A Thank-You

To my really, really terrific, diligent, and always accommodating BETA readers, Watson and R., who make it possible for me to write and for my readers to enjoy to enjoy quality erotica in a small niche.

I am also so happy to have made you both laugh so hard with Max Riley's misplaced sock.

1: THE TICKET

“You look great,” I assured Megyn, as she sighed into the sun visor mirror and adjusted her make-up for what seemed like the tenth time. She did look great, specifically because she had taken her hair out of its perpetual pony-tail-bun-type-thing, and put on a dress. While it wasn’t especially risqué – a simple green sheath that looked a bit like a form-fitting, oversized button-down shirt – it was at least hugging her figure in a way far more feminine than the usual yoga pants and stretched sweatshirt.

Megyn looked down at her dress, and adjusted it slightly, with more sighing. The top button of the neckline was just above the line of her cleavage, and since she’d had the kids, her breasts were much larger than before, though still prettily petite. I could tell she would have preferred to close the neckline of the dress up all the way up to her throat.

“It looks nice,” I said, thinking aloud.

Megyn let out an exasperated sigh. She wiggled in her seat and moved the dress around some more. “It’s not too... I don’t know... it’s like some kind of slutty hipster dress or something.” She wiggled again and I smiled at her description.

“Also,” she complained, “I hate this haircut.”

She fluffed her striking auburn hair, which fell just below her shoulders and framed her face very nicely. She’d recently cut off about a foot of very beautiful but overpowering hair, and donated it to a wig-maker. I’d reassured her about the new cut many times, but she insisted it “felt weird.”

She laughed at herself. “Man,” she said. “I am really turning into a hermit.”

I looked over at her. The green of her dress made her eyes take on an almost unnatural emerald hue, the sort of color that would make you turn your head. Her eyes were sparkling, revealing that for all the show she was putting on, she was actually excited to be getting out of the house.

Megyn had recently started working from home, a move we both thought, at the time, would be better for her and the family. Our kids were finally off to school, but this way she could work and still be home for them in the afternoon. A good plan, but one that was slowly driving her a little crazy.

Very selfishly, I had to add: it had taken a toll on her upkeep of her own appearance. Immediately after taking the job, she had vowed to dress in business casual clothes, and get ready every morning, as a way of keeping her day in order. She had stuck to the personal promise for about three weeks, and then the definition of “business casual” had suffered a slow, consistent degradation. Likewise with “doing her hair.”

And while Megyn didn’t need make-up to look good (her skin was flawless, and her features were petite and upturned, giving her the appearance of an impish doll as well as shaving about ten years off her apparent age), it was nice when she put a bit of color on her lips or enhanced her large, pretty eyes with some mascara.

I looked down at her legs. The tunic-dress thingy came to her knees, but because she was sitting it had pulled up slightly and revealed a pretty sliver of her thighs.

One benefit of Megyn working from home was that she now had time to go running, and her legs had been the biggest benefactor of this effort.

“Uh...” Megyn said, lifting a finger against the window and pointing at the restaurant as I passed it by in my distraction.

I smiled, and put my hand on her knee. “I was just so distracted by the sight of your legs,” I said.

Megyn rolled her eyes, but I could tell she enjoyed the flattery. Between staying at home with the kids when they were younger, cutting back on her hours, and now working at home, she had really changed her life a great deal. She used to be in the spotlight, as a spokesperson for a large not-for-profit, running charity events and meeting potential donors. Now, she did outreach from home, and that meant she didn’t go out to dinner unless it was a special occasion.

I turned the car around and pulled into the parking lot. We gave each other a smile, and then went inside to meet our friends Cassie and Kevin.

As I had anticipated, Cassie noticed Megyn’s hair immediately and let out an excruciating peal of excitement about it. She stood up and hugged her, then pushed Megyn in front of her and appraised her appearance.

Cassie, to put it mildly, was our flamboyant friend. She wore a lot of jewelry, spent a lot of time at spas getting mani-pedis, and had her hair styled by an actual stylist twice a week. She was from Jersey and reminded me a lot of Kim Kardashian. When I told her this once while I was drunk, she responded by squealing “I wish,” and slapping her own ass.

Kevin was... well, the kind of guy you’d expect to be married to someone like Cassie. Or not. He seemed both perfectly at ease with his crazy wife and totally unsettled by her. Either way, he worked 60 hours a week at his car dealership to pay, presumably, for her jewelry. Kevin was an old friend of mine, and he’d met Cassie fifteen years ago. I can’t even remember how.

The thing about these two is they were a ton of fun to go out to dinner with.

Megyn was scrunching her nose up and frowning, which was a pretty hard thing for her to pull off because of the shape of her mouth. Even at her most angry or sad, Megyn’s mouth had this little twist at the corners that made it look like she was plotting something. It’s my theory that her features affected her whole personality. She tried not to get mad, for example, because people always assumed she was actually being bitchy and mean-spirited with that little quirk at the corner of her mouth.

“You don’t like it,” Cassie stated. Then she waved her hand, and a fully-stocked Pandora charm bracelet clattered into another expensive-looking, bangle-y thing. “It looks fantastic. It looks perfect. It looks so much better than all that hair. Don’t get me wrong, your hair is gorgeous, gorgeous, but this frames your face better and anyway, now someone has a nice wig.” Cassie’s eyes went up and down Megyn’s body. “Have you lost weight? How do you lose weight if you’re sitting in your office all the time?”

“I walk the dog,” Megyn quipped.

They sat down, and I turned to Kevin, who was giving me the “women, amirite?” look.

We ordered some drinks, and the women were sucked into their own conversation while we started talking the usual; business, taxes, business, sports. The food came, and the conversation quieted down as we began to dig into the carb-laden delights of Caravaggios.

“Oh my God,” Cassie said suddenly, about half an hour later, in the midst of a lull in the chewing and conversation. “That reminds me. I have to tell you.” She put her arm on Megyn’s and placed her other hand on her mouth, trying to contain herself. She took an enormous sip of wine next, and waved her hands around, as we all stared at her, rapt with attention. If there was one thing Cassie knew how to do, it was make small talk seem like she was divulging the secrets of the universe.

“Guess who,” she said finally, “is raffling himself off for a date for StreetRise?”

StreetRise was the nonprofit that Megyn had worked for when I first met her. It was an organization that ran multiple programs targeted at helping underprivileged urban youth avoid gangs and drugs, usually by getting them involved in a community-based project in their neighborhoods. They focused on programs for girls and women as well, which had been Megyn’s department.

Megyn brought a glass of wine to her lips and took a sip, her mouth turned up in genuine amusement. “Michael Bolton,” she joked.

Cassie ordinarily might have been annoyed by Megyn’s joke, because she hated it when Megyn stole her thunder, as she occasionally did, with a wry, well-timed quip.

“No,” Cassie said, earnestly. She paused, and Megyn returned her wine glass to the table, feigning disinterest. In fact Megyn was very much interested in what StreetRise was doing because she had loved that job.

“Max Riley,” Cassie said excitedly.

I knew Megyn couldn’t help what she did next, which was jerk her eyes up at Cassie, and let her jaw drop open a tiny bit.

Mine did, too. Just a little.

Even I knew who Max Riley was, and I was the kind of person who couldn’t immediately summon Tom Cruise’s name to mind. I usually referred to him as “You know, the guy, the brown-haired guy with the action movies. Mission Impossible.”

Max Riley was a real celebrity. Originally from the city, he was a Hollywood star, and this year had been superb for him. He played a rough-around the-edges cop on a popular police procedural called El Sereno, and a gangster vigilante on another crime drama called The Hill.

Even I knew all this.

He was also StreetRise’s dream celebrity: he was from a bad neighborhood, he had a ton of money, and everyone liked him on both sides of the tracks.

He was also really, really good-looking. A tall, athletic black man who had almost made it to the NBA, he was six feet, five inches of smooth, sinewy muscle with a model's symmetrical, masculine features: square jaw, prominent cheekbones, big, sensual lips, and dark eyes burning through the pages of magazines advertising a cologne called "Onyx."

"Not really," Megyn said after a pause. Cassie nodded her head like a hummingbird's wings.

"That's... I mean, that's fantastic," Megyn said, in a tone that indicated she thought it was really not fantastic. She began to stab at her salad, sliding more and more pieces of lettuce onto the tines of her fork as she talked. "So, how does this raffle work?"

She stuffed all the lettuce into her mouth – far too much, and I stifled a laugh as she struggled to chew it and look at Cassie with a serious face as she listened to her answer.

Cassie leaned forward. "So, five tickets are fifty dollars, and if you win you get a date with him. Haven't you seen the ads?" She took out her phone. "It's that, and all the free advertising. We've already raised over $100,000 in tickets alone, and a lot more in additional donations..." Cassie had taken out her phone and was sliding it over so Megyn could see it. "Have you seen this?" She swiped at the phone.

I studied Megyn's face as she watched the ad. I couldn't even see the sensual Max Riley, but I could hear his low baritone, tenderly suggesting that the raffle entrants could decide what they wanted for dessert.

I glanced quickly at Kevin, who was shaking his head with the same expression on his face that I imagine I had on mine. Sure, we're manly men, but a guy like Max Riley has a way of making any guy feel a little inadequate and insufficiently masculine.

I looked back at Megyn, who was trying hard not to let herself smile or get too sucked in by Max Riley, and whose eyes widened a little in spite of herself as he threw out sexual innuendo after sexual innuendo.

The ad ended.

She turned to Cassie and exhaled. "And how much did you say you've raised?"

Cassie nodded, as though Megyn had just agreed with her on a key point. "Over $100K, and the campaign's only 3 days in."

"But... that's a lot of money," Megyn said, truly impressed.

Cassie nodded again. "People are buying tickets from all over the country."

Megyn shrugged. “Well, that’s... that’s great, then. I can’t believe the luck...” she shook her head. “I would have killed to get Max Riley.”

She was referring to when she worked there. It would have fallen to her to do fundraising events, and there was no way they wouldn’t be successful with a big name like that.

“He just came to us,” Cassie said, reassuringly.

Megyn smiled.

And that seemed to be the end of the conversation.

Cassie straightened up in her chair, though, in this way she has of wiggling self-importantly. A look of mischief crossed her face, and she looked at Kevin. Kevin brought a napkin to his lips and looked down, and I got a cold feeling in my stomach.

Cassie was up to something, and it clearly involved us.

Megyn, too, was on the alert. She caught my eye and gave me a brief look of wild panic, before looking back to Cassie.

Cassie twirled her fork in her spaghetti. “Well, I’m glad you think it’s such a good idea, because...” she smiled and turned her fork again and again, grinning, knowing that she was making everyone nervous.

You just never knew what kind of bombshell Cassie was going to drop on you.

“I went ahead and bought you a ticket.” Cassie brought the spaghetti to her mouth, and pulled it from the fork with her teeth, smiling as she did. She fluttered her eyes at Megyn, and then at me.

Megyn brought her hand to her chest, and used her other hand to pick up her wine. “Oh God,” she said. “I thought you were about to say something serious.”

“Oh this is serious,” Cassie said, dropping her voice and coating it with a sensual slur. “I’m not eligible to win a date with that hunk of manly mandom, but I can live out my dreams vicariously through you.”

“God,” Megyn said, looking at the ceiling and taking a sip of her wine.

Cassie whimpered theatrically. “Please, Megyn. A girl has to have hope in her life.”

Kevin grumbled. “What am I, chopped liver?”

Cassie slid her arm over the table to take Kevin’s hand. She fluttered her eyes affectionately at him. “Honey. You know you are the only man for me, and you are a hot, Italian sausage...”

I looked at Megyn, who was looking at me. Things always got like this with these two. Megyn stifled a laugh.

Megyn rolled her eyes again and gave her wine a swirl. “Well...” she said. “Thank you for the ticket.” I could tell she didn’t believe in the slightest that she might win – not with those kinds of odds.

And that, I remember thinking (like a fool), was that.

“So,” I said jovially, as I climbed into the car. “Max Riley, huh?”

Megyn leaned against the headrest. “I know,” she said, exasperated. She shook her head back and forth. “It’s so aggravating. I bet Clarissa or Alyssa or whatever her name is thinks she’s such hot shit now.”

“Clarissa-or-Alyssa” referred to Melissa Douglas, the spritely millennial-something who had replaced Megyn when she had left.

We were talking about two different things, Megyn and I.

“I mean,” I said, trying to bring the conversation around to the part I wanted to talk about. “He is pretty hot. It’s a great campaign.”

Megyn exhaled, annoyed. “It’s so sexist, too,” she continued.

I put the car in reverse and started to back out. “I thought this campaign was targeting the girls’ programs,” I said.

Megyn shot me a look, I could feel it more than I could see it, as I looked out the rear windshield to maneuver through the overcrowded parking lot.

“Whose side are you on?” she snapped.

“Always yours,” I said, sincerely. “Anyway, you have a ticket, maybe you’ll win.”

“Oh God,” she said, flipping the sun visor down and touching her mouth as though anything at all was wrong with her make-up.

“What?” I said. “You wouldn’t want to win a date with the famed Max Riley, action superstar, tall, dark and handsome?”

Megyn shook her head quickly. I saw a little flush of red appear on her cheeks. “I seriously can’t even imagine that,” she said. “These contests are so embarrassing.”

“Hmm,” I said, intrigued. “What do you mean? It’s pretty clear it’s not a real date -”

“I know that,” Megyn snapped. “It’s not that. It’s just, like, all these contests where it’s like: have dinner with so-and-so, go backstage with the... with the...”

“Beastie Boys,” I offered. Megyn probably couldn’t name a band – any band – if she had to do for $1,000,000.

“God. Whatever,” she said impatiently. “It’s just so dumb. I mean, what is this poor person going to talk to you about? And what are you going to do? Ugh. You just know these people are all dreading meeting whatever loser fan is going to show up, like, drooling all over the place and thinking, ‘oh my God, Max Riley is on a date with me, maybe he’ll dump his super-hot model girlfriend and we’ll move to Sikinos.’”

Megyn can’t name bands, but she can name weird places at the drop of a hat and for no money at all.

“Well,” I said, and I have to admit there was a little bit of excitement flickering inside of me as I said this, “Maybe you’ll win, and then you can just be a huge dork and talk business with him in your sweats.”

Megyn glared at me, another thing I felt more than I saw, radiating from her side of the car like the blast of a thermonuclear weapon. “You know what?” she said. “That, is exactly what I would do.”

She dropped something into her purse and snapped it shut.

“Good thing there’s no chance of that, then.”

“That’s true.”

We drove along in silence for a bit.

My mind began to wander, and I won’t lie and say it’s the first time it ever happened, but my mind began to wander to a daydream as I drove. A daydream in which Megyn did win her date with Max Riley, and then she did have “dessert.” I don’t know why I’m like this, why I savor the shards of red-hot pain in my chest when I think about something like that.

Why it turns me on so much.

Why I enjoy picturing my wife with another man.

I looked over at Megyn, who had her hand to her right cheek and was looking out the window absent-mindedly. I wondered if she was thinking about Max Riley the same way I was. Her eyes were glazed over and she had a slight smile of her lips.

It was delicious to think that she might be, in her own mind, doing some of the very things I had her doing in mine.

I reached over and put my hand on her leg. “Whatcha thinkin’ about?”

She was pulled from whatever she was thinking about, and her face flashed with annoyance which only turned me on more. She shook her head quickly. “Nothing,” she said curtly. The kind of “nothing” that always meant something – something she didn’t want to discuss.

And then she went back to thinking and staring out the window, and my stomach went cold with wretched, lovely jealousy.

By the time we got home, after collecting the kids from the grandparents and dealing with all the bedtime drama, a lot of the fun spark of the evening had disappeared and we were both tired.

Megyn plopped onto the bed. She had, amazingly, not changed out of her dress yet. She lay back with a sigh, stretching out. I admired her lithe body and took the gesture, optimistically, for an invitation.

I sat down next to her head and ran my hand over her cheek and her neck, along the line of the dress. I could tell that the caress made her sort of prickle – she was tired, and she probably just wanted to go to bed.

Such is life as a married couple after thirteen years.

Oh well. I decided to keep going. I had gotten pretty worked up in the car by my fantasy.

“Did I tell you,” I said, using a “suave” voice, “how beautiful you look tonight?”

Megyn looked up at me, and gave a little eyeroll. But she smiled.

Bingo.

I moved my hand along the collar of her dress again, this time pushing my fingertips beneath the fabric to caress a few more centimeters of her soft skin.

I could feel her loosening up under my fingertips. To tell the truth it was a surprise. I had really been just shooting in the dark and not expecting anything but a rebuff.

I moved my hand down to touch the soft fabric of her bra. Megyn had taken to wearing sports bras most of the time; it was nice to feel a satin material (even though I knew which bra it was, and it wasn’t especially exciting, just a white satin bra for going out to dinner).

Then I worked my fingers under the material, and when Megyn didn’t squirm away or sigh (as the preamble to her “I’m-so-tired” speech), I dipped all the way to her nipple.

Megyn's nipples are small and they harden into tiny round rocks, a pale, caramel shade that matches the smattering of freckles that plague her in the summer by forming on her nose no matter how much sunscreen she puts on. I felt them protrude and stiffen beneath my fingertips, and my cock responded, imitating them.

Megyn sat up without warning, and my hand trailed out of her dress and over her shoulder. Disappointment kicked me in the stomach, but only for a moment: she turned to me and reached behind her. "Can you get this zipper?"

She tucked a strand of her hair behind her ear as I tugged the zipper down, revealing the smooth pale skin of her back and the slightly worn white satin of her bra. I unhooked the bra while I was there, and stroked her back with the palm of my hand. More evidence that she had slimmed down significantly – I felt her ribs beneath her skin as I reached into the dress. Not protruding, of course, but definitely closer to the surface.

Megyn shimmied out of the dress, standing up quickly to get out of it and then sitting back down on the edge of the bed.

I pulled my undershirt up and over my head – I had taken my button-up shirt off as soon as I got home. I walked myself on my knees behind her, and pushed her hair out of the way to kiss her neck, sliding my hands around to the front of her body where her bare breasts were waiting for me to cup them and stroke her nipples back to pebbles with my thumbs.

I kissed her neck, and her ear, then I whispered for her to lie down on the bed.

She had, for some reason, left her panties on, and so I tugged them off her hips and down to her legs. The bright red hair of her pussy sprung loose, a bit tangled, and I stared at her body. She looked great, and I wanted to say something to her, but she reached up and pulled me to her by my neck.

We hardly ever kissed anymore. It was just a function of our marriage. Lovemaking was always something we did in the morning, usually because I initiated it, and it was rarely earth-shattering. We were both always so tired – I hated to admit that I was sometimes so tired I didn't really have an interest in sex. We were less tired now that the kids were older and Megyn was at home, but somehow that excuse had never really worn off. We had never really gotten the magic back.

So when my lips met hers, it was almost like kissing another person. Or kissing her for the first time. Her lips were soft and dry at first touch, warm and inviting. Then she opened her mouth and I felt her tongue searching for mine.

I was so involved in the intimacy of our kissing that I almost didn't feel her hand moving down my body and tugging at the buttons of my pants. Her hand was hot when it slid under my boxers and she grasped my cock. My dick pulsed in the grip of her hand. All the while her tongue was moving with mine in a lurid dance.

I used first one hand, then the other, to get my pants and underwear down and free my cock, without having to break away from her mouth. I opened my eyes at some point to watch her face, and I saw that she had her eyes closed.

And then I let myself sink a little into that dark fantasy of mine.

Maybe she had her eyes closed because she was thinking about Max, instead of me.

My cock responded to my thoughts by flexing, but Megyn had no real reaction, even though it was in her hand. This only drove me wilder.

I guided my cock to her pussy. She was wet, and I slid into the channel of her cunt easily. Her hot flesh wrapped tightly around my cock and pulsed with her own excitement.

Her eyes were still closed, feeding my dark thoughts.

In a very erotic scene from one of Max's movies, there's a lot of close-up, sweaty action with him and his pale, blonde love interest. Five full minutes of it, in fact. Close-ups of their faces as they kiss, of their tongues playing with each other, of their flawless, entwined, cream and onyx skin slapping against each other, a sheen of lewd, sexual sweat pearling and dripping down their bodies. I closed my eyes as I fucked my wife, and remembered it in lurid detail.

With just one exception – I changed the blonde out for Megyn.

Megyn closed her legs around me, her ankles against my tailbone. I tried to force the images out of my head, because I wasn't going to last long. I opened my eyes and watched Megyn's face, but her closed eyes and her open mouth only fueled my fantasy more.

"Oh fuck," I breathed. "I'm going to come."

Megyn squeezed me with her legs, without opening her eyes, and ground her body against me. Her brow furrowed a little as she concentrated on her own pleasure, trying to get it in before I filled her pussy with cum.

I erupted inside of her, and she grabbed my shoulders and moved her hips rapidly, almost violently, until she gave a slight shriek as she came. Her body went rigid for a moment, then she tipped her head back and collapsed, hanging from my body by her fierce grip on my neck.

I looked down at her torso, pleased to see that it was covered with exactly the filthy sheen of sweat I had pictured in my fantasy. I moved a hand carelessly over the swell of her right breast, to her wet stomach.

My cock pulsed inside of her, and her eyes lazily opened in response.

I wondered what she was thinking about.

She pulled herself up to my face by my neck to kiss me. It was a quicker kiss this time, and then she fell back on the pillow. I rolled off of her and dropped face-up onto the bed.

She rolled toward me and lay her head on my chest.

I wanted to say something, but I spent such a long time forming the words that it seemed silly after a while. My pants were still tangled around my knees and I kicked them off.

What I had wanted to say was along the lines of “why don’t we do this more often?”

Or:

“You weren’t by any chance thinking about Max Riley’s black cock while I fucked you?”

But it was too late. And then Megyn yawned and climbed out of bed, heading for the bathroom. Shower water splashed on tile, and the moment was gone.

2: A WIN

Megyn seemed to forget about the contest altogether after that night.

I didn't, of course. I fantasized about it while I drove to work. I let all kinds of delightful, dirty and terrible thoughts into my mind. My favorite image to come back to was the one from the movie, though with Megyn in it, of course. All of that sweaty flesh, their tongues probing each other's mouth shamelessly, everything slick, wet, and shiny.

I even rented the movie to watch it over and over again. Something I shamelessly did at work.

It begins at 42:17 in Red Line of Duty, in case you were wondering. Also, the rest of the movie is terrible.

I also looked the contest up online, so while Megyn may have forgotten when the drawing was and when the winner would be announced, I did not. The drawing was on May 1st, and even though it was a ludicrous fantasy – that she would be the winner, out of what appeared to be an inordinate number of contestants, and also that any of my perverted ideas would come to fruition – I couldn't wait for the day to arrive.

I didn't want to look like a jackass, though. I didn't want to let on to my wife that I was obsessing over something that was so obviously silly. I also didn't want her to have any idea that the fantasy I sometimes hinted at was more... well, dirty than she probably wanted to know.

That I sometimes pictured her with a big cock in her mouth, looking at me while it disappeared into her throat, as I jerked off.

Who was going to tell their wife such a thing?

The day of the drawing itself, a sunny Saturday, I kept my phone in my pocket and refused to take it out. It felt like it was burning through my pocket and into my skin.

The winner was to be announced at twelve.

I fidgeted at the counter while Megyn made breakfast. I wondered how long I could wait, not checking online, not asking Megyn herself if she had heard anything about it.

I set goals for myself: make it to ten o'clock.

I talked myself down, because I was really starting to get way too excited and obsessed about something that wasn't going to happen. My blood pressure was probably too high. Megyn looked at me strangely a few times. “You coming down with something?” she finally asked.

And what kind of man gets so obsessed by a completely ludicrous idea, that his wife thinks he’s coming down with the flu because he’s sweating at his temples?

And then the phone rang.

“Oh hey,” Megyn said, after answering. She turned toward the stove and moved a spatula around, stirring the eggs she was cooking.

A strangled-sounding, high-pitched sound came from the earpiece, one that I could hear all the way across the kitchen.

Megyn calmly took the phone with her free hand and held it away from her ear.

I knew, at that moment, what it was. Cassie’s voice, Cassie’s high-pitched screaming.

I started to float. My body instantly felt lighter, tingly.

It had actually happened. The first component of this fantasy I had cooked up.

I stared at Megyn’s thighs.

“What?” Megyn sounded annoyed.

A long pause on her end. I could hear Cassie’s voice, about five pitches above normal, through the phone. It sounded like a mouse was trapped in the earpiece.

“You have to be kidding me.”

More squeaking.

At this point, I looked down at the newspaper on the counter and flipped a page of it casually, as though I had no idea what was going on. As if my heart wasn’t racing uncontrollably.

Megyn’s tone was stern.

“Well, I can’t do it. I don’t... can you just take the ticket?”

Pause, while blood pumped through me in hot waves.

“Well, what about giving it to somebody else?”

Another pause.

Megyn sighed. “What if you just give it to the next person in line?”

Cassie’s voice was no longer squeaking. Megyn had stopped in the middle of the kitchen with the spatula in her hand. Her face was growing serious.

“Ugh,” she said finally. “Cassie, goddammit,” she said. “This is... I have to call you back.”

She held the phone in front of her and pressed the off button forcefully. Her eyes were getting green with rage. She smashed the spatula on the counter.

“Daddy, mommy said a bad word,” Ella pointed out to me. The child had materialized next to me, as she often did, creepily and out of nowhere. I looked down at her. “Ella, go watch some more cartoons, buddy.”

“I want some cereal.”

I handed her a box of cereal and the carton of milk, both still on the table from earlier. “Knock yourself out, give some to Chris.”

To Megyn: “What’s up?”

Her face was going white with annoyance. Maybe rage. She shook her head. “Fucking Cassie,” she said quietly.

“What happened?”

I sounded utterly insincere, and I hoped she couldn’t hear it in my voice. I was feeling a mixture of emotions. Disbelief was high on the list. Excitement, dread, amusement.

She replaced the phone forcefully. “You know that contest, the raffle thing, the one where you ‘win-a-date-with-Max-Riley?’” She said this last part in a deep voice and sort of shimmied as she talked.

I made a face like I had no idea what she was talking about, but she was already on a rant and didn’t stop.

“Well guess what? You remember how Cassie bought that stupid ticket for me?”

“You won.” Another stab of delicious envy ran right through my gut as I formed the words.

“And!” she declared, “Cassie says it will ruin the PR if I don’t take it. The winner’s already been announced.”

“Why would they do that?” I tried my best to act like I would have acted if I didn’t actually care that much about any of this, but my performance felt pretty bad. I wondered how it was coming across to my wife.

Megyn exhaled. “God, I don’t know. It doesn’t... I mean, I’ll think of something, like I have to take a trip that week, or something like that.”

I snorted.

She shot me a look. "Surgery. Something fireproof. I just need to think about it."

I folded the paper. "So my wife is going out on a date with Max Riley," I mused.

"It's not a date," Megyn grumbled into the fridge.

I didn't really like the idea of my wife going on a date with Max Riley, at least not intellectually. However, there was some part of me, deep down inside, that was having a very visceral response to the idea. That burning, stirred-up, slightly queasy feeling in my abdomen, most akin to meeting a new girl you find attractive, was really boiling over inside of me.

I paused to ask myself what that was about for about half a second. I really wanted to keep prodding Megyn. Talking about this "date." Thinking about her going out on a date with Max Riley.

She closed the refrigerator. "Did I just see you give a box of cereal and a carton of milk to Ella?" she said, changing the subject.

I shrugged and she rolled her eyes in exasperation.

"So... you're going to go on this date, with this really hot guy...." I said.

She paused for a moment, with her mouth open. Then she shook her head. "Will you please go get the milk back from those two, before it's all over the living room?"

Her mind was already on to other things.

Which I supposed I should have been grateful for.

But in fact, I was a little disappointed.

I slid off the stool and grumbled my way into the living room to get the milk and cereal back from the kids.

There would be time to press this matter later.

"So," I said, plopping down next to Megyn on the couch and patting my lap, indicating she should put her feet up so I could massage them. She slid onto her back and faced me, leaning against the armrest of the sofa. Even though she was in her yoga pants and a baggy shirt, as she stretched out on the couch with a feline stretch she looked sexier than usual.

"So," she replied, her eyes twinkling.

The corner of her mouth turned up. She already knew where I was going with this conversation. She held a magazine up pointedly in front of her face.

“So. Max Riley,” I said, and I felt a queer rush of blood into my cock.

I slid Megyn’s sock from her foot and stroked the smooth underside of it with my thumb. I’ve always had a bit of a foot thing, so touching the smooth underside of her feet usually caused something to flicker in my gut anyway. But today, for some reason, it felt like someone was rubbing the sole of my own foot. I felt another warm surge in my dick.

Megyn said nothing and held the magazine steady as I made a pass over the unusual shape of her feet; a high arch, vaguely shaped like woman’s body in some strange way.

No reaction from Megyn. A page of the magazine floated languidly from one hand to the other as she pretended to read. “Is he,” she commented.

I wasn’t really sure where I was going with this myself. I slid my hand over her smooth skin and pressed into the meat of her foot. She had painted her toenails a few weeks ago, and because it was not sandal weather yet, abandoned them to grow out. A sliver of unpainted nail showed beneath the coral color of her toes.

“You probably aren’t entirely disappointed that there’s no way out of this.”

A sigh emanated from behind the magazine.

Silence.

Megyn dropped the magazine onto her lap as I continued to rub her foot.

“See?” I said.

She propped herself up on her elbows. “See what?”

I shrugged. “Well, you’re not denying it.”

Megyn rolled her eyes again and stretched back out against the armrest. “Yes,” she said. “You’ve caught me. I’m actually thrilled I’m going to go on a date with Max Riley. I’m going to spend every moment of it thinking about how much I’d like to grab his huge, thick cock.”

I froze, my hand squeezing the arch of her foot. My own cock – not huge or thick, but decently sized, involuntarily jerked against her ankle. Her eyes widened in disbelief.

My own eyes were open in disbelief. “Meg,” I said. “Such a potty mouth.”

She held the magazine up again. “You started this conversation. Weirdo.”

I wondered if she had felt my cock slap against her heel, or if maybe she hadn’t. And if she hadn’t, whether there were some way that I could keep this conversation going, maybe even if I couldn’t, whether there were some way I could get in a little extra... you know.

My hand was moving up her leg as I was having these thoughts. Over her smooth ankle, up under the hem of her boot-cut yoga pants, along her calf, slightly sprinkled with a stubble of ultra-fine hair. I felt her body react, so I kept going, up to her knee, where I knew she was sensitive, right behind the knee or along the side, leading to her inner thigh...

The magazine dropped again and Megyn was staring at me. “Peter,” she said. The inclusion of the final “r” in my name was a sign that she was getting a little irritated. It was meant to warn me off. But her face was displaying mild interest, and to me it felt like a heat was gathering between her legs that I could feel radiating all the way to my fingertips.

So, I ignored the tone of her voice. I shrugged.

She dropped a hand and stopped the slow crawl of my fingers up her pant leg. “Peter!” Her tone was one of disbelief. Then her face became amused and incredulous all at once. “Do you mean to tell me, you’re getting turned on because you wife is going on a date with another guy?”

“Not just any guy,” I said, after a moment of thought.

I pressed onward, wiggling my hand so her fingers relented and I could keep traveling along her smooth skin to her warm, moist thigh.

“You can’t tell me you don’t find the prospect a little... I don’t know? Stimulating?” I said.

Megyn’s jaw dropped open, and for a second I thought my fun times were about to come to crashing halt.

Whatever. Worth it.

But I was surprised to find that the mild outrage and disbelief playing across her face deflated – not much, just a little. I thought I saw a little bit of interest flicker in the corner of her mouth.

“Pete,” she whispered, as my hand went further up her pants and a seam gave a little, cottony shriek as it stretched too far and tore. She looked down the hallway furtively, as though to signal that we had children and therefore the conversation (and these goings-on) were over.

But she didn’t do anything else to try to stop me.

I slid my hand down again to the back of her knee, and with a feathery touch I stroked her sensitive skin. I could feel the rush that traveled through her body, tightening the muscles of her leg, rippling in her stomach, making her arms go stiff. A flash of red burned from her neck to her cheeks. Her lips parted and she stared through me.

A rush of excitement traveled through me along with a thought: I imagined for a moment that Megyn's stare was vacant because she was imagining something else – someone else. And that the "someone else" was Max Riley.

I was suddenly impatient. I withdrew my hand from beneath her yoga pants and her eyes snapped suddenly into focus. I grabbed the pants at the waist and slid them down her legs, admiring the toned shape of her muscles as I peeled the pants away. Megyn gave another concerned glance in the direction of the hallway and the children's' rooms, but she abandoned her protest before saying anything.

I pushed her firmly until she rolled over, and I began at her feet, drawing my lips along her skin. I reveled in the way her skin formed goosebumps as I traveled along the sinuous length of her calf, up to her knee. When I kissed the back of her knee she twisted beneath me, and moaned lightly. I nibbled at the sensitive skin, knowing that I was getting her going – this was her most sensitive part, and it never failed to get her aroused if I kissed her there.

As she clawed at the pillow on the couch and gasped, I wondered why we didn't do this more often. I moved up her body, treating the place where her butt met her thigh to the same languid licks of my tongue. As I did, I moved my hand along her thigh and slipped a finger under the cotton panties she was wearing.

I encountered her slick juices immediately, and the scent of them reached my nose. The tangy, sweet scent of fresh arousal assailed me.

And then, again, rising in my thoughts and invigorating me: the idea that Megyn was squirming beneath me not because I was licking her body, but instead because she was lost in her thoughts, imagining that the man who was touching her was Max Riley.

And who can know, for certain, if their lover doesn't imagine someone else as his fingers move over her body? When Megyn closes her eyes, there is no way to be certain that she isn't giving herself over to a fantasy of which I am not the star.

The thought rattled through me, more arousing than painful. I moved a little clumsily to the side of Megyn's body to wriggle out of my pants and underwear, while trying to still tantalize her with kisses.

To my surprise, as I did this, Megyn slid her hands down to either side of her hips and tugged at her cotton panties. She hooked her fingers under the material and pulled them away, unwrapping the firm curve of her ass.

The curls of her bright red pubic hair were visible between her legs, glistening with her excitement. I fumbled out of my pants and crouched over her, staring at the lovely sight of the two hills of her ass and the fiery red hair between her legs.

I moved my hand carelessly over her legs and her ass, moving in ever-tighter circles toward her wet center. When I reached her pussy and pulled her lips apart, her hips rose toward me at the same time. Her pussy blossomed open, pink and wet, and I looked at it, my fingers moving over her lips, thinking about what a long time it had been since I had enjoyed the taste of her, the sight of her pretty cunt.

I lowered my head, scooting backward on the couch, so that I could get my face up to her. I made a slow pass over her outer lips, her curls soft against my cheek and her skin as smooth as glass under my tongue. She tasted like a vinegary honey. I dove in to find her clit, pushing down on it, fighting through the gushing juices that were oozing from inside of her.

But the errant thoughts about Max went through me again, and I couldn't wait any longer. I pictured him so clearly it was almost a hallucination: instead of my head between her legs, I saw his. His tongue sliding along the ridges in her pretty pussy, making her moan.

I rose up on my knees and pulled her by the legs toward me. As I did, she opted to raise her butt up toward me, and the submission of the position drove me wilder. My cock was bouncing in the air, and I pointed it easily, without touching it, to her wet hole.

I grabbed her hips as I sank into her body. Her hot channel closed around my cock, and I closed my eyes, grasping wildly in my mind for an image that would hold me back.

Instead, I saw a big black cock sinking into my wife's pussy, and I looked down with my eyes open to force the image from my mind. But it was too late, and I was already bursting inside of her.

Fortunately for me, Megyn was also very close. She began to move her hips wildly against me, and she kept going, even after I had spewed my seed inside of her. She bucked against me, as my cock cried out in sweet pain, until her cunt seized up around me and throbbed against my dick.

For a moment we remained as we were, and then Megyn slid forward, and I lay down over her body.

She giggled.

I kissed the back of her neck.

“That was fun,” I said, finally.

It was fun. Megyn and I hadn’t had sex outside of the bedroom in... I didn’t even know how long. The kids were, naturally, the explanation for it all. They were the way it had begun, anyway. The chipping away at our sex life and our intimacy.

