her ass, making Kim howl with what sounded like disappointment. She stayed in the provocative pose he had propped her into, with her ass turned up, even as he released her to scoop some of the honeyed pussy juice still streaming from inside of her up to his cock, and into her reddened asshole.

“Now you gotta relax, baby doll, and just take it, you’re gonna feel real good in a minute or two, with a big load of cum in your ass.”

His cock now had the appearance of a monster, black and bulbous at the crown, twice the size of her tiny eyelet even after he had stretched it with his fingers. But the black monster was moving forward, and the reddened rim of Kim’s asshole sucked at it and then gobbled it, and he was sliding slowly into her ass as she wailed and dropped her chest to the bed. “Oh, it’s so big...don’t stop, don’t, I want to take it all...oh, fuck, it’s too big, it’s too big, keep going, oh, oh!”

Jay nodded in admiration and pleasure as the last inches of his cock disappeared into Kim’s ass and his balls slapped into her pussy with another sickening splat.

“Oh fuck that’s tight, that’s a nice tight, hot ass. Yeah, let me fuck it full of cum, you just take it like a good girl.”

He started to fuck her, and she lay there for him, her eyes turned toward the crack where she knew that eyes were watching with lust, being used like a whore and taking a huge black cock in the ass. She slid her arm under her torso as Jay began to get worked up and slam into her hard and fast. Her fingers rubbed violently into her gash, and her eyes went wide as Jay’s rhythm became grotesquely fast and his balls slapped against her pussy and her fingers.

She squeezed her eyes closed and screamed as she came, and Jay's face contorted, his whole body thrusting forward until he lifted Kim's body up from the bed and her knees no longer touched it while he spewed his cum into her ass.

Jay leaned over her after they panted breathlessly for a moment and pulled her back onto his chest, pinned her to him. He turned her head toward him and sucked her lips up between his in a slurpy, wet kiss. "You like that, little girl?"

Kim murmured her assent, and Jay turned his torso to flop onto the pillows, his cock spilling from inside of her with a filthy wet splat. She rolled with him, back onto the pillows next to his chest, and their legs untangled and they lay there, shiny with sweat, still panting from the exertion. "I got more where that came from, doll," Jay said, his hand stroking his wet, slimy, half-hard cock. "Just gotta give me a minute."

Jessie was so stunned that he stared at the scene, the great big hands groping his used and filthy wife, when he was shocked suddenly into action as he remembered what it was time for him to do. Hands shaking, his palms sweaty, he pulled his phone from his pocket and nearly dropped it, shaky with feverish lust.

He fumbled to send his pre-composed text message, his eyes on the screen while the couple embraced and kissed dirtily. But this was the plan, and even though his balls ached and his cock was in pain, there was still another act that he needed to set in motion.

"Shit!" Kim yelled, knocking her phone off the dresser, rolling to the side of the bed and grabbing it from the floor as Jay peered over her shoulder and sat back up, suddenly at attention. He was a man who had been caught in a bedroom once before: he barely needed Kim to look up frantically, getting to her knees on the bed and holding the phone in her hand with a horrified look. "Fuck. It's him." She stared at her phone as Jay rolled his big legs over the side of the bed.

Kim pushed her sweaty hair from her face and then looked at Jay with horror. Jay was already jumping into his clothes, moving with the quick and practiced movements of a man who had fucked and run once or twice before in his life.

Len watched as he gathered up his things, and enjoyed Kim's startled expression as she stared at her phone, which was now buzzing in her hand. It was an unexpected turn of events, but this was going to be good, no matter how it panned out. Len was nothing if not patient, and this was panning out in his favor any way he sliced it, so he stayed where he was to wait for Jay to leave and Kim to come and frantically beg him to leave. His cock throbbed a little harder as a few ideas about what he could make Kim do to convince him to leave fluttered through his mind.

"Hey, hi, no nothing, just running....what?" Kim was speaking frantically into her phone, waving at Jay to leave. Jay was smiling, moving calmly, maybe he wasn't worried about being caught.

"Sure," Kim said. "Okay... yeah, I'll be ready. No," she waved at Jay again as he approached her and reached out a hand to her hair. "Chinese, yeah, perfect...okay, see you then."