But really, they weren’t an excuse anymore. Why didn’t we do this more often?

I inhaled the scent of Megyn’s body – a light sweat, a little sweet and a little dirty, her special smell, the smell of sex. She grinned. Then she pushed against me. “We better get up,” she said.

I had a hard time getting to sleep that night. Megyn and I had snuck into the kitchen and had a glass of wine together. We sat at the kitchen table in the semi-darkness, having a fun and light conversation, remembering old times.

Then Megyn had gone to shower, and I had followed her, hoping to have a repeat performance. But she was asleep by the time I got out of the shower, and she only grumbled at me when I tried to nudge her awake.

I was left alone with my thoughts in the dark.

That’s when what had happened – the thoughts about another man – started to surface again. The visceral images I had concocted, of Max Riley with his cock inside my wife.

It was jarring. But I couldn’t dismiss them. I tried to think about something else, I tried to analyze why I was having these thoughts, but my mind kept returning to the thoughts themselves. Dirty, filthy images and scenarios, growing progressively filthier as the hours ticked by, until my cock was so hard I had to go take another shower and jerk off.

I started off just picturing Megyn flirting with Max, and the jealous pain the image gave me burned sweetly under my skin.

I went deeper, picturing her lips under his, his tongue probing her mouth.

And then deeper: his hands moving all over her body while she purred at his touch. His big, almost onyx-colored hands against her pale skin. I imagined his delight when he discovered her fiery red hair, imagined him spreading her legs to lap at her cunt.

But then I pictured his cock filling her up.

And then I pictured her sucking on his dick like a wild whore, hungry, slurping, gulping it down. Looking over at me from moment to moment, smiling.

Tugging furiously on my cock in the shower, my hand on the slippery tile to hold myself up, I wondered what the hell was wrong with me. After I came, and watched my cum wash away as the water pushed it down the wall, I felt a feeling wash over me. A little like shame, maybe guilt, maybe none of those things.

Imagining my wife with another man was not a brand-new experience for me. The idea had flickered through my head before. At some point while we were dating, I had applied gentle and consistent pressure to Megyn to tell me about her ex-boyfriends. And when she had given me only the barest of details, I had filled in the rest. I had imagined the guys from her collection of photos with her, sort of enjoyed the pain that washed over me, and then shelved it.

I would even go so far as to say that I had gotten aroused by the idea a few times.

But I had never delved so deeply into my imagination, I had never before created such lewd, visceral tableaux in my mind, never animated the porn stars of my mind to do such filthy things.

I finally fell into a fitful sleep, but my dreams were just a troubled continuation of these same thoughts.

I overslept, and when I finally woke the next morning the dishes were clanging in the kitchen, a tone of anger to the sound. Either one of us clanged the dishes rather passive-aggressively if the other slept in too long.

Marriage.

I jumped out of bed, feeling disconcerted by my thoughts, and rushed out to the kitchen to help with the banal tasks of the morning, and getting the kids off to school.

3: A CRACK IN THE DOOR

I didn't bring any of this up for about a week, even though I desperately wanted to talk to Megyn about what she was going to do about her "date" with Max Riley. Because my interest in the date bordered upon the profane, I didn't want to look eager, or start salivating with an erection like an untamed dog as I waited for her answer.

But the next Friday, Megyn brought it up. The kids were in bed and we had taken some wine out to the mudroom/sunroom, where we had placed our old couch and sometimes went out to read or have a few drinks.

Megyn was obviously a little flummoxed. She picked up a magazine, flipped through it too quickly to read anything, sighed, and then picked up another. She gave it the same treatment and then set it down in her lap.

Call me a jerk, but I really enjoyed pretending like I didn't notice any of this. I held a book up with one hand and pretended to be absorbed in it.

"So listen," she began. She sighed. "I don't think there's any way I can get out of this date thing..."

I let the book drop slowly to my lap. The moment she said "date," my heart had started pounding.

I fought to keep my expression calm.

"What date?" I said.

Megyn frowned at me.

I folded the book closed and set it on the table. "Okay, okay," I conceded, because Megyn's expression told me she wasn't in the mood to pretend like I had forgotten about her date with a movie star.

I leaned forward with my elbows on my knees and took her hands. She had to lean over for me to get to her. Her loose red shirt hung down and gave me a nice view of her breasts. She wasn't wearing a bra.

"What's the problem?" I said, stroking her hand.

I guess this was the wrong thing to say, because Megyn stiffened a little. "What's the problem," she repeated. She huffed and looked from side to side, as if there were an audience there that was going to agree with her that her husband had just said something very stupid. "I'm married, hello? That's the problem."

I laughed. "It's not a real date, though," I said.

Megyn softened, and that actually disappointed me a little. She laughed at herself. “No, I know. I just... I don’t really want to do it.”

I let go of her hand and motioned to her that she should come sit by me. “Why not?” I said, as she curled up next to me. She took her ankle in one hand and tucked her leg up so that she was very compact.

She didn’t say anything for a second. “Well, you’re having a weird reaction,” she said finally.

I looked down at her.

Two emotions tapped at my chest: one, excitement.

I liked this territory. I liked talking about this topic, I liked curling up in the awful discomfort of all. I liked picturing my wife’s mind full of thoughts about another man, her heart full of desires for things I couldn’t give her. I liked to think that she was imagining the taste of Max Riley’s big cock, maybe wondering about its size and the feel of it in her hand.

The second emotion, though, was fear. As much as I enjoyed all these fantasies, I was pretty sure I didn’t want Megyn to realize it.

After all, I knew how she would react. I could tell from the way she was reacting right now that if I unveiled all my thoughts to her, she would probably find me to be a depraved and horrible man.

Hope fluttered in my chest again.

Maybe I could just nudge her in the direction I wanted her to go?

“Why do you think my reaction’s weird?” I said gently.

She shrugged. “I don’t know. Aren’t you even a little bit worried that your wife is going on a date with another man?”

I squeezed her to me. She was right, of course. That would have been the most “normal” reaction to have. In truth, it was the reaction I was having.

It’s just that it felt good. I liked feeling jealous. I liked being worried.

But how could I explain this to Megyn?

So I lied. -ish.

“Honey,” I said, laying it on pretty thick. “Of course I am. It’s just... I really was serious, it’s not a real date, right?” I summoned deep concern and furrowed my brow. “Right?”

I could feel that my concern, even if it was a little staged, made her feel better. Her features brightened up a little. “No,” she agreed, practically whining. “It’s not, but... I didn’t know. It feels sort of funny.”

I kissed her forehead.

I then proceeded to shamelessly indulge in my own desires. Following my nose to them, like a hound. “Why does it feel funny?” I said. Then, suggestively, “unless you’re worried about it being more than a date.”

I tried to make this sound like a joke, but it didn’t really. And my thoughts, like dominoes, went crashing into the dirtiest places of my mind.

Unless she didn’t want it to be just date.

Unless she was hoping it would be more than just a date.

Unless she was thinking, right now, about the weight of Max Riley’s thick cock in her hand, his veins throbbing against her palm, the length of it sticky with her cum...

Megyn sighed, exasperated. “It’s not that,” she said. She sat up and looked at me. “And why are you okay with this?”

I shrugged. Inside, I felt like I was going to burst, but I was keeping a calm exterior.

Megyn tipped her head to one side. “Oh. I see. You don’t think I could tempt Max Riley?”

This placed me in a real conundrum, didn’t it? I floundered with several possible answers. Was she challenging me? She was getting all fired up, her green eyes glinting and her hair looking redder as her temper flared. Was it possible to push her into some kind of dare?

That was an exciting thought, but it was a dangerous one. Did I really want my wife trying to prove a point when she went on a date with Max Riley?

I had very little time to think about this, and I wasn’t able to articulate an answer in time.

“Ooooooh,” Megyn said. “I see.”

I wondered what she saw.

But she was already standing up. “Well,” she said. “That’s good, that you don’t care.”

I felt disoriented. Megyn started walking out of the room. She paused at the doorway and looked back at me.

I thought a lot, and I still think about, the look she gave to me when she turned her head and caught my eye.

“And we’ll just see about that,” she said.

Then she slinked away.

I blinked into the darkness outside the windows.

What the fuck had just happened?

I went over the conversation in my mind. Had Megyn just taken what I had said as a challenge to seduce Max Riley?

Or was that just what I wanted to think?

And why hadn't I said anything? What would Megyn think I thought now?

Did I need to straighten this out?

I mulled it over for a bit, with each passing moment making me more and more uneasy. After all, it was a lovely fantasy that Megyn had said something to that effect, or that she had some kooky idea in her mind to go seduce Max Riley – but it was quite different as a reality.

But was that even happening?

What was I supposed to do here?

I set my wine glass down and hurried down the hall.

Megyn was already under the covers. She had them arranged neatly over her legs and she was holding a book.

"Uh..." I said. "Are we... okay?"

Megyn looked over the top of the book. "What do you mean?"

Her tone was very odd. I couldn't tell if she was playing a game with me, teasing me a little, or if she was in one of those moods where I was supposed to know What Was The Matter.

"Uh, you just seem a little mad."

Her face remained exactly the same. "Do I."

It was a statement, not a question. A tiny smile turned up one corner of her mouth. Her eyes went back to the book.

"But you're not," I said. "Or are you?"

Megyn licked a finger and turned a page. She scanned the book with her eyes before looking back up at me. "I," she said. "Am not mad."

I waited for her to say something else.

"Uh... you seem mad," I said.

We were back at the beginning of the conversation.

Megyn folded up the book and set it aside. She drew her knees up to her chest and folded her arms around them. Her toes gave a slight wiggle under the duvet, indicating that her mood was slightly playful.

I was still on guard.

"No, no, every woman loves to hear that her husband doesn't mind her going on a date with a hot guy because he doesn't think the guy will be interested in her."

I quickly flipped through the notes I had mentally taken of the preceding conversation. Admittedly, I am a guy, and so I often don't really have any idea what just happened. Still, I did not remember saying this.

"I do not remember saying that," I said confidently.

"Well, you did. More or less," Megyn said, and she seemed to be gathering steam.

Fucking women, sometimes I really don't know what the hell they are thinking.

I shook my head. "Megyn," I said, and I sounded exasperated, even to myself. "That is not what happened."

She raised her eyebrows.

"You're reading into what I said."

"Huh."

There was a pause. Megyn shifted her jaw, a sign of aggression.

"Look," I said. "I really don't want you to be mad at me -"

"Really? Because let me tell you something. It's a real pro-tip. If you don't want your wife to be mad at you, don't not care if she's going on a date with a hot guy, and then tell her, 'oh, you wouldn't catch his interest anyway.'"

"Not what I said."

Megyn rolled her eyes and picked up her book. "Whatever."

This meant she knew I hadn't actually said that, but felt like I had said it, so it didn't really matter what had actually happened.

I sat down on the foot of the bed.

"Look," I said. "I really don't want to fight. I..."

I was about to tell her everything. It was all there at the tip of my tongue. All the dirty fantasies I had, how much I struggled with them, how much I buried them deep inside because they seemed so perverted.

I had been thinking about things like this for years. Even though it sounds ridiculous, I had never really, fully admitted to myself until that moment just how long I had been imagining my wife with another man, or how often that man was black, or how much the fantasy really wormed around inside of me.

It was such an epiphany. And I was just about to open up and share it with Megyn. I even opened my mouth and started to form the first words.

But her eyes were black with rage, and she was reading that book by peeling the words off the page with her hawkish stare.

I closed my mouth.

No, this definitely wasn't the time.

What was I thinking? There would never be a time.

I was mistaking being physically close to my fantasy for being capable of getting it. It was like believing that I'd own the Mona Lisa just because I was standing next to it in the Louvre.

Or whatever. Terrible metaphor.

But now Megyn was waiting. I could tell by the way she was icily turning the pages of her book without reading anything.

"I think I just said that..." I began, to keep her mood stable. I sighed. What to say?

"...because I didn't want you to know I'm actually jealous."

This froze her page-turning fingers.

She shot me a look.

She didn't believe me.

I sighed.

"Okay. Actually... the truth is... I just don't want to admit that..."

She was staring at me.

From somewhere in my mind, some advice someone – I didn't even know who, or why or when or where – had given me rose to the top of my boiling thoughts. A tiny bit of truth can hide a huge lie.

"Okay. Here's the truth. The truth I didn't want you to know. I sort of like being jealous."

Megyn dropped the book onto her lap.

"Huh?"

She was flummoxed, and that was good. And she was not angry – yet – which was also good.

I sighed dramatically. I was charting my course of action as I spoke, and beginning to feel like I had a pretty wise plan. "I, uh... I didn't want to tell you this because it's... I think it's weird, but it, uh... explains my behavior. You know. So... I just don't want you to read too much into it or anything."

Megyn was staring at me.

"Into what?" she said, finally.

I felt cornered suddenly, and I had to fight the urge to physically recoil from the question.

I had never liked the feeling this gave me. The manly-masculine side of myself, the one I liked to believe would always win, often made such declarations to the rest of myself as: “Just tell your fucking wife, already, and get it over with.”

It wasn’t, after all, as though Megyn was going to divorce me over a fantasy.

But at the end of the day, I was too scared to tell her about it. “Manly-masculine man” was not winning, and I hated that. I hated thinking about it, I hated admitting it to myself, and I hated the feeling of being humiliated by... well, myself.

All because of Megyn.

Because at the end of the day I really loved Megyn more than anyone in the world, and if she somehow got a low opinion of me – as she might do, if she knew how often I pictured her with a black cock in her mouth, for reasons I didn’t fully understand myself – then I would be devastated.

No point in taking that risk.

Which made me feel like a wuss.

I’m a complicated man.

“I sort of like feeling jealous. It’s kind of exciting,” I said.

As soon as I said this, I actually felt a huge sense of relief. It was true, it was clean, it was a good warm-up, and maybe I could feel out how Megyn would react to further... ideas. But I could always pretend this was the extent of things.

There was one chink in the plan:

Megyn.

Megyn was a little too direct, and frankly a little too curious, for me to say something like “I find feeling jealous exciting” and leave it at that.

“It’s exciting how? Like, sexually exciting?” she said, turning the idea over in her mind.

“Uh...” I said. “Yeah, you know, sort of... a turn-on, I guess.”

Megyn’s mouth dropped open a little.

Then, to my surprise, she picked up her book. She held it up and turned the pages – backwards – to where she had been reading before she started anger-page-turning. She shook her head amiably. “I don’t get it,” she said.

There was a pause, while I considered what had just happened.

What had just happened?

Megyn did not appear to need any further explanation than that.

I was a little confused about what I should do with myself, and whether or not this situation – which I was still trying to understand – was resolved or not, and weighing the likelihood of my being able to leverage this spat into some make-up sex (or, in the event it had not actually been an argument, just plain sex). I finally opted for getting up and finding my wine to help me think, when Megyn said:

“So. It’s not that you don’t care that I’m going on a date with Max Riley... it’s that you enjoy feeling jealous about it.”

Her voice was queer. Her eyes were on the book, but they were flashing with a kind of wet, mysterious... thing. Her mouth was turned up at one corner.

She seemed almost amused.

I didn’t know what to say.

“So,” she continued, putting the book down again. She slid down onto her right side and put her hand in her hair. “If I were to get really dressed up, and really go all out to have a nice time, that actually wouldn’t bother you, you’re saying?”

She was really searching my face as she waited for my response.

I just shook my head slowly. This conversation had me as troubled as a stray dog being offered some food.

Her eyes twinkled. “Huh.”

She patted her pillow. “Well, that could be kind of fun, then.”

My cock had been responding to this conversation by slowly filling out in my boxers, but this last sentence made it hurtle to full-fledged life.

“Are you serious about this?” she said suddenly.

I nodded.

I considered taking her hand and placing it in my lap, just to let her know how seriously I was taking it, but I decided that was letting her too much behind the curtain.

Lewd, lewd. Lewd man.

“So... what kind of things make you jealous?” she said.

She was just forging ahead.

I felt a tremor travel through me. It was cold and hot and deliciously, painfully erotic.

She was waiting for my answer. My wife. Looking cute with her head in her hand, propped up on a pillow, looking at me earnestly and asking me what kinds of things made me jealous.

After I let an image pass through my head, of her staring at me while she swallowed Max Riley's cock, I opened my mouth and said: "Well, uh... getting really dressed up is good."

My voice was dry and cracked.

She rolled her eyes and slapped the bed. "Of course I'm going to get dressed up for Max Riley," she said. "What else?"

"Uh..."

This could really go wrong if I said the wrong thing, I remember thinking.

But Megyn saved the day. "It would make you jealous if I got dressed up... what if I bought a whole new dress to meet Max Riley?"

I moved my head, and I meant to nod, but the movement was strange.

"A really sexy dress."

Another weird nod from me.

My cock was aching now.

Megyn surprised me, yet again, by crawling out from under the covers and toward me. "And what else?" she said. "What else would make you jealous?"

Oh, the images that flashed through my head.

We didn't say anything else, not with words. Not to my recollection. I remember that Megyn held my gaze, and reached out to touch my hard cock. It was almost as if she was saying: "Would this turn you on?"

And I didn't say anything back to her, but the next thing I knew I was looking down at where she was scraping her fingernail over the wet stain of precum that had soaked through my pants. I sucked in my breath.

We looked at each other for a moment, and then we dove for each other's mouths. I climbed onto the bed to my knees and slid my pants and boxers down, while kissing Megyn with the same kind of passionate kiss from nights before. She had taken off her sweats and a pair of cotton panties was all I needed to penetrate to find her pussy.

I could feel that her panties were wet as soon as I slid my fingers over the top of them. We were still looking at each other, and her eyes showed me that she read my mind as I made the discovery.

So Naughty Megyn was just as turned on as I was.

I slipped a finger under the panties and found her sodden hole right away. I rubbed my thumb over her clit through her panties.

She was wildly wet. I could smell her scent now, wafting up between our bodies.

Her voice was replaying in my head: so would this make you jealous? What about this, what about that...

And then I began to add my own imagination to her words, to create images to go with the soundtrack of her voice. As I pulled her panties down her legs and over her ankles, as I knelt over her, moving my cock over her clit to tease her, I pictured her saying what about this? With Max Riley's cock in her hand, inches from her mouth.

I sank into her pussy and she slid down a little, nibbling at my chest, finding my nipples with her mouth. The heat of her small bites rippled through me; I pictured her sinking her neat white teeth into the firm, chocolate pecs of Max Riley, while he sank further and further inside of her, her legs flailing wildly around him.

I had to put a halt on these thoughts to last long enough to feel her body rising, her hips wiggling beneath me. As soon as I was sure that she was going over the edge, as soon as I felt the tight squeeze of her muscles around my cock, I let a final image flash through my head and my cum surged from the base of my cock and into her quivering cunt.

"What about this?" she said, looking behind her on all fours, her own fingers sliding into her ass, the thick veined shaft of Max Riley sinking into her pussy with a sticky, wet squelch.

"Huh," she said, after we collapsed on the bed and lay there for a bit. It was late, she was playing absent-mindedly with the hair on my chest. "I had no idea that turned you on."

I thought maybe it was the beginning of a long conversation.

I closed my eyes, thinking I needed to turn off the sunroom light, lock the door, hear what Megyn had to say. But the sleepiness of post-sex was bearing down on me, and before I knew it I had drifted off.

Megyn had fallen asleep by the time I drifted back to responsibilities, like the light and the door. I looked at her after I shifted her onto the bed.

If the confession had troubled her, it certainly didn't appear that way.

"Huh," I said aloud, looking at her peacefully sleeping face.

I made myself a drink when I got out to the kitchen, and I remember looking out into the black night with my heart sort of soaring.

The door was open, just a crack.

It was exhilarating.

4: SHOPPING

The date of the date had been set, and the wheels put in motion for my wife to go out with the sexy star Max Riley.

And the wheels had been put in motion inside Megyn's mind to tease me with this "jealousy" I liked so much. Though precisely how much those wheels would turn, I didn't know. I was afraid to ask, so I decided to just sit back and enjoy the show, be grateful for whatever I got.

A tactic, I would soon discover, that paid off well.

A few days after our "jealousy talk," which I was increasingly proud of myself for handling so deftly, Megyn called me in the middle of the day, at work. This was something she did so rarely that it sent a jolt of fear through me when I heard her voice.

"Everything okay?" I said.

"Uh... why? Yeah, of course."

I had thrown her off-guard. She seemed a little annoyed, but she recovered quickly. "So," she said, dropping her voice to a sexy purr. "Have you checked your email?"

I pulled it up on my phone, because I didn't use my work email – which was heavily monitored – for personal emails. I was half-expecting naked pictures or a porno to pop up in Megyn's email titled "Get This."

But no, it was just a boring email.

"Peter?" Megyn said, and I realized I hadn't answered her.

The lengthy email contained information about the dress code for her upcoming date. The email suggested certain colors, something sexy but not too risqué (with suggestions about the length of her skirt and the plunge of her neckline, no less).

"I don't have anything like that," Megyn purred in my ear. "So I was wondering if maybe you'd take me shopping on Thursday. So I can pick out a very sexy, not-too-risqué, red dress for my date with Max Riley."

I looked quickly around me. I worked in an open-concept web design office, where no one has the same desk every day (in theory). There were no cubicle walls to hide me, and the desks on the far end of the warehouse-turned office were far enough away that someone seated there would see I had a huge erection under the table, if they looked.

There were only a handful of people at work, and they were immersed in their projects.

“I, uh... yeah. Yeah of course.”

“I think I need new shoes, too.”

I breathed into the phone.

“Sexy ones. Very high heels, I was thinking. I sent you a picture of a pair I really like just now.”

I opened her next email and gawked at the strappy heels.

“So it’s a date?” she said, when I said nothing.

“Yeah.. yes, definitely,” I bumbled.

I heard her laugh lightly, and then she was gone.

And so there we were. My wife sliding hangers along racks, frowning and smiling at dresses in turn, holding them up for me to see. I think she just actually, innocently, wanted advice about her clothes. I don’t think she knew that she was kneading my balls the way she was, that every single moment we were in the store I felt like I was going to explode.

I doubt she figured that I would be thinking about how I was wrapping my wife up like a present, putting her in a sexy dress so that Max Riley could peel her open and get his cock inside of her.

Megyn sighed. “I’m not really finding anything here,” she said.

I pressed my lips together, attempting to look sympathetic. I looked around the store. “Well,” I said. “Maybe this just isn’t the right store. All this stuff is a little... conservative.”

She was pawing through the dresses again. “It can’t be a hooker outfit,” she said, impatiently.

At that moment, a sales clerk approached us to ask if we needed help finding anything. A tall, slender millennial with a model’s body and an unfortunate face, she looked bored as hell.

“My wife here is going on a date,” I said, to shake her up.

“Oh,” she said, no more interested in us than before.

But then my words made a slow circuit through her mind, and she raised her eyebrows in brief alarm. Another slow circuit and she relaxed into an awkward laugh. “Oh. Oh, with you,” she said, and laughed awkwardly again.

Megyn was now shaking her head.

“Actually,” I said, “It’s not with me. My wife is going on a date with a very good-looking gentleman who is also famous and rich. Perhaps you know him.”

Megyn turned, resting her arm on the clothing rack, and said dryly, “It’s a charity thing. I need a red dress, about this color.”

“Who’s your date?” the girl asked. She had keyed herself back into the matrix upon hearing the word “famous.” Or perhaps it had been “rich” that caught her attention.

Megyn demurred.

“Max Riley,” I offered helpfully.

The young girl scrunched her nose for a moment, an expression of distaste for a sect of people she clearly considered generations older than her, and actors who pertained to another era.

But then her mouth formed into an “o” shape, and her breath got caught in her throat. “Wait,” she cawed, and the word left her mouth as caterpillar of diphthongs. Waaayyyyyyaaaaayyyyyyaaaaayyyyyt.

“Is he that guy...” another chain reaction of vowels lingered in the air as she rolled her eyes skyward. She seemed to be looking for her next words in the trendy rafters of the ceiling. “Is he that guy from the TV show, The Hill, or whatever it is? The black guy?”

“Yes,” I said, my mood getting more jovial by the second.

The girl coiled up, as though she meant to strike out at us any moment. She put her hand on her hip and cocked her head. “No.” She looked quickly from Megyn to me and back again.

Megyn shrugged. “I have all these specifications,” she said, taking the phone out of my hand. “Can you see if you have a dress that’s...” she swiped at the screen. The girl continued staring, and moving her eyes back and forth from one of us to the other.

I stood there grinning. Why not?

“... it needs to be this shade of red, more or less, which is... yeah, that doesn’t necessarily look good on me, and then, it can’t be too short, it has to be – you know what, here, here’s the email. Do you have anything like that?”

Megyn placed the phone in the girl’s hand, and she let her eyes drop to read the screen.

Then she looked back up.

“You’re... so what is this, like... I thought you guys said you were married.”

“It’s a charity thing,” Megyn said.

This answer seemed to satisfy the sales attendant in some way.

Then she squealed, balling up her fists. “Oh my God! Okay. Okay... so.... here is some stuff...”

She practically ran to the back of the store.

“Oh. My. God,” I said, nudging Megyn and giving it my best valley-girl impression. Or whatever they call that way of talking these days. “You are like, so popular.”

Megyn recoiled from me now, putting her hand on her hip just like the girl had done. Then she gave a shake of her hair. “I am, aren’t I?” And with what is best described as a harrumph, she strolled in the direction our excited attendant had gone.

“Are you, like, so going to be jealous?” the girl asked me, fifteen minutes later. Her name was Amber, a piece of information, like many others (such as the fact that she loved owls, had two boyfriends, was taking a year off of community college, and hated some kind of internet application the name of which I didn’t think I could pronounce) had been machine-gunned at me as we stood outside the dressing room together waiting for Megyn to emerge in a variety of dresses.

Other customers had come in and left the store, and Amber did not seem to work on commission or care about them anymore.

So far, Megyn had come out in two dresses, neither of which was particularly suitable. The first one had been too scandalous for TV (or even for waiting tables at a strip club), and the image of it still burned in my mind (and my crotch). Amber had fished a skin-tight red sheath that came barely to mid-thigh and clung to Megyn’s figure in bunched, filmy red flowery things (I didn’t understand). It was sexy as hell, and it was the first time I had seen Megyn in anything vaguely risqué for a long time.

Her running was paying off, I had noticed. After the kids she had developed a bit of a belly, which was very sexy, but this had melted away and was now just a slight fullness in her abdomen. Her legs and arms were toned without being excessive. An attractive line of muscle ran along the length of her upper thigh and disappeared under the dress.

“You look hot,” I had blubbered.

The second dress had been too fancy, as Megyn had put it: it was too long and flowy for the intended date, which Megyn had been vague about. I gleaned from the ad I had read and re-read that it would involve cooking.

My cock thickened slightly and I sat down in a chair with my ankle on my knee in the hopes of hiding it.

Now we were on the third dress.

The handle turned and the door opened.

Amber turned to me, her eyes wild and her mouth open in a big smile.

The dress was a terracotta red which wasn't a shade I would have thought would look as good on Megyn as it did. Even in the stark, fluorescent light, the color picked up the highlights of her hair and her eyes, and the flush on her cheeks.

I could tell by the expression on her own face that she knew just how good she looked in it.

The dress clung to her body in a sort of bunched material, accenting the slight roundness of her stomach and the shape of her slender hips. A deeper-than-usual cut at the collar gave a view of inside swells of her small but shapely breasts. Three-quarter length sleeves saved the ensemble, with its short hem-length and cleavage view, from being slutty. It was a classy, pretty dress that complimented her perfectly.

Not only that, I realized it had been quite some time since I'd seen Megyn in anything "fancy."

I resisted the urge to let out a low whistle.

"It's the right one," Megyn said, after looking at my face for a bit. She knew from looking at me how I felt about it. Without waiting for me to say anything (I was just staring at her, gawking), she nodded at Amber, who had clapped her hands together with glee when Megyn had come out. "I'll take it."

The clerk nodded enthusiastically. "Oh! It's so pretty. You look amazing."

Megyn retreated into the changing room to take it off.

Amber gave me a look. It was the kind of look that said: "You, sir, are an idiot." She turned on her heel and went to the counter, where she waited, an expression of mild disbelief on her face, to ring up the dress.

"Okay," Megyn said, when we exited the store. I could feel her excitement burning off of her, radiating next to me. She was excited, and it was adding flush to her skin and a sparkle to her eyes. A sort of rushed clumsiness to the way that she talked. Behind everything she was saying, her thoughts were miles away, and she was trying desperately to hide the thrill it had given her to try on that dress and look so hot in it.

The dress she was wearing to go on a date with another man.

If Megyn was having a hard time hiding her excitement, so was I.

I didn't know what Megyn was thinking. I didn't know if this was part of some extensive game she was playing, a game that had begun that night we had talked about "my jealousy". I didn't know if it was more than a game, and teasing me had turned into a thrill for her – one she might take further. Maybe she had been joking, and forgotten all about that incident, and all of this shopping glee was just part of a different, new excitement. Maybe she was just getting caught up in her own fantasy with Max, and the fun I was having was purely incidental.

I didn't know, and I certainly wasn't going to do anything to break the magic.

We stood in front of the store, and it was clear that Megyn didn't just want to go home, but she also seemed to not want to suggest anything. She had, after all just purchased a really expensive dress for her date.

"I think," I said, and I hope my voice didn't crack as much as I felt like it was, "that as long as we're here, we should -" I cut myself off, because I was going to say, "get all our shopping out of the way."

As the words left my mouth, I realized I had the intention of steering Megyn into a lingerie store eventually.

Then, I had a thought: "Hey. You need shoes for that, don't you?"

Megyn bit her lip and tried to make a face like the suggestion took her completely by surprise. "I... guess so."

I was perversely delighted with how fake this whole act was. Megyn had been thinking about her shoes all along, and she was relieved that I had suggested them. Her excitement was buzzing under her skin; it was almost tangible.

"Let's get you some shoes, then."

For your date. With another man.

As we walked along in the mall, I wondered what the hell was wrong with me. I wondered why this poker-hot, delicious feeling was slithering around inside of me, shopping for fucking shoes. But just picturing a sales clerk slipping some sultry heels over Megyn's feet while I sat there watching, knowing that the shoes were for this date, for another man to appreciate – the idea of it all was driving me wild.

We stopped in front of a window and surveyed the shoes.

“Too practical,” Megyn said softly.

I felt my cock twitch. Oh good. She, like me, was envisioning something higher, something sexier, something sluttier.

I felt almost a punch in the stomach as I pictured Max Riley slipping these (as yet imaginary) shoes off her feet.

We walked on. We found a store a bit further down the corridor, one I had never even noticed, with an array of very tall heels and expensive price tags glaring from every corner.

Another sales lady approached us begrudgingly.

Megyn held up her bag. “Can I show you a dress, and you make a recommendation for a shoe for me?”

The girl brightened a little and they walked back to the counter. I stood where I was, unsure if I was invited on this female bonding trip.

“What’s it for?” the girl said, after complimenting the dress.

I pretended to look at a shoe with great interest.

“Well,” Megyn said, and the excitement – real, undiluted excitement – was evident in her voice. “You probably won’t believe this, but I won a date with Max Riley.”

“What?!”

As exciting as this all was, in terms of my daydreams about my wife, I was getting a little bit tired of all the gulping of air and waving of hands that women were doing every time someone said “Max Riley.”

I mean, really.

He was good-looking. But he was just some guy, not the fucking return of Jesus.

“So what are you doing?” the girl insisted. “Is it like, a restaurant, or...?”

“I think it’s cooking. At his house. Kind of a thing.”

This was met with silence by the girl and a nearly audible thunk of my heart against my chest by me.

I started breathing faster.

It was hard to know if I was breathing like that because I was shocked by the location of this “date,” and it suddenly occurred to me that this whole thing was a little over-the-top. Or if it was because... well, it was over-the-top, but the prospect thrilled me.

In his house.

"I have the perfect thing," the girl said.

The two of them rushed past me, behind me, and I watched them in the mirror in front of me as the sales attendant went to a tall, light brown leather boot with an extremely high heel.

I'm a guy, and even I knew before she tried it on with the dress, that the boot was perfect.

I also knew, as she held it in her hands and turned it around and around, feeling the leather, that my wife was about to spend at least $500 on a pair of shoes.

For another man.

"You want to go in the back and put the dress on, and try the shoes with that?" the sales clerk suggested. "That way you'll know if it all works or not. But I think it will. These boots are hot. I so wish I had something to wear them with. It's like they were made for this dress."

Megyn looked at me, amused. "Yes," she said.

The girl guided her to the back, and they were both back there for a while. Then the sales attendant returned and walked around the counter, folding her arms over her stomach.

"Are you her...?"

"Husband," I said. I couldn't tell if I felt humiliated, or if it gave me pleasure to say the word "husband" and watch the girl's face crowd with expressions of pity and shock and disdain and confusion.

"Oh," she said.

Megyn emerged from the back of the store.

Again, her face was flushed with pleasure, pleasure she was trying to subdue but failing miserably at doing. The boots seemed to have buoyed her spirits so much that she walked differently; erect, like a model, slinking rather than shuffling along. She strode out to stand next to me and appraise herself in the mirror.

The boots came to just below her knee. They added about three inches to her height. And they did, as the sales girl had noted, seem to be made for the dress. Megyn looked fashionable and sexy and sort of casual. The boots added a hint of sluttiness, because they were knee-high, but not as much sluttiness as say, black boots would have done.

“Oh my God,” the girl said. “You have to buy those boots.”

Megyn was excited. I could tell she loved the way she looked in the mirror. I loved the way she looked.

I loved the fact that she looked like this because she had a date with Max Riley.

Her face fell a little. She leaned over to me. “They’re almost five hundred dollars,” she whispered.

Bingo.

I looked her up and down in the mirror as she waited, breathlessly. “They look so good, though.”

I saw her face light up with hope.

“I think we should get them,” I said.

Megyn couldn’t contain herself. She let out a little squeal, and the sales girl clapped her hands together. Just one clap, nothing cliched.

But still.

Megyn headed to the back, then stopped and turned to us. “Maybe I can – no, I don’t want to mess it up,” she said. “Okay. I’m going to change.”

“I’ll ring you up,” the clerk said. “Unless you need anything else.”

“Oh, I think that’s enough,” I said, approaching the cash register with my hand in my pocket, fishing out my wallet.

But in truth, I didn’t want the day to be over yet. A fever was taking me over, making me want to put even more things on my wife and watch her flush with excitement and try to hide it. I wanted to get her into the lingerie store somehow, and find some pretty underwear for her.

And even though it was really just for me, even though I obviously didn’t actually want Max Riley to see my wife in her lingerie – I wanted to keep enjoying the fantasy, thinking about whatever we picked out being less “intimate” than intended.

More shared.

“That’s five seventy-seven, fifty,” the sales attendant intoned.

I handed over my Visa.

Why? Why was I like this? How could I possibly be turned on by the idea of my wife cheating on me, in plain sight, with a man who was thirty times the man as me?

Megyn came striding out of the back room, her bags in hand. She set the large shoe box containing the boots on the counter.

“Those are incredible boots,” I said, giving her a kiss. “I’m starting to get worried Max Riley won’t be able to contain himself.”

Just saying the words made a rush of images flood my mind, and I felt my erection – one that had been just kind of lingering all afternoon – growing.

Megyn shook her head.

But this time, it was more of a fake modesty kind of shake. Not the same impatient shake she had been giving, when she had viewed the whole thing as an inconvenience she would rather get out of. She was coming around to the idea with each passing day, and now that she had these hot clothes, she seemed to be... looking forward to it.

What would I do, I wondered, if all of my daydreaming got real all of a sudden? What if Max Riley really couldn’t contain himself? What if my wife’s distant gazes and deep thoughts really had been about Max?

What if I was setting myself up to get dumped?

My soaring mood started to take a dive. I felt like I was in free-fall.

Yeah.

What the fuck was I thinking?

Megyn looked at me, and put her hand on my hand. “Whoa,” she said. “Is it too much? It’s too much. Hey, no problem. Yeah, you know what? These are way too expensive, this is... this is silly.”

The sales clerk’s face was falling. She paused, her hands in midair, ready to staple the receipt at any second. Her mouth fell open.

“Can we maybe... I think we better-” Megyn began.

I held up a hand. “No!” It came out more forcefully than I had intended. “I mean, honey, no, it’s fine. It’s not that. These are great, you’ll use them for a lot of other stuff.”

This was a lie: what the hell can anyone use knee-high Italian leather boots (not waterproof) for, besides luring a movie star?

But Megyn was relieved (entirely too quickly, I might add.)

“Really?” she asked, and she left only the tiniest of pauses between that and, “okay.”

The sales attendant snapped the stapler and quickly transferred the bag to Megyn’s hands. She must have learned to get things into the customer’s hands ASAP. She practically threw it at us.

If she walks right past it, I thought, I won’t say anything.

After all, did I really want my own wife to have the idea to go into a lingerie store while she was shopping for a dress and shoes for a platonic date with a tall, handsome black man?

No.

Not really.

But tell that to my heart, which was strumming away in my chest as though I had run a marathon.

Megyn's head turned and her gaze passed over the mannequins, the skimpy bras and the panties in the window. She looked behind her, directly at me – I must have been following, drooling, looking a bit like a rabid dog. She blushed.

She kept walking.

My heart fell.

Then she paused at the end of the window display.

"You know..." she said casually. "Since we're here, I just realized, I need some underwear."

She waited for me to say something. I crossed my hands in front of my waist. The shoebox dug painfully into my nut sack.

"Do you mind?" she said.

I shook my head.

She started back toward the door.

"I might as well go with you," I said, trying to sound more lighthearted than I felt.

Megyn smiled at me.

God, this was almost like a first date, or maybe that date when you know you're finally going to have sex, but neither one wants to say anything and get shot down or embarrassed. Such a dance.

It was thrilling.

I followed her into the lingerie store.

"I'm just going over to the sales items," she said, and rushed over to them.

Leaving me alone in the lingerie store.

I realized I had never experienced this before. I wasn't a shop-for-lingerie kind of guy. But now that I was standing there, and my wife did not seem to be shopping with me, the other women and the sales clerks turned to look at me.

I felt, I have to say, like a little bit of a bad-ass.

“Can I help you find something for your...” a salesclerk said, approaching me quickly.

“Wife,” I said.

“I see,” she said smartly. “And... do you know her sizes?”

I didn’t, really. I knew she wore a b-cup, but just barely.

“Honestly,” I said, “she is built almost exactly like that redhead over there,” I said, pointing to my wife.

The salesclerk looked over at my wife discreetly.

She smiled, and then fiddled with something on a hanger in front of her. “Of course I couldn’t ask her specifically,” the clerk said, “but maybe I can gauge it by something she’s looking at? Do you think she’s exactly her size?”

I nodded fervently. “Yes, exactly.”

“Okay, well... let’s pick out something you like, and then if she buys something I can tell you what the size was.”

I smiled warmly at her. Such a clever girl.

Megyn was frowning at me in curiosity from across the room.

I took out my phone. “Just one second,” I said, holding up a finger to the clerk.

I texted Megyn.

[Me]: this clerk thinks ur not my wife play along

Megyn made a face when she read the message. Then she caught my eyes and shrugged. She went back to what she was doing.

“So, I’m... pardon, what’s your name, darling?” I said to the clerk.

“Kim,” she said.

“So Kim, I’m looking for something pretty... racy. Red. It needs to go with a red dress.”

Kim shook her head confidently. “Don’t get red for red,” she said, and it was clear that she did not hear the Seussian quality of her pronouncement. “Shoes?”

“Huh?”

“What color are the shoes? Match the lingerie to the shoes. That way, she can slide out of the dress, have the shoes on, and put on a little show,” Kim explained. She put her hand to the side of her mouth, as though there were anyone around to keep this information from, and added, “Also it’s just tacky to have some red that isn't quite the right red. With red. So what color are the shoes?"

"Sort of beige," I said, almost unable to believe the way I was dipping into my fantasy.

I wasn't actually looking for underwear for my wife's date with another man, was I? Not actually for the purposes of her showing it to him.

Kim nodded, unaware of what was happening inside my mind. "That's very classy now. Very in. And I have... the perfect thing." I had no idea what she was talking about. My mind was going to dark places, very quickly. She started walking, and I followed, assuming that's what she wanted me to do.

"Now, you might be thinking, 'beige, ugh, that's like grandma-wear,' but this is so sexy..." she said, and then her voice was lost as she abruptly turned a corner.

Megyn was watching me with her hand on her hip. Smiling. Did she know what I was up to? Did she suspect that I was picking out lingerie for her? With her date in mind? Did she like the idea of me doing that, or was it just an amusing game to her? Would she be repulsed if she knew how very seriously I was taking this fantasy inside my own mind?

We stopped suddenly and I almost ran into Kim.

We were standing by a rack of beige-colored bra and panty sets, and I frowned. They did, actually, look matronly, just as she had warned. Kim held up a hand to my frown. "I know," she said, "but trust me. Just... wait..." she reached back into the garments, a stretch for her, and retrieved a lingerie set, which she held up for my inspection.

The color was less neutral beige than the others, though it was hard to say why or how. But she was right. The set was sexy in spite of its color. Intricate lace curled provocatively around the edges of the bra, but it was largely transparent. The panties were the same, edged with the pretty, sparking lace but with a body of a mesh-like material that would allow for a gauzy, sexy look at what was beneath them.

"Of course, these aren't the right size." Kim leaned toward me. "We'll wait, and see what she buys," she whispered.

I was staring at her. My mind had traveled far away, picturing this set of underwear appearing inch by inch, as the zipper of the red dress was pulled slowly down by a pair of dark black fingers.

I shuddered.

“You like them?” Kim persisted.

“Yes,” was all I managed to croak. “I’ll... um... yes, please find out the size.”

“Or you can just text your wife,” she said. “Unless you really want it to be a surprise.”

I shook my head. I myself was unsure what I meant by that.

“Okay. Do you want to pick out some stockings?”

I blinked. I was really going down the rabbit hole of dirty images.

Kim pointed to the right. “Your wife probably wears a medium,” she said. She started walking toward them, and I followed. She waved in the direction of hundreds of cardboard containers. “Get something with a beige lace,” she said. “And it will go really nicely with... oh! Actually,” she crowed. “I have just the thing. This one has little flecks of red in it...”

She selected a package and handed it to me.

“Anyway,” she said, to my silence. “I’ll just go peep on this size while you check things out. But really, you should text your wife for the best fit. Unless...”

She lost interest in finishing her sentence, and shimmied away.

My phone rattled against my leg, sending a buzz through my semi-hard cock.

Not helpful.

[Megyn]: What are u doing?

I looked around. She was grinning, standing by a table piled high with silky undergarments. She looked up at me after I stared at her for a while.

She shrugged. Well?

I typed.

[Me]: Its a surprise

I watched my wife smile as she read my message. There was something impish in her smile again, a mystery to her thoughts that I hadn’t seen for ages. After so many years of marriage, and kids, we had become the kind of people who already knew what the other was thinking, all the time. Which is lovely in its own way, but not very exciting. Seeing something in Megyn’s smile that I didn’t recognize, knowing that something was brewing in her mind that I couldn't be certain of, was exhilarating.

[Megyn]: Is it a pony?

I laughed under my breath. And tried to think of a good comeback.

[Megyn]: Large.

I looked up at her, alarmed. She was smiling.

[Megyn]: Ohhhh not for the pony. 32B and medium

Then:

[Megyn]: I promise to be surprised.

[Megyn]: Exactly

I slipped the phone into my pocket and looked at the stockings through the cellophane on the package.

It had been a long time since Megyn and I had engaged in this kind of fun, friendly banter as well. I wondered why we didn't do it more often. In fact, thinking about it, it had been a long time since we had gone out on a date, or a shopping trip where we weren't buying things for the kids or running around frantically. It had been a long time since Megyn had asked me how she looked in her clothes, or dressed up in something new.

And a long, long time since she had purchased lingerie.

I looked over at her. She was holding a pair of black thongs up to the light, as though trying to figure out how they worked. The material was little more than a scrap of fabric.

I took my phone out.

[Me]: get them

I watched her smile as she read the text. She shook her head and looked down at the screen, as though she were about to type something. Then she looked up at me and grinned.

She dropped them into a basket she was carrying and turned around to browse some other items.

I took the stockings to the front and got Kim's attention.

"I got her size," I said.

Kim nodded, as though I had made a very sage decision, and she came around the counter at an efficient clip.

"Uh..." I blurted. "I'm thinking of maybe... getting a few other items, like maybe... I don't know, do you have any recommendations?"

This declaration not only seemed to not surprise Kim, she seemed almost to have been waiting for it.

Of course. No wonder she had gravitated toward me. Men probably went bonkers in this store. Unrealistically, expensively, addictively bonkers.

I had a moment of shame for my gender, but as usual it was instantly gone, replaced by thoughts about my wife in the filthy burlesque-looking panty set that Kim was waving in front of me.

"This... is a little unusual," she said. "But it's really popular with the ladies."

I felt my phone buzz.

"Yeah?" I said. The price tag had already caught my eye.

"It comes with this robe..." she said, fingering a see-through "robe" with a fringe of black lace.

My phone buzzed again.

Kim threw the set over an arm and fished into a rack behind her. "There's also this, which is just beautiful."

I took my phone out.

[Megyn]: yes

[Megyn]: get that robe I want the robe

I looked in the direction I had last seen my wife, but I didn't find her.

Kim was holding a white and blue lingerie with a sort of ombre to it in front of me.

My mind was now loosed from its moorings, spinning off into images of Megyn in the silky, lacy, pearl-encrusted ombre bra, a dark form behind her, unhooking it with soft snaps, the material sliding down her skin...

“I like them both,” I said. “I’ll take them.”

Kim smiled. Her mind was already spending her commission. “Maybe you should get some stockings to go with these?” she said suggestively.

“I’ll defer to your recommendations,” I said.

Megyn was at the register with a basket of items. God only knew how much we were spending, but I didn’t care. The blood that might have reached the part of my brain responsible for thinking about such things was redirected.

I felt the buzz of my phone against my palm. I was standing rather stupidly in the middle of the store, probably with a really lascivious expression on my face, and I hadn’t returned it to my pocket.

[Megyn]: meet you at the fountain

When I left the store, I was on a high. I didn’t know what exactly Megyn was playing at, or how seriously she was taking any of this, or how much it approximated my own fantasy – but I didn’t care.

I swept my eyes up and down the wide corridor of the mall, looking for “the fountain.”

I found it and walked toward the area.

Megyn was sitting on a bench with her legs crossed, and, how to say this? She was sitting in a sassy kind of way. The foot she had crossed over her leg bobbed playfully, and she grinned when she saw me.

I stood in front of her. “Hey,” I said.

“Hey,” she answered. She was definitely being playful and flirtatious. I wondered if she was as wound up as I was. I wanted to take her out to the car, which was parked in a shady corner of the parking structure, and have sex right there.

“You wanna go get some eats with me?” I said instead. It was a weird attempt to sound like a mall rat, which was silly because we were well past that age and this mall was way too expensive for teenagers to hang out in.

She looked a little surprised. Then she shrugged. “Okay.”

I didn't know where I was going, but I took Megyn's hand and walked quickly toward the parking area with authority. I had my mind set on leaning over her in the car and not even making it out of the parking lot.

"Oh," she said, as we rounded the final corridor between us and the lot. "I have an idea... there's that fancy place in the hotel, right here."

My excitement dampened a little. I looked at her.

Was she actually hungry? Or just teasing me? It was hard to tell. Her expression was unreadable. It was both impish and perfectly sincere.

She tugged at my arm. "Come on. I know we've spent a ton of money today but it'll be fun. We never do anything impulsive."

This was true. And anyway, it was a drop in the bucket at this point. I followed her.

5: TRYING THINGS ON

We settled into a cozy booth in a corner of the restaurant. Megyn looked around approvingly. “This place is actually really classy.”

They had taken our shopping bags at the door, to put them neatly away while we enjoyed our drinks without looking like hoboes.

A waiter presented the menus to us and asked for our drink order. Megyn looked at me, raising her eyebrows.

What the hell?

“A bottle of wine?” I asked her, and I saw that the prospect excited her. She smiled. “Red or white?”

“White,” she mouthed.

I asked the waiter to recommend a good one. Megyn was a fan of dry white wines. He asked if we were eating anything, and when we looked back and forth at each other, he suggested an appetizer of oysters and a spicy side ceviche containing avocados.

“They’re aphrodisiacs,” he said slyly.

Megyn tried to look shocked, and I smiled. The waiter barely waited for my assent to take down the order.

Then we laughed.

It wasn’t like Megyn and I never went out to eat, but when we did, there wasn’t the kind of chemistry between the two of us to prompt waiters to suggest plates of oysters as an appetizer.

Megyn put her hand on her cheek and laughed, a little embarrassed by the attention.

Then she leaned on her hands. “So,” she said. “Are you going to show me what you bought?”

I looked around. “Right here?”

Megyn glanced around the restaurant. “Yeah,” she said. “I guess it’s not the most appropriate place.”

The waiter was back almost instantly. He poured the wine for us, while Megyn made a face at how fancy everything was. We clinked our glasses together and she took a sip of her drink. “I’m just so excited, though,” she said.

Then she looked at me, and her face was very... very what? It almost seemed like Megyn had read through a diary of mine (I didn’t keep one) or picked apart my head. She was looking at me with exactly the look I put on her face in my wildest fantasies. Teasing, leading, erotic. I was barely able to control the urge to pinch myself.

“Can’t you at least give me a hint?”

My mouth fell open a little.

A hint. A hint. A hint about what? What the fuck was going on?

Megyn’s look was searing right through me, and my cock was getting hard. The whole afternoon of sexy clothes and boots and lingerie swirled around in my head, but it was such a jumble at that moment that I really couldn’t figure out what Megyn was talking to me about.

‘A hint,’ I repeated uselessly.

Megyn took another sip of her wine and leaned back. “About the lingerie,” she said. “What did you buy?”

And then she gave me some more of that simmering look.

There was a strange pause while I tried to get my thoughts in order. I was feeling a little bit of a shift – a small one, one that maybe wasn’t even real – in the power dynamic between us. Almost like Megyn had somehow gotten a hold of my fantasy, plucked it from my brain, and was now running with it.

I wasn’t sure if I liked it.

I mean, I did. Her green eyes were burning right through me and I felt like a sixteen-year old hornball.

But it was giving me an uncomfortable sense of vertigo.

“Uh...” I said, looking for the right words.

The waiter saved me by appearing with our appetizer. He set it out, explaining something about it while Megyn gave me more of her impish looks across the table. I didn’t hear a word he said.

“Oh my god,” Megyn said, after he left. “I don’t even know how to eat half this stuff. What are we doing?”

She leaned over the table.

The spell she had been casting on me seemed to shatter in that moment. The sense of unease went with it. Megyn wasn’t being serious, not about any of this. I was reading things into what she was doing and saying, because I had my own fantasy.

She was just excited about new clothes, like any girl.

She picked up an oyster and held it in front of her. “Is this raw?” she whispered to me. “How do I eat this thing?”

I picked one up and held it at the level of her oyster. In truth, I had never eaten oysters on the half-shell. “We’re such rubes,” I whispered back.

Megyn smiled. “It’s just like in the movies, right? You just slurp it up?”

The vulgarity of the word “slurp” struck another dirty chord inside of me. Oh yeah, I thought, my mind a little high off the wine I had just gulped and the buffet of sleazy ideas I had been lining up in my mind all afternoon. Slurp it up.

Megyn smiled, and I felt a pang of guilt for being such a filthy man as her bright, pretty face gave me an honest grin of camaraderie.

But then she did slurp the oyster, and it was spectacularly erotic to watch, for no particular reason at all.

She stared at the shell.

“That...” she said, “Was interesting.”

She made a face, and drank quite a bit of wine.

And then, out of nowhere, she looked at me with that burning look again. “Thanks for taking me here,” she said casually. “I think Max is taking me to a seafood place and this way I can get some practice in with this kind of thing.”

There was a delicious pause, while what she said worked its way through me, a red-hot worm of pain.

She broke into a smile and reached across the table to grab my hand. “Kidding,” she said.

Of course. Of course she was kidding. I smiled, hoping that I didn’t look as uncertain as I felt.

I reached for the bottle of wine, poured us both some more, and we clinked our glasses together again.

Megyn brought another oyster to her lips after taking a very long draw of the wine. It was going to her head, I could see, and mine as well. She held the oyster shell in her pretty fingers and tipped it side to side, close to her mouth. “So, do you think these things really work, or it’s all just a scam?”

Another burning look was issued to me over the oyster shell, and without waiting for my answer, she tipped the slimy aphrodisiac into her mouth. I watched her throat move as she tipped her head back and swallowed it.

“Wow,” she said, tilting her head back to face me. She lifted her glass and took another sip of her wine.

I was so captivated by this strange performance that I didn’t say anything.

Megyn finished her wine. “I think I do feel something...” she murmured.

The waiter returned and asked if we wanted some more wine.

Reality came crashing down around me in that moment. My wife wasn’t some woman I had just met – though she was acting like it – and she wasn’t trying out oysters with plans of slurping them up for Max Riley. She wasn’t going to fuck a black man, a movie star. She probably wasn’t even going to wear this expensive lingerie more than once. We were just two people with kids, spending way too much money in a restaurant next to an expensive mall, and if we kept going, we’d be too drunk to drive our car home.

“Yes,” Megyn said, and she laughed. “Bring us this exact one.”

“And how are the oysters?”

I was still in shock that Megyn had ordered another bottle of wine, and thinking of a good way to cancel the order – not that I really wanted to, but practicality was welling up around me. So when Megyn said:

“Is it really true that these are aphrodisiacs?” and leaned forward to look at the waiter with her mischievous eyes, flirtatiously pulling her fingers through her hair, I watched as though seeing it from a million miles away. “Because I’m feeling pretty.... you know.” She laughed.

I looked at the waiter. He was a young guy, not bad-looking. Megyn was making him a little nervous, though. “I, uh...” He cleared his throat.

“Megyn,” I began.

“Just get the wine for us for now,” Megyn said to the waiter, who seemed quite happy to have an excuse to do an about-face and leave.

“Megyn!” I hissed. “What are you doing?”

She didn’t answer me, but instead took out her phone and began typing something on it. Just when I was about to get infuriated, she started talking. “I had a thought...”

Type, type, type.

“... that we should just...”

She typed some more. She flicked her eyes up to meet mine, still holding the phone in front of her. “We never do anything fun for ourselves.

So let's just get some more wine and then -"

I heard the low buzz of her phone in her hand. She read the screen. "There," she said. "Grandparents are amazing. Your folks will keep the kids and we can do whatever we want."

Before I could protest, which I could feel I was about to do, my very strangely-acting wife leaned over the table and took my hand. "Maybe we get a hotel room, you show me this lingerie..."

I stared at her.

Don't get me wrong. Don't get me wrong, don't get me wrong. I have a dirty mind and there were about sixty million fantasies filed away in my brain where my wife ate some oysters and went wild. Fantasies about her taking the lead and surprising me with a weekend of nothing but sex.

But now that she was sitting in front of me, acting more like a bimbo-fied version of my wife that I put into my fantasies, she was freaking me the fuck out.

"I really think these oysters have gone to my head," she said. "I think they really work."

The waiter was back with the wine.

He set out new glasses and poured another for each of us.

Megyn watched him walk away, and then turned back to me and grinned.

What the hell, I thought. What the hell was wrong with me? My wife was feeling horny, eating oysters, agreeably getting drunk, asking to try on some hot lingerie and get a hotel for the night.

I shrugged off my reservations, and we clinked our glasses together again.

I don't remember much of the conversation we had for the next hour or so, except that it was a pleasant, fun, flirtatious conversation. The kind we hadn't had in a long time. We finished off a second bottle of wine between the two of us.

By the end of that hour, there was a sexual tension building up between us that reminded me of our first dates. The feeling was as nostalgic as it was exciting.

Megyn looked into her empty wine glass and gave a little pout. Then she tipped the glass around, a little wildly. "Well," she said. "It's probably good there isn't any more."

She ended the sentence with her eyes on me, and gave me another simmering look that cut right through me.

“I think those oysters worked their magic on me,” she said, after a pause.

I was pretty loopy, since I’d had more than half of the wine to make sure that Megyn didn’t get completely plastered. She could hold her liquor pretty well, but a whole bottle of wine would have done her in. So I felt brave enough to say: “Oh yeah? Are you sure it’s the oysters and not the shopping for your date?”

Megyn leaned back in the booth and answered me by giving me another impish look. She let it linger in the air, the tension building (my cock getting hard, my stomach turning), before saying: “Maybe it’s a little of both.”

I had already paid the check without examining the amount. I gave Megyn a look that said, “let’s go,” and rose from my seat.

Megyn took my hand and pressed herself close to me as we walked (unsteadily) toward the lobby of the hotel. It was clear we were headed there, and we walked toward reception as naturally as if it had been our plan all along.

“Excuse me!” a man’s voice came from behind.

It was the host from the restaurant, chasing after us with our bags, which we had entirely forgotten. Megyn took the lingerie bag and I took the boots, and she goggled as we turned toward reception again.

“I’m glad we didn’t forget this,” she said. “I can’t wait for my surprise.”

I checked us in while Megyn looked over a brochure near the entrance. The receptionist looked us up and down, and I could tell that we looked to her like some people having an affair: no luggage, sexual tension practically gluing us together, a faint air of sinfulness about what we were doing. It gave me a little thrill to see her size us up that way. She smiled broadly as she handed me the room key.

By then I was going wild. I cocked my head at the elevators and Megyn followed, giving me that mischievous little grin that was driving me crazy.

When the elevator doors closed and we were alone, I couldn’t take it anymore. I pushed her against the wall and pressed my mouth to hers. As soon as I felt her mouth, soft and wet, moving beneath mine, my whole body surged with the desire to rip her clothes off.

Megyn's hands were busier – and quicker – than mine, though. She slid her hand between our bodies and found my cock, hard and probably dripping with precum. She squeezed me through my pants and pushed her body forward and against mine.

We were on the fifth floor, so the elevator came to an abrupt halt with a ding. Reluctantly, I pushed away from her. Her hand lingered on my crotch. We walked unsteadily down the hall.

I felt like the wine had cleared my system. The dizziness I was experiencing was coming from Megyn.

She took the key from my hand and slipped it into the card reader. When the door clicked open I put my hand on hers and pushed her into the room.

We slid along the door and onto the wall. The lights were out and we would have been encased in darkness if, as we pawed at each other, she had not slid against the light switch. The bags fell to the floor.

I dipped my hand into her jeans, searching for her pussy with my fingers. I wanted to feel if she was as wet as I was hard. My fingers found her soft curls and then a well of slick juices. I used my other hand to swipe at the buttons of her jeans.

“That’s quite a bit of excitement from just oysters,” I growled. I slid her jeans down her hips and then pulled at her panties. I pushed her against the wall and plunged my fingers into her wet cunt. Her eyes closed halfway as I slid two fingers easily into her pussy and curled them toward her clit, stroking her from the inside and out. I pressed against her button with my thumb.

“Maybe that isn’t the only reason,” I ventured, rubbing her g-spot. She squirmed against the wall and her lips parted in ecstasy. “Maybe you were being a naughty girl? Thinking about something you shouldn’t be?”

Her eyes opened and met mine. She made a little noise, a slight gasp, but somehow it carried an affirmative sound with it.

“Now what could Megyn have been thinking about?” I growled. Her pussy was so wet, and I seemed to have hit the exact spot that drove her wild. She was moving her hips against me, grinding her body into my fingers and begging me for more with her pulsing cunt. I leaned in close to her ear.

The smell of her body was concentrated here: sweet, like her pussy, and damp with the slightest bit of sweat, ever-so-slightly brackish. A citrusy, salon-like smell lingered in her hair.

“You wouldn’t have been thinking of another man, would you?” I said.

She may not have answered with her mouth, except to mewl a little as I curled my fingers against the silky walls of her channel. But her pussy answered by pulsing in excitement.

“I see. You were thinking about another man.”

I pressed one hand against the wall, clutching her wrist. I had her pinned, this way, and only her right hand was free. She dug her nails into my shoulder through my shirt as I toyed with her, finger-fucking her slowly, teasing her.

“That’s very bad,” I said, my mouth in front of hers now, her lips just millimeters from mine. Our eyes locked. “Very, very bad, Megyn.”

She whimpered as I pinched her clit between my thumb and the fingers buried in her cunt. Her whole body was starting to tense up, getting closer to a climax. My head was spinning, but I wanted to get something more from her, extract more about her thoughts. Get her to say something dirty, maybe do something dirtier.

I started to finger-fuck her, and then I saw she was very close to the edge. She dug her fingernails into my back viciously.

I stopped, freezing just as my fingers left her pussy. I fluttered my fingertips over her pulsing cunt. She let out a tortured sound and tried to push her hips toward me, but I backed away. “You’re going to have to make it up to me,” I said. I brushed lightly over her clit, and she gasped again. I could feel the disappointment of being so close to coming racking her body.

It took her a moment to catch her breath. “How?” was all she could say.

I brought my hand to her lips. The scent of her pussy was on them, they were wet and slick with her juices. I played with her lower lip like I had just done with her clit, lightly passing my fingers over it.

“I just want to know what you were thinking about,” I said.

I pushed my fingers into her mouth. It was a bold, and pretty vulgar move. It was the kind of thing I’d imagined Max Riley doing to her, his dark fingers spreading her mouth open, warming her up for the full meat of his cock.

Megyn was a little shocked at first, as my fingers probed her mouth rather violently. Then she closed her lips and sucked on them, sending a wave of searing desire through me. My cock flexed against my pants.

I pulled my fingers out of her mouth slowly.

“What do you want to know?” she said.

“Who you were thinking about,” I answered quickly.

She pushed her hips against me. “You know who I was thinking about,” she half-moaned.

I leaned forward and placed my mouth next to her ear again. Heat radiated from her body; her skin was hot to the touch. “I want to hear it,” I whispered.

Megyn tipped her head back in frustration, and I wasn’t sure where this was going to go. I watched her as she moved her head back and forth against the wall.

“Just tell me who you were thinking about,” I said. I started to sink down, crouching to pull her jeans down to her ankles along with her underwear. Her unruly red bush was in front of me now, glistening with her excitement.

I trailed a finger along the inside of her leg, up to her knee, over her thigh. I watched her face as I did this, and the way her chest fluttered erratically with her excited breaths.

She looked down at me when I used both hands to pry her pussy apart and expose the moist folds. The tangy scent of her flared in my nostrils. I moved my head closer, so that she could feel my breath on her wet lips. As I moved my mouth, my own lips brushed against her skin, and I felt her thighs tremble with each syllable. “Just say it. Tell me what you were thinking about. What got you so very, very wet.”

She placed a hand on my head and gasped.

I could see that she was uncertain about what I wanted her to do – she desperately wanted to say the dirty thing I wanted her to say – but she wasn’t certain it was really what I wanted.

I decided to help her out. I was already further into my fantasy than I ever thought I’d get as it was.

“Were you thinking about him doing this?”

I flicked my tongue to the edge of her outer lips, running the tip of it along the border between her hair and the ultra-silky skin. I was satisfied by the taste of her juices, slowly warming my mouth, dripping onto my lips.

I looked up at her. She gasped a little and nodded her head.

“And then what? Were you thinking about him doing this?”

I dove into her folds, her juices smearing across my cheeks and dribbling down my chin. I was certain this was as wet as my wife had ever been, and the thought that it was because of this “game” we were playing – or maybe really because she was dreaming of another man eating her pussy – made my cock agonizingly hard.

I brought my lips to her hardened nub, and her thighs shook when I pressed them together and squeezed her sensitive bundle of nerves in to where I could flick at it with my tongue.

“Yes,” she panted, “oh... oh my gah...”

She placed another hand on my head, and pushed me toward her. I resisted her strength, and continued at my own pace. I watched her as she threw her head back again and the tendon in her neck strained against her skin. “Oh god, that’s what I wanted him to do.”

I could feel her nearing the edge again, so I slowed my attack on her clit to tease her some more. She practically wailed as she sank down from her tiptoes and clawed at my hair. “Please don’t stop,” she said.

“Tell me what else you were thinking about.”

She made another sound.

I was already unbuttoning my jeans and rising up to get them down to my knees. When I was kneeling I reached up and pulled her down to me, bringing her to her knees on the floor. Once she was on the floor, I was able to grab her by her hair.

I took my cock out with one hand, and pushed her toward it. “You can just show me,” I said.

Megyn was already heading for my cock with her mouth open.

“That’s it,” I said. “Show me how you’d suck his cock.”

I had my dick in my hand and my other hand on her head. She opened her mouth and took me inside, her lips barely touching my cock until the length of it was inside her mouth. She closed her lips at the base of my cock to make a tight seal and began to suck on my dick like she hadn’t done for years.

“Fuck,” I said, because with just a few strokes up and down the length of my shaft, I was almost boiling over into her mouth. I looked up at the ceiling in an attempt to take my mind off the intense pleasure of her sucking, but it didn’t help.

“Oh god,” I said. I pulled gently on her head to let her know I was going to come, and maybe I whispered, “I’m going to come.”

She brought herself up to the head of my cock, and opened her mouth just enough to say, as she licked and slurped the crown: “I thought you wanted me to show you what I was thinking about.”

Her words were muffled by all the dick in her mouth, and the syllables ended in wet slurps. The image of her sucking on a big, black cock the same filthy way went through my head and I felt cum surging from the base of my dick before I could make a sound.

Megyn had her hand around my shaft, surely she felt it coming – but instead of pumping the cum from me like she ordinarily would have, she swallowed my cock whole, and I felt my seed pummel the back of her throat as I exploded in her mouth.

And then, to my utter disbelief, she swallowed. I could feel it around the tip of my cock.

She sucked my shaft clean and let my dick fall out of her mouth with a firm plop. I was still pretty hard. Leaning back on my hands, I panted in disbelief, staring at my wife.

She rose up on her knees, and leaned over my lap, her ass in the air. “Now,” she said. “Fair’s fair.”

She used one hand to pull her lips apart, and I leaned down, taking her buttocks in my hands to spread her further open. Her pussy was gushing, and her clit was swollen and pulsing in the quivering flesh of her cunt.

It was a strain, but I bent over and found her clit with my tongue. I began to lap at her drenched cunt, and her flesh squelched as I stroked her clit with my tongue until her whole body was shaking.

“Oh,” she whispered, and then she moaned. “Oh, God.”

And then I felt her juices welling up, coating my chin, her body went rigid, and she screamed as she came.

I straightened up, my back a little strained with the awkwardness of my position.

Megyn moved forward, and stretched out on the floor. The sight of her body, long and feline, with her jeans so inappropriately tangled around her ankles and her red hair shiny with cum, made my cock thicken again.

She rolled onto her back. Her legs were on my lap now. I had dropped down onto the floor, and I was still breathing a little heavy from the excitement. Megyn pushed her hair out of her face. It was damp with sweat and strands of it stuck to her neck. "Whoa," she said.

There was a silence before we both laughed.

Megyn kicked her jeans and panties off, and I helped her pull them completely from her ankles.

"All that," she said. "And I didn't even try my new lingerie on."

Ah, yes. The lingerie.

I felt a small wave of disappointment lap at my insides. It was too bad that we hadn't gotten any use out of that lingerie, but it was too much to hope for that my wife of thirteen years was going to put lingerie on and seduce me after all this.

Megyn turned onto her stomach again, rifling through the bags scattered on the floor. I had another nice view of her ass, of her juices smeared over her skin, and my cock pulsed with hope.

The bags rustled as she searched for the lingerie. Finally, she found what she was looking for and pulled the beige bra and panty set out of the bag.

She tried to whistle, which she wasn't very good at, and then flipped onto her back to hold the set above her head and admire it.

"Wow," she said. "I never would have thought..."

She jerked her head suddenly toward me. "Wait. Did you buy this to match my dress?"

I wasn't sure what she was implying with her question, and I couldn't tell by her tone how she found the idea: hot, or creepy. After all, it was one thing to talk about this stuff and quite another to spend $200 on underwear that matched a dress your wife was wearing to see another man besides yourself.

"Well, it's not for him," I said, as the silence dragged on.

She sat up on her elbows. "It's not, huh?"

I shook my head.

There was truth to this, I thought, regardless of how you looked at it. Because really, even in the darkest chapters of my fantasies, even as he pumped his cock into my wife's pussy, it was not for him.

Megyn surprised me by standing up and taking the lingerie into the bathroom with her. "Well," she said. "Might as well see how they look."

I sat on the floor for a bit, stunned by wife's behavior and catching my breath. Then I kicked off my pants and stood up. As I walked over to the bed, I peeled my shirt off.

I caught sight of myself in the mirror and looked at myself from the side and then full frontal.

My cock was already getting hard again, and I appraised the size. I'm an average guy in that department, according to every girl I've ever known. It helped that my cock was hard, because I feel like it looked unfairly small when it was flaccid.

I had gained a little weight over the years, right around the middle, so the lanky, adolescent body I'd had when I met Megyn was gone. But I still looked pretty good. I ran my fingers through my hair. I have brown hair and a nondescript face. No one, I heard Cassie say one night at dinner, would kick me out of bed. Unless someone better showed up.

I smiled thinking of Cassie's smart-ass remarks.

Then I threw the covers back and settled in on the bed.

It seemed like an eternity while I waited for Megyn, During which time I had time to think about all the day. All of the exhilarating teasing Megyn had done.

It was great, and I certainly couldn't argue with the obvious... hard evidence... that I liked it, but there was an edge to it that was making me a little nervous.

All this time, all the time I'd kept this secret, whenever I'd imagined telling my wife, I had only thought about how she would react at that moment. I never got any further than that because I inevitably thought about her frowning, or crying, or throwing something at me... and then I didn't want to think about it anymore.

Never, when I pictured a realistic aftermath of my telling her about my fantasy, had I thought about Megyn reacting like this.

Embracing my fantasy.

"Getting" my fantasy.

Understanding it so well.

And being so willing to participate in it.

Even more unsettling, however, was her clear enjoyment of it.

The door clicked, interrupting my thoughts.

I stared at my wife, moving my eyes from toe to head and back again. My breath was caught in my throat.

She had gone through the extra trouble of making the entire outfit even sluttier, by putting on the boots we'd purchased.

The tan leather slouched tightly against her calves, and hugged her just below the knee. Her bare thighs, a little shiny with the nylon from her stockings, rose from the boots like the stems of an elegant flower.

The band of beige lace was thick and encased her leg at mid-thigh. The elastic didn't dent her tight muscle. I had never seen her wear pantyhose like these. The effect was sensual and a bit slutty.

The panties fit her well, and she gave a little turn to give me a full view. They were transparent except at the edges, so her naked bottom could be seen in all of its glory – and it looked particularly glorious and firm because she was in those heels.

The bra fit her breasts snugly, and shaped them into a pleasant, almost curved-square shape. The lace cupped her skin the way I wanted Max to cup it.

“So?” she said. She gave me another little twirl. “Do you think Max will like it?”

I raised a finger and beckoned her to me. She crawled onto the bed, that same mischievous look in her eyes that had been driving me wild all day.

I watched my wife crawling toward me. She seemed like a different person. It was much less of stretch than ever to imagine that she would actually do this with another man, actually crawl toward him and lure him to her with this green-eyed stare.

She rose up on her knees when she was about a foot away from me. I gazed at her for a long time, wondering what to do with her next. I wanted to get her on her hands and knees and hold onto the heels of her boots while I fucked her senseless from behind. I wanted to bounce her up and down on my cock like a rag doll, her tits bouncing in front of my face. My hands twitched with all the ideas I had.

Megyn climbed over my legs and scooted up toward me, my legs between hers. I could smell her excitement, the acrid scent of my cum, and her sweat. She reached down between her legs and found my cock, without taking her eyes off mine. She guided the crown of my dick between her legs and rubbed it on the sheer material of her panties.

I could feel that she was wet, soaking right into them.

She pressed my cock against the inflated knob of her clit, and I felt it dart away under the pressure and heard a little squish. She moved my cock in a circle until she found just the right spot, and she dragged my dick along her clit. The material of the panties was ever-so-slightly rough, like the material of a trampoline, but it was also damp and hot as her pussy oozed into it.