She dropped the phone as Jay pulled her toward him and sucked her lips into his mouth. "You have to go," she said breathlessly, when he finally released her. "He's already here."

"Mmm," Jay said, in a leisurely tone, and the panic in Kim's body made her go rigid.

He smiled, and drew a finger down to her pussy, flicking it so that she shuddered. "You got my number, doll. I wanna see you again."

Kim smiled at him, and then panic crawled back into her face. "Okay, okay, but just go now, okay? Out the back, just in case."

Jay laughed, and kissed her again, and slipped his hand down to massage her pussy as she squirmed in his embrace.

"Something to remember me by," he said.

And then he scooped up something – a wallet, maybe – that had dropped to the floor when he undressed, and walked calmly out the door, past the bedroom where Len was perched, a puff of sexy musk following in his wake. Len gritted his teeth as he waited for Jay to lumber down the stairs, open and close the front door, and leave the house.

As he waited for those sounds, he watched Kim, whose frantic expression had faded. She was perched on the bed, still shining with sweat, and her chest was heaving slightly, bouncing her breasts over her body, marked by reddened patches of skin where Jay had gripped her to fuck her harder.

She looked straight at where Len was hiding, and smiled. Then she held up a finger, between her legs, telling him to wait. Len's cock throbbed with an uncertain pleasure, one that mounted to a fever pitch as Kim rolled over and stood up, cum dripping down her thighs from her ass. She approached the dresser where the controls for the video camera were stashed – a small laptop she had no longer been using – and, evidently, turned them off.

She turned around, and looked in Len's direction as she climbed back onto the bed, on her hands and knees. "Come out, come out wherever you are," she called.

Well, Len thought. You can't always tell with women.

He slid out from behind the door, pleasantly pleased with whatever turn this was taking, hoping it was the one he thought it was.

"How'd you like that?" Kim said, running her hands along the slippery length of her body.

Kim, at least the Kim she used to be, had ceased to exist. There was nothing hesitant in this woman's actions, no subtlety to what she was doing, and what she was after. She was ready for more, and she was going to get what she wanted.

Len had obviously picked up on this shift, and Jessie was left to wonder how much Len knew about Kim's plans. The thought sent icicles through his chest: this was Kim's plan, all along, and everything was proceeding according to her plan, but what if Len knew more than she had let on?

Len was shaking his head, unbuttoning his shirt, walking slowly toward her. "Kim, Kim, Kimmy... you've been a very bad girl."

Kim laughed lightly and picked her phone up from the bed.

"I take it Jessie isn't on his way."

Len said this as a statement, with a self-assuredness that felt like a punch in the gut to Jessie. Len was taking off his shirt, dropping it to the floor.

Kim was on her knees, completely naked, the scraps of her panties having slipped off her leg when she walked over to the cameras to turn them off. She smiled and stretched out on the bed, toward Len, seductively, her ass slightly elevated for a moment longer than needed. “He’s not,” she purred, her body moving with feline liquidity.

“I thought Lenny was off-limits,” Len teased. It was foreplay; he was unzipping his pants and had no intention of keeping himself off-limits in any real sense of the word.

Kim entangled her arms, looking up at him with her smeared mascara and puffy lips. “Well,” she said. “Cameras are off. So what Jessie doesn’t know, won’t hurt him.”

Len was moving over to her, stepping out of his own pants as he walked. His cock was erect in front of him, and Kim watched him approach with hungry eyes on his dick. She smiled again. “Anyway,” she said, reaching forward to pet Len’s cock the way she would pet a dog or a kitten. “Jessie’s already broken the rules himself, hasn’t he?”

In the bathroom, behind the half-open door, Jessie’s heart stopped inside his chest. For a moment there was a silence so thick he thought maybe he had died. Only the throbbing in his balls reached through the silence to remind him he was still here, behind the door of his bathroom, watching his wife lure Len to her by the cock, while she more or less told him he was caught for his indiscretion with Michelle. Was that it?

Len’s face was not fully visible, but he made a noise halfway between a growl and a laugh. Kim’s hand was on his cock, and she was sitting up, resting on her heels, pulling Len toward her with her hand wrapped around his dick and massaging it lightly. “I saw everything at your hot tub party after Jessie got there,” she said breathlessly. “And that’s why, I don’t feel that terrible for doing this.”