A little puff of air escaped her lips. I could feel something coating the tip of my cock, but it well could have been me, leaking from the swollen, strained crown of my shaft.

I was hypnotized by her stare. She maintained it for a while, and she might have stroked herself to climax while I stared at her, but then she closed her eyes sleepily, and I lost control of myself.

I hooked my thumb under her panties and shoved them to one side of her pussy. Then I pulled her down and onto my cock, thrusting my hips up to get deep inside of her.

She gasped, and opened her eyes, a little surprised.

I rammed my dick deep into her pussy, and pulled her down onto me, until it felt like even my balls were getting sucked up into her gaping, soaked hole.

“No,” I said. “Close your eyes and think – about – getting – fucked – by – a – big – black – cock – you – little – slut!”

I punctuated each of these words by bouncing her up and then slamming her pussy onto my dick. She obeyed me as soon as the command was given, though, and closed her eyes. And as I jerked her up and down my shaft, it really was easy to believe that my wife was imagining herself getting rammed by a black bull.

By Max Riley.

“Oh!” she said. “Oh!”

“That’s it,” I said. “Ride that cock. Ride that black cock until I fill your pussy up with cum.”

Megyn rose up on her strong legs and began to bounce herself up and down on my dick. She braced herself on my shoulders, and leaned her head back. Her tits bounced up and down as she hammered away on my cock.

“That’s it, you little slut. Milk that cock for a nice big load.”

And she did. She bounced and squeezed until my cock exploded inside of her. I grabbed her hips and pulled her down hard onto me, until I felt like she might split. She came at the same time, her eyes flying open wide, her mouth frozen in a silent scream.

She bounced a few more times, sending a few waves of excruciating pleasure down my shaft and into my balls. I grasped her hips to steady her because I couldn't take any more stimulation.

Her panties had rubbed my cock raw, which I was only just then beginning to feel.

I pulled at the straps of her bra, and peeled it away from her breasts. I placed my face between them, and kissed her as I calmed my breathing.

I could feel my cum trickling from inside of her and down my balls. Her pussy was still spasming with her orgasm.

I felt a little laugh rumble in her chest, and then she rolled away from me, lying down on her back. "Wow," she said. "I guess that lingerie really works." Her voice was sleepy even by the end of her sentence, and we both drifted off a little.

After a bit, She rolled over to lay her head on my chest. I had started to drift off... the hotel was deadly quiet, and only the light in the hall illuminated the otherwise dark interior.

After a bit, I realized that rather than sleeping, Megyn was stroking my hand.

"So just how serious is this fantasy?" she said.

I felt my heart rate soar again, instantaneously.

This woman was going to give me a heart attack.

I had never really prepared for this question, and I certainly hadn't expected it right at this moment.

I had no idea what to say. My mind raced through everything I had actually just said.

What if I told her it was serious, really serious? What would she do? What if I told her that I actually wanted her to whore herself out like a filthy slut to any man with a big cock that she could find -

I mean, I didn't want that.

I enjoyed thinking about it.

I quickly dismissed telling her about that aspect of my fantasy.

But what if...? What if Megyn harbored some kind of fantasy, herself? What if she was also very close to confessing it to me, and we both remained silent because we assumed what the other wanted, or we were too afraid to tell each other the truth? What if she secretly wanted me to give her permission to fuck another man?

Specifically, Max Riley?

Here was a path I had never really ventured down in my own mind. The idea that I would ever be this close to telling Megyn – really telling Megyn, had seemed preposterous. I had never faced the question with any seriousness: Would I really do it, if she wanted something like that as well? Would I really tell her to go ahead with it?

Her fingers were stroking my hand with greater impatience. “Honey?”

I snapped out of my reverie.

I tried to talk, but found that I needed to clear my throat. “I, uh... no, it’s fantasy. Mostly. Pretty much. Yeah, I wouldn’t... I like thinking about it...”

As I was floundering, Megyn propped herself up on her elbow. “Are you serious right now?”

She wasn’t angry, I noted with relief. She was even smiling a little, or at least I thought I could discern that in the very dim glow of the alarm clock light.

I sucked in my breath. “Uh.. yeah, well, yeah. I’m... sort of serious.”

Megyn fell down and rolled onto her back again. “But... not really, right? I mean, you wouldn’t actually want me to do anything with him.”

I decided to turn the tables in order to stall.

“Well, what about you? Would you ‘actually’ want to do anything with him?”

I felt her turn her head to look at me. I wondered if she was staring at me, trying to decide how she married such a perverted monster.

But when she turned her head back to face the ceiling, she said quietly: “That’s a loaded question.”

And then a silence came over us, and after a while it was just too late to start the conversation again. I don’t think either one of us was sleeping, but we were both pretending to after a while.

I had resigned myself to perhaps never hearing about the topic again by the next morning. After all, it had been a bit of fun, and wild sex, but something seemed to have rubbed Megyn the wrong way and when that happened, her usual approach was to pretend like it hadn’t happened.

That's what she seemed to be doing, as she fluffed the pillows and made the hotel bed. When I gave her a strange look she laughed at herself and said, "habit," with a shrug.

Not that the atmosphere was chilly: quite the opposite. Megyn touched me affectionately as she hummed around the room. We ordered room service, and she put her feet on top of mine while we ate at the small table next to the window. I was still smoldering inside from her comment, just before we drifted off to sleep. That's a loaded question.

Every time I thought of her saying that, my pulse shot through the roof and my insides twisted.

"Great view," Megyn said sarcastically, looking out the window and bringing a cup of coffee to her lips.

It may have been a nice (and expensive) hotel, but it overlooked an interstate exchange and the view was pretty grim. A sliver of water peeked between the buildings, which may have given the hotel the audacity to call itself "Shoreline Gardens."

We had a good laugh about the name, which we both found to sound more like a retirement home than a hotel where one had seedy sex.

In the middle of all this bonhomie, Megyn set her coffee cup down on the saucer with crack. "So I've been thinking about our conversation from last night," she said, and moved quickly to the next sentence, as though she had a rehearsed speech building up inside her and she just couldn't wait to get it out. "And I think it's just too much for me to... really do. I obviously find it appealing, the um..." she cleared her throat, "fantasy aspect of it. But I have to just leave it at that. I think that's what we should do. Just leave it at that."

And then, because I was staring at her with my coffee cup mid-air, she added: "Yeah. That's what I think."

I slowly lowered my cup. Megyn was looking at her coffee, and I could see that she was slightly flustered. Her cheeks had gotten hot, and splotches of bright pink were unevenly creeping along her jawline, up to her cheeks. Her lips were pressed unnaturally to each other.

I set the cup in the saucer. I was flabbergasted by her directness.

"So..." I said.

Then I laughed. Nervously.

Megyn shot her eyes at me, and it gave me a little scare, because they were sharp and dark. Then she let out a strange laugh. "I'm sorry," she said.

“This is just... it’s weird, but it’s kind of hard to talk about.”

I felt a huge wave of relief come over me. I reached for her hand and put mine over it. “I’ve wanted to talk to you about this for a long time,” I said. My voice was low but steady. “I, um, was always afraid of how you’d react.”

Megyn looked down at her plate. “This is so weird. I’m... I don’t know, I feel kind of guilty that I sort of like this idea. Of yours,” she added quickly, and looked back at me to emphasize the point. She shook her head. “I never had any... I don’t know... like, ideas like this.” She shrugged.

“But you like it,” I said, gaining hope.

She shot me another look. “As a fantasy.”

It felt like my blood was boiling. “As a fantasy,” I repeated.

She shrugged again and looked out the window. “I was sort of freaked out by it at first, and then I was thinking about how I was going to ask you if you really would... you know, if you would really do something like that. Or let me do something like that. And then I thought... well, I don’t actually have to think about it that hard. Because it doesn’t really matter what the answer to that is. I wouldn’t do it. Not really. So...” she turned back to me. “I guess you’ll just have to settle for something like this.”

My mind, rolling up and down waves of excitement and disappointment, my mood crashing and soaring all at once, was ahead of her. For now, I thought, optimistically.

I squeezed her hand.

I tried to think of the right thing to say, but it didn’t come easily. Instead I kind of mumbled:

“I uh... that was really hot last night, that’s all... that’s all I really want.” And then I cleared my throat, worried I was bungling it. “I just want... I just want you to be happy. I want to feel... I don’t know, like...”

“Well,” she said matter-of-factly, “you wanted to feel like we did last night.”

We looked at each other, and sort of nodded.

And that was the end of that.

For now.

6: THE DATE

“Okay,” Megyn said, hurrying out of the bathroom. Her hair was wrapped in a towel, and she had the slightly frantic, sort of clumsy, rushed way about her that she got when she felt excited or nervous about something.

I was enjoying watching her. Watching her try to hide that she was excited and nervous, and enjoying the fact that she was.

She moved from the bathroom to the closet and then retreated, holding the towel above her head and moving her lips like she was talking to herself.

I was stretched out on the bed, pretending to casually read the news on my tablet.

But really, I had my eyes on my wife and my mind in the gutter.

I knew it was pure fantasy I was indulging in, but it was something I couldn't help think about. Maybe I liked the idea because it felt so safe: Max Riley was a movie star and I was pretty sure he did, in fact have a girlfriend, though numerous internet searches did not really reveal the exact answer to the question.

(And anyway, just because a man has a girlfriend does not mean he won't seduce your wife).

But really. Max Riley was not going to actually seduce my wife at a charity-sponsored event for at-risk youth.

There were probably a lot of papers to sign to that effect before they even went to his house.

Megyn, as well, had left it very explicitly at the doorstep of fantasy. After our conversation in the hotel, she had alluded to teasing me with this “date,” but the agreement between us seemed to be that she would tease me and nothing more.

I say “seemed to be” because I really wasn't sure. Megyn had taken over control of things, and I was content to take whatever she gave me. Maybe I was secretly relieved that she had been up front and told me how far she would go. And maybe I was relieved that she didn't want to go any further.

I felt a soft plop on the bed next to me, and looked over to see that Megyn was laying out her beige bra and panty set. She began unwrapping the stockings from the cardboard package.

“Ooh,” she said. “These feel like silk.”

She held them out to me to feel. They did in fact feel like silk between my fingers, and the sensation was enhanced by the knowledge that she would soon be sliding said silky-feeling stockings over her smooth legs..

I watched her as she abandoned her panties and bra, and walked back to the sink. She unwrapped her hair from the towel and brushed it out before fishing the hairdryer out of a drawer and turning it on.

When her hair was wet it was a rich, chocolate color. As it dried, the red appeared in streaks and then finally dominated the color. She leaned occasionally toward the mirror and her butt peeked out from the towel she had wrapped around her body. I was enjoying the show, enjoying the towel slipping open a little and sliding off her breasts with each slight motion she made.

Until finally, the whole thing came apart and slipped off her body.

She let it fall in a heap around her feet, and continued drying her hair.

I could see her body reflected in the mirror: her shapely breasts, the small round swell of her stomach. And then:

In the center her legs, the fiery red color of her snatch. I was stunned for a moment as I looked at it: she had all but shaved it off, leaving only an enticing, flame-colored landing strip leading to her slit.

My cock responded immediately, thickening for action. Megyn leaned forward and examined something on her face as she continued to dry her hair, evidently unaware that I was watching her.

She wasn't trying to hide it, that was for sure. But... what did it mean? What did it mean if your wife shaved her snatch into a shapely landing strip for the first time in almost ten years, when she was about to go out on a date with another man?

What did it mean about me that I found it horrifying and also incredibly erotic?

I had, after all, purchased the new underwear for her, and it wasn't like my fantasies were a total secret at this point.

But really, Megyn? Was this over the line?

She turned off the hairdryer and fluffed her hair. Parts of it were still slightly damp, but I knew she planned to touch it up after she got dressed. She gave me a look in the mirror, and on her face I could see that she had known I was watching her.

Did she know how her shaved pussy would make me react? If she did, she gave no indication that it had even occurred to her.

But she couldn't not know.

She walked over to the bed and smiled down at me.

She picked up the stockings.

It seemed to me that she was smiling inwardly, totally aware of the control she wielded over me at this moment with her "surprise," and waiting for me to be the one to bring it up. She seemed to be enjoying this.

She put a foot up on the bed to slide a stocking along her leg, unrolling it over her calf and then her knee, securing it in the center of her thigh. She did her right leg first, blocking my view of her snatch with her shapely hip.

But when she switched legs, she glanced over at me and surely caught my eyes zoomed in on her snatch. Her smile didn't change as she calmly slid the second stocking over her leg in a languid and sensual movement.

"Cat got your tongue?" she said, as she moved the lacy elastic top into place on her thigh. She fidgeted with it at length, giving me a long time to enjoy the show, even though it seemed like it was in place all along.

Her red hair swung lightly back and forth with the motion.

She looked at me and smiled before dropping her leg and turning around to admire herself in the mirror from across the room.

"That's a new style for you," I managed to say. "Very interesting."

She turned back to face me, and picked up her new panties. For a moment she formed her features into the picture of innocence, about to ask what I was referring to. But then her smile returned and she shrugged a little as she bent over to step into her panties.

I quickly flashed my gaze at the mirror, to get a nice view of her ass as she bent over. Between her legs there was nothing but the dark line of her pussy. It was scandalous.

She stood up, sliding the panties along her legs and pulling them over her hips, into place. "I thought I'd... you know, do justice to my new underwear."

She did indeed do justice to her new underwear. I was speechless for a moment. Through the transparent mesh of the center of the panties, her bright red landing strip tantalized, just out of reach behind the gossamer curtain of silky material.

It was all I could do not to rip them off of her.

She was putting the bra on, hooking it in front of herself and sliding it around to pull the straps up and over her shoulders.

As with the panties, the see-through material was especially tantalizing. Her pink nipples, which I noticed were hardened into excited pebbles, pressed against the material and the pink showed through, offering an approximate view of her large aureole, silky beneath the layer of silkiness, waiting to be touched.

My cock flexed against my sweats.

I set the tablet down next to me, and started to lean forward. I was going for the back of her knee, planning to stroke her through the silky stockings and pull her toward me so that I could bite through the panties and get at the red strip that led to her gash.

She slapped my hand away and turned quickly. “Nope. I have to get ready,” she said.

An erotic and terrible feeling sank through me.

“Come on,” I pleaded.

She shook her head and stood in front of the mirror to put on a pair of earrings, a dangly gold pair.

I leaned back. “It seems a little suspicious, don’t you think?”

She met my eyes in the mirror. She knew exactly what I was talking about, I could see in the light smile playing on her upper lip. “What’s that?”

She tossed her hair to get at her opposite ear.

“You know, trimming things up so... professionally. Are you sure you don’t have any extra plans with Max Riley?”

She dropped her hands to her hips, and didn’t answer me immediately. She moved her head in one direction and then the other, admiring the dangling gold that shimmered under her ears.

It was pretty sexy. I wondered if she would leave the earrings in while Max fucked her. They were so heavy. They would slap against her neck as she rocked back and forth on her knees, taking a pounding from his huge cock...

I blinked slowly, hoping the image would clear my mind, like a picture on an Etch-A-Sketch.

It did not. My cock ached.

Megyn turned again. She rolled her eyes at me and crossed the room to the closet. She disappeared inside of it.

“You’re the one who got me the underwear.”

This was true. I was.

And it was also true that I wanted her to wear them, and I liked her shaved snatch and her fiery landing strip. It was also true that I was sitting on the bed with a hard cock because I was unable to get the image of my wife getting fucked by a movie star out of my head.

But something... bothered me.

When she came out of the closet she was in the dress. She stood next to the bed and turned around. The zipper was open to just above her ass, the lacy edge of her panties visible, the crevice between her buttocks a mere shadow. "Zip me up?" she said.

I won't lie and say that I didn't imagine the exact opposite of what I was doing as I dragged the zipper from her panties to the soft dip of her spine, just at her shoulders. That instead of the zipper moving upward, along her spine, enclosing her in the soft rust-red dress, led by my own fingers, I pictured the zipper being tugged down. Her skin unfolding from within the material. A dark black hand guiding the zipper from her shoulders to her ass.

She thanked me and hurried to the sink the moment the zipper closed her dress, leaving me no time to move my hands over her body as I had hoped to do.

She started combing her hair again and plugged in some kind of iron. I watched her brush a light dusting of foundation over her skin and coat her light lashes with a dark brown mascara. She looked at me as she screwed the lid on.

"Oh come on," she said. She turned around, putting her hand on the counter. "I did it for you, because I knew you'd get a little kick out of it."

She turned back to the mirror. "Honestly, I think this will probably be a hugely embarrassing, awkward evening." She looked down, into her make-up bag. "Ugh. I'm so annoyed at Cassie."

She looked back up into the mirror and caught my eye. "I was just trying to have some fun with it. God. Don't be so serious."

I forced my face into a smile. The kind of smile you have when you "totally get it" and were also "just joking around."

"I know," I said. "I'm also just joshin' you."

"Oh, good," she said, seeming convinced by my act. She put some lipstick on and rubbed her lips together. "For a second, I thought you were serious."

There was silence as I contemplated her and she straightened her hair with the iron, which was evidently a hair straightener. Her auburn hair turned silky-smooth and shinier as she pulled the iron through it. She styled it unusually for her – straight as an arrow, parted in the middle. The look gave her a dangerous, sexy aura. I wasn't sure why, but she looked a lot more erotic with her hair like that.

As she quickly dusted her face with some powder, applied some eye shadow, and painted her lips, the feeling became stronger. Her features started to look more sultry, and I couldn't place my finger on why I was starting to feel unsettled.

And then I realized; she resembled a porn star I really liked (for obvious reasons), whose hair was straight like hers.

She turned to face me. "How do I look?"

She didn't have the boots on yet, but once she did she would look...

"Stunning," I said. "He won't be able to resist." There was a trace of bitterness in my voice. I heard it, and it surprised me.

I don't know if Megyn didn't hear it, or if she just chose to ignore it. Either way, I didn't blame her. I was acting like a spaz. As the countdown to her leaving the house to spend the evening with Max Riley had ticked away, I had become a basket case of emotional highs and dour lows.

She gave herself another glance in the mirror and then looked at the slender gold watch on her wrist. "Oh my God," she said, hurrying out of the room. "The car will be here any minute."

I followed her, and watched as she put on her boots, glancing nervously out the window as she did. Her excitement about leaving, her trepidation about missing the car, clawed at my insides. I was bouncing between the idea of telling her to stay and following her in my own car, hoping to watch her with him.

She stood up when her phone buzzed. "They're here," she said.

It was just a driver, and I bit down on my tongue to stop myself from correcting her. I walked with her to the door and waved theatrically at the driver. A long, black sedan, shiny and expensive, was parked at the curb. A driver in a snappy suit was standing near it with his arms crossed.

"Swanky," I said.

Megyn turned and kissed me. "Honey," she said pointedly. "I'm just joking about all of this."

I knew that “all of this” meant the innuendo, the act she had been putting on. Her words brought out another cacophony of feelings inside of me. It was exactly what I needed to hear – exactly what I wanted to hear. I wanted to hear that my wife was, absolutely and 100%, joking about taking anything too far with Max Riley.

It was just a gimmick, a fundraiser. She had done all of this to turn me on, and it had worked, and now she was assuring me that it was all just part of the game we were playing.

That’s what I wanted.

Wasn’t it?

The affirmation made my heart sink, though, as much as it relieved me.

I was disappointed.

“Okay?” she said, to whatever strange expression I must have been making.

“If you want, I don’t even have to go,” she said.

I wondered if she meant that.

I laughed. “Of course you should go,” I said.

She kissed me again and trotted down the steps to the sleek black sedan. The driver opened the door for her.

All just a game.

The red dress, displaying her perfect body. The knee-high boots, like the wink of a slutty woman, hinting at a classy whoreishness. The beige underwear and the trimmed red hair beneath it.

The car moved into the street, and rolled slowly out of sight. I was disappointed that Megyn didn’t turn around and wave at me. Excited that she didn’t, that she was already thinking of the next thing in her life.

I hoped this was all a game.

I hoped it was all serious.

I hoped Max Riley would feel the silky-smooth skin on either side of that red landing strip before I did.

I didn’t.

A wave of desperation came over me. I almost charged down to the sidewalk to wave the car back.

I stopped myself, and it felt like I ran into a brick wall.

The car was already out of sight, turning the corner.

My wife was officially on her date.

What, I wondered, does a man do with his time while his wife goes out on a date with another, better-looking, richer, famous man?

How does one entertain himself, or distract himself, or keep himself calm, while he waits for this event to unfold, far out of his reach?

It was so early when Megyn left. The kids were at her parents'. In a silly, almost childish act, I had told Megyn I was going out with some friends. I could tell she largely didn't believe me. That my intention – to make her think I was taking this whole thing with a grain of salt, playing a game with her and so secure in myself that I didn't really care she was out on a date. Oh yeah, I already had a poker night planned, whatever. Was that tonight? - was never really believed.

In fact, I wanted to be home alone.

I had the whole late afternoon and the evening to brood and wander the house, my mood alternating between exhilaration and crushing defeat.

I made myself a few Scotches to calm myself down. But I ran out of Scotch and moved on to vodka, which was a mistake, because there was a lot of it around. By seven o'clock I was good and wasted and walking from room to room, talking to myself.

"It's a fucking charity event," I explained to myself in the round mirror in the hallway. The mirror was an inheritance of mine; I had taken it with me when I left for college and it had somehow survived all of the subsequent moves and girlfriends and wild parties, and Megyn's tastes, and the children, and here it was, hanging in my hallway. "Not a real date."

It wasn't a real date. Not by any stretch of the imagination. I knew that Megyn probably did find this whole situation to be more of annoyance than anything else. I reminded myself of all the many conversations we'd had about just this type of event in the past – she'd organized a few of them, and every time she had said the same thing, more or less: that whoever the celebrity was they were going above and beyond the call of duty to sit there answering stupid questions from some dumb fan who probably had idiotic ideas about romance in his or her head. She said the thought of the dull, awkward conversations made her cringe.

I wasn't sure how I felt each time I cycled through my thoughts and touched upon this likely truth.

Megyn came home at twelve-thirty.

It wasn't so late, for a date. But it was a lot later than a date of that kind should have gone on.

I remained seated, and looked her up and down as she came through the door. I was checking to see if her dress was out of place, if her hair seemed to have been re-done. How rumpled did she look?

It was hard to say. I was drunk, my paranoia was at an all-time high, and in the past few hours I had begun the slow, painful sobering up of a man who had run out of alcohol far too late for his own good.

Megyn looked guilty. My temper flared.

She set her keys on the counter and opened the cupboard where we kept the booze.

"Wow," she said, surveying the damage.

We didn't keep much alcohol around – usually we just bought what we wanted and drank it – but I suspected she knew what had been in there.

She put her hand on her hip. "I'm sorry I'm late," she began. It had the sound of a lame excuse. An insincere apology.

Or did it?

I knew I had a deranged look on my face. Megyn was reacting to it, and she wasn't very happy about it.

It was almost as if we stood there having an argument with our faces.

"I had to wait a long time for a cab," she said, angrily, almost as if she were snapping at something I'd said to her.

"Oh," I said, and my tone was provocative and sarcastic.

Megyn rolled her eyes. "Anyway..."

She walked into the kitchen.

I stood up and followed her.

"That was an awfully long date," I said. I wished I would stop talking.

"I know," she said, pouring herself a glass of white wine that I suspected might have been a little off by then. I debated telling her.

She sniffed it.

"I think that's expired," I said. "It's from like two weeks ago."

"No."

She took a sip.

"What is your problem?" I said.

"My problem? What is your problem?"

A pause.

I laughed. I had a feeling, as I often do when I'm about to do something stupid, that I should probably just get up and go to bed.

"My problem," I declared instead. "Is... nothing. Why would I have a problem? My wife just spent like seven hours on a date with another guy."

The look on Megyn's face was priceless.

She brought the wine to her lips. "You caught me."

This was funny, and I was about to laugh about it. Or maybe I was about to yell about it, and keep the argument going.

But I tipped slightly on the stool and fell off of it instead.

I caught myself as I started falling, but I was pretty drunk, so I made a sweep over the counter with my hand and knocked the glass I'd brought in with me onto the floor. It broke. I was still flailing around, and I managed to get back on the stool, but my hair had flung forward and I had to smooth it down.

Megyn snorted a little. "Smooth."

"That wine is probably, actually, bad," I assured her.

And then, thankfully, we laughed.

Megyn tossed the wine in the sink. "Okay. Do you want to talk about this or not?"

I looked at my hands. "Well, you were gone a pretty long time. I guess, yeah. I do. I want to talk about it."

She made a face at me like, okay, Talk about it.

I was acting like an idiot.

"So what did you do?" I fired.

Megyn folded her arms across her stomach. "You know, it was just dinner. And then we had some drinks."

My mind was just now catching up to something she had said.

"Why is it they didn't send that car?" I practically shouted.

There was an icy pause.

I had blurted out the question without really thinking about it, and now that I did, it began to seem even more suspicious than before.

"The date was too long, the car had gone home. Or... well... it was just getting too expensive so I said send him home and I'll take a cab."

I raised my eyebrows. A lot of questions were surfacing in my mind about this, but I was too drunk to sort through them. I filed it away in my mind and hoped to hell I wouldn't forget about it later.

What I really wanted to ask her was whether or not she had fucked Max Riley. I could see that she hadn't; I could see it in her face and in her clothing.

Also, it made no sense. If she had come home later, sure.

No, this was much worse than that. She hadn't fucked him. She had just really gotten along with him.

And him with her.

I didn't really want to know if she had fucked him, so much as if she had thought about it.

"You want to know the truth?" Megyn said, abruptly. "I had a really nice time. I was surprised. He turned out to be a great conversationalist." She glared at me. "That's why I'm late."

I made a sound through my nose.

The issue of the cab, and all the problems with that story that I couldn't really figure out in this state, surfaced again. Why was she still talking about this?

Something was fishy.

There was another silence.

"Well," I slurred. "That's just... great, Meg. That's just great."

Megyn held one of her fingers up, and started wagging it. Not at me, just next to her arm.

So here's the point in the story where I feel it's fair to mention that, in case anyone is out there wondering if the rumors about redheads are true, they are.

Megyn doesn't fly off the handle over every little thing. But she does get mad when she gets mad.

It was shaking under her skin right now.

"You," she seethed. "You were the one who told me this was okay? You are the one who told me to do this. You are the one, if I remember correctly, who liked getting off on the idea that I would.. you know..."

I was backed into a corner, so I jumped at the only thing I could think of.

An offense.

"What?" I snapped. "Why don't you just say it? Or can you? That you what? That you would what?"

I was regretting each word as it left my mouth. The voice of reason was screaming at me in a corner of my mind.

Shut up. Shut up, Peter.

But I just kept going.

“And what about this cab, Megyn? Why’d you take a cab?”

Now that the words were out of my mouth, they sounded preposterous. What had I been thinking about the cab? I’d had some thought, some errant thought, and it had incriminated her in some way... but now I couldn’t remember what it was.

“The cab,” she repeated. “What about it?”

I was being irrational. I wanted to take everything back. This was supposed to have been fun.

But I also hate being wrong. I’m also no good at apologizing. I was also very drunk. So I said:

“The cab. Don’t try to tell me there isn’t something funny about that. You had a car to drive you around. And you came home in a cab.”

I had no idea what I meant by that. So I lifted my finger and pointed it at her to emphasize the words and hopefully make my point without needing any logic.

Megyn stared at me, her eyes wide. Then she shook her head and set her wine glass down. She walked out of the room quickly, into the hall, and down to the master bedroom. I heard the door slam.

“Fine,” I said, to no one at all. I stumbled into the living room and sat down in the chair.

I leaned my head back. This had all gone terribly wrong.

I started to pass out when the thought about the cab made its way to my consciousness.

Maybe she had taken a cab because they had sent away the car deliberately, so there would be no record of them violating the agreement about the rules for the... date... and that was why...

I awoke to something nudging my knee. When I opened my eyes, Megyn was standing over me, looking petulant, but holding a glass of water near my hand.

A glass of water, I realized upon looking at it, that I desperately needed.

I took it from her hand. “Thank you,” I said.

I swallowed the water in big gulps.

She was still looking down at me, her eyes narrowed into slits of dismay.

“I was an ass last night,” I said. “I had way too much to drink.”

She took the empty glass from my outstretched hand. “I’m glad you said it.” She sat down in the chair next to me. She sighed and folded her arms over her chest. “See? This is exactly why I wasn’t, you know, into-into this.”

I knew the best thing for me to do was to just shut up. I pressed my lips together just in case my mouth decided to start moving.

“Do you want to know what happened on our ‘date?’” she said.

I did nothing. I wasn’t sure where this was headed. My head, however, was throbbing, and keeping any other part of me from... er, enjoying the story. Which was probably for the best at this point.

“Well, he turned out to be really, actually, pretty nice. A pretty cool guy. I actually told him, right off the bat, that I hated the whole thing and I was just dressed up because of the pictures. And he was like, ‘cool.’”

I had somehow moved to the edge of my seat.

“So, I hate to disappoint you,” she said. “But in fact, all we ended up doing was talking about multi-universes and the San Diego Zoo. Oh, and we exchanged some good recipes. And life hacks.”

“Life hacks.”

Megyn patted me on the hand. “That’s right. Life hacks. And.. sorry, we also talked a lot about StreetRise, he had some good ideas and he’s really dedicated to the organization. I’m actually surprised how, uh... I don’t know. Informed he is. On things like accounting.”

“Accounting.”

“Yup. So there you go. That’s why I was late last night.”

She tapped her fingernails on the glass, and stood up.

She was waiting for something.

“I’m sorry,” I said.

She leaned over and kissed me. “Thank you.”

She walked out of the room. “And now, we can all get on with our lives, and I have a new recipe for garlic soup.”

I stared at the wall.

In my heart, I wanted to be relieved. A normal man would be relieved that his wife had not, in fact, fucked Max Riley, the gorgeous black celebrity.

But in my heart, I also knew that I was not.
Though I was loathe to admit it to myself, I was ultimately...
Disappointed.

So, for the day at least, we went back to ordinary, hum-drum domestic life. I believed her that her date with Max Riley had been nothing more than recipe exchanges and shop talk.

Of course that's what had happened.
And of that I remained convinced.
For about a day.

7: EAVESDROPPING

Megyn seemed to believe that our game had been something fun and experimental, like dressing up one day as a maid or using handcuffs obtained from a cheesy bridesmaid's party. She had enjoyed the game, but she was able, evidently, to just put it away.

This infuriated me at first. It infuriated me in the same way it infuriated me that women, in general, could just take it or leave it with sex. It wasn't this thing, coiling around inside of them all the time. Sex seemed to exist outside of them, a diversion, but not an obsession.

And then, I started to get suspicious.

There was no real basis for my suspicion, and as I write this story I realize that. All evidence pointed in the direction of this being a true story from start to finish: Megyn had gone to meet Max Riley, she found him surprisingly nice and easy to talk to, she had taken some pictures for the press release, and then she had gone home.

(The pictures were on the StreetRise website, which I spent a great deal of time looking at. Assessing every detail of the way they were standing together. Did they seem like two people who had just met? Didn't my wife look a little more comfortable with Max Riley than she should? In one picture, they were embracing. It was the kind of photo-shoot, we're-all-friends embrace that people use for... well, just this sort of occasion. But I spent hours envisioning it as something else, staring at the big, veined hands of the actor, who had placed one of them on my wife's waist, right above her hip bone. She was leaning in to him in the photo, so her hip bone would be right under his palm, pressing against her dress, and he probably felt the ridge of her beige lingerie, a hint of the small bumps of lace.)

I wasn't able to just leave it at that, though.

I had to pick at it, until I got some scrap of something to give me a little thrill, a little flutter of jealousy. I wasn't ready to be done.

"So, when you met him, was he shorter than you imagined?" I said casually, my eyes on my phone as though I didn't really care about the answer.

This was at breakfast time, and the kids were in the room with us.

So inappropriate.

Megyn was busy frying something on the stove. "Who?" she said.

I judged her question, the tone of it, whether it seemed believably innocent enough. Was she pretending she wasn't thinking about him all the time, and so when I asked a question out of the blue she really didn't know who I was talking about?

"Max," I said. "Riley. Was he shorter than you expected? I hear a lot of movie stars are."

This was, of course, an idiotic question and I knew it. Not only did I know it because Max Riley clearly towered all over everyone in movies, but because he had almost been recruited to the NBA, and because I had looked the information up myself when Megyn had won the date with him.

Which is why, probably, Megyn didn't answer, and just rolled her eyes as she walked past me with pancakes on plates.

But I didn't stop there.

"So, when you met him," I asked, as she was rinsing her hair in the shower another day, "you weren't attracted to him at all? Not even a little bit?"

Megyn kept her eyes closed and sighed audibly over the sound of the shower. "I didn't say that."

"So you were attracted to him?"

Megyn didn't answer for bit.

"Do you remember," she said snarkily, "that time you got pulled over by a female cop?"

This was a reference to a time when I had acted like a fucking idiot because a female cop, who had been really hot to boot, had pulled us over.

It was a good answer. I did not want to revisit that scene.

Megyn effectively shut down all questions of this type, which should have struck me as normal. I should have become more convinced of her fidelity and not less so.

I decided, instead, to believe that it was all part of an elaborate act.

I wasn't sure what I wanted. Well, scratch that: I wanted to know her true feelings. Or so I thought. I wanted to feel her loyalty to me, and her level of attraction to Max Riley, and weigh for myself whether or not she was attracted to him enough to let him fuck her senseless.

And maybe everything would have ended there, with me probing her with stupid questions and then losing hope.

Except I also began to kind of spy on her in the hopes of getting some juicy tidbit, some insight into her mind.

Which in the end, I did.

I'm not sure why I did it.

We might be the last people on earth to have a land line. Or maybe it's an age thing, a function of having kids, or something like that. I think Megyn had wanted it because she wanted access to 911 "no matter what."

No one ever called the land line, because we gave everyone our cell numbers.

Or at least, that's how I remembered things being before this whole Max Riley thing.

And then it seemed to me that the land line was ringing all the time.

And then it seemed to me that Megyn was answering it all the time.

It may be important to say at this point that part of what fueled my next preposterous idea is that I had broken into Megyn's cell and discovered absolutely nothing fishy going on.

So land line it was, as little sense as that might make. I became convinced that my wife had given out her home phone number.

To Max Riley.

To call her at dinner time.

But I went even further into the realm of stupidity than this:

I then imagined that they had a code, a secret code between the two of them, where if she couldn't talk she would pretend he was a telemarketer.

It seemed to me that the calls were coming later in the evening.

It also seemed to me that Megyn was tucking herself away in her office space to work after dinner far more than she had ever done before. (She claimed to have work to do.)

I put all of these things together, whether they were entirely true or not, and decided that she was waiting for Max Riley to call her in her office while she pretended to work.

In my defense, at this point in the story, because I realize how stupid that sounds – in my defense, this was kind of a game to me. It was fun to imagine, and it was fun to believe. In acting it out, I was just trying to live out my fantasy. The reality was, deep inside, I knew Megyn was just working in her office, and that she wouldn't give Max her phone number, and that telemarketers didn't care if it was too late to call. I knew I was distorting facts for my own purposes. Somewhere deep inside I knew these things.

But I started picking up the phone when it rang, anyway.
And listening in.

Our phone has a nice feature that the ringer turns blue when someone else picks up the other headset. So if someone is holding the phone in his hand, and paying attention, and acts quickly, he can turn the phone on and mute it quickly without (presumably) the person who answered the phone even knowing.

Most of the time, the calls were in fact work-related, which should have disappointed me thoroughly and destroyed my ham-handed hypothesis, but I kept picking up.

Just to be sure.

And then one day... one day I hit pay dirt.

Cassie. Her nasal voice filled my head. I walked with the phone to the kitchen, because the kids were playing a video game and had the volume on exceedingly loud.

It was a boring conversation at first. Girly, full of high-pitched ups and downs. I was having fun, though, being an auditory voyeur – who doesn't wonder what women talk about, together, when they think no one is listening?