Jessie stared as Kim smiled at Len, and then lowered her head to take his erect member into her mouth. Len’s cock was much smaller than Jay’s, and so it was no trouble for her to swallow it whole, all the way to her closed fist at the base of his cock.

She pumped him with her mouth, hand still at the base, and then released him to turn her head sideways and lick the length of his shaft from the base to the tip. As she did this, she looked directly at the crack where she knew that Jessie was watching her.

And from behind the veined meat of Len’s cock, she smiled, before turning back toward Len’s pelvis to take his whole cock into her mouth, all the way to the base.

Len made a noise and stared at Kim bobbing on his cock for a few seconds, as if he couldn't quite believe what was transpiring. His right hand floated up, and hovered over her head for a few seconds, until it drifted down to the back of her head and started to guide her sucking his cock.

"Whoa, whoa, whoa," he said, pulling her face away from his dick. He used his free hand to grasp his cock at the base and run the tip of his dick over her lips. "That was quite a performance, Kimmy, slow down a little or I'm gonna come."

Kim's lips were hovering next to Len's cock. He would be able to feel her breath on the tip of his dick as she said: "That's fine. We have all night."

She started to take Len into her mouth, but Len seemed to recover instantly from his shock – if, in fact, he was shocked, Jessie reminded himself – and pulled her hair to throw her down onto the bed, where she lay crumpled, smiling, until Len pushed her legs apart. "Show me your pussy," Len ordered her, his hand on his dick in a tight fist. He was obviously trying to keep himself from coming, wanting something from Kim before he did.

Kim spread her legs wide and Len lazily let his hand drop down to her pussy, where he fingered the swollen, reddened lips, the gushing juices, her hardened, distended clit. The contours of Kim's pussy looked like they had never, ever looked: Jay's girth had stretched her out, her orgasms had covered her gash in a sticky, wet sheen, and her clit was quivering in the center of this raw, abused flesh like a ripening bud.

Kim shuddered when Len touched her clit. He moved his fingers slowly around her, then gently into her pussy. Kim mewled when he slipped three fingers into her body, suddenly, deeply. "You're so wet, you little slut. Did you get your pussy all stretched out by that big black cock?"

Kim just lifted her head to stare at Len's hand, mewled again, and then, lifted her eyes over Len's plunging hand to stare again, pointedly, at the place where she knew Jessie was staring through the crack.

Jessie's skin was so damp that he had sweat through the shirt he was wearing. Trickle of sweat rolled down his thighs, and a damp stain was spreading on his pants where the tip of his cock had excreted so much precum that it looked like he had pissed himself. He was sure that his breathing was so loud Len would hear him.

But Len was fist-deep in Kim's pussy, and could hear the sound of his hand squelching in her wet, slut cunt. Kim had taken her legs by the knees and pulled them up so that Len could have a better view, and her gaping ass was dripping Jay's cum down her crack and onto the sheets.

Len pumped her, his four fingers curled to make a more phallic shape, while his thumb expertly rubbed Kim's clit. "You little slut," he remarked. "That's it, come for me, come like a good girl. I'm gonna fuck you next, Kimmy, right in your cum-filled ass. That's what you want, isn't it? You liked that, didn't you?"

Kim bit on her lip and threw her head back. "Oh, oh, oh my God!" she screamed. She dropped her legs, and her body convulsed and twisted as she screamed with ecstasy, another orgasm making her pussy squeeze even more wet filth to the rhythm of Len's hand.

It was absolutely obscene, beyond Jessie's ability to comprehend. He stared at Len's four fingers as he continued to pump Kim's pussy, lifting her up with the force of his hand so that she squealed and had to lift her hips. "Oh God, oh, stop, it's too much, Len, I can't -"

Len didn't relent, just watched Kim squirm around his hand, unable to stop him from continuing to stimulate and hand-fuck her. Kim's shrieks became frantic. "Oh, it's too much, it's too much, my pussy's so sore, it hurts, it's...oh!"

Kim's ranting became incomprehensible and she tossed her head from side to side on the bed. She didn't actually try to get away from what Len was doing, which she could have done, by sliding backward. Len held her suspended, slowing his assault on her, until she relented, and her body went limp, sagging onto the weight of Len's strong hand, buried in her pussy.