Like I said, it started out boring, and I was about to hang up, when:

"So listen," Cassie said, and her voice seemed to make an abrupt change in tone. "You have to make a decision about this by Friday."

There was a pause, and I paused as well, my head cocked like a dog who has just seen a squirrel.

A sigh. "I know."

Cassie was impatient. "I don't understand what's holding you back."

Silence.

"Megyn?"

Megyn made a noise, a sort of vibration from the back of her throat. She made this noise when she was cornered about something and had no idea what to say. I hadn't heard it for ten years, and it made me chuckle.

"You said you wanted to get back into your old job."

A cool feeling began to run down my spine. What?

"I know," Megyn complained.

"And this is... your old job."

"Yup."

Silence again.

“I don’t get it.”

Silence again. My brow furrowed. An explosion rocked the living room and one of the kids cheered.

“Is it Peter?” Cassie tisk. “It’s him, right. Man. Men. Is it him?”

Fucking Cassie. Man, was she willing to throw me under the bus.

“Uh... I haven’t said anything to him.”

“What?!”

Yeah, what?

What the fuck was actually going on here?

“You don’t want the job,” Cassie said. “Or... girl, what are you doing?”

The noise again.

Cassie’s voice changed, to her delighted, juicy-gossip voice. “Is it because of Max Riley?”

My whole body went stone cold.

At that moment, Ella came in and said something to me. I held up a finger to her and gave her a look that turned her face to stone and sent her running back into the living room.

“Not... exactly.”

“I knew it. What is it?! Oh tell me, please tell me!” Cassie was squealing with delight.

Megyn was silent.

“You know he recommended you. Or basically, he’s holding Ryan over a barrel. You know that, right? You have to do it, or we’re going to lose him.”

Megyn was the one to tisk now. “He’s not going to do that.”

“He might. Oh God. He has the hots for you, doesn’t he?”

“Cassie!” Megyn hissed. “No. He does not.”

“Then why...?”

Yes, why indeed?

I struggled to get my head around what was happening. As far as I could tell, Megyn had been offered her old job at StreetRise, which I knew she had always regretted leaving and would love to have back.

And it seemed Max Riley had something to do with it.

And it seemed that Megyn, mysteriously, was conflicted about it all.

And was keeping it a secret. from me.

My stomach dropped through my feet.

“Megyn. I’m tired of this shit. Give it to me straight. You’re not making any sense.”

Megyn sighed. “Oh God,” she said. “It’s just so...”

“Did you have an affair with him?” Cassie breathed.

I sank into a chair, my heart thumping against my chest.

“No. God. God, no,” Megyn said quickly. “No, it isn’t that...”

“Is he actually a huge asshole? Did he try something on you?”

My heart leaped into my throat and my cock twitched.

Megyn sighed. “No. No... I mean, no. Not really. Not like, out of the ordinary.”

“What’s that supposed to mean?” Cassie snapped.

I was thankful for Cassie’s questions (for once).

“No, it means, just like... he’s a guy. Of course if you...” Megyn left the sentence unfinished.

“Oh, yeah,” Cassie said, dismayed.

Guys are such assholes, I concurred silently.

“No, he’s a really nice guy. It’s, um... it isn’t him.”

Cassie was flummoxed. There was a silence on the line, so long I thought I had accidentally hung up.

“Meg. Will you please,” Cassie said finally. Then she seized on something. “Is it you? Are you worried you’ll just jump on top of him one day and rip his clothes off and get that man’s cock in your hand -”

“Cassie!” Megyn whisper-yelled. “God.”

“I would. I would worry about it,” Cassie mused.

There was a pause on the phone again, during which time I felt certain we all silently agreed about the truth of that statement.

“Are you going to tell me what the hell?” Cassie said.

Megyn sighed again. “It’s sort of that... it’s not... oh God. I don’t really know how to explain this.”

“You’re attracted to him,” Cassie interrupted, impatient. “You’re attracted to a hot, luscious, black man with a huge -”

“Stop.”

“You are. And so what?”

Megyn sighed.

“Seriously, honey. So what? You don’t have to fuck him. And also, if you do... you know, so what? Peter isn’t going to divorce you over one fling. Is he? No, he wouldn’t.”

Such a bitch. What the hell did that mean?

"I'm not going to have an affair with him," Megyn said, resolute.

"Then what is the problem?"

Megyn sighed again. There was a pause and the sound of her picking up the phone and walking somewhere. I heard the door open. I set the phone down on the table and walked past the hallway deliberately, looking excited about the video game.

I waited, a sufficiently long enough time for Megyn to have shut the door and decided that I was immersed in TV with the children and it was safe to talk. But not too much time, because I wanted to get the scoop..

I crept back to the kitchen.

"....this thing. Kind of like, I don't know how to explain it. A game. And, um... so his thing is, Cassie you have to swear you will never repeat a word of this."

"I swear. Dish."

Cassie's voice was practically rattling the phone with its excitement. I was feeling cold. It was settling in my stomach. It was like being stripped in front of an audience.

Megyn sighed again. "Okay, so... Pete has this thing where it, um... it apparently turns him on to like, like if I flirt with another guy or something."

I cringed with humiliation.

"Mmmhmm," Cassie said, the way you would if someone were providing background information on their way to the juicy bit of the story.

"So..." Megyn's voice faltered. "I mean, that's what he..." she sighed.

"Is that it?" Cassie said. "Oh, wait... did you do it?!" she started to sound excited. "I am so jealous of you. Oh my God, and you have me to thank for it -"

"No, I didn't do it. Cassie, what the hell?"

"What?" Cassie sounded genuinely perplexed. "Wait. You're saying that's the big thing? That Peter likes to watch you flirt with other guys?"

Silence.

"Isn't that, um... a little weird?" Megyn ventured.

"Not really." Cassie's answer was so casual, so matter-of-fact, that I felt a wave of warming relief.

I started to like her again.

"Huh?" Megyn said.

“Yeah, lots of guys are like that. I mean... are you kidding me here? You’ve never run into a guy like that in your whole life?” Cassie was unimpressed.

“I’ve been married to Peter for 13 years!” Megyn said, defensively.

Cassie laughed, like that didn’t really matter in her estimation.

“So it’s not that strange?” Megyn said.

“Meh,” Cassie said dismissively. “But... is he like, into swinging, or is it just... either way, I guess I still don’t understand what the problem is. With your job, I mean.”

Megyn sighed again. There was another long pause, while my heart raced and my stomach twisted in fear and expectation.

“It’s, um... so look, I don’t even know,” Megyn was whispering now. “I just... okay, so I sort of like that, too. You know, like we had really hot sex, sort of play-acting that whole thing. But, um, you know, I would never actually...”

“Fuck Max Riley? What is wrong with you. But okay, so what is the problem?”

“I’m sort of... I don’t really... I don’t want to do anything like that.” Megyn made this statement firmly.

“So don’t?” Cassie offered. Then she hummed knowledgeably: “No, there’s something else.”

Megyn sighed. “I just... so I didn’t expect to actually like the guy, you know? He was... I was all set for him to be just an egomaniac, and stupid, you know how movie stars are always stupid?”

“Uh... how many movie stars have you met?” Cassie said.

“No, just, in interviews and stuff. They’re always so dumb.”

“Okay,” Cassie conceded. “So... he’s not. You like him. You’re afraid you’re going to fuck him.”

My cock throbbed and I stopped breathing.

Megyn groaned. “Not in so many words, Cassie.”

“What’s the problem, though? You said Peter is into it.”

“Yeah but... I’m not.” She sounded like she needed to convince herself, and wasn’t doing a very good job.

“But you’re worried that you are...” Cassie almost sang.

Silence.

“Makes perfect sense to me,” Cassie sang. “Look, this is none of my business, but your taking this job or not is. So will you please stop acting like an idiot and take the job, because you want the job, and then try to... I don't know, keep your skirt on when you see Max Riley. Jesus."

This was sound advice.

I was liking Cassie more and more.

Megyn sighed again. "Okay."

"Okay, you'll take the job, I can tell Ryan -"

"Okay, I'll talk to Peter."

"Soon."

"Yes."

"Now. Tonight. So I can get this monkey off my back." In the end, Cassie was Jersey all the way. She liked to close deals, and Megyn was taking too much time to make a decision, no matter how fun the gossip about that decision might be.

Megyn sighed again.

"Because he's like an actual monkey," Cassie continued, talking about Ryan. "He looks like a Rhesus monkey. He's driving me nuts -"

"I said I'll do it..."

"I can't believe Petey is a swinger..." Cassie mused.

"Don't you ever!"

Cassie laughed. Then she was serious. "No. Of course not. I'm just... shocked, is all. He always seemed so... prude."

I hated her again.

"I have to go put the kids to bed," Megyn said.

"You'll get back to me tomorrow," Cassie intoned.

"Uh..."

"To-mor-row," Cassie insisted. "Say it please."

Another sigh from Megyn. "Okay. Tomorrow."

Click.

8: A LITTLE BIT OF CONTROL

There were a few ways to approach the situation, as far as I could tell.

I could pretend I never heard that conversation, avoid all conflict, and just wait and see what my wife said about the job offer. I could pretend to be neutral about whether or not she took it.

Or I could pretend to be overjoyed for her.

Or I could pretend that I didn't want her to take the job. And then maybe she would feel better about taking it and not realize that I was pushing her right into Max Riley's arms.

As I finished up the dishes, and put the kids to bed, my mind was so filled by plans for failed plans and possible plans and alternative plans for what I would do if Megyn did X or Y that when I closed the bathroom door behind me to take a shower, I could barely remember whether I had actually put the kids in bed or not.

I turned on the water and stood in the shower.

So far, you may be thinking of me as an indecisive guy. Which I can be, especially in matters like this one. This secret that had been festering inside of me for so long, and the fear it had engendered.

The thing about me, and I suspect a lot of people will tell you this, is that sometimes I just snap.

I'm not entirely sure what catalyzed it for me: the water, the feeling of being a bad parent, doing the dishes like some fucking schmuck while my wife talked about her attraction to Max Riley, the movie star, on the phone with her friend. Maybe it was a lot of things piled up, the overall discomfort with my own weakness that had been squirming around inside of me for long enough. Who knows?

I heard Megyn come into the room. Over the sound of the shower, the click of the door and her footsteps on the thick carpet. In my peripheral vision I saw her hair in the mirror.

I thought of her neatly shaved snatch, winking at me through her naughty panties.

She left the room, where the expansive sinks were carefully surrounded by the accoutrements of suburban living: baskets, smelly soaps, a little jewelry dish. For a moment every aspect of middle age reached around my throat and started to choke me. And then I felt infuriated.

It was then, I suppose. That moment. That's when I snapped, if snapping is the right thing to call it.

Megyn was back in the bathroom, wearing a fairly ratty pink tank-top and a pair of short-shorts she had started using for pajamas. She leaned over the sink to investigate something in the mirror.

I swiped away the steam gathered on the shower door to watch her, but I didn't spend a lot of time enjoying the view, inactively.

I opened the door, one hand absently turning off the water. Megyn looked at me in the mirror with mild surprise, an expression that turned quickly to alarm as I stepped across the bathroom floor without even reaching for a towel, and stood behind her.

She dropped the hand she had been touching to her face and looked at me, starting to straighten up. I was naked, dripping wet, but not cold: my blood was pumping furiously.

"What are you -" Megyn started to say.

"I overheard your phone conversation with Cassie," I said abruptly. Matter-of-factly.

Astonishment started to wash over her face – astonishment, and confusion. She blinked, and her mouth moved without forming any words.

She moved to turn herself around, and slid my hand along her spine, moving closer to her, getting her pajamas wet but not caring. She stuttered something, but stopped when I wound her hair around my hand and pulled on it lightly.

My cock was hard, and I knew she could feel it against her. Her mouth fell open in disbelief, and she looked at me searchingly in the mirror.

I used my free hand to pull her shorts down, taking the underwear beneath them along with the hook of my thumb.

"I should say," I said, close to her ear, meeting her eyes in the mirror, "that I eavesdropped on the conversation, from start to finish."

Her mouth fell open, and I tugged on her hair to let her know that she shouldn't say anything. And thankfully, she didn't.

I slid my fingers into the crack of her ass, seeking out her pussy. I found, to my delight, that she was just as turned on by this act as I had hoped she would be.

The feeling of her slick juices filled me with a boldness I hadn't felt in a long time. Maybe ever.

This was what she wanted, I realized. Her excitement, slippery in my fingers, was all the proof I needed.

I pulled on her hair.

“So I know,” I said, moving my lips over her earlobe, “that you’ve been offered a job. And I know..” I found her clit with my fingertip and flicked at it, sending a shudder through her and making her half close her eyes, “that you’ve got a little problem. That you liked Max Riley more than you thought you would.”

She opened her mouth, and I tugged even harder on her hair, making her wince a little. “Don’t deny it,” I growled into her ear. “I don’t want you to, anyway. In fact, what I want you to do is something much different.”

Her eyes opened, meeting my gaze again in the mirror and growing wide. There was a mixture of surprise, maybe some fear, and best of all – wild excitement – lighting her green irises from behind.

I pushed two fingers inside of her, and confirmed that indeed, whatever Megyn was saying about her hesitation about my fantasy, her body was certainly embracing it. Her juices dripped down my fingers as I slowly pumped her channel, making her gush like a well. Her mouth opened and she gasped.

I pushed her forward by the hair, until her forehead clanked gently against the mirror. I stood back to admire the sight of her ass, of my fingers probing her fire-red pussy. I finger-fucked her for a moment, and then I slid my wet fingers out and did a little dance around her ass.

I placed the head of my cock against her pussy. “Here’s what you’re going to do,” I said, rubbing the crown over her sticky, swollen clit while she mewled. “You’re going to take that job, and then you’re going to not follow Cassie’s advice at all. You’re going to try very hard to get your skirt off around Max Riley.”

I slid into her slowly, each inch of my cock treated to a violent spasm as her pussy pulsed with her undeniable desire. She put one hand up against the mirror and turned her head slightly, her eyes closed. I hoped she was imagining her pussy getting filled up with Max Riley’s cock.

“You’re going to do everything you can to get his cock inside your pussy, just like this,” I said breathlessly. I was watching my own dick disappear inside of her, but I was imagining Max Riley in my place.

“And then,” I said, as I began to fuck her, “you’re going to tell me all about it. You’re going to find a way for me to watch you. You’re going to do all kinds of very, very naughty things with Max Riley, and you're going to like it, and then you're going to come home and show me what a bad, bad girl you've been."

My voice trailed off at the end, as I began to slam my dick into her even harder. She put her hand on the mirror and held herself steady against it, but her forehead still banged into it a little as I began to pound her and my climax started to erupt, strangling my throat as it did.

I was enjoying imagining all the things I would make her do.

Her eyes were closed, so I didn't know what she was imagining. But I hoped it was the same thing.

I grabbed her hips and thrust deep inside of her when I came, yelling loudly and then snapping my mouth closed, remembering where I was.

She, too, had lost control, and started to yell as she came. I covered her mouth with my hand and she bit into the flesh of my palm as I drove my seed into her pussy. Her cum and mine gushed out around my dick, sliding slow and hot over my balls.

We panted like this for a moment, and then I slowly let my cock slide out of her with a plop. I looked at her swollen pussy, her cum gushing out and sliding down her thighs. I indulged in the pleasure of staring at her for a few moments before looking into her face in the mirror. She had pushed herself up and was leaning, still breathing heavily, against the counter.

I could see doubt starting to play on her face, and the last thing I wanted to do was get into another conversation, another endless, interminable conversation about whether we should or we shouldn't.

Like I said, I'd snapped.

"I'm serious," I said quietly.

And I stared at her.

Of course, in the end, I know she knew that it was her choice. If she had said no just then, what would I have done? Ultimately she was the one who would have to seduce Max Riley, and I assume she knew that.

But I could tell that all along she had just felt guilty about her own perverse desire. One or the other of us had to take the plunge and say it was okay.

Not even that:

I had to tell her what to do. That way she could absolve herself of her guilt.

I stepped back into the shower after she said nothing to this. It seemed like a minute had gone by. She did nothing more than look at me in the mirror, and so I took what she was doing for acquiescence.

I closed the shower door, and turned on the water. It was invigorating.

Megyn was wearing a tight-fitting black skirt and a white silk blouse with a slouched, loose cowl neck, a pretty wardrobe choice from her days at work eight years ago – and amazingly, she still fit into it. In fact, her body seemed even tighter beneath the material.

At my request, she had started wearing thigh-high stockings, like the ones from her date with Max Riley. When she had sat down in the car next to me, I had taken the liberty of pushing her skirt up a little to catch a glimpse of the lacy elastic border that encircled her thigh.

We didn't say much as we drove to her old office, situated in one of those many parts of the city that had once been very "bad," and was now half-trendy, in an old warehouse. I pulled up at the curb and looked around.

Today, three weeks into her new job, was an exciting day for both of us. She expected to see Max Riley in the office at some point.

She tugged on her skirt and looked at herself in the mirror.

"Don't expect miracles," she said, and I could see she was losing a bit of confidence.

She glanced at me as she snapped the sun-visor mirror back into place. "He's a movie star, after all."

I knew things about Megyn that I had decided to keep to myself at this point. I knew that she had done a lot of searches about Max Riley since the night we had agreed – the night I had told her what I wanted her to do. In her searches, and the pages she visited, her desire for him was evident.

I looked up and down my pretty wife. I knew I was playing with fire here – particularly, particularly because the guy was famous.

But I couldn't help myself. I didn't even want to try.

I put a hand on Megyn's knee.

Since deciding to go ahead with this plan, our sex life had gotten wild and delicious. Every day was a thrill, and Megyn was easy to ripen nearly every night.

I slide my finger down her thigh, and she sucked in her breath and looked straight ahead. The sidewalk had a few passers-by milling about on it, and I knew she didn't want to attract any attention to the fact that her husband was sliding his finger up her thigh, pressing his pinkie against the center of her underwear.

I smiled when the tip of my finger reported that her panties were damp with her excitement.

Her chest rose and fell a little faster.

We leaned over and kissed each other, like an ordinary suburban couple, in an ordinary suburban marriage – not like the two people we were, about to embark on a wild adventure that would hopefully end with her doing all sorts of depraved things with Max Riley while I watched.

[Megyn]: He's here finally

And then no more messages for two hours.

I made a big show at work of trying to look like I was working, so much so that I actually managed to get a great deal of work done. As I worked away on the interface for a grocery chain, though, my mind was moving my wife around the tableaux of her office, into increasingly precarious and tempting positions with Max Riley. Until finally, unable to take the sexual tension between them any more, they stowed themselves away, and he held her ankles as he sawed in and out of her on the brown and beige marble counter-top of the third-floor private bathroom. In my fantasy, he just pushed her panties aside. They would be hard with their dried cum by the time she got home.

The day was torture, and I had to find all sorts of way to amuse myself in order to stop myself sending her messages incessantly. Where was she? What was she doing? Had she managed to get Max Riley's cock in her mouth yet, or what?

Finally I could take it no more. I texted her.

[Me]: I'm dying here

There was a torturous fifteen minutes while I waited, staring at the wall, for her response. My insides twisted with a metallic, painful high of hope, and my cock throbbed relentlessly. I was unable to even pretend I was working.

The phone buzzed and I nearly tossed everything on the floor as I grabbed it and swiped at it like a wild, drooling drunk. I drew a sharp look of disdain from one of the raven-haired, gothy twenty-somethings working nearby.

[Megyn]: going ghppf

I looked at the message, perplexed, as another came in

[Megyn]: wrig everything teaspoon

[Megyn]: under tablespoon

[Megyn]: table

Once I had deciphered Megyn's message (writing under table), which took some doing to figure out, I busied myself picturing the scene, dying to know what kind of table (a meeting, a restaurant... his hotel?)

More delicious dozens of minutes passed by, while I waited to hear from my wife again. Sure, I knew she was at work, surrounded by people, and by people who knew she was married. Max Riley was probably sitting on the far end of a conference room table and they were probably talking about accounting matters or something boring.

Nothing was happening.

But that didn't stop me from envisioning something else entirely.

How long would it take for big, superstar, gorgeous Max Riley to move in on my wife? How long would he wait before going over to her desk, leaning on it, and growling at her in his deep voice that he'd like to go over something with her after she got off work?

How long would he wait to pull her into the supply closet and push her up against the shelves of pencils and paper, and grope her small breasts and dig into her mouth with his bright pink tongue while a rain of pens and replacement staples fell on their heads?

After hours passed, I sent Megyn a text, unable to wait for her.

[Me]: So?

And I waited. I wondered if Megyn really was in a supply closet, getting her pussy filled with Max Riley's meat while she hung from... something.

Or perhaps Megyn was getting more into this game than I had imagined, and now she was teasing me. Drawing things out purposely, because she had sensed how wild it drove me.

The phone buzzed in my pocket.

[Megyn]: Hey. I'm going to be a little late tonight. Can you take care of dinner? Don't wait for me ill get something here.

I stared at the words on the screen, while my heart went flying around in my chest. I could feel my blood pressure rising, my arteries filling to a tightened, dangerous level, and my cock responding by thrashing to life.

I typed a message asking her to clarify, and I almost sent it. But I changed my mind, preferring instead to dwell on the distant-sounding text she had sent me. "Hey," - as if she hadn't spoken to me all day.

And what had happened? Surely it had to be something about Max. It was far too much of a coincidence if it wasn't.

My heart was beating so fast it felt dangerous. I leaned back in my chair and tried to calm myself down.

It was time to get going home. Time to collect the kids from the after-school program.

I couldn't get up, not in the state I was in. I closed my eyes and tried to think about something – anything – else. But my mind kept coming back to the imagined interaction. Max Riley leaning on her desk, doing that thing he always does on his shows, straightening his tie while looking down at it, in a display of alpha-male false modesty. Leaning in, his voice low and rumbling, the sound of an animal more than a man, looking up and around the room to let Megyn know he wanted to be discreet as he said this to her. Asking her to finish up a few things after work, with him, maybe over drinks.

The implications of invitation lurking in his voice, in his animal-brown eyes.

And Megyn shifting in her seat, agreeing to it all, her pussy ramping up to a dull ache and her panties getting damp as his eyes pulled her in like tractor-beams.

That didn't take long.

I rubbed my hands over my face and made a noise that drew more annoyed looks from the remaining employee, some thin guy with no social skills who had entered and set up his workstation without me even noticing.

I thought about my taxes to take the edge off my hard-on, for as long as I could, and then I hurried downstairs to get home so my wife could “stay late” at work.

I went through the motions of finishing up the day; making dinner, helping with homework, doing all of the daily activities that ordinarily spelled out the end of another drab evening. There wasn’t any time to sit and ponder what Megyn was doing, but it was never far from my mind.

You might think that engaging in domestic life with my family would have thrown into stark reality the risk I was taking by pushing my wife into a sexual relationship with a gorgeous movie star. And in a way it did.

But far from discouraging me, it actually enhanced the high I was on.

Megyn came home around 9:30. The kids had just tucked themselves away in their rooms.

Acting like it was any other day, an ordinary day, she set her things on the counter and rushed into the hallway, saying she wanted to say goodnight.

It seemed like an eternity that she was back there.

What would Megyn tell me? My insides twisted in anticipation, even though I knew it was almost certainly not the thing I most wanted to hear. I had committed every detail of her appearance to my memory when she had come through the door, and not a hair was out of place. She seemed neither too refreshed (as though she had taken a shower in a hotel after banging Max Riley), nor in a disarray that came from making out with someone, pressed up against a wall.

But a guy can hope.

When she came back to the kitchen we looked at each other wordlessly for a few seconds.

“You have a good day?” I said.

“Long,” she sighed, pushing her hair out of her face. She smiled.

Then, out of nowhere, she suggested that we go sneak some drinks in the basement.

We snuck away to the small room in the basement where I kept a liquor cabinet and a small fridge with (occasionally) extra beers and (usually) extra cheese or vegetables like cabbage that no one really wanted to eat but which had been purchased to make us all feel more healthy.

I was happy to find two beers in the fridge, so I cracked them open for us, and Megyn sat down on an unused piece of exercise equipment and giggled as we clinked our glasses together. I was sitting on a stool.

By now, I was burning up inside. But I wasn't about to give Megyn any more leverage than she already had by showing her how eager I was to hear what had happened.

"So?" I said, after taking a swig of the beer.

Megyn was still wearing her black skirt, her thigh-high stockings, her silky blouse. She crossed her legs in front of me, and I strained – but failed – to see the triangle of fabric between her legs. I felt certain, with the small puff of air, that I smelled the tangy scent of her excitement.

She leaned back on the faux leather of the bench and swung her foot a little. "So," she said.

"Why were you late?" I said, tiring a little of the game. I wanted to get to the good stuff.

Megyn smiled again, and looked at her bottle. Then she brought her hand to her hair and flicked a lock of it from her face. "I can't believe we're doing this," she said.

I felt my cock thicken. I leaned my elbows on my knees and leaned a little toward Megyn. I set the beer down and put both hands on her shapely calf.

"So it was Max," I said.

Megyn brought the bottle to her lips, and closed them around it, blatantly alluding to a blowjob. Then she looked away, to the shelves of junk on one side of the room. "It's sort of hard to talk about," she said.

"What's so hard to talk about?" I ventured. I slid my hands along her shapely muscle, noting again the taut feel of her running efforts beneath the silken stockings and her even softer skin. I made my way up, and when I reached her knee I pulled her leg from atop the other and used my left hand to push them gently apart.

She continued to recline on her elbow, but her mouth opened slightly and she looked at me with interest. I joined my left hand with my right in its continued journey up her leg, moving along her thigh until I reached the elastic at the top of her stocking.

Now I could definitively smell that she was excited. I slid the stocking off, peeling it away, back down her leg the way I had come, until it slipped from the end of her foot. I turned my attention to her other leg, making the same long trip up to her thigh, and then peeling the pantyhose away down to her toes.

“So?” I said. “Tell me all about it.”

She bit her lip uncertainly. “Where should I start?” she said, as I pushed the backs of my hands along the inside of her thighs, my fingers headed to the center of her, pushing out against her legs as I traveled closer to my target.

“Why don’t you tell me what time he got there,” I said.

Her legs fell open, just as I wanted, and close to her pussy, her thighs were sticky with the tiniest sheen of sweat.

“I think at one.”

“At one,” I said. I ran just the tip of my forefinger over the soft indent beneath the damp material of her panties, right where her hole would be. Then I moved up, until I felt the hard, inflamed ridge of her clit protruding, ever so slightly, from between her fat outer lips. “And did you two hit it off as much as before?”

I passed my nail over her clit, just a feathery touch, and I was pleased when her eyes twitched in pleasure.

“Tell me,” I insisted. “Those are the rules.”

She sucked in her breath as I continued to play with her clit.

“I, um... he seemed to... yes, yeah, we got along, but -”

“Did he like your outfit?” I interrupted.

She looked taken aback for a moment, but I reassured her with my look. I moved my finger to the hem of her panties, and she squirmed a little as I drew it up and down, caressing her innermost thigh.

“Yes,” she breathed.

I hooked a finger under her panties, and immediately came into contact with her slick excitement. I continued to tease her, rhythmically moving my finger up and down the length of her smooth outer lip. Never touching her in the center, where she was hottest. She would have to give me something more for that.

“How do you know he liked it?”

She tipped her head a little as I flirted with touching her clit, but pulled back at the last moment.

“It’s... you know, it was obvious, he was looking at me.”

“Just looking at you?”

“Looking at me with this, uh... um, you know, the look.”

I slid my hand from inside her panties and reached up to the waist to gather them in my hand and pull them downward, tugging them toward her knees. Her legs swung together as I pulled on them, girlishly, almost adolescently.

I left them bunched at her knees. A soft pink pair I didn't remember seeing.

"And?" I said. "Did he flirt with you?" I pressed a hand to her stomach and pushed her backward, until she was lying on the exercise bench. I now knew what I wanted to do with her.

I bent her in half, hooking her legs on the pulldown handles. The skirt edged down to her thighs, and revealed her bare pussy and her ass. Her cunt was glistening with excitement.

I moved the stool to the end of the bench and sat down on it. I used my fingers to pull apart her lips, and I blew on them to get her to squirm and move her hips, to get her ready for more.

But first she had to tell me.

"Did he flirt with you?"

"I think so," she panted. "I..."

I leaned in to her cunt and flicked my tongue at her clit, making her lose her train of thought.

"Tell me why you were late," I said.

"He's... we have to go to a... thing next week," she said. "A thing for..."

I was making a journey along the edges of her inner labia, brushing lightly over her clit, and back down again. My tongue darted into the melted, sweet center of her pussy, where her juices were pooling in anticipation. "What sort of thing?" I said, letting my voice hum on her quivering clit.

"A char... a charity thing... and he... um, he said..."

I flicked at her clit. "He said what?"

I was starting to get impatient. I pulled my head back from her pussy and placed my finger on her clit, drawing the hood up and exposing the rawest center of her body. Then I leaned forward and bit lightly on the meat of it.

"Oh god," she said. "Oh.. okay... he said..."

I rewarded her by sliding my tongue along the protruding center, and her legs shook with the pleasure it gave her. My cock was now painfully hard, and I was using my free hand to wriggle out of my belt and pants.

“He said... can we go together and he’s... oh, god, please don’t stop,” she whined. She lifted her hips toward my mouth. I moved away, teasing her until she was in a frenzy.

“What did you stay late for?”

She turned her head from side to side and closed her eyes. “I don’t, I don’t know what else... he just...please don’t stop.”

I stood up, and her eyes flew open in alarm as I stopped caressing her clit.

She grasped my hair and panted. “Oh, that’s all, he just wanted to talk about...” her voice wandered off when I began to suck on her clit again. I stopped when she stopped, and she lifted her head. “He wanted to make plans...”

“Over drinks?” I said, hoping.

Megyn’s hips were gyrating in desperation. “Nah... no... not... it was... not drinks, but it was... it was obvious he was, you know...”

“Were you alone?”

“I... yes.” Megyn’s thighs began to tremble.

I couldn’t resist making her come then, she was so wild and shaking in my hands. I felt her body tighten and I had to push on her legs to keep them propped up above her head on the pulldown bar while I massaged her clit until she let out a shriek and pulled on my hair. Her juices coated my chin, and I drank them up, enjoying the taste of her wild, partly unfaithful cum.

She started to unhook her ankles from where I had hooked them, and I pushed down on her thighs to keep them in place as I rose up, shimmying out of my pants. My cock sprung loose and I guided it to her soaked, swollen pussy. Her cum was sliding down between her asscheeks, coating her pink eyelet, giving me very dirty ideas.

But I returned to the moment.

“And so you were alone, at night, with Max Riley,” I said, picturing the scene in my own mind.

I rubbed my cock over her clit and she jerked, still too sensitive to withstand the caress. I did it again, enjoying the sweet torture.

“And was he hitting on you, Megyn, by asking you to stay?”

“I think so,” she admitted.

“And you liked that?”

I placed my cock right at her quivering hole. "You liked it, didn't you?"

"Yes."

I slid my cock into her slowly. It was hard to go slowly; I was aching to ram her full of cum. But I wanted to hear more, and I wanted to savor this moment.

"Did anything happen?" I asked, my voice shaking. I so much wanted the answer to be yes, though I knew from the way Megyn had been acting earlier it wasn't. She didn't seem quite stunned or guilty enough.

Megyn shook her head.

"But you would have liked it if it had, wouldn't you?"

She nodded.

I was overcome by a surge of lust and I slammed my cock into her pussy to my balls. Her pussy gushed its hot cum all around me.

"Oh!" she gasped.

I started to fuck her, getting into a slow rhythm. "What would you like Max Riley to do to you?" I whispered. "Tell me what you were thinking about."

I sawed in and out of her while her face went through a series of expressions. I moved my fingers over her lips. "I want to hear it, Megyn, all the dirty things you want Max Riley to do to you."

The dirtier the better, I thought.

I slid my hand down her thigh, and grabbed her in the slimy, wet center of her leg, right where her thigh joined her pelvis. I extended my fingers toward the round meat of her thigh, and my thumb into the wet, hot mess below, seeking her puckered asshole.

I rubbed it when I found it, pushing my balls out of the way to get at the rough, ridged circle. There was so much cum dripping from her cunt my thumb slid in easily. Megyn's eyes went wide, but she didn't wince in pain.

"Would you let him fuck you like this?" I said.

She gasped as I twisted my thumb and pressed upward at the channel of her pussy, pinching her delicate flesh between my thumb and my cock. I continued to fuck her slowly, but I could feel my veins throbbing at my temple and along the length of my shaft: I was ready to burst.

Megyn made a motion with her head that looked like a nod.

"Dirtier?" I said. "You would, wouldn't you? You'd let him fuck you like a dirty whore."

I was going to boil over. I suppressed it, just until I heard her say it.

“I want you to say it,” I whispered, when she nodded. “Say it, and then I’ll give you a pussy full of cum, and you can pretend it’s a pussy full of Max Riley’s load.”

Her pussy clenched against me, a pulse to affirm that she indeed liked the idea of Max Riley’s hot seed filling her up, as much as I did.

“I want him... to fuck me... like a... like a...” her eyes were half closed again, she was going to come.

“Like a dirty whore,” I prompted, and my balls throbbed, the base of my cock uncoiling.

“Like a dirty whore,” my wife said, and she thrashed under me as her own climax ripped through her.

“Good girl,” I said, my voice almost strangled. I thrust deep into her, bouncing on her contorted thighs, and unloaded my hot cum into her cunt.

After we untangled ourselves from the very awkward position we’d been in on the exercise equipment, and Megyn found a towel, we marveled that my beer had somehow made it through the ordeal and we split it.

I looked around in the liquor cabinet for something good, and we decided on White Russians. Megyn volunteered to get the milk from upstairs.

When she returned she had changed into more comfortable clothes – her traditional yoga pants. But they somehow looked better on her than they had before. I admired her butt while she added the final ingredient to the glasses I’d set up on the edge of the table under the liquor cabinet.

I was sitting on the workout bench. She came and sat on my lap, handing me my drink.

“So, I’m not sure I really got this whole story,” I said. “It was a little... unintelligible in places.”

Megyn was taking a sip of her drink and had to stop herself from laughing. She held the drink over her lap, twisting it in circles, using only the long fingers of one hand. “Um... so, yeah, he’s definitely flirting with me. I think.”

“You think?” I said.

What was it with women?

Megyn shrugged and took another sip of her drink. “I don’t know. He’s... like, famous. Why would he be flirting with me?”

It went through my head to point out that all men are flirting with all women at all times as a matter of general biology, but of course I'm not a total idiot, so I said, instead: "Well, you're gorgeous."

Which was true.

Megyn tapped her glass. "I don't know..."

"I'm sure you can trust your feelings on this one. Did he ask you stay late, or not?"

"Yeah, that's true, but... he didn't really do anything. You know. Moves-wise."

That's the move, I thought.

"Hmm. I think it's part of a master plan," I said. "So what's this 'event' you were... sort of talking about?"

Megyn gave me a small grin, and I thought I saw her blush a little. "Oh yeah." She took another sip of her drink. "That's he, um... it's a charity thing. And it's... he gave me the impression that he, like, you know. Wants to go together."

This was cute. My wife sounded like a high-school girl talking about a boy she liked.

"What did he say, exactly?"

Megyn smiled and looked at her glass. "Just... he said, if I didn't have a date for that night, then he'd be happy to stand in for him. You."

My heart fluttered and I felt my cock stirring again. Stand in for me, I bet.

"And you said?"

Megyn brought her drink to her lips and gave me a sidelong glance. To keep me waiting, she finished off her white Russian, the creamy white lingering on her lower lip until she licked it off, kicked up a little storm in my crotch area. She smiled. "I said I'd check with you."

I groaned.

"But that you were probably busy."

So busy.

"So Max Riley wants to stand in for your husband," I said. I moved my hand up and under Megyn's shirt. "Reaaally..."

Megyn giggled and stood up, taking my glass from me as she did. "It's too soon for me, cowboy. You want another drink?"

"Are you going on another date with Max Riley?"

Megyn smiled. “It looks that way...” she sang, leaving the room. From the stairs she said something else I didn’t hear.

It looked like I was going to get what I wanted, after all.