"That's it," Len said, lowering her to the bed. "That's what I like. You're all fucked out now, Kim, and you're just going to let me use you like a little fucktoy, however I want, aren't you?"

Kim's legs splayed open, and she brought a hand to her mouth, murmuring something in response. But the affirmation was in her body, in the way she let Len push her legs apart with his knees as he centered himself between her legs.

She was like dead weight, mewling still, as he lifted first one leg, and then the other, to his shoulders. He pried her open, spread out at the knees and with her ankles caught on his shoulders. Jessie sucked in his breath. He couldn't see from where he was, but Kim's body would have been opened like an oyster to him. Len moved forward, slowly rolling Kim's ass and lower back up, so that the pearl of her gaping asshole was tilted up at him.

He shifted her right leg from his left shoulder to his right, which turned Kim's ass out to the side. Almost as if Len knew that Jessie was watching, and wanted him to see his thumb plunge into Kim's stretched asshole. Len pushed her legs down and to the side of her face, so that her ass was all that was visible to the side of her body, her legs pushed down toward her head, her pussy glued back together by the position she was in. Len's thumb was deep inside of her, and he pulled at the rim of her ass, so that Jay's cum leaked slowly from her reddened hole.

"Your ass is so tight, Kimmy, that must have been quite a fuck. Yeah?"

"Yeah," Jessie heard Kim breathe, muffled, exhausted, from beneath her legs.

"And now you want some more, don't you? You want another load of cum in your ass because you liked it so much. It's going to feel so good you can hardly wait for it, can you, Kimmy?" He was thumb-fucking her now, roughly, and Kim's legs twitched back to life. She mewled again. "Yeah, I know girls like you, I just didn't think you were one of them," Len continued. "You can't wait to have your sore ass rubbed hard by dick again, and then get all filled up, can you?"

Kim said something, but it was unintelligible.

"Say it for me, Kimmy. That's what I want." Len pulled his finger from her ass and guided his cock to her hole. He rubbed it from her slit to her ass, and pressed lightly against the shrinking gape, edging just a fraction of his head into her slurping hole. Kim moaned, and mewled, and her feet wriggled over the side of Len's right shoulder.

"Do you know what I want, Kim? I want to hear you beg me for it. I want to hear you ask me to fill your dirty little ass up with another load of cum."

"I can't..." Kim said, gasping.

Len pulled his cock from her ass and elicited a howl of disappointment. "I'm so close to coming Kimmy. I could just jerk myself off right now and you could miss out..."

"No, no," Kim said in protest. "Please. No."

Len realigned his cock, and Kim edged her ass toward him, squirming.

"Say it, then."

"Please," Kim mewled. "Please. Fuck my ass full of cum."

"You want it?" Len teased, pushing down on his cock to press against her rim. Kim mewled.

“I want it.”

Len made her wait, smiling, and then very slowly, as Kim mewled in increasingly high-pitched howls, he sank his cock into her inch by inch, pressing her feet to her head and slapping her ass to tell her to hold still, until he was all the way inside.

“Fuck, Kim, your ass feels so good. You like that don’t you? Nice hard cock in your ass? Jessie ever fuck you like this?”

Kim didn’t answer, only started to wriggle, trying to fuck Len’s cock. But he rose up, pushing her legs down, and grasped her by the waist to pin her more or less motionless, his cock all but buried as she tried and failed to squirm.

“You want me to fuck your ass full of cum, Kim?”

Kim mewled.

“Fuck my ass full of cum,” Kim whined.

“Let me hear you beg, Kim. Make me believe you really want it.”

“Please,” Kim whimpered. “Oh, please. Len, please, please fuck me.”

“You want a big load of cum?”

“Please, Len...”

“You want it?”

“I want you to fuck my ass full of cum. Please, please!”

“Here it comes then, you little slut. You ready?”

Jessie’s eyes were wide and unblinking as he watched the following few minutes. Len began to fuck Kim like he had never seen or imagined someone fucking outside of porn. His shaft pummeled Kim’s stretched asshole in sticky, wet thrusts, his balls swinging into her left buttock, Kim’s limbs melting in his hands until she was a limp rag doll. Kim started to scream, and that was when Jessie saw that Len had a hand dipped into her thighs, stroking her pussy, making her come again.

When she came, her ass visibly squeezed around Len’s cock. This sent him into an immediate, furious orgasm, and his cum, or maybe Jay’s, spurted from the sides like a pipe had been broken as he hammered his load into Kim’s ass.

Once he had thrust his load in, in three separate spurts as he yelled and crushed Kim to the mattress, he released his grip on her legs. Kim’s body was limp, her legs fell to one side, and Jessie heard but did not see the squelch as Len’s cock flopped out of her ass.

Len rested on his heels and wiped his forehead with the back of his hand. Kim was moving, slightly, which was the only indicator that she was alive. “Fuck,” Len said. “Kimmy.”

But that seemed to be all he could say about it. They panted like that for a moment, and then Kim slowly brought herself up to her elbows. Len slapped her ass and fell toward the pillows, turning to face her.

“I have to say, Kim, that surprised the fuck out of me,” he said.

Kim was looking to Jessie, smiling.

Len was settling into the pillows, looking for all the world as if he might take a nap there.

Kim looked over at him. Jessie wasn’t sure what she was going to do: if she would kick him out, as she had hinted that she would, or if she was going to go for another round. Maybe she wanted him to step out, to confront Len. But Jessie was paralyzed, unable to move. This was Kim’s show now, and anyway, he was half sure he’d fall over if he did move.

“You gotta go,” Kim said, leaning over Len to grab her phone, which had slid all over the bed and was now wedged under Len’s chest.

Len laughed. He brought his arm up to his forehead. “Got another date, Kim?”

She smiled. “Jessie’s been calling,” she lied, waving the phone in her hand. “Besides. I’m worn out.”

“Wham,” Len said, sitting up. “Bam.” He reached for Kim and kissed her on the mouth. “Thank you, ma’am.”

Kim trailed a finger down his chest. “Pretty much.”

Len hopped out of the bed. He wasn’t the type to care how things were wrapping up. He snatched his pants from the floor and started – to Jessie’s horror – walking toward the bathroom.

The light blinded Jessie, it was flipped up by Len before he could even contemplate what he was doing. Kim leaned on an elbow, looking at the crack, more amused than anything.

As he walked toward the bathroom, Len fished a lollipop from his pants pocket, dropped the pants, and unwrapped it, plopping it into his mouth. It was almost funny enough to make Jessie laugh, the incongruity of it – Len, a tattooed, fuck-crazy, alpha male, popping a lollipop into his mouth instead of lighting up a cigarette.

Len hobbled into the bathroom and stood over the toilet, behind Jessie, who was afraid to turn.

“Kim, I have to hand it to you,” Len was calling back to her, his words distorted slightly by the lollipop in his mouth. A spurt of piss was all he could manage after that exertion, and he was looking down at his cock when Jessie decided to rotate toward him, at least be facing him when he inevitably saw him.

“...I would never, I mean, if someone had odds on you, I would never -”

Len looked up, into the mirror, and stopped talking. He didn't start when he saw Jessie, standing behind the door, looking back at him.

With his free hand, Len grasped the end of the lollipop, swung it from one side of his mouth to the other, said, “huh,” in a kind of impressed way, and looked back down at his dick, smiling.

It took a few, very awkward, very long seconds, for Len to manage to piss, and then it seemed to take an eternity. A grin was forming on his face.

He stopped, shook himself, flamboyantly flushed, and turned around, strutting out of the bathroom, his eyes on Jessie, a grin on his mouth. “Well, congrats to you, buddy,” he said, and out he went, slapping the light off as he did.

Len hopped into his pants, while Kim leaned on her elbow and watched him, a different kind of smile on her face. You had to admit, Len's way of handling the whole thing was reeking of coolness that anyone had to admire.

“Guess I'll take my leave, guys,” he said, good-naturedly, as he pulled his shirt over his head.

He pointed his lollipop at Kim. “You,” he said. “Are to be commended.”

And then, cool as a cucumber, he strolled out.

Jessie pushed the door open and walked into the bedroom.

His cock was so hard he thought he might burst. Kim sat up, and smiled at him. “Well?” she said.