9: CHARITY

Was there something a little creepy about the way I was going to this event? Sure. But honestly, as I walked into the auditorium, I knew instantaneously that I wasn't going to get caught out.

I'm an average-looking guy. I'm so average-looking that no one notices me or remembers if I went somewhere, unless I do something to make myself stand out. I'm an average height, and average build, an average coloring of brown hair and green-blue eyes, and an average, likable face. Women say I'm good-looking, but they don't pick me out from a crowd.

Anyway, almost everyone was here to see someone else, and that someone else was Max Riley. Who did stand out, especially since he had come down from the stratosphere to be here.

The tickets were excruciatingly expensive, but it was all worth it. After all, it went to charity, and it provided me with exactly what I wanted, a real dream experience: front(-ish) row seats to my wife interacting with Max in a "professional" capacity.

I'd see for myself what he was up to with her.

Because while Megyn had been as forthcoming as she could be, she just wasn't very good at giving me the visceral details that I wanted: how did Max look at her, and how did she look back at him? Was there any chemistry between them, or was it just the typical flirtatiousness between all good-looking people?

I'd have liked to know more – so much more, like what Megyn's thoughts were when she looked at him, if something rippled through her body when he was near her. But I knew I could never really have these details, they were locked inside of Megyn and even if she had wanted to, she wouldn't be able to give them to me the way I wanted them.

So this was the best I could do. The closest I could get.

The first part of the event was in a glass-faced auditorium on the side of the museum, where small-venue chamber concerts were often held. This I knew only because I read a brochure while I waited, tucked away on one of the high, distant seats in a corner, where I could see everything: the kids' orchestra (part of a youth program), the waiting dancers (another program), and the coordinators of the event. I could see the white-gloved waiters at an open bar, rich-looking donors, and in the corner, busily giving instructions and typing away on her work phone, my wife. She was so preoccupied with what she was doing that she didn't even look around to find me as the minutes before the event started wound down.

The seats filled up around me as I stared at my wife, waiting in anticipation for the big moment when Max Riley would enter the scene. I lost track of time thinking about it, and I must have been quite a wild sight. Though like I said: no one paid me any notice.

Megyn was picture-perfect in a black cocktail dress. Her figure, viewed at such a distance, had such elegant proportions, curves in just the right places. The dress dipped to give just a hint of her cleavage – but not too much, as this was a conservative event. The dress didn't glitter or sparkle: it was simple, and it was perfect on her, because the extraordinary color of her dark red hair was attention enough. Megyn, unlike me, stood out.

And then, suddenly, he was there. He strode out from behind a large white exhibit wall.

Other than the children in the room, Max was one of the few black people present. So there was that.

But it wasn't just that. He was tall, his skin was a deep, black-ish brown, and he had a magnetic energy that turned people toward him. The effect rippled through the audience and the workers on the stage, even though only a few people had noticed him and obviously everyone had been given instructions not to act like an idiot.

And the first place Max Riley, hot black superstar went? To stand right next to my wife.

Megyn was on the phone, looking worried, holding a piece of paper in her hand and waving at an aide who had just started to walk away. Max stood right behind her, and it was clear she didn't see him (and that she was slightly flustered). She turned and nearly walked right into his hard, muscled chest.

I watched Max grin, his signature grin, the grin that made millions of women swoon.

And I watched Megyn flutter and melt. She brought the phone to her chest and smiled at him. I saw her give a little shake of her head, and then point at something.

They were talking. Standing quite close to each other.

And then Max Riley took his gigantic hand, and put it on her shoulder. On my wife's shoulder.

Megyn smiled, and rather than be taken aback or flustered by the gesture, she sort of melted into it, smiling.

The two of them turned to look at the group of little kids forming in the seats on center stage. I squinted, scrutinizing the way they were standing. I wished I had sat closer, though I didn't want anyone to see me.

But I could see very plainly that Max and Megyn were standing so close that Megyn's bare shoulder must have brushed occasionally against his suit. He had his hands folded in front of him, relaxed, poised. Megyn was now looking on, confident, everything she had been flustered about seemingly resolved.

And for just a moment, I had a disorienting wave of vertigo roll over me: they looked so natural, so good together. They had an easy camaraderie I hadn't expected. Megyn shifted slightly in her shoes and smiled, bringing her arm up to touch him on the elbow. Her mouth opened, and she smiled as she said something, which in turn spread a smile across Max Riley's lips.

As though she were saying, "oh yeah, I almost forgot..."

But the way that she did it made my insides boil. So casually, so easily. Max Riley didn't intimidate her.

And from what I could see, Max Riley liked my wife. A lot.

While I mused on this, someone came forward and made an announcement, and Max Riley was now striding out in front of the orchestra, waving at the crowd, smiling his big, broad smile and flashing his ultra-white teeth.

Megyn watched him until he started talking, and only after a few moments did she seem to remember the whole reason she was here. Or the whole reason I wanted her to be here.

And only then did she lift her eyes to scan the audience. When she saw me, she brought her fingers to her mouth (probably laughing at my attire), in recognition.

And then we were all clapping because Max was done speaking in his silky, baritone voice, making everyone laugh easily. The conductor was walking out to the stage, and Max shook his hand as he passed.

But I was looking at my wife, who was smiling right at the big, bald, black man as he swaggered toward her.

He could have gone anywhere, at that point, I imagined. There was no reason for him to stand at the edge of the performance floor: there were seats along the wall, and surely he was such a big-shot he even had one reserved.

But he didn't do any of that. He stood, instead, by my wife. And the two of them watched the concert but with that energy buzzing between them, the energy you can just see, and feel, between two people who are flirting with the idea of fucking each other.

It was a long concert as I watched them. I was so absorbed in the two of them standing there, moving closer millimeter by excruciating millimeter, smiling silently at each other now and again, crackling with obvious lust – that I missed the whole concert and was quite surprised when the orchestra filed away, and the chairs and stands were somehow gone when Max strode back out the front of the floor and addressed us all again.

“And now,” he said, his voice like whiskey-colored velvet, “I'd like to introduce a very amazing little group of dancers, who are part of the Ryerson Hall Dance Troupe. This is a program...” My mind faded out.

Megyn flashed her eyes at me.

I had another sea-sick moment, and a terrible thought: what the hell was I doing? I should not be pressuring my wife to get involved with a dark, formidable, gorgeous black man, who was rich and famous and obviously smooth and well-liked, and a nice guy to boot, who donated time to charity events in his home town.

What the fuck had I been thinking?

The effect was temporary, thankfully, and lasted only as long as Max was standing in front of the audience, charming everyone. As soon as he stood beside my Megyn again and started lathering her up with his charming smiles, I was back in the game. All that I felt as I watched that scene unfold was jealousy, and it was the most delicious kind.

I enjoy watching movies about con artists, spies, and heists, and this habit finally paid off as I sat down to “blend” into the dinner event. Numerous very important lessons had been gleaned from watching those movies, it turned out, and my mind had helpfully absorbed all of them.

One was to have a cover story, which I did. The other was to strike up conversation and look like part of a group when you were single. Anyone will do it, if you just keep jabbering at them, apparently.

It turned out, this was true. I was placed at a table with a gaggle of women from some kind of wealthy, Anglican church-going society. So I planted a few lies, turned on the charm, and very soon had them believing I was a widowed man whose wife had invested heavily in the cause, and that I was here alone in memory of her or some such crap. They ate it up.

Safely surrounded by the gaggle of women, who all took it upon themselves to be inclusive toward me, I would never be noticed by the few people who might have otherwise been able to identify me. And I was also, thank goodness, seated remarkably close to Megyn and Max.

But I soon tired of this amusement. I wanted more.

As I took out my phone to send a message to my wife, a small voice inside of me told me that I was being an idiot. But it was drowned out by my ultimate desire to push Megyn toward this other man, a need so primal now that it was consuming me.

Don't get me wrong. I knew that I was taking far too big of a risk with what I was doing. I knew I was putting my marriage on the line, my beautiful wife, and that the chances of things getting screwed up were huge. This was all droning away in the back of my mind as I typed my message to Megyn.

But I would be lying if I said that I listened to that drone much.

I was far, far too obsessed with getting what I wanted at that point.

My fingers only hovered over the screen for a moment before I pressed send.

[Me]: Turn the heat up a little

I watched Megyn as she discreetly pulled her phone from her satchel and turned her back a little to Max to read my message. I couldn't see her blush from there, but I enjoyed imagining that I actually saw her cheeks heat up.

Would she do it? I wondered.

Megyn turned on her seat and flashed a glance at me. She shrugged, as if to say that she didn't know how to do it.

I sent her another message.

[Me]: be more flirtatious

Megyn rolled her eyes as she read it, gave me a dark look, and then typed.

[Megyn]: How???? I don't know how

But really, it wasn't necessary. I could see that Max was interested in her, that her text messages were making him curious. Oh, sure, he kept talking to the man seated next to him, but he gave Megyn a glance, and just the trace of a frown crossed his mouth.

[Me]: tell him your husband is texting you and annoying you or something. you're having a fight.

[Megyn]: about what?

[Me]: doesn't matter

I was texting under the table, and the slightly older women seated near me hadn't really noticed. I had been quietly agreeing to what they were saying as I did, and my brain was being drained of blood by the ballooning cock in my pants.

At this point, I looked up and saw that most of them were looking at me expectantly, as a purple-haired matron finished her sentence: "... don't you think?"

I could read from their faces that this, whatever it was, had become a hotly disputed topic, and that half the table expected me to agree, and the other half hoped I wouldn't.

I cleared my throat. "I think it probably depends," I said.

This made two of them happy, one of them roll her eyes, and the woman who asked the question snort. "What on earth would it depend on? This is a question of morality -"

"Oh, Kathleen, don't start in on that again," someone thankfully interjected. "You can't expect-"

"Well, if what you're saying is that morality plays no role in -"

"I'm not saying that at all, I just think..."

Relieved, I turned back to my phone, which had rumbled in my hand during this diversion.

[Megyn]: then what

I looked up at her, but she had already turned back to Max. She leaned her elbow on the table and brought her pinkie finger to her mouth. Then she bit on it, her eyes distant.

For a moment, I was so taken with the act that I thought she had the expression on her face in response to me; that she had had enough, and was wistfully wondering if she shouldn't get a divorce.

It was only when Max turned to her, and I saw his lips moving, that I realized: my wife was putting on her own kind of act.

I saw her give a sigh, and her creamy skin rose and fell, bouncing her breasts a little in her black dress. I'm sure that Max noticed, that he enjoyed the pleasant jiggle as much as I did. Megyn turned her mouth down in a frown, ever-so-slightly – a pretty, alluring pout I had never seen her do before. She dropped her hand to her lap and played with her hands nervously.

I watched her mouth move as she spoke to Max, and then she picked up her phone and waved it in front of him.

I realized that she was doing exactly what I'd told her to. Oh, I'm just having one of those fights with my husband, you know.

The only thing was – and this made me go a little cold with intoxicating fear – is that she was doing such a good job of looking vulnerable, a little hurt, a little mad. A perfect concoction of emotions to make a man feel like he could lure her in.

And I hadn't told her to do that.

In fact, she was doing it so well, I almost wondered if she wasn't actually in a fight with me, and I had somehow missed that part.

"Thank you," someone at my table said loudly. It was the women who had just defended me. The conversation had evidently heated up and since been resolved. "For speaking frankly on something, instead of just towing the same old tired line."

"Well," the matronly discussion leader said, patting her lips with a napkin. "I certainly appreciate a different point of view."

I smiled warmly and raised my wine glass in a toast. To sharing our views.

When I looked back at Megyn over my wine glass, she was looking at her fingers, playing with a napkin in front of her. And Max was turned fully toward her, his hand very, very close to hers, and whatever he was saying to her was making her mouth slowly turn up in a smile.

And then, all of my insides flash-froze as he lifted his pinky finger, and stroked the outside of her hand.

Plain as day.

Megyn lifted her eyes for just a millisecond to look at me, and then she turned quickly, almost as though she was startled, to face Max.

I wondered what she was doing. She looked around, and she was talking really fast. Then she stood up, and walked toward the bathrooms. Max turned back to face the rest of the table, straightened his tie, and began to talk to the other diners.

I took my phone out and began to type blatantly. ‘I’m so sorry,’ I said to my table. “I have a very important business issue that’s come up.”

I stood up and went in the direction Megyn had disappeared – into a marble corridor that led to the adjacent museum. I knew there were bathrooms somewhere in the hallway. As I walked I typed:

[Me]: what was that?

“Psssst!”

I looked up in response to the sound, and saw that I had walked into a large room at the end of the hallway, that disappeared into shadows on one side, and led off to the museum on the other. A red velvet rope cordoned off a metal detector and a sign advised us not to pass that point. Somewhere in the darkness beyond the detector, a jingle of keys warned of a security guard.

Then I saw Megyn, who stepped theatrically from behind a column to my right. She had her phone in her hand and was reading my message. She raised her eyebrows and then waved me closer to her.

We looked at each other for a moment, and heat simmered between us.

“What’s wrong?” I said finally.

Megyn smiled. “Nothing. I did what you said.”

She grinned at me. She was enjoying this just as much as I was.

“And then?” I pressed.

Megyn stepped out a little, to give herself an extra two inches of view down the corridor. Then she stepped back and put her hands on my tie, smoothing it down. The brush of her hands against my chest sent an electric pulse down my skin and into my groin. She flashed her eyes at me. "He tried to cheer me up," she said.

"That's all?" Megyn's fingers moved slowly down my tie, over the material of my pants, grazing my hard cock. She was grinning.

"Well," she said. "It wasn't much, but he touched my hand."

"How?"

The questions were falling out of my mouth almost as if I were a robot. Even though I had seen it, I wanted her to describe it.

"He just touched the outside of my hand, like this," she said, and she took my hand and rubbed the outside of my pinkie lightly. "But it was very erotic."

This last sentence hit me like a punch in the gut. I exhaled, but I felt like I couldn't inhale.

Megyn looked at me, and I could tell that something inside of her had switched. Just a little something. She was getting off on this as well.

She moved her hand over my cock again, and then she said: "So, I think he'll probably ask me to go somewhere after this. You know... go somewhere. So I just want to check with you, one last time... you really want me to do this?"

"Do you?" I said, in my robotic voice.

Megyn had the flush of excitement on her face that she had back on the day we had gone shopping. "Only if you do," she said, but I could tell that was merely a concession, a thing she was saying to make it sound like she wasn't too, too excited.

Again, I had no air in my lungs. "I do," I said, but my voice was barely a whisper for lack of air. My cock throbbed an affirmation of my answer into her fingertips.

"Are there any rules?" she said.

Her question went through me like a knife. Not because of the question itself, but the way she asked it. Coyly, almost as though she wanted to dare me to tell her yes. Almost like she knew I was off the rails at this point, and she could do whatever she wanted.

I shook my head. "No rules... about tonight, just.. you know... don't fall in love."

I had meant for this to sound like a joke, but it left my mouth a little more serious-sounding.

Megyn looked alarmed, but just for a second. “Don’t be ridiculous,” she said.

There was something unsettling about this statement, though at the time I couldn’t say why. A strange tone to it, almost like... like a teenage girl denying that a boy in class “liked” her; disingenuous, over-fluttery, partly a lie to cover up some inner hope.

But I wouldn’t understand that until she had already kissed me, said, “Sure?” and then walked away, her heels echoing on the marble floors, after I blindly, stupidly, riskily nodded.

Yes.

I should have known it would be no easy matter to follow Max Riley and my wife out of the museum. I didn’t even realize they were leaving until long after my wife stood up and gave me a look. I watched her shaking hands and chatting with a few people on her way to the exit on the opposite side of the room, but the whole time I just sat there, watching her and not thinking. Not thinking about where she was going, or what she was doing.

When I looked back at Max’s table, he was gone.

In a panic I took out my phone and found a message from Megyn.

[Megyn]: downstairs waiting for car, hurry up

I skidded into the hall where I had seen her leave, and found myself back in the auditorium. Downstairs, downstairs. Downstairs? What did that mean?

A few caterers were lingering, cleaning up the bar.

“Did you see a woman come through here? A redhead?” I said.

One of the caterers looked at me suspiciously, while another paused before lifting his hand and pointing in the direction of a doorway on the other side of the auditorium floor.

I walked briskly, as though I knew exactly where I was going.

The fine marble and glass gave way almost immediately upon turning the corner to an obnoxious hum of fluorescent lights and the dark brown, chipped paint of behind-the-scenes corridors for employees only. Though nothing really barred me from entering the stairway, I felt a mild thrill of worry as I pressed on the bar, thinking I might trip off a fire alarm.

I skipped down the stairs, with no idea whether I was headed in the right direction. I finally had the presence of mind to take out my phone.

[Me]: wheres downstairs

I kept walking, and found myself in a hallway with no outlet. I walked along, trying to keep calm in case I ran into anyone, wondering why the security was so lax around here. Finally, a caterer in a white suit emerged from a door. “You lost, buddy?”

“I’m supposed to meet my wife... I think, yes, I’m lost, I think she’s waiting for a car?”

The man frowned and pointed behind me to a doorway made of black flaps of plastic. “That’s out to the loading docks,” he said, but said it like more of a question. “But you really shouldn’t be down here.”

We stood, looking at each other, and then I turned and walked back into the stairwell. “Right,” I said. “You didn’t see a woman come through here?” I was already retreating, just trying to save face.

The man continued to frown, and shook his head.

I ran back up the stairs, back through the auditorium, and up to the exit doors, through which I had entered. They were locked.

“Damn!” I said. I turned around, and the same caterer who had directed me to the stairs was pointing again, this time to a door that had a green exit sign above it.

“That’s not locked?” I said?

He nodded, whatever that meant.

I tried the door, with the same fear I’d had earlier.

Now I was out, on the busy street. But that was really no better, except I didn’t look like a terrorist planting a bomb anymore. I looked to the left and right, and saw nothing.

I took out my phone.

[Me]: where are you?

But there was no response.

Panic was rising up inside of me.

I walked around the building.

But the whole place was closed up, except for the main entrance, and there was no sign of Megyn.

I took my phone out and called her cell. The phone rang emptily in my ear and went to voicemail.

For second, I entertained the idea of throwing my phone down on the ground in frustration.

But that would do no good.

I tried to calm my breathing, think rationally.

Okay.

Why would Megyn not respond?

I knew there was a rational explanation somewhere below the layers and layers of paranoid, terrible thoughts I was piling up in my mind. I just had to dig to get at it. I had to dig past all of the images of her laughing in the car with Max Riley, telling him she had ditched me, finally, and then grabbing his cock through his tuxedo, finding it so much bigger than she thought that her eyes involuntarily widened...

But that was what I had wanted, wasn't it?

I looked at my phone again, stared at the place where the message icon should have been, even swiped into the messages just to be doubly sure I hadn't missed something.

But why wouldn't she answer me? Why wouldn't she send a text?

I looked up at the sky, at just the right moment to get hit directly in the eye by a splash of rain.

My phone buzzed in my hand just as one of the women from my table clacked unsteadily down the steps. She was taking some cigarettes out of her purse, a little bit drunk. "Oh hi," she said, looking at me strangely.

Another drop of rain.

I took my phone out and stared at my message.

[Megyn]: cant now later

What had I done? What the hell had I done?

I started to type a message to her, and then I stopped.

The woman from the dinner walked unsteadily toward me, blowing some smoke up at the sky from the corner of her mouth.

I slipped the phone into my pocket.

“Do you have another one of those?” I asked her.

It was clear to me that I had lost track of my wife, and she was with another man now.

10: AFTERWARD

We had arranged for the kids to be at Megyn's parents', who by now must have thought we were enjoying a marital renaissance like no other. (Either that, or that we were getting a divorce).

Rather than send Megyn another text – knowing that it was probably pointless; no matter what was going on wherever it was she had gone with Max Riley, she wouldn't be able to send any texts about it – I went home and stewed in the darkness.

My stewing began pleasantly enough. On the drive home, I had given the matter a lot of thought. Riley was famous, and StreetRise was pretty frequently in the news. Almost everyone who mattered in StreetRise affairs knew perfectly well that Megyn was married, so whatever he did with her, it probably had to be pretty private. They wouldn't have gone out to just any club or restaurant. So even though I had messed up by losing sight of her, there was probably never any real chance of seeing them together in the first place.

I wondered where a guy like Max Riley stayed when he came to town. I wondered for a while how much a guy like Max Riley made. Then I started fishing around for the information on the internet. Then I felt sorry for myself, and then I then I started wondering if I hadn't made a huge mistake.

Just the thought of having made a mistake opened a floodgate, and behind it were all sorts of terrible thoughts that had nothing to do with how much money Max Riley made and how that made me feel inferior.

Like this one, which chilled me to the bone: what if Max Riley was not a trustworthy guy? What if he was one of those crazed, abusive psychos, and he was mistreating my wife?

I didn't want to drink, because I didn't want to be an asshole when Megyn got home, so I didn't have any kind of balm to put on my anxiety.

If Megyn ever came home.

I wondered what she was doing, right then, right at that moment.

I cheered up, on an upswing in my mood. Megyn was pretty good at reading people, reading men. (I mean, she sometimes idiotically felt unsure about whether or not they were flirting with her, but in general she knew what was what). There was no way she would have gone home with a total asshole.

My thoughts turned, then, to how Max Riley would put the moves on Megyn, and how she would react. Would he jump right in, or would he put on a whole seduction scene for her? Was he the kind of guy to turn on some music, offer her a drink, sit at the other end of whatever huge millionaire sofa he had in whatever huge millionaire loft he was renting, and ask her about herself?

And what about Megyn? How much of an act would she put on for him, for herself, and for me? Would she act flustered, or even be flustered? Would she say she couldn't possibly, because she was married? (Thinking about her saying something like that was, for me at least, even hotter than if she didn't).

And then, what kind of sex would they have? Would it be the kind of wild, uninhibited sex you have with someone you never intend to see again? Would they get wildly drunk and do things I had never done with Megyn? (My secret hope).

Or would he seduce her like that, too? Gently dipping into her this first time, warming her up and stretching her out for the next time he got inside of her?

And then, of course, I got around to pondering what kind of cock he had. How big it was, where he would put it, whether she would suck on his dick and if she would swallow his cum if he came in her mouth (not the kind of thing Megyn was usually in to, though if she had enough wine she was sometimes game, long ago, in the past...)

I whittled away the hours thinking about all of this, imagining all of it in vivid, painful detail. From time to time I would look at the clock and wonder exactly where Max Riley's cock was at that moment.

Every now and then I would get hit by the reality of what we were doing. This was real. My wife was really alone somewhere with that humongous black man, and I had given her explicit permission to do whatever she wanted with him.

Fuck.

And then, at long last, a splash of light moved across the living room wall – I was sitting in the dark – stayed there while a door opened and closed, and then retreated.

The front door jiggled, and in walked my wife.

It was 2:17am.

“Jesus!” Megyn said when she turned on the light. She had her hand to her heart. “I thought you went to bed.”

I beckoned her to me with one finger.

I was pleased, in what you might think is a very cruel and perverted way, to see that a mixture of hesitancy and fear, guilt and shyness, played across her face.

“I texted you like three times,” she said.

I had forgotten all about the phone. I pulled her toward me by her knee when she got close enough for me to reach her.

I sniffed the air. The unmistakable scent of soap rose from her skin.

“You took a shower,” I said, and I looked up at her.

Her mouth dropped open a little. “I... well, I...”

I slid my hands along her thighs and up toward where her panties should have been. I snapped my eyes up at her when I found that they were not.

Megyn blushed. “They... uh, got ripped.”

The final word of that sentence was a whisper.

There. It was out. She had really done it, really gone through with it. My pulse raced.

I found her smooth pussy with my fingers. It was wet with something, something from inside of her, whether she had taken a shower or not.

I withdrew my hand. “Turn around,” I said.

Megyn looked a little worried, almost like she was going to object, but she did as I asked. I leaned forward and reached up to unzip her dress.

A shudder went through me as the zipper broke her dress open, and revealed that her bra was also not under the dress. Torn, as well? Who knew? Nothing but her porcelain skin filled the yawn in her dress.

She slid the dress off her shoulders. Once her ass was bare, her misadventures were brought into a little more focus: her butt was red with slap marks.

I touched her right cheek, which was particularly bright, almost as though Max had slapped her skin just moments before. I could almost hear the crack of his thick black hand against her ass.

“Did you get a spanking?” I said.

But there wasn't any reason to pause, to wait for her answer; anyone could see that she had.

"Get on your hands and knees," I said almost immediately. "Leave your shoes on," I added, when she started to step out of the sleek black pumps.

My wife dropped to her hands and knees, and I slid off the chair and knelt behind her, unzipping my pants as I did.

I pushed down on her middle back, pushing her face to the floor. This way, her ass was tilted up at me. I made another pass over her sore buttocks. "Are you sore?" I asked.

She nodded by moving her face up and down on the floor. I kissed her on the red splotches. Then I leaned forward and took her hands, one by one, placing them on her ass. "Pull your ass apart for me," I said.

I wanted a view of her pussy, which shower or no, was probably still dripping with another man's cum.

I leaned back on my heels to have a better view, and I investigated the damage.

Her inner thighs were smeared with her, or his, or both of their cum. Or her excitement. I had no way of knowing which until I heard the story. The outer and inner lips of her cunt had certainly taken quite a bit of abuse. Beneath the layer of shiny juices, they were red and inflamed. Her hole was enlarged, stretched out, and her clit was fat and protruding. The skin around her pussy had been rubbed to a flaming red.

And above her pussy, the pucker of her ass, which didn't seem to have taken a whole cock inside of it but which had definitely been abused in some way; it, too, was a flushed, manhandled shade of red.

I touched her pussy. "How about here," I said. "Are you sore?"

She nodded.

I touched her ass. "And here?"

Another nod.

"You've been a very naughty girl, Mrs. Lyons," I said. "Why don't you tell me what Max Riley has done with you?"

"I can't tell you," Megyn whispered.

"Oh, you most certainly can," I said. "Or do you need another spanking?"

Megyn pushed up on her hands. "No," she said. "No, I'm too sore."

I rubbed my hand on her ass. “Well, you’ll have to tell me what you did, if you don’t want a spanking.”

She looked back at me helplessly.

“I don’t know how to say it,” she said, finally.

I took my cock out, stroking it languidly with my hand. Precum had formed in a bead at the crown.

This is why, I thought, this whole thing would be easier if I could just watch them.

“Let’s start with this,” I said. “Did you suck his cock?”

Megyn nodded.

“And did he come in your mouth?”

She looked down as she nodded.

“And did you swallow?”

“Yeah, I mean... sort of.”

“Sort of?”

Megyn lowered her head a little. “He, um... came all over my lips and my... face.”

“So what did you do?”

She hesitated.

I nudged her with my cock, rubbing it along her thigh.

“I licked it off,” she whispered finally.

I reached forward and grabbed her hair and pulled her head around, leading her toward my own cock. She looked at my shaft, saw the precum oozing from the tip, and seemed to relax a little.

“Did he ask you to lick it off?” I asked.

She lifted her gaze to look me right in the eye. “He told me to.”

I pushed her head down, and she opened her mouth wide for my cock. She took it all the way to the back of her throat, effortlessly. I pumped her up and down on my shaft a few times, and then released her head so she could look up at me again. “Was his cock the biggest cock you ever put in your mouth?”

Megyn nodded. I pulled gently on her hair to let her know I wanted something a little more. “It was hard to get the whole thing in my mouth,” she added.

I pushed her back on all fours, facing away from me again. “Did you suck his cock before or after he fucked your pussy?”

“After.”

“And did he come in your pussy, Megyn?” I slid my fingers into her wet slit and pinched her clit. She gasped. “Oh,” she said.

I slapped her lightly on the ass. She sucked her breath in. “How did his cock feel in your pussy? Was it big?”

“It was... he fucked me for a long time.”

“And his cock was big?”

“Yes.”

“Thick?”

“Yeah.” Megyn’s voice was weak now. She was getting worked up as I played with her clit.

“Is your pussy very sore right now?”

She nodded.

I placed the head of my cock at the entrance to her sodden cunt. “But not too sore for me?” I pushed into her slowly. “I’ll fuck you nice and gentle,” I said. “If you tell me what else Max did to you.”

Megyn sucked in her breath as my cock slowly cut through her. She was obviously in some discomfort. Max had really fucked the shit out of her, it seemed. I shuddered. I would have given anything to see him manhandle my wife.

But however sore she was, there was no mistaking that she was also wildly turned on, because her cunt was as soaked as I had ever felt it, and she was the one who started rocking back and forth on my cock.

“He fucked me... there,” she said. “And he, while he did that he... that’s when he spanked me.”

“But you liked it,” I said.

“I liked it a lot.” Her pussy quivered as though agreeing.

“And then what?”

“Then he... uh...”

I slapped her lightly on the ass when her voice trailed off, and she gasped lightly. She hurried to get the next words out:

“He... put something in my ass, more than one finger. He did it while he was fucking me and I was so... I barely remember.”

I had to fight hard to keep from blowing my load into her right then and there. I leaned forward and caught my breath, not moving for a moment.

“Did you like that?” I asked, when I had regained control.

Megyn responded by whimpering, getting closer to an orgasm. She started to buck against me, slapping her sore buttocks against my thighs.

“Does your ass hurt?”

“Yes.”

“Say it.”

“Oh...” Megyn whined. “Oh... my ass hurts.”

I had a plan for it to hurt even more, next time, but I shelved it because thinking about it nearly sent me careening over the edge again.

“And then what?” I said. I grabbed her hips, and started to fuck her hard, breaking my promise to be gentle. She went right along with it, incredibly – such a slut! - and I never got the answer to that last question because we both started yelling as we came.

The orgasm I had in my wife’s sodden, used cunt was like none I had ever had before in my life. I had to stare away at her for a full five minutes as wave after wave of ecstasy rolled over me, until it was almost painful.

Finally, I slowly withdrew from her pussy, with a squelch. My cock flopped against my thigh, and she edged forward before rolling over to lie down on the floor.

I looked to my right and found a blanket on the couch, which I tossed over her. I threw a pillow on the floor for her and then sank down next to her with my own under my head.

Megyn pulled the blanket over her and up to her chin. She covered her mouth. “Oh my god,” she said. She looked at me.

I was smiling, moving my hand up and down her arm.

“Was it too far?” she said.

“Only if it was too far for you,” I said. “Did you... I mean, was he too rough with you? Was I too rough with you?”

She shook her head quickly side to side. “I liked it,” she admitted.

I already knew that, I could already sense it. I never did things like this with her, not even in the beginning of our relationship. But I had always sensed by her eagerness to cross into the area of roughness, that she liked it, maybe even craved it.

“He smacked you pretty hard on the ass,” I said.

Megyn nodded.

“But you liked it.”

She bit into her lip. Her head moved in a barely perceptible way.

“Was it too much?” she said. “The, um...”

I was suddenly curious about something. “Did you suck his cock before or after he fucked you?”

She put the blanket over her face. “Uh... after.”

This sent a ripple of ecstasy through me. Imagining her licking up her own sweet cum from the dark, veined skin of Max Riley’s cock.

The Hill would never be the same for me.

Somehow the conversation lulled after that, and it was a long time before I spoke again. The question rose up inside of me, floating adrift on a sea of thoughts. It came out of my mouth suddenly, without me really thinking about it.

“So how did you leave it?” I asked.

Megyn was drifting away in her own thoughts. “Mmm... huh? Oh.” There was a long silence. “I don’t know... it was... I didn’t know how to leave it. I just sort of... went home.”

Something fluttered in my chest. A feeling of excitement. “But did it seem like... I don’t know, a one-off?”

There was another long pause, while I waited for Megyn’s answer. I didn’t know what I wanted her to say.

“I guess so,” she said finally. Her voice was sleepy.

I wasn’t really sure what that meant, but I sensed Megyn was done talking about it, so I dropped it.

11: ANOTHER CHANCE

One of the reasons I had felt reasonably safe about letting my wife hook up with Max Riley is that, while he occasionally came to town for events to support StreetRise, he mostly lived and worked in L.A. and traveled to Philadelphia, where they shot most of The Hill. I had secretly assumed he would fuck my wife, and then go back to doing whatever he was doing.

It's a thing I honestly didn't think through all the way.

At first, that's exactly what happened, and it seemed like we had pulled off the perfect plan: I got my fantasy, Megyn had her old job back, and our marriage and sex life got a shot of adrenaline, resuscitating them both.

Her adventures with Max Riley had spawned a whole new era of adventure in the bedroom for us. Megyn became a lot more willing to engage in dirty talk, in teasing me, in doing the sorts of things she hadn't really been into before.

And we always had the lingering effect of her adventure with Max Riley to fall back on.

So in a way, I was a little relieved that Max was gone: I had gotten what I wanted (mostly) and I came out on top. The risk had paid off.

In another way, I still had an itch that I wanted to scratch. I had wanted to see – and I still obsessed about seeing – my wife with another man. I didn't want to hear about it, I wanted to see it with my own two eyes. I knew I would never be truly satisfied until I did.

It didn't have to be Max Riley, I realized, after stewing about it for a number of days. There were whole communities of people who participated in a lifestyle of hotwifing, men who would be willing to help me out.

But I was pretty sure that Megyn wouldn't go for that sort of thing. I realized that she was partly into this because it was Max Riley, because she actually liked him – and importantly, because the whole thing had developed a little organically. I think she liked to be able to tell herself it had all kind of “happened” to her – Cassie is the one who bought her the ticket for the “date,” and Cassie is the one who talked her into taking the job, and then I was the one who nudged her toward an already-blossoming attraction with Max.

If I just had some man over to have sex with her, her own illusions and desires wouldn't be maintained.

But it still nagged me. It nagged me all the time that I had missed seeing her, smelling her, hearing the slap of her skin against Max Riley's thighs.

I should have been grateful that our experiment had gone so well, that I had gotten something from it, and that it hadn't ended in disaster.

But I have a gambler's mentality. (I don't gamble, not even a little, not even with fake money, for just this reason.) I can't stop once I start.

So when, almost a month after she had sex with Max, the tides shifted again, I was not hesitant to jump in with both feet.

"So, listen," Megyn said, leaning over the counter. It was a Friday evening, an unusually warm one for June, and she was wearing a loosely-fitting silk tank top she used as a pajama, with the robe I had given her from the lingerie store draped over her shoulder, open. One shoulder of the robe kept sliding off her skin, exposing her collarbone and the smooth hump of her shoulder. When she leaned over, the tank-top fell open and gave me a nice view of her breasts, and her nipples grazing the silky fabric.

She seemed to be dressing like this unconsciously, unaware of how it was driving me wild.

"I have some news," she said, tucking a strand of her hair behind her ear. She was letting it grow long, and it had a little curl to it in the humid weather. (Thankfully, she had not started letting the rest of her hair grow long, which was a pleasant after-effect of our adventures).

I wasn't really paying attention, staring as I was into her shirt. I said, "mmm-hmm," and took a sip of my beer. I was expecting "news" in the form of, "Maggie has decided to renovate her kitchen and she's giving me that set of bottles I really like," or something like that.

"Well, you know that StreetRise has been thinking about expanding our model to other organizations in the region..."

I sort of tuned out after "expanding." I was enjoying the view, watching her breasts graze the red tank-top, and "expanding" is a word that triggers my Corpspeak-Filter to "Block."

It's not that I don't want to listen to my wife, it's just that there are some topics – like those about her business affairs – that I just can't focus on. Especially when I was thinking about how nice her round bottom looked in those tiny shorts she was wearing.

“... and.... well, Max has decided to spearhead that campaign and do an outreach program in Philadelphia. So we’re doing a sort of launch there in two weeks. And... obviously, I have to go.”

My mind came crashing to a halt.

Max.

Now she had my full attention. I set my beer down, and my eyes snapped up to meet hers.

I found that she was laughing with her eyes, which meant that she had known I was sort of tuning her out and staring down her shirt up to that point.

“Wait, what?” I stammered.

Megyn grinned, and stood up straight. She dragged her hand along the counter as she came around to my side of the island. “I said,” she cooed, in a sultry voice, “Max Riley is going to endorse a Philadelphia StreetRise program and I need to go there in two weeks to... you know, help him.”

I turned on the stool to face her. She stood in front of me, her robe open and her lithe body hanging out of it, skin in every direction. She let the robe slip from her shoulder, and then she slid the spaghetti strap of the tank off dropping the material down to almost reveal her nipple.