“You watched at the party?” he stuttered, not expecting this to come out of his mouth at all. “I didn't...what?”

Kim looked at him. “I went back. After I fell asleep... I think there was something like X in my drink. Anyway... I saw everything. Michelle... everything.”

Jessie had no idea what to say. He couldn't tell from the way she was talking if she was mad, or teasing him, or what.

Kim crawled toward him on the bed, on her hands and knees. “But I have to confess something to you. This is why I wasn’t really mad.”

Jessie was staring at her. She had stopped at the edge of the bed, reached out to pull him toward her by the waist of his pants, and a surge of arousal attacked him as the material went loose and then taut against his cock and the smell of her cum-encrusted, pussy-juiced, filthy-sex-covered skin reached his nostrils. “Before you showed up, I went a little bit out-of-bounds, too.” She was pushing his sweaty shirt up, then working on his pants while he hastily removed the shirt, which clung to him and his sweat and had entrapped him. Kim was smiling when he finally disentangled himself, her hands pushing down his pants and his underwear. His cock sprung loose and she smiled, taking it in her hand.

Jessie shivered: he could actually feel the dried cum or juice on her palm as she wrapped her fingers around his cock. “But I didn’t fuck Len,” she said. “Until tonight.”

Jessie stared at her lips, as she opened her mouth and closed it around the very tip of his cock. Inside her hot mouth, her tongue swirled around his slit, tugging up the free-flowing precum that oozed from his cock. She released him, and looked up at him, her lips still a hairbreadth away from his cock. “I realized, when I was watching you, what your fantasy was, what you really wanted,” she said.

And then she drew her tongue along the length of his shaft. “And that’s when I realized...” she stroked him as she rubbed his cock over her lips, making him dizzy, unable to see anything but her mouth as she promised to take him into her mouth, where she had already pleased two men just minutes before. “What my fantasy was, too.”

She took him into her mouth, all the way to the base of his cock, and Jessie shuddered, grasping her hair to stop her from stimulating him anymore, because he was going to blow. “Kim,” he said, but he was unable to say anything else.

Kim pumped up and down his shaft twice, as he grasped her hair and tried to plead with her to stop before he came. She released him from her mouth, and looked up at him with a grin. Her hand was still languidly stroking him, and his face started to screw up in concentration, his mouth dropping open.

And then, her eyes on his, she slowly sank down to the base of his cock, and massaged his cock with her throat. He grasped her head, trying to pull her off, but she fought to stay at the base of his dick as he surged into her mouth. In her eyes, hovering over his shaft in her lips, he was sure he could see a smile.

EPILOGUE

“That’s it?” Jessie asked, taking a look around at the packed boxes, stacked on opposite sides of the now-barren living room. The movers had come to take away their furniture a few days ago, and they had treated themselves to a five-star hotel while they finished up the remainder of the details for their move, and enjoyed the last of the Florida weather, before heading back to Boston. A move that Jessie had promised would be permanent, and a move that Kim seemed to welcome. Genuinely.

There was a wind, the forewarning of a coming hurricane, lashing the beach, dark clouds looming in the distance. The doors had been open in the early morning, but the wind had grown steadily more awful, blowing around their papers and packing materials, until it had to be shut out. The metaphor, to Jessie, seemed perfect: just as they were about to leave, the wind had become a little too much, even for them.

“I think so,” Kim said. “God, at this point I don’t even care.” She looked outside and frowned at the approaching weather. “Good thing we’re getting out of here.”

She was talking about the hurricane, but she was talking just as much about leaving Florida at just the right moment in their marriage. It had been, ultimately, a good thing, something that had brought them both to the table they had long abandoned, forcing them to admit the things they wanted in their marriage, by confessing to the things they had wanted outside of it.

And what was it that they wanted, in the end? It was almost impossible to believe that it had been so hard to figure out without all of the drama they’d engaged in: they just wanted back the feeling they’d had at the beginning of their marriage. For Kim, that was the feeling that she was the center of Jessie’s universe. And for Jessie, it was the feeling that Kim was choosing him over everything else. Succinctly: they wanted each other to pay attention to them, as they were and as they had been, as something not to be taken for granted.