“If, of course, you’re okay with that,” she said.

I put my hands on her butt, which was wonderfully firm. She had continued running, even though she worked outside the house, and she had started working out in the YMCA below the StreetRise building.

I often wondered if her religious workouts had been done in expectation of spending time with Max again.

Truthfully, it all had a very bad aura hanging over it. But I was too excited by the prospect, too enticed by the gamble, to really think about bad omens or consequences.

I slid my hands down her statuesque legs. “And I suppose you’re the only person who can go,” I said.

“Well, that’s the thing...” Megyn said. “It actually makes more sense for Dan Enbright to go, but...”

I pressed my mouth against her stomach and bit lightly into her flesh through the tank.

“But what?” I growled.

“But Max sent me a text, and asked me if I wanted to come instead of Dan. That he would make a special request, pull some strings.”

This sent a little chill through me. It was pleasant as well as toxic: certainly this sort of lever-pulling was a signal to everyone that my wife was doing something improper with Max Riley.

I forgot to answer her, because I was busy thinking about that.

“I already said yes,” she said. “Because I didn’t really have time to talk to you about it.”

She had moved her fingers to the back of my neck, and was running them down my spine with a feathery touch. I felt my skin prickle along the backs of my arms. I was already hard, from the moment I’d seen her little outfit, but this made my cock throb almost painfully.

“Do you want to see the text?” she said. She had her phone ready, and she dragged it across the counter top with her fingertips. I watched with a side-long glance, my face still buried in her stomach, my mouth edging her tank up her belly. Her fingers glided nimbly over the screen, and then she picked up the phone and showed me the messages:

[M Riley]: I want to see you again

[Megyn]: hmmm... I don't know how to make that happen

I raised my eyebrows. I wondered how long it had taken Megyn to settle on that response. She wrote back an hour later, but it could have been because she hadn’t gotten the text. I wondered if it was a ploy, to make herself seem more detached and unavailable and therefore more enticing to him, or if she had done it as an element of realism, so she appeared to be merely a married woman who had been seduced by his... charms.

Either way, it was a pretty slick move, as evidenced by the subsequent texts.

[M Riley]: what if I can make it happen

[Megyn]: im all ears

[M Riley]: I can make it happen so you'll be at my beck and call for a whole weekend. Would you like that?

If Megyn didn't like that, I certainly liked it. My cock practically split in two reading that line. I continued. Megyn's response was five minutes later, showing she must have spent some time thinking about it. I wondered if the text had the same effect on her that it had on me, if she had creamed in her underwear just reading the phrase "beck and call."

[Megyn]: its a lot to handle for a whole weekend

[M Riley]: ill make sure not to ride you too hard

Cringeworthy word play, certainly. But still hot as hell.

[Megyn]: well...

[Megyn]: so what's the plan

[M Riley]: you'll hear soon enough.

"So you're going to be at Max Riley's beck and call, all weekend," I said. The phrase was burning through me. What did he have planned for my wife? How many times would he fuck her in a weekend? How perverted would she let him get with her?

And how would I be able to watch?

"Pending your approval, of course," Megyn said.

I tugged on her leg, and pushed her onto my lap. It was a precarious position, teetering on the stool like we were. But I didn't care. As she climbed up, I swept her shorts aside and worked my fingers into her pussy.

"And what about you?" I growled. I clawed forward inside of her, pressing out to her clit, and I was rewarded as she rocked slightly on top of me and her eyes dropped a little. "How do you feel about being at Max Riley's beck and call?"

I started to move my finger rhythmically, and I knew I had hit a sweet spot because she turned to liquid in my hands. She mewled as I pushed deeper inside of her, balling my fingers into half a fist. I rolled my hand inside of her and her eyes went wide-open. "I want..." she said, and she lost track of what she was saying. "I want... I'll do what you want."

"But tell me if you like fucking him," I said.

She looked uncertain, but she was also close to coming, and she knew I would stop if she didn't tell me. I could see the slight panic in her eyes, the need.

Just say it," I said. "Say, 'I like fucking Max Riley.'"

I slowed the turning motion of my hand and she mewled again. "Oh... I like fucking Max Riley."

"Do you like sucking his cock?"

She started to move her hips, and I pressed on her shoulder. "Stay still," I said, and she settled on my lap, her body trembling. "I'll let you come when you say what I want to hear."

She gave another low whine, and then she let her head fall back. "I love sucking on his cock," she said, almost desperately. "I love how he fucks me."

With each lovely, filthy admission, I started to fuck her closer to her sweet spot, and her legs began to tremble as she fought to stay still and work for her pleasure by telling me how much she liked Max Riley's cock in her mouth.

"I like the way his cum tastes at the back of my throat," she purred.

So I fingered her furiously, until her pussy clenched around my hand and I felt her cum slick down to my wrist.

I stood up a little, enough to slide my cock out of my pants and underwear. And then I lifted her, and slid her still-pulsing, hot liquid cunt over my dick, and used her hips to bounce her on top of me until I came.

Which admittedly, took next to no time at all.

12: PHILIDELPHIA

When I agreed to the plan, I envisioned it much differently than it ended up taking shape.

It's hard to say what actually went through my mind; it was a fantasy, so it didn't obey the laws of physics or reason. I suppose I thought I would float around in Philadelphia, an all-seeing ghost, and enjoy views of my wife from above and below and right next to her while she submitted to Max Riley's "beck and call."

In reality, as Megyn pointed out long after the plan was already set in motion, this would not be possible.

Max Riley wasn't a man of such fame and importance that he needed a bodyguard with him, but he also wasn't the kind of man to stroll along in public places hand in hand with a woman and not get noticed, and probably photographed.

So, the first difficulty to overcome was that whatever Max was doing with my wife – unless they were standing apart and not looking at each other at public functions for show – would be done in private.

The kind of private I could not get to.

Max Riley didn't stay in hotels when he did gigs like this. He was going to be staying at one of his apartments, which he kept year-round because... well, he's Max Riley.

Megyn was booked into a hotel for appearances' sake, but we both knew as soon as we thought about it that Max Riley probably wouldn't go to her hotel room. He would probably beck-and-call her to his own apartment.

None of these factors were very good for my immediate problem, which was that I wanted to watch my wife with Max. Up close, preferably.

"It will happen," Megyn assured me, as she kissed me goodbye for her first meeting on Saturday. "And if it doesn't... at least you're here."

I frowned.

"You want me to call it off?" she asked, trailing a finger down my chest through my shirt. "I can always tell him I'm feeling too guilty, I need to call it off."

She was smiling as she said this, and I didn't much care for the look in her, as wildly hot as I found it. She had too much power over me, I realized.

She sort of laughed as she climbed off the bed and grabbed her purse.
“I’ll text you when I know more. I love you.”
And there she went.

The wait in the hotel was excruciating. I had brought some work with me but I spent most of the day in a daze, daydreaming, jerking off when my fantasies overwhelmed me, watching trashy TV.

Megyn sent me a text around 5pm.

[Megyn]: hes invited me to dinner. Do I go or no? ;)

I hovered with my finger over my reply, savoring the idea that I could control my wife, like a remote-control sex doll, letting the feeling course through me: adrenaline, lust, testosterone, something that was making me high. Beneath it, I sensed that maybe this was too far, too much of a risk, but I did it anyway.

[Me]: make sure to tell him you have to call your husband and check in

[Megyn]: youre evil

[Megyn]: i’ll try

[Megyn]: any other requests

I thought on this for a while. And then the idea was starting me right in the face, a solution to the problem. In a way.

[Me]: leave the phone on. facetime it, try to aim it at where you are

There was a long, long pause. Maybe it wasn’t long, maybe it was only minutes.

The plan I had just suggested was of course preposterous. I knew that before I even read her reply.

But letting your wife sleep with a movie star is preposterous.

Wanting to watch another man fuck your wife like a rag doll is preposterous.

Preposterous was not something that deterred me, clearly.

[Megyn]: he's pretty uptight abt phones and stuff

[Megyn]: I gotta go talk soon xo x

I deliberated about typing back, “OK,” and didn’t. I was a cool customer, an unworried man, a man who was completely confident about what his wife was going to do with Max Riley tonight.

I poured myself a strong drink, and stretched out on the hotel bed. I was such a cool customer I was going to watch Holmes on Homes and not even think about my wife, or where she was, or what she was going to do.

Two hours later, the phone rang from Megyn’s number.

I was deep in a very paranoid cycle of thought about her and Max, and my cock was rock-hard, and Holmes on Homes had long since ended and been replaced by another show without me even noticing. I had had too much to drink (luckily, I had had the good sense to purchase a bottle of booze at the liquor store so I didn’t have to raid the mini-fridge. I had begun, very classily, to drink it from the bottle).

I swiped at the phone, and set the bottle down on the night-table as soon as my swiping revealed that I was far drunker than I had intended to get.

“Hi, honey,” I said, when I answered. “How’s Philadelphia?”

“Hi sweetheart,” she said, in a little whisper. “I’m just calling to say goodnight.”

I felt the features of my face narrow into a stern expression. “Are you at his apartment right now?”

“Yes.”

“But you’re out of earshot?”

“Uh... I think so.”

I pictured this. On the one hand, it probably lent credibility to her phone call: she was engaging in her married life, giving one last kiss to her husband and kids before she strolled back into his expansive living room, that probably had a view of the city and floor-to ceiling glass, leather couches, a nice glass of wine, and a huge bed with slippery silk sheets that they would soak through in under an hour...

“Peter?” Megyn said, bringing me back to reality. “Is everything okay?”

“Go to where he can hear you,” I said.

There was a pause, and I was unsure what she was doing. “That’s... listen it’s not the best plan right now. But what if you call me back in like... ten minutes. Then I can answer the phone out there and leave it on instead of hanging up.”

She sounded excited as she formulated her plan.

“Yeah,” she said, without waiting for my reply. “Do that.”

I wasn’t sure what to say, I was so taken aback by her excitement. She was being so... devious. I could almost see the stain of crimson creeping across her cheeks – not embarrassment, but excitement.

The feeling unsettled me as much as it excited me.

“Love you too,” she said loudly, even though I hadn’t said anything.

And even though I didn’t actually hear anything else through the phone, it seemed to me as though I could hear the presence of Max Riley creeping toward my wife. Heavy, dark, like the bass line of a rap song. Easing up next to her, walking toward her.

And I imagined Megyn pointing theatrically at the red button on her screen. Hanging up. Smiling at Max as she let her hand drop slowly down and he moved closer to her, his mouth already sucking her lips toward him.

A chill went through me, because imagining her smiling at him I realized: Megyn was probably doing this more for herself than for me. After all, what woman wouldn’t want to get permission to fuck a man like that?

And if she didn’t answer when I called?

My stomach dropped.

I grabbed the paper-bagged booze and took a swig. Then I set the timer for ten minutes.

The digitized tone of a ring blared in my ear. I held my phone away from my face and checked one final, umpteenth time, that I was on mute.

Ring.

Ring.

My impatience soared, my paranoia ate at my insides like a fire licking up gasoline. It seemed like an eternity stretched out between each ring of the phone, and yet like there was only a nanosecond between them. Life was moving too fast, moving too slow.

Inside, my organs wrung themselves out. They were dumping every bad thing into my blood that they could, and my whole body throbbed with the weight of it.

“Peter?” Megyn said.

And then, for a moment, I wondered if my plan was terrible. If I shouldn’t have said something, if I should un-nmute myself. Maybe Megyn wouldn’t understand my plan, maybe she would hang up on me...

I held the phone away from my face again, ready to change the plan, when Megyn’s voice cut through the silence.

“Oh, sure. It’s uh... yeah sorry I forgot that. I think it’s in the cupboard above the fridge.”

And then I heard him. I was sure of it. The sound was low, barely audible, but it was the unmistakable sound of a man’s whisper.

Was he touching her now? His head on her stomach, his hands moving down to her panties, pulling them down, rounding at her hips, his lips brushing side to side like a pendulum, lower, lower still...

“You want to check?” she said.

And then, her voice shaking from time to time as Max did something to her – something I couldn’t see, but something that made the cadence of her voice race, or her vocal chords choke for just a moment, or her voice warble as she fought to sound (for show) like she didn’t have a black man tearing off her clothes or sucking her nipple into his mouth... she started to have a conversation with herself:

“Not there... hmmm... maybe in the garage.... How important is it?.... Okay, I understand... it’s, it’s.... yeah, I’m just walking up a flight of stairs.... it’s maybe in the – oh you found it. Good. Well... anything else?.... No, I’m really exhausted, I’ll probably just... turn in...”

By the time she said “I love you,” it was clear that Max had moved on from light petting and kissing to something much more complicated. Whatever he was doing to her, she could barely keep her voice from breaking.

After she said “goodnight,” I was in such a daze that I almost hung the phone up on her.

There was a silence on the other end of the phone for a moment, and then I heard the sharp inhale of Megyn’s breath. I jerked my finger back from the red “End Call” button.

Oh yes. The plan.

I heard a slap of skin. “That was not very helpful,” Megyn said.

The low rumble of Max’s voice. Unintelligible.

“I’m serious,” Megyn said. “He’s...” her voice trailed off.

Then: “Oh God that feels good.”

I listened, straining to hear as though hearing better would transport me to some kind of visualization, enable me to see what Max Riley was doing to my wife. She hadn't turned on the camera, and so I only had the sound of whatever he was doing to go by. For a few moments it was just Megyn's heavy breathing.

Then I distinctly heard a sloppy, wet sound.

And then, as Megyn's voice crescendoed, and she began to pant and say “Oh God, Oh God” over and over again, I realized that Max Riley had his face buried in her pussy, and he was eating my wife out until she screamed.

I listened to her moan and mewl, and then she hollered as she came – there was no mistaking that sound. I heard the rustling and shifting of their bodies, and then Megyn's voice again, making sounds that made no sense, low and bawling like an animal.

Then:

“Oh!! Go slow. Oh, it's so big. There. Mmmm...” and she disintegrated again into incomprehensible moans.

Underneath the sound of her voice I heard the sticky sloshing of her cunt. A quick, steady rhythm, as Max Riley sawed away at her.

I wondered how they were positioned: doggy style? Or was he lying on top of my wife, with her breasts pressed against his chest and her thighs wrapped around him, her feet scrambling wildly along his lower back as he drove her wild? Or had he propped her ankles on his shoulders and hammered into her as her feet bounced next to his ears? Maybe she had climbed on top of him and was now bouncing over him, her tits bobbing while he watched?

His own voice began to rise from the lowest layer of the sounds. It was a low, deep growl, and it built up as Megyn gasps and moan became more high pitched and senseless. I started to hear the sound of slapping skin. And all the while the growl of Max Riley, turning from a growl to words.

Slap slap slap.

“That's it baby, come for me baby.”

Slap slap slap

“Oh God, oh oh oh!”

Every sound was wetter, sloppier than the one before. The words they were saying ceased making sense. Finally Megyn let out a howl, a terrifying one, and Max grunted in pleasure. The slapping stopped, and all that was left was the sound of my wife squealing out her orgasm.

For a moment after Megyn stopped making noise, there was another silence.

I stared at the blank phone, as though I could make out some image if only I looked hard enough.

Then panting.

Then Megyn's voice again, twisted into a sound of pleasure and a whine. "Oh, no more," she complained, though it was a half-hearted complaint. "I can't... I can't take any more."

"You'll take it, baby doll. You'll take it and like it."

Megyn moaned. "I can't. Oh! It's too... it's too... much..."

The sound of her pussy was now so sticky it lapped right over their dialogue, even through the phone.

I listened for what seemed like endless minutes to the sound of Max Riley fucking my wife, his cock slopping in and out of her pussy, her moans changing from overwhelmed to again excited as the time went on. Until she was begging him again to keep going, to fill her up.

Or at least that's what it sounded like, without any real words.

As I listened, I freed my cock from the sweatpants and boxers I was lounging in, and stroked myself to a climax that preceded theirs by little more than seconds. After I came, I heard my wife begin to scream, and then the sound of their wet skin slapping hard together, and then a full, heavy-bodied grunt, a sharp yell, and Max Riley came.

I pictured them writhing together, their dark and light skin twisting into wet, sticky ropes as they wound around each other like a knot of snakes. Did he still have his cock inside of her? When he kissed her did he slide his tongue around, outside of her mouth, darting around playfully, their spit mingling in the open air?

I was panting as well, and so I turned up the volume on my phone. As if I could hear more than what I heard: the sound of two people after they had sex, murmuring, sticking together, kissing. The shifting of their bodies on the furniture, Megyn's light laughter muffled by Max's skin close to her mouth.

This went on as I sat up and stared into the dark night outside the window.

A heavy thud. A little giggle.

A slap, the unmistakable sound of a man slapping a woman's ass lightly, after fucking her.

Footsteps, fading.

A little shriek in the distance.

Sounds of two people, coming together and then playfully falling apart, then back together again. Further away with each second.

They were going somewhere else, and the phone was not going with them.

I took another swig of whiskey and waited to hear something. Waited, and waited.

I lay on my side, the phone next to me.

And that's how I fell asleep, straining to hear Max and my wife again.

The sound of the door woke me up. The over-strong slam! of a hotel door.

I sat up. One glance told me the phone had died. It was bright, morning light streaming in to the room, unnoticed by me until that moment.

I sat up and turned around.

Megyn was standing there, dressed in the same outfit as the night before. Her hair was a mess, and it was the first thing I noticed.

She tossed her room key and another, jingling set on the bed and peeled her blazer away from her shoulders. "I just came back to shower and change," she said.

I was still staring at her, half-awake, wondering if this was a dream.

"It's like seven o'clock," she said to me, and I wasn't sure what she was implying with the tone.

"I have to get going," she continued.

When I didn't respond to any of this, she shrugged and unbuttoned her blouse, turning at the same time and walking toward the bathroom.

Slowly, slowly, everything I had seen and everything that had happened the night before made their way through my brain and connected:

My wife was standing in the hotel room, taking off her clothes. Her hair was sticky with either sweat or – a shudder went through me – another man's cum.

"Megyn!" I hissed. I jumped out of bed. "Wait. Come back here."

She leaned out of the bathroom. Her shirt was off and she was unfastening the back of her skirt. I saw that her bra was intact, though like everything else it looked... ruffled. She smiled at me. "Oh. I thought you weren't even interested," she said, almost coyly.

"Come here," I said. As the memories of the night before were spreading, branching out into my body, my cock was getting hard.

"I have to be at the Convention Center by eight," she said, but she came toward me, still fiddling with the hook of her skirt. The garment fell to her feet when she finally unhooked it, and she stepped out of it neatly.

She was wearing one of the lingerie sets I had purchased for her— what seemed like such a long time ago – at the lingerie store. The white one, with the strange blue shading.

I looked her up and down as she approached me. Her hair did in fact seem to be stuck together in several streaks – one near her forehead and one next to her ear – with what I assessed to be, by its astringent scent, Max Riley's cum. I reached forward and turned her slowly around by pushing on her shoulder. Her butt was red again, though not nearly so much. When she faced me again I noticed the streaks of mascara she had failed to wipe away, and the slight puffiness to her lips. Lips that had clearly been stretched and distended by sucking on so much cock.

"It looks like you've had quite a night," I said.

She put her hand on her hip. "Did you hear it?"

I pushed her onto the bed; now that I saw her like this my need was far too great to stand there teasing each other. I yanked her panties to mid-thigh, where I grew impatient as they rolled up and were hard to pull away. They were wet, soaked all the way through.

"I didn't shower at Max's," she said, looking at my face for my reaction.

I abandoned trying to slide her panties off. I grabbed her by the knees and pushed her legs open in a frog-like position. The expensive underwear shredded, and Megyn made a light face, but we were soon on to other things.

I stared at her pussy, which was fucked so full of cum not long ago that it was positively gushing. She squeezed her cunt and a trickle of creamy white cum oozed from inside of her. Her bare lips and the tender insides of her folds were distended and glistened with all the fluids that coated them.

"How many times did you fuck him?" I breathed.

"The one you heard," she said. As she paused, she moved her hand down to her pussy and slid her fingers into the soaked mess between her folds. I watched as her fingers became coated in the filthy mess Max Riley had left behind of her cunt, and then my wife – my sweet wife – brought her fingers to her mouth and sucked it from them. “And then two more times. We were up all night.”

I pushed her legs apart further and fell into her sodden, practically liquefied hole. She was hot and so wet that there was almost no friction on my cock, but it didn’t matter: I had only to feel her hot flesh around me, and think of how just an hour before, maybe even less, Max Riley’s thick black cock had been exactly where mine was now, to go nearly to the edge.

I lay on top of her as I pumped into her. She writhed in obvious discomfort, mixed with her pleasure. She had to be sore and worn-out, if they had gone at it all night like that. “Did you suck his cock, too?” I groaned, playing with her hair with my fingers, right where it was stuck together by the cum he had evidently spurted all over her face.

She just smiled. She knew I knew the answer to that.

I slid one hand into the soaked folds of her cunt, alongside my cock, and drew the juices that were gushing from inside of her to coat my own fingers. Then I brought my hand up to her mouth, three fingers clustered together.

I didn’t have to say anything to her. Her mouth was open even before I said: “Show me.” Her lips were already closing around my knuckles, spread wide, her cheeks puffed out like they would be if she had a very large cock in her mouth, before I even asked her to do it. And then I fucked her mouth with my fingers and her disloyal, cum-filled cunt with my cock until I came, which may not have taken very long.

I felt her spasm around me, so she might have come, but then she might have been too worn out for any more. I lay on top of her, panting, my cock awash in her sloshy pussy that felt like hot oil in a bed of butter. She licked my fingers as I withdrew them from her mouth.

We lay like that for only seconds, and then she tapped me on the shoulder. “Honey,” she said impatiently. “I have to go.”

I rolled off of her but pulled her with me, trying to wrap her up in my arms.

She kissed me, and the kiss was filthy, tasting of her cum, but with the bitter undertone of another man’s seed somewhere along her lips. “I have to go,” she said, smiling. “I have to get ready. I can’t be late.”

She squirmed away from my arms and hurried into the bathroom. “Oh my god,” I heard her say. “I can barely walk.”

She showered, while I lay there in a daze.

When she came out she hurried to the closet, where she had hung her clothes, and dressed more quickly than seemed humanly possible, in a stunning green blouse and black skirt. The clothes were old, but they seemed enhanced, like everything around me did.

She crawled onto the bed to kiss me. “Gotta go. But I’m coming back in the afternoon for a nap.”

Then she leaned in close to me, and her next words traveled down my spine like a razor shaving away the tiniest bit from the most sexual thread of nerves:

“Max wants something and I need to practice it with you first.”

My body felt as though it had been thrown against a wall. My ears were ringing as she kissed me again, backed away, put on her shoes, and smiled at me.

I must have been frozen, a look of such stupid disbelief on my face. She smiled, waved, and said she’d be back as soon as she could.

And then she was gone.

13: TRAINING

I had another long day, much like the one before although maybe more tormented.

Megyn came back to the hotel at three.

“Umph!” she said, throwing herself on the bed on her back with her arms up above her head. She closed her eyes. “I’m so tired.”

I rose up from the desk and crossed the room to sit next to her on the bed. Her face was still, and she almost looked like she had already fallen asleep. I stroked her hair, and worried for a moment that she was actually going to want to sleep this afternoon.

My cock had been throbbing with desire all day long. The idea that I might get denied right then, for want of sleep, caused a wave of rage to pass over me. I knew it was unreasonable, unloving, uncaring, but I had a brief moment of fury, thinking about how it was my right to claim her, I had been waiting for it all afternoon, after all!

Just as my pulse started racing, though, Megyn began to make a snoring noise.

An incredibly fake snoring noise, and Megyn doesn't snore anyway.

Her eyes flew open and she grinned at me. “Had you going, didn’t I?” she said.

The tension drained out of me and I tried my best to seem like a light-hearted, casual guy as I swung my legs up onto the bed and she crawled in my direction to rest her head on my chest.

“I knew it all along,” I joked. We entwined our fingers.

Megyn yawned. “I am very tired,” she said.

“Do you prefer to take a nap?” I asked, and the insincerity was too much even for me to handle.

Megyn snorted as she laughed at me. She turned her head to look up at me. “Yeah, right,” she said. Then she settled on my chest again.

She dropped the hand she was holding mine with to my crotch, where she felt my burgeoning erection. “I mean, maybe you want to just rest, too,” she said, and I could feel the grin on her face through my shirt.

“What time are you going to see Max?” I asked.

She was rubbing my cock through the sweatpants (I still hadn’t changed) by bringing three of her fingers together at the crown and then spreading them out to travel down the length of my shaft, as far as she could go through the material. She did this in languid strokes, almost like she was playing with a toy absent-mindedly.

“That’s the thing,” she said. “He told me he’d call. He could call at any moment.”

I shivered.

“He could even show up here,” she said. She shrugged.

Her fingers slid beneath the elastic waistband of the sweats, and she found my cock with her hand. She worked it out from underneath the elastic and held it.

“So what’s this thing you need to practice,” I said, my voice shaky as she rubbed the length of my cock, her lips just a few inches from it.

“Oh that,” she said, and her breath was hot against the crown of my dick. “I don’t know if I should do it or not.”

My cock twitched in her hand.

“I just get this feeling,” she continued. “And I think he wants to, you know... have anal sex.”

The jolt that went through me made my cock slap out of her hand. It traveled all through my body, into my fingertips even. I sucked in my breath. “Do you... is that...?”

To be clear: anal sex, when I was doing the sexing, wasn’t exactly my thing. A lot of guys I’ve talked to find this mystifying.

But the idea of my wife having anal sex with another man... well, that was something else entirely. It was so unspeakably hot that I couldn’t articulate a single thought.

“I know it’s weird,” she said, and she brought my cock even closer to her mouth, so I could feel the heat of her breath even when she wasn’t talking. She ran her tongue over her upper lip, and my whole body went rigid with desire. I stared as she spoke, her lips so close to my cock that it almost seemed as though she were caressing it, yet so far away that I felt like clawing at her to get my dick in her mouth.

“I know it’s weird but I think I want to try it. I’ve never... you know. But I think if I did it... I don’t know, his cock is just so... big, that I wouldn’t try it with him first.”

Her tongue left her mouth and licked the crown of my cock then, so quickly I wasn’t even sure it really happened.

“Maybe I want to just try it,” she said.

Her tongue made another pass, this time along the ridge of my dick, skating over the edges of the glans and then retreating again into her mouth. Her hand moved slowly along the length of my shaft. "The only thing is, I want to stop if, you know... it isn't..."

"Of course," I said, almost a little too excitedly.

She looked up at me. "I know you're not super into it," she said. "But..." She twisted her body and got on her hands and knees so her face was over my cock. She slid her lips over the length of it, all the way to the base, swallowing me in her hot, wet hole. She let me go with a wet pop when she reached the top, and my cock bobbed like a bronco when she released me from her mouth. "I can make it worth your while if you'll do me this favor. Because I don't think my pussy can take a whole night with him again."

"Jesus," I said, involuntarily. I stared at the woman hovering near my cock, her dark eye makeup, her tongue traveling lasciviously over her upper lip, her eyes wild with desire. Her mouth spewing all this filthy, filthy smut.

Was this woman actually my wife?

Before I had time to think about it, she rose up on her knees and lifted her green blouse over her head. She unhooked her bra and then hopped to her feet. In a matter of seconds, her clothing was falling to the floor – panties, skirt and all.

After a delay, I followed suit, shaking out of my sweats while I took my shirt off over my head. I felt her hands helping my sweats along.

When I got the shirt off my head, she was already climbing back onto the bed, over me... but she was facing the opposite wall, her back turned to me, her magnificent ass toward my face.

She crawled backward toward me, moving her ass closer to my face. I was leaning against the headboard, so when she lowered her head and tilted her ass toward me, her pussy and puckered hole blossomed open in front of my mouth.

Her mouth was on my cock again, and the message was clear. We would begin here, and I leaned in a little, unsure how best to proceed. I started at her cunt, tasting the excitement that was practically flowing from inside of her. I drew her sweet juices up to her other hole.

She was sucking on my cock in long, slow strokes, which I was grateful for. Now that my tongue was running along the ridges of her eyelet, tasting the faint metallic taste of her, my mind fertile with images of this same hole spreading open, taking in the thick inches of Max Riley's cock as he dominated my wife completely, I would have come in a second if she had moved even the slightest bit more quickly with her talented mouth.

I ran my tongue in circles around her hole. I delighted in the low hum that came from her throat, the way her hips shifted in circles of obvious pleasure. Her pussy drained against my chin, unable to hide her obvious delight.

I put my hands on either side of her ass and pulled her open, allowing my tongue to dip in to center of her. I was unsure of what I would find, exploring her like this. The metallic taste was stronger, and my tongue found the familiar silken heat that I had felt with my fingers. Megyn moaned against my cock, and it was all worth it.

I pushed her forward and then to the side. We moved quickly, and she ended up facing the headboard. She moved into a submissive position, her head down, her arms over her head, folded back over, tangled in her hair. Her ass was lifted high in the air, a gift to me, her body throbbing with the desire to feel me inside of her for the first time.

I played with her ass with my tongue a few more times, getting her to wriggle delightfully with a new, previously forbidden pleasure. Then my cock overrode any further foreplay: I needed to be inside of her.

I drew her juices from her pussy with my fingers and rubbed her ass with them.

"You should get your cock wet," she said.

The statement was so foreign, so vulgar in its implications, that I froze, thinking maybe I was hallucinating.

But I pulled myself together quickly when she looked back at me, gyrating her ass and urging me on.

I slid slowly into her pussy and then slowly out. I was close to coming, and she must have sensed it because she didn't move a lot or try to grind against me when I did this.

"I'm ready," she said. "I want you to do it now."

I pressed the crown of my dick against the pucker of her ass. When I pushed against it, it seemed for a moment like a locked vault. I could feel the very center of it opening a little, but the rubbery sphincter pushed against me and my hard, swollen cock bent slightly. I paused, and she gasped, "just do it, please." So I tried again.

There was another moment of the same push-back, and then I felt her open up, her tight rosebud almost sucking me in to the dark, superheated flesh of her ass.

“Oh, wait, no, no...” she said, and I stopped. I started to pull out, but she reached back and grasped my thigh, pinching me hard. “No, don’t stop, keep going.”

I felt her relax around me, and then I had little more to do than to sink forward as my cock was sucked deep into her tight, hot hole.

When my balls ran up against her dripping pussy, I stared down at the scene in front of my eyes. Around my dick, her body rippled and squeezed. She was grasping the duvet on the bed, and her mouth was hanging open, her eyes squeezed shut tight.

“Are you okay?” I said.

“Just stay there for a minute,” she said.

She shifted onto her shoulder to bring her fingers – I could feel them grazing against my balls – up to her pussy. I felt her pry apart her lips with expert ease, find her clit, and begin to stroke it.

As she did, her ass tightened around me and she gasped. The temperature of her body, tight around my cock, seemed to rise. I felt her twisting with the pleasure she was giving herself, twisting around my prick, stroking me without even moving as she squirmed to the rhythm of her own caresses.

I tried to endure the torturous pleasure of holding still as she had asked me to for as long as I could, but soon I was able to withstand no more. I had to move, and as soon as I began to saw into her, intending to do it slowly, I was overcome by the most primitive need. I began to pound into her, and my ball sack slapped into the sloshy mess of her cunt while she wailed in a mixture of pleasure and shock until at last my cock exploded in her ass.

I felt her legs twitching next to my thighs, and her ass began to spasm around my cock, squeezing in wave after wave as she moaned into the pillow. Finally, she relaxed, and I slowly slid out of her.

I stared at her ass for the few seconds she remained in the position she was in on the bed, her bottom in the air, displayed for me. In the center of her flesh the stretched red center of her once-virgin hole, my cum welling up from its dark center as her ass throbbed deep inside and pushed it out to dribble down her thighs.

She fell onto the bed after a short while, and I moved down to lie next to her. She turned onto her side and we spooned. I pushed her hair from her face, where it clung in sweaty strands. I kissed her ear and noticed that the corners of her eyes were wet with tears.

“Oh no,” I said. “Was that too much? Did I hurt you?”

She smiled. “It hurt just a little... but I was expecting that.”

“Did you...”

She smiled secretively again. “I liked it,” she said, and her eyelids were closing, as though they were too heavy to even lift. She yawned. “Not all the time... just...” and she drifted off to sleep.

It was only then that I realized she must have been utterly exhausted, since she’d been up all night with Max.

I lay down next to her and closed my eyes, but I had gotten some sleep, even if it wasn't very restful, and I was too wired to take a nap. It was lovely lying there, inhaling her scent, but I started to worry about all kinds of things, like when Max would call her and if she would hear the phone. Then I started to wonder if they had exchanged any texts, any phone calls, and what they were saying.

Megyn was fast asleep. I blew on her neck and whispered her name, but got no response.

I deliberated a bit more before reaching to the head of the bed, where the contents of her purse had spilled out and gone unnoticed with all the activities we had been involved in. Her phone had been gleaming at me, beckoning me, ever since I had thought about the texts she must have been exchanging.

And though it was a violation of sorts, I realized, I couldn't help myself. I knew I could have just asked her if I could see them and she would have given them to me, but there was a certain kind of urgency to my need, and a certain kind of thrill that came with doing it without her knowing.

So I found the sleek silver phone with my fingertips, and without even having to move my arm, I held the phone up and swiped my thumb over the lock in the same pattern as my own phone.

A message icon was displayed in the upper left hand corner of the screen. I would figure out if I could get it back later, I decided.

It was Max. M Riley.

I read the first message on the screen – the last one he had sent – with my heart kicking rapidly inside my chest.

[M Riley]: text me when you wake up sleepy head

My heart felt squeezed, as though by a vice. For a moment I couldn't breathe. The familiarity of it, the cutesiness of "sleepyhead," struck at my very core.

But what had I expected? That the man would fuck my wife and not find her as endearing as I did?

A cold anxiety cut through me, and then I scrolled.

I noticed, first and foremost, that Megyn had deleted most of her texts from M Riley. The conversation I had seen before was gone, and there were no messages from yesterday, which I knew was impossible.

I lingered for a moment on all the delicious possibilities: my wife deleting her messages from Max Riley and never sharing their contents with me. A tiny edge of betrayal in the act, just enough to be delicious; not enough to really hurt.

I read them from the beginning:

[M Riley] u look tired. want to cut out and get some sleep

[Me]: hmmm... my boss is very demanding

[M Riley]: maybe you can make it up to him later

[M Riley]: I wouldnt want you to be too tired to do your work

I noticed that between this text and those that followed, there was a significant amount of time. It seemed that Megyn had deleted some of the texts, perhaps trying to cover up something she had said.

I made a note to ask her about it.

The messages picked up with:

[Me]: okay im off for a nap

[M Riley]: rest up. I have a lot of things I want to go over with you tonight

There were no further messages. Surely she hadn't left things like that? Maybe she had deleted the messages, or maybe she had been standing somewhere close to him. Close enough to lift her eyes and meet his, give him a sultry, knowing look. Wink, even.

I re-read the messages, letting all the possibilities within them, between the lines, play out in my mind.

Megyn was still asleep.

Before returning the phone to its place among the spilled contents of the purse, I played around a little with the setting, trying to get the message to look unread. I couldn't find any immediate way to do it, and I tired of the activity. I realized I'd probably tell her I had looked at her phone anyway, and confront her about the missing texts (I had already decided that she had gone through and selectively deleted some).

My cock was hard again, and I wondered if I could talk her into another round of sex when we woke up.

Then I closed my eyes, and tried to doze off, which I may have accomplished because the next thing I knew, the hotel phone was blaring and we were both sitting up in alarm.

I looked at the clock: 6:37pm.

I had that terrible feeling that always seems to accompany a nap in the afternoon: I had no idea where I was, or what time it was, and for a moment I felt the panic of a late morning. Megyn looked at me with the same sense of urgency.

I reached for the phone.

She stopped me at the last minute, grabbing my hand. "It's my room, remember?" she laughed, and it all came rushing back to my consciousness.

Oh yeah.

"Hello?" she said, and her voice was dreamy and sultry sounding. "Oh, he-ey," she cooed next, and my spine tingled. She was talking to Max, talking to him like he was a girlfriend of hers.