The story had come out in pieces, over a long weekend of lovemaking and pillow talk that reminded Jessie of when they had first gotten together. Kim had confessed to staying in Florida almost spitefully, to having an attraction to Len that she couldn’t explain until she slept with him and burst the bubble of fascination – she had liked that Len was pursuing her, she had liked feeling that Len was interested in what she was doing. She had told Jessie that she went over the line at the party, but had subsequently seen Jessie with Michelle, Mike, and Len. But what had really motivated her to put her plan together was the discovery of Jessie's original itinerary to Florida: the fact that he had set up the situation so that she would be alone at the party.

For that revelation, they had Len to thank. Len had, for whatever reason, decided to give this tidbit of information to Kim.

Neither one of them could say exactly why Len had done it. He was the kind of guy whose motivations were hard to understand. Jessie guessed, deep down inside, that Len was probably half-trying to satisfy Michelle by getting Jessie to give in to her advances, and half-trying to secure Kim for himself: the two goals were mutually beneficial after all.

Jessie had only told Kim half of these thoughts about Len: it was hard enough for him to believe that Michelle was as persistent about getting him in bed as she professed to be, and he thought Kim wouldn't find it believable or palatable. At any rate, Len's motivations were a sleeping dog they could just let lie: Len had called a week before to ask them if they wanted to sail on his boat to Texas, to get out of the path of the hurricane. The conversation had been surreally normal. Same old Len, except Jessie made no jokes about Len schtupping his wife.

They declined the boat trip. Len seemed cool with it. That was that. Same old Len.

When Jessie hadn't confessed what he had done with Michelle the day after the party, Kim had decided to keep her transgression a secret as well. And then she had concluded, rightly, that Jessie's fantasy involved a little more risk, a little more danger, than he had been able to admit to.

And she had realized that hers did, too. Hunter had been a foray into the actual act of having sex outside of her marriage, but Hunter had been a sandbox: he was practically a kid, and there was no real threat to their marriage from him. No real risk in having sex with him. Nothing physical or emotional really at stake.

Where she had gotten the tremendous idea to stage such a spectacular show, not even Kim could say. It was just something she felt like she had to do, and wanted to do. Jumping in, betting it all, whatever you wanted to call it. She had liked the thrill of it, the complicated emotions of it, the risks piled on risks. Real risks.

And that was at the heart of the whole thing, which seemed like something they should have known from the start, but then... life is a journey, as they say.

Was Len a real risk? Or Jay?

Of course, eventually, Jessie had come around to asking the question outright.

Kim – who was a new person, a new woman who had acquired something that she had been missing, an alluring power that she had gradually become surer of – answered cryptically:

“Probably not anymore.”

Probably not anymore.

“Well,” Kim said, spinning around. She was wearing a jean skirt, a white blouse with no bra, her hair down. “I guess this is goodbye, Florida.”

She was smiling at Jessie. She walked over to kiss him, and put her hand on his cheek when she did. The kiss was sensual, provocative, real. Her hand slid over his ass, and she squeezed him slightly as she walked toward the front door.

Jessie marveled at the moment. It wasn’t so long ago that he had departed for Boston, to start this whole move back. The living room had been clean, icy-modern décor in magazine-perfect condition. He had been especially proud of the leather couches he’d bought, and he had given them a last look before Kim had kissed him – briefly, coolly, perfunctorily – and said, unemotionally, “Call me when you get in.”

In the end, what he had wanted was this Kim.

And she had wanted a Jessie who paid attention to his wife, and not his couches.

She had his attention, that was for sure.

“You want to change to some jeans or something?” he asked, picking up her carry-on. “You’re going to freeze when we get back.”

Kim opened the door, and turned back toward him. A smile – a smile he was thinking of as belonging to another woman completely, one who Kim summoned when she had a devious plan – turned her mouth up sexily and her eyes seemed heavy and just-fucked. Her Megan Fox face, which Jessie no longer believed was something she “couldn’t see” or “couldn’t do” on cue.

“I have to wear this skirt,” she said simply. She put one arm, and then another over his shoulders. “How else will we join the Mile High Club?”

She kissed him again, and they stepped out of the house. Kim shrieked as a large piece of cardboard careened across the driveway in a gust of wind.

They were leaving Florida behind.

And it seemed that they had very good timing.