She reached for her phone, and swiped the screen. "Oh, my god," she said. "I didn't hear anything. I'm... huh?"

She looked over at me while Max Riley purred in her ear. It seemed to me like he was talking forever, talking in that deep baritone, growling all kinds of nonsense into her ear. She smiled, but more for me than at what he was saying – I don't know how I knew, I just did. And then she winked at me as she turned back to face the nightstand. “That sounds lovely,” she said. “I just got up, I might be a little late...”

Another pause, and then she said, “of course,” and hung up the phone.

She turned back to me. “Good news,” she said. “He’s taking some of the crew out for dinner and dancing, I guess – including me of course.”

She stood up, gathering her hair in her hands and holding it above her head as she did.

I reclined, leaning on my elbow. “How’s that good news for me?” I said. “It doesn’t sound like he’s going to be banging you in front of the whole crew.”

“No,” she said casually, poking something into her hair to hold it up. “No, he’ll probably do what we always do when we’re together, which is stand really far apart and pretend we aren’t fucking each other. But...” she trailed off, smiling mysteriously.

She walked into the bathroom.

I raised my eyebrows, and when she didn’t finish her sentence but instead turned on the water, I got up and followed her into the bathroom. She was stepping into the shower, and water was streaming down her statuesque body in shiny rivers.

“But, what?” I said.

She shrugged, closing her eyes and leaning her hair back into the stream of water. “I don’t know. I feel like I could... convince him to loosen the rules a little. Somewhere. Maybe you can think of something I could do, that would make a man do something dangerous?”

Hundreds of thoughts flew through my head all at once, and since I couldn’t settle on any one thing, I tried reaching into the shower to squeeze Megyn’s breasts.

“Shhht!” she said, slapping my hand. “I have to get ready.”

She jerked the curtain over my arm. “Go think of something. And get out a really good outfit from the closet.”

I returned to the wardrobe in the main room, and opened it up. I was semi-surprised to find that Megyn had ordered her clothes very neatly on hangars, but then I remembered that she was no longer a woman who worked at home. She was a professional again, a woman who sent her clothing to the dry-cleaner, who had to keep up her immaculate appearance for the occasional cameras and videos.

I slid through the numerous suits and dresses – far too many for a trip of this length. She had brought the original red dress from her date with him, but it seemed too warm for this weather. The idea of her wearing it and actually having sex with Max this time was appealing, but I passed it over.

The last dress in line was a gray cocktail dress I had never seen before. It had a thin belt just above the waist, giving it a sort of hipster-ish quality (I don't know. Fashion isn't really my thing). The appeal of the dress was its high hem, and the low cut of the front. My eyes floated down to the shoes in the wardrobe, almost like I had been programmed to go there. Some knee-high black boots – also new, a pair I had never seen – caught my attention.

A little warm, but maybe not for night-time. And perfect.

I wandered back into the bathroom and sat down on the toilet.

Megyn peeked out from behind the curtain. “Did you find something?”

“A gray dress. Have you been shopping?”

She ducked behind the curtain. “Well... obviously.”

“Mmm-hmm,” I said.

“I thought you wanted me to seduce Max?” she said defensively.

That was true. I was a little irritated, though. I wasn't sure why.

I changed the subject. “Hey, so... I broke into your phone while you were sleeping.”

There was a silence on the other side of the curtain.

“And... I have a question -”

Megyn jerked the curtain back. “You what? You broke into my phone?”

“Well, not exactly ‘broke into,’” I said. “I have the code.”

Megyn rolled her eyes. “And? Why did you do that?”

She disappeared behind the curtain again.

I shrugged, even though she couldn't see me. “So... did you delete messages from Max?”

There was a long, lovely pause. It was just a little too long to be the pause of surprise alone. Or the pause of recollection.

No, this was a pause while someone thought of a lie. Or weighed her options.

“I deleted a few of them,” she said plainly.

“Huh,” I said. “Why's that?”

Another pause.

“It’s a professional courtesy, I guess. He’s the one who told me to do it.”

I judged her tone. Was she lying to me? This was a perfectly plausible explanation for deleting messages. I reminded myself that Max was a movie star who in all likelihood would do that very thing, tell a mistress to delete her messages.

Especially a married one.

To avoid any scandals.

“So what did they say?” I asked.

Megyn turned off the water. She sounded exasperated and as though she had honestly forgotten about the topic of conversation as she pulled the curtain aside again. “What did what say?”

Her body was dripping wet, shiny with beads of clear water that ran together into fat beads and then paused, perched on her nipple or her above the landing strip of sparkling red hair, before plunging into her dark and secret places as a river.

“Ahem,” she said.

I noticed then that she had her hand extended and was requesting a towel. I handed it to her.

She looked at me expectantly as she toweled off.

“Oh,” I said. “The texts. The ones you deleted. What did they say?”

Megyn bent over, and wrapped her hair up in that turban-thingy that all women seem to know how to do. “I see,” she said.

She saw what?

She lifted her head and motioned to me for another towel. I took in the nice view of her body one last time, wondering how much of an idiot I was for letting another man have his way with her, before she wrapped herself up.

She grinned at me. “They say what they say,” she said mysteriously. “You know, flirty stuff.”

“Dirty flirty stuff?” I asked. “Or average?”

Megyn sighed. “Probably average.”

“Like what?” I pressed. I wasn’t really so much interested in what the texts said as in getting Megyn to tell me what they said, I realized.

She stepped out of the tub and leaned toward the mirror to wipe it off with a face-cloth. “The gray dress, huh? I wonder if it’s fancy enough...”

I stood up and put my hands on her hips.

“I don’t have time...” she sang.

I nuzzled her neck. “I know. But I want you to answer me. What was in the texts?” I looked at her in the mirror, and moved my hand up and under the towel. “Otherwise... I’ll have to treat you like the very naughty girl you are.”

I found her slit, the silky folds there in all the bare flesh between her legs. Her skin was squeaky-clean, and the idea of pushing her over on the counter again, but this time catching her off-guard, pushing into her rubbery, unready cunt and feeling her slowly well up with excitement, overcame me.

Megyn smiled again, and laughed. “I honestly don’t remember. And I have to get going. And I can’t be... you know... when I meet up with Max.”

But her pussy betrayed her real feelings again. Barely had she begun to speak than my fingertips felt the slick juices of real excitement, sliding down from within her.

My cock had been hard since the moment I came this afternoon, so there was no talking me out of it. I pulled on the towel, and it opened up and slid to the floor.

Megyn turned around a little, and smiled at me. “I’m serious,” she said.

I had my hand on my cock now, and I gave her a look that must have communicated to her that one way or the other, I needed some satisfaction before she left.

She turned around fully and then slowly slid down to the floor. She took my cock in her hand and placed her mouth at the base of my cock, nibbling at the shaft from the side. She ran her tongue along the length of it, and up to the crown. “I’m sorry I forgot what I wrote to Max Riley,” she said.

I grabbed her hair and pushed her forward onto my shaft. “I don’t think you forgot,” I said.

Her eyes flew open and she looked up at me, as my shaft disappeared into her mouth. I felt the twist of her throat as she gagged a little, but I pushed on the back of her head a little harder, getting myself all the way into her mouth. Her gaze never wavered: she looked at me steadily, almost challenging me.

It was clear to me at that point that Megyn wanted to be a naughty little whore.

I balled her hair up in my hand and moved her up and down the length of my shaft. It wasn't long, in the state I was in, before I felt my cum bursting through my dick, welling up in Megyn's mouth, gushing into her throat.

She dove further on my shaft of her own volition, and sucked the cum from my cock. As she retreated from the base, she swirled her tongue around the shaft, pulling every last drop of my seed into her mouth.

I stood over her, watching her, almost mystified by her.

When she was finished she wiped the corner of her mouth, and smiled at me.

Then she rose, and turned to wash her face and brush her teeth, while I sat, spent, on the edge of the tub.

I followed her when she exited the bathroom, and watched her put on her gray dress. I stared as she rolled her stockings on again and secured them on her sculpted thighs. I was in such a daze that it took me a moment to notice that she hadn't put on any underwear.

I raised my eyebrows.

Megyn smiled. "I wondered when you were going to notice," she said.

The dress barely came to mid-thigh. If she sat down in that thing, it would be dangerously revealing.

It was brazen. It was slutty as hell.

It was so unlike her.

My cock pulsed, and I almost couldn't believe it.

"Which shoes did you pick out?" she said. She leaned over to get them out of the bottom of the wardrobe, and when she did the dress rose up and gave me just the tiniest wink of her bare slit. I could see that her excitement had traveled to between her thighs, smeared on each of them, wet and sticky.

She removed the boots and turned around, waving them at me. "These?"

I nodded.

She snapped her fingers in front of me. "Wake up, sleepy-head." She stepped into the boots and pulled the zipper seductively along the length of her calf. The black leather closed around her leg at the knee, hinting at leather BDSM, making my cock a little twitchy yet again.

She stood up and put her hands on her hips. “Good?”

She didn’t wait for my answer, but went to the bathroom to dry her hair and put on her makeup. As I listened to her, replaying the sexual wildness I had just experienced this afternoon, I was adrift on a sea of erotic, but sometimes frightening, thoughts.

When she exited the bathroom and stood near me for my approval, I almost couldn’t recognize her. Sure, she was the same Megyn I had married: red hair, smattering of freckles, hazel-green eyes. But piled on her were the layers of the new Megyn I had created – the Megyn of anal sex, the Megyn of dark eyeliner and lashes, the Megyn of the fiery red landing strip with no underwear on, encased in a stunning gray dress and hooker-like black boots.

The Megyn who was going to let Max Riley fuck her in the ass tonight.

I’m not a guy who typically engages in regret. It’s a pointless sentiment. But staring at Megyn, I did, for a moment, feel like I was falling. Maybe this had gone too far. For just a second I had a thought, a thought that I would really not mind turning back the clock and undoing all of this.

I don’t know why. It was something in her smile. Something in the way she had her hand on her hip, something foreign that glimmered in her eye.

But like I said, I don’t typically do regret. So I thought about it, and figured whatever was done was done.

“You look hot as hell,” I said.

Megyn gave a little flick of her head to get her hair behind her shoulder. She smiled. Then she walked past me to get her phone and her purse, and she kissed me as she walked toward the door. “I’ll text you as soon as I have the plan,” she said.

Her lips met mine again. They smelled like expensive lipstick, a thickly make-upy smell with a layer of fruit beneath it. She smelled expensive and whoreish, and her mouth worked over my lips in the same kind of way. Much like I would imagine a high-priced escort kisses you, for whatever reason.

Her eyes were closed.

She opened them at the last minute, and then she popped a loud kiss on my lips and hopped away. “See you soon.”

14: THE CLUB

[Megyn]: bad news

[Megyn]: maybe

I stared at the screen, unsure of what to write, my stomach twisting. Since Megyn had left, I had given a lot of thought to the thing that was stirring inside of me, faintly bothering me, and I had come to the conclusion that perhaps it could be cured, or at least diluted, if Megyn only came through with her promise of getting me a view of her naughty, naughty behavior.

As the messages came in, my heart began to drop though my feet. I typed nothing in response, just watched it play out on my screen:

[Megyn]: this club is packed theres a huge line

[Megyn]: hello?

Of course, this was really the original destiny of this evening. Why either of us had been naive enough to think anything different would have happened, I didn't know. If someone like Max Riley was going to a club it would of course be a good club, a packed club, a club with a big line. And he would waltz right in, and put Megyn Lyons on the list and she would float into the club and over all the wild, writhing bodies and straight into his clutches.

And I would get nothing. I would stand outside like a loser, getting passed over each and every time the bouncer leaned out to look down the line, while twenty-somethings in mini-skirts filled the club. Until it was two am and the doors opened and my wife and Max came out arm in arm, his cum dripping down her thighs for all the world to see...

I held the phone, trying to decide what to type, what to do.

I wasn't going to stand around looking like a fool outside. I typed.

[Me]: should have guessed it

There was a long gap, an hour long pause between this message and the next one from Megyn. I had a long time to sit in the silent hotel room, imagining my wife dancing, drinking champagne, sitting closer and closer to Max until all pretense of them not fucking was thrown out the window. Or maybe she was -

My phone buzzed.

[Megyn]: craig dryer didnt show up hes on the list

I stared at the text, trying to decipher what it meant.

I was up and throwing things around the room ten seconds later. I stared at the text until it burned through my consciousness.

Elation filled me as much as despair had eaten away at me moments before. She did love me after all. She wanted me to get what I craved. She could have easily written off this evening, told me there was no way for me to get in, or simply humiliated me by making me stand in line hopefully only to get turned down over and over again.

But instead, she had thrown me this lifeline.

I was immediately absorbed in the problem of finding something to wear. I finally settled on jeans and a t-shirt, because I really didn't look bad in that combo, and because I realized it didn't matter what I wore.

I was there to observe.

I was so excited that I forgot, until I was gathering my wallet and the room key to head out the door: I had no idea where I was going.

My heart went flying around again as I thought about Megyn... how she probably tucked her phone into her purse and figured, that's that. How she was probably more obsessed with Max at this moment, and was just waiting for me, getting her show ready. How she wouldn't look at her phone again...

But when I opened up the messages, my dear wife had already sent it to me. In my wild enthusiasm I hadn't heard my phone buzz at all:

[Megyn]: hey you want to know where this place is?

[Megyn]: you do

[Megyn]: I know you do

[Megyn]: hello

[Megyn]: I guess youre in the shower

[Megyn]: its a place called liquid kitty (lol) on 14 and pine

[Megyn]: okay, dont be so effusive

[Megyn]: im going to dance now

[Megyn]: like a slut

My fingers were all over the place in my excitement as I typed:

[Me]: bre tywt soon

And re-typed:

[Me]: be there soon

The Uber driver had practically laughed in my face when I asked him to take me to Liquid Kitty.

“You’re not gettin’ in there man, unless you have a hot girl in your pocket,” he said. He shook his head and explained that one night he and his buddies had spent more than three hours waiting to get in. He looked at me in the mirror, as though sizing me up. “I never went back,” he said. “How great can a club be?”

I didn’t answer, so we drove in silence. The club was so close I probably could have walked, but I didn’t mind. I tipped the little shit anyway, and then I sucked it up to go con my way in.

I was never a “clubber” when I was younger, and as I approached the bouncers and their VIP list, I racked my brain for any memory of any club, anywhere. I realized I probably had only seen a club in the movies.

I shoved my hands in my pockets and tried to look cool. The music from inside sounded decades and many, many shades of color outside of my own life experience. I cast a look down the line of patrons and was more than a little relieved to find that there were plenty of white people in the crowd. None of them were paying any attention to me, so I guess I looked passable as a person cutting the line.

“Craig Dryer,” I said to the bouncer. “I’m supposed to be on the list.”

I was half-expecting to get tossed onto the street, or for the guy to make a face like I was an idiot and send me to the back of the line. It hadn't occurred to me until that moment, but maybe Craig Dryer had already showed up.

I tried not to shake with all this inner turmoil, which was less about fear of anything happening to me and more about losing my chance. Losing my chance to pass into that steamy, thumping, humming darkness and find my wife and Max Riley all entangled and sweaty.

But none of this happened. The guy nodded, and did nothing. No lifting of a velvet-covered chain, no opening of a door. Just a nod, and a disinterested stare.

So... feeling a little cheated out of my VIP experience, I walked in.

The club was everything that TV had promised me: loud, lights moving everywhere. A huge dancefloor with a vaulted ceiling above it. Three spectacularly beautiful black women walked by me smiling, their lips orange. A cloud of that fake smoke, cold and sterile, hit me in the face right after them.

For a moment I just stood there. Then I quickly learned I needed to get out of the way. Everyone around me was moving, dancing, and I had other things on my mind. Like where in the hell was my wife?

I shuttled myself through the crowd and found an area where there was a little bit of space to stand. I typed to Megyn, who I would never find among all these bodies:

[Me]: im here

There was no response for what seemed like an eternity, though in reality it must have been no more than ten minutes. I wedged myself into a space against the wall, where men like me were watching the dancers and the lucky pairs, the shaking, sweating mass of hot women and cool guys, bouncing and flashing bright then fading into darkness.

My own heart pounded as loudly as the bass. I flipped the screen of my phone up toward my face neurotically, every five seconds. I checked the sound, the buzzer, making sure it was actually on. And then I waited, imagining all the things that might have gone wrong.

I was so close, so close to getting what I wanted. The smell of sweating female bodies was everywhere. Wet skin, dark skin, lips and dark, painted eyes. Round, beautiful breasts jiggled in sequined tops, bubble-shaped asses pressed against satin fabric and jeans and promised to burst out (never delivering). Model-thin girls with the faces of dolls looked on with sour, sexy pouts, while fun, bouncing girls made lewd faces and shook their bodies on the dance floor.

None of this helped to bring down my excitement. I was flying on a high I had never experienced before, but at the back of it was a need that I was afraid would not get met: there was only one body, one woman, one thing I wanted in this whole writhing mass of sexy humans.

And then she was there. On the second floor of the club, which I hadn't really noticed until that moment. Her hair, lit up from behind for a moment by one of the swinging strobe lights, was a vivid, brilliant red, like a beacon. And then her legs, her short, short skirt. Her magnificent body, leaning against the balcony.

She had a drink in her hand, and she was leaning toward a man. It took only seconds for me to assess the large build, the height, the shiny bald head and the ebony skin: Max. She had her ear pressed toward his mouth, the kind of act that two people who are having a secret affair put on. Oh, the music's so loud in here, we have to stand this close to each other just to have this completely regular conversation. But anyone looking could see that their bodies were pulling toward each other with an obvious gravity, a desire that was burning in each of them to rip each other's clothes off. Anyone could see that each of those two people was burning in their center, ready to fuck wildly the first chance they got.

Below her, I noticed next, there were several guys who were not-very-subtly looking up to the second floor, trying to get a glimpse up my wife's skirt.

Jesus.

I watched, half in horror, half-turned on, as Megyn looked down into the group of guys. There were maybe five or six of them looking up by then; a growing crowd. When she looked down at them, a clatter of whistles erupted from where they were standing. Someone clapped.

And Megyn, rather than being properly mortified, pulled herself closer to the balcony playfully and waved down at the boys looking up her skirt. I stared, my jaw falling to the floor, as my wife moved her foot around seductively, spreading her legs apart just enough to give them a glimpse...

A cheer rose up from below, and then cut off in disappointment as she leaned her foot against the bottom bar of the balcony and turned around, her legs closed together. She blew them a kiss, and turned back to talk to Max.

The lights were swinging around the club wildly now, so I couldn't be entirely sure of what I saw, but I think Max's expression was one of approval. He was just as turned on as I was by Megyn teasing the whole crowd. And why shouldn't he be? He knew she was going home with him tonight.

The gray dress Megyn was wearing dipped low in the back. It provided anyone who was looking with the knowledge that she was not wearing a bra; that the high, rounded swell of her breasts was made by her breasts alone. And if they looked down, they would see that she had no underwear, nothing between her slit and the world.

I could only see the back of her head now, and Max as he moved in on her without "visibly" moving in on her. Now that he was facing away from whoever was up there in the VIP lounge, he was doing very little talking. He spent most of his time staring into my wife's eyes with a hungry look that almost made me weak at the knees myself.

After what seemed like another eternity, playing out in slow motion, Max's attention was suddenly diverted from behind him. He gave Megyn the kind of smile that men give to women they know they can devour within a few hours, and retreated away from the balcony, meeting her eyes as he walked away.

Megyn waited a beat, then turned to look out over the dancing crowd. The guys below her gave another round of whistles and encouragement, but she shook her head and their enthusiasm died with the same disappointed groan.

She was scanning the crowd.

She was looking for me.

I took out the phone and typed another message to her.

[Me]: Im here at the bar next to the red martini thing

Immediately after I hit "send," it occurred to me that she had no place to stow away her phone on her person. With no bra, and no underwear, and nothing but a tight-fitting dress, she had no place to put it -

Megyn, motivated by something, looked down at her feet. She reached down and pulled on the zipper of her boot, to the renewed delight of her fans below.

Another wave of disappointment, and one “boo” went through them as she took out the slender silver rectangle of her phone.

She read the message and looked out to find the red martini. And then her eyes were on me.

For a moment the entire club, the legions of fans trying to look up her skirt, the dark man in the VIP lounge who was going to fuck her, and all the noise and sweating bodies, faded away. It was just me, looking at her, and her, looking at me – a little smile turning up her lips.

[Megyn]: there are a lot of people here I dont think anything will happen

I smiled. Oh, Megyn of little faith in her own charms.

[Me]: I think you underestimate the male libido

She read the message, and turned back, presumably to see where Max had gone. I was just able to make out the shape of his large shoulders and head, close to a group of three other men who were clapping each other on the back.

[Me]: did you let him see you have no panties on?

I had sent the message before the lewdness of it made its way through my conscious mind. I couldn't believe, I realized suddenly, that I was standing in a club sending messages to my wife telling her to show another man that she had no underwear on.

There was a long pause, while Megyn seemed to consider the question. She tapped her phone to her lips and smiled.

[Megyn]: how do I do that?

I didn't hesitate. Well, a little, to fight off the auto-correcting on my phone.

[Me]: sharon stone it

Megyn read the message, and turned around, sliding her arms away from her in either direction. Her ass looked great in the dress, I noted. In fact, she easily outshone any of the twenty-somethings here. Not only was her body fantastic, her hair was such a glorious, unusual color that she stood out. She was a woman, and things had come together for her, in a way that none of these glittery little girls had experienced yet. The supreme confidence in her outstretched arms, her long neck held high, her shoulders, relaxed and comfortable, had no match in the young ladies bopping around like animals on the dance floor.

And surely it was this same thing that caught Max's eyes at that moment. He glanced over at her, meaning to look back at his companions, but a glue seemed to jerk him back to Megyn.

I couldn't see everything that was transpiring up there, with the shifting lights and splotches of darkness, the distance, the bad angle. But it looked to me like my wife stopped all four of those guys mid-sentence, with nothing more than whatever look it was she was giving them.

And then she was walking away. Away from the balcony and over the couches.

I was so hypnotized by the scene that it took me a few moments to realize: she was also walking away from where I could see her. As her red hair sank down behind the back of a couch, I realized that I was not going to get a chance to see her do whatever she was going to do.

Desperation gripped me. The addict's desperation.

I looked from side to side quickly, assessing the situation. Up and over the balcony.

There were two sets of stairs on either side of the second floor, which I had been standing there taking for a loft, only on one side of the club. But as I turned around, scanning everything (even the rafters) for a way for me to watch my wife, I realized that I was standing with my back to a second floor behind me.

I looked quickly to the left, where the stairs would logically be, and indeed, there they were, and people who looked not only not very important, but altogether unimportant, were walking up and down them.

In retrospect, it's a wonder I didn't get into a fight, or at least get told by someone in passing that I was going to get my ass kicked, because I pushed my way through the crowd like I was Jack Bauer trying to save the world from a bomb. I distinctly remember spilling someone's drink, the cold of it sinking into my shirt over my shoulder.

Once on the second floor, it was a tougher thing to push out to the balcony right where I wanted to be: across from the VIP lounge. But I managed to do it by just looking stupid.

A guy, pretty young, who looked like he should have been home in bed, actually, turned to me and yelled something. Up on the second floor the music was bouncing around and even more deafening than below.

"Sorry?!" I screamed, pointing at my ears.

"MAX RILEY IS OVER THERE!" he screamed, right next to my ear. He pointed toward the balcony.

I was actually grateful for the excuse to be squinting into the darkness and the striped of undulating lights, across the dance floor, through the miasma of smoke and heat, into the little cluster of figures seated on the couches. I still had a terrible view: Megyn had her back to me, and the couches blocked out everything but Max Riley's face.

And then, like in a movie, the white light of a strobe splashed right onto his face and lit him up, everything around him dark. His face was caught in a single moment, just for me, and it sent a jolt through my whole body as it burned through my mind: his animal stare, his eyes unmistakably on my wife, his lips in a semi-snarl, a millisecond of him sucking on his teeth in that way that black guys seem to always do in movies when they're after the female lead.

I nodded at the guy who had pointed him out to me, which seemed to satisfy him and make him turn his attention to something else.

Then I took out my phone.

[Me]: I can't see you

But there was no answer. Of course there was no answer. Just Max, staring at my wife, my wife doing something I couldn't see but could easily imagine – lifting her leg to cross it over the other, her skirt opening for the briefest of mementos to show him there was nothing underneath. Nothing standing between his fingers and her smooth, wet pussy.

I wondered what he was thinking of doing to her as he stared at her like that.

Someone jostled me from behind, breaking the spell. I almost dropped my phone.

When I looked back, Megyn was rising from the couch, her body lengthening in all of its splendor. She walked forward and around a table, past Max, evidently saying something to him as she went.

And then she disappeared for a moment into the darkness. Headed to the left.

Heading for the stairs.

I watched her descending, not wanting to lose her. I saw that she had her phone in her hand. I looked back at Max, who hadn't moved, who was looking at his buddies, but as far as I could see, with a distant expression on his face.

My phone buzzed and I almost dropped it again. My mind felt torn in thousand directions.

[Megyn]: follow me

And then I was pushing through the same people I had nearly mowed down earlier. I practically fell down the stairs. When I reached the turn and was facing the set of stairs that Megyn was descending, I saw that she was moving slowly, like a princess coming down from a tower.

She shook her head, amused, when she saw me scrambling.

I stood up and straightened myself out, psychologically speaking. We descended at the same time, and I started to push through people to get to her on the floor. The stairs were closer to a bar area, but the dance floor was spilling into it, and people were really getting wild. A lot of them seemed to be on a pleasant high, so they didn't mind my shoving through them.

I saw, after making my way almost all the way across the floor, that Megyn had gotten caught up in a swarm of the appreciative, though fratty-looking guys who had been trying to look up her skirt.

I watched as my wife smiled, said something that was evidently perfect, and sent them away, disappointed.

And then we were face to face. Flashes of light and color splayed over her face. Her skin was covered in a light sheen of sweat, and as I looked at her I realized it was extremely hot in this place. I could feel myself sweating as well.

She winked, and said nothing as she jerked her head to the left. Before I could think of what to say or do, she was sliding into the crowd, slipping between the bodies moving on the dance floor, stopping occasionally to dance seductively with a guy who grabbed her hips as she passed.

She left a trail of disappointment behind her as she went, and I got the stare-down from more than one guy as I followed her a few feet behind. A look that said, don't tell me this is the schmuck with that hot woman.

There was a long corridor at the back of the club, which had been built in an old church, I noticed. The corridor was high and large, walls of marble and expensive-looking chandeliers hanging from the ceilings with dimly lit electric candles throwing a soft light on the ceiling, less on the floor below.

The atmosphere here was decidedly more sexual: many a couple were pressed against the wall, doing everything but flagrantly having sex right there. Others milled about, passing through. I saw more than one person put something small into another person's hands.

The people who looked at me did so with wildly black eyes, pupils dilated, some erotic drug coursing through their veins. They were welcoming.

It was hot, but a little weird. I started to get another vaguely bad feeling creeping over my neck.

Megyn was ahead of me, moving with the slow-motion confidence of someone who walked through this corridor all the time.

Then she turned to me suddenly. I almost ran into her. "Wait here," she said. "He's coming."

I felt a little cold when she said this. After all, I wanted Max to come here, and there was nothing I wanted more in the world than for Max Riley to fuck my wife. But this corridor was giving me the creeps a little, and it wasn't what I had envisioned.

But I stepped backward, my hands in my pockets, trying to look a little more like I belonged there. A guy leaning on the wall opposite me came over immediately to offer me some drugs. I declined by shaking my head, and when I looked back at Megyn, one of the blonde frat boys from below the balcony was swooping in on her. He moved up close to her and put his hand on the wall behind her.

I felt a flare of protectiveness, and I was about to step forward and do something (I don't know what, grab her by the hand, push the kid out of the way). Megyn didn't seem disturbed by him; she put a foot on the wall and leaned back on it, shaking her head.

But just before I acted, the dark mass of Max Riley filled the space beside me, moving forward, radiating a dark energy and a sort of unbridled masculinity that seemed to travel all the way to the kid, who was looking toward him before he even spoke. "Cool off, punk," his low, rumbling voice said.

The kid peeled away from my wife, who looked at Max with an amused and grateful smile as he moved in to take his place. I found the interaction incredibly arousing, so much so that I forgot myself entirely and just stood there staring. My cock was hard, and I was just watching this hulking black man move in on my wife in a public corridor.

Max put his arm up, like the white kid had done, and stood close to Megyn, locking her in against the wall.

This time, though, her body responded by softening, by melting up against the wall, her eyes wild with desire.

Max took a look under his arm, and then in my direction. For a moment he looked right at me, and it seemed like some kind of recognition flickered across his face. A deep fear that I had been caught; that we had been caught, froze me from my toes to my face.

He did this kind of jerk with his head, from the chin up, a gesture that meant fuck off as much as anything he could say. I realized I was staring at them, and I quickly averted my gaze, turning toward the opposite wall, hands in pockets, my face burning, humiliation and fear of getting caught traveling all over my skin like an army of ants.

But nothing else happened, and when I dared to look at them out of the corner of my eye, Max was all over Megyn, leaning in against her, his hand stroking her inner thigh. His arm was long enough that he could just casually work his fingers under her skirt, without really straining to reach down there.

His jaw was moving, his mouth next to her ear.

Then he pushed away from the wall and stood up, and Megyn slid along the wall and turned to walk in the opposite direction. I couldn't follow where she was going without turning my head, and Max was still there, standing there cool as a cucumber, so I figured I'd have to follow him.

He would lead me to her.

My heart starting pounding, racing, so hard against my chest I was worried I was out of control.

Max waited, standing there, kicking the wall a few times. I was deadly afraid that he would turn to me and ask me what the hell I was doing, or worse yet, hover over me and tell me to leave my wife in his hands.

My phone, I would later recall, buzzed against my thigh during this time. I was so flying high on adrenaline that I noticed it and yet I did not.

But when Max fished his own phone from his pocket and barely glanced at the screen, I became aware of it. I fished the phone out, flicking my eyes back and forth from Max, who was turning now, to the screen, which I knew contained some crucial information I had missed. Maybe I was missing my chance...

[Megyn]: bathroom second stall

But I was already moving along, following Max's dark presence. He strode in to the bathroom – I didn't know, looking around, if it was a men's or a women's, it was impossible to tell.

All sorts of nefarious things were happening in there, my eyes notified me immediately. People were doing drugs I had never seen and didn't understand out in the open, cigarette smoke filled the air, a round couch with a plant in the center was heaped with people making out, and just as many women were standing around in there as men.

Huh, I remember thinking.

And while I had been looking at all of this, I'd lost sight of Max.

Gone.

It was loud in there, and dark. A blue light from somewhere cast an eerie glow on the place, mingling with a lone fluorescent light which seemed to be there to comply with the law only. A girl smiled at me and blew smoke from her nostrils, a group of guys and girls laughed to the right.

Bathrooms were not what they used to be.

Second stall.

I scanned the room for the familiar sight of stalls, and found three doors in a row that met the description, only barely. They were made of wood and went nearly to the floor and the ceiling, creating more of a room, with marble on either side of it, than a stall.

And the “second” one was closed. Beneath the fluorescent and blue lights I saw movement on the floor. Black boots, the dark pants of a suit.

Megyn and Max.

Just as I was contemplating my next move, which was to go into the stall next to theirs, on the far end of the bathroom, a couple pushed through the door, lips locked, and shut it behind them.

On the other side of the stall, the door was locked, and from the looks of what was playing out on the floor, it was a similar scene inside.

Desperation squeezed my heart.

This was probably it. My one chance this weekend to actually get close to what I wanted, and it was falling apart. My wife was less than five feet away from me, locked into a bathroom stall with Max Riley, and I couldn’t see anything that was going on.

I moved closer to the stalls, ready to jump in one if anyone relinquished them.

“If you have to piss you gotta use the boys’,” A female voice said in my ear. The same girl, or maybe not, was standing next to me with her elbow in her hand, a cigarette at the end of her outstretched arm. She held a bangle-covered arm up and pointed at the stalls. “People are fucking and doing lines and shit in there.”

She smiled at me, the way kids smile at old people.

Then she shrugged. “Unless, you know... you want to...?”

I shook my head and turned my attention back to the stalls, which seemed to neither faze her nor send her in any particular direction. She was stoned out of her mind.

My heart was pounding in my ears. I stared at the stall door and tried to make out the sounds that were coming from behind it, but there were too many laughing, high, drunk people in the room, which was an echo chamber of marble and glass, laughing and screaming.

I felt certain I heard something every now and then: a moan, a slap, the growl of a man enjoying a woman’s pussy... but it could have come from anywhere.

It seemed to me like hours went by as I stood there in helpless desperation, my eyes going back and forth from one door to the next, my heart jumping up into my throat.

When the door to the left of the stall my wife was in actually clicked, I jumped at it like a crazy person and pushed my way through the exiting three people, two guys and a girl, who also advised me that if I had to piss I should use the guys' bathroom.

I closed the door on the angry faces of a couple of people who had evidently been looking forward to going in there, so I was glad there was a lock on the door.

The racket was even louder in there. The stalls were all marble except for the doors and the dividing walls, which were made of wood. About a foot of space yawned promisingly at the bottom of the wall and the top.

I strained to hear what was going on next to me, and couldn't. I braced myself and climbed onto the toilet seat, desperately praying I didn't end up in the water.

With my head up close to the gap in the dividing wall, I could hear them better. But not much better. I also couldn't see much of anything: a flash of black, a glimmer of red hair. Megyn was against the far wall, and Max was facing her.

I knew he was fucking her, I knew he had his cock inside of her right now. And I could only see a fragment of it, hear a fragment of it. Megyn's breathy moan cut through the din of the bathroom, but it was not enough.

Then I had an idea.

It was risky, dumb, and would probably get me killed, but oh well.

I leaned back on the opposite wall and placed my feet, one by one, on the wall in front of me, pushing back to climb up the wall using lateral tension. My thighs burned, my shoes threatened to slip, but the marble blessedly let my shirt slide easily up.

From this vantage point, by twisting my head off to the side and cramming myself up to the farthest recess of the stall. I could see through the gap from a distance, and so I had a better view of my wife.

Enough to see her face.

Enough to see the way she was bouncing wildly in front of Max's huge back. Her eyes were closed and she was jiggling there as though bouncing on a machine: he must have had her by the ass and was just pumping her wildly over his cock. Her mouth was open and she started to squeeze her eyes.

“Oh! Oh oh oh oh!” she said. She turned her head from side to side.

“That’s it baby,” I heard him distinctly now.

My thighs were burning, but a deeper force was driving me now. I watched the top of Megyn’s head, her eyes shut, going up and down on the wall until her hair was sticking to the marble, clearly soaked. And then her eyes opened, and I realized that she was coming: her mouth was open in a silent scream.

And she saw me. She looked right at me, confused at first – as who wouldn’t be? I was in a ridiculous position – and then she just stared at me as Max continued to pound her, his actions invisible to me, except for the way her body slid up and down against the wall.

When he came, he pushed into her and pushed her hands up against the wall. It seemed like an eternity that he was giving her short thrusts of the last bits of his cum, while she looked at me, smiling.

They were separating their bodies, their faces coming together. Megyn’s hand slid down his neck, playing with the faint hairline where his ultra-short hair was growing out just a little. My thighs screamed at me and my foot slipped in warning.

I strained to watch them, watch them as their faces met and they kissed, but I was going down, and if I didn’t put my foot down on the toilet I was going down hard.

My legs were shaking as I climbed back onto my precarious perch. I stepped onto the floor.

My cock was aching, and I had to do something about it. I was glad that the music and the laughter outside seemed to have changed not at all, as I took out my cock and jerked off, my eyes closed and my hand against the far wall, holding me up. I pictured nothing more than Megyn’s face, her eyes on mine, as Max pumped her full of cum.

I don’t know how long I was in there. I sat down to catch my breath, took out my phone, typed a text to Megyn, deleted it.

I typed another:

[Me]: that was hot

and sent it, immediately regretting it.

The truth was, I had wanted more.

People filled my stall as soon as I left, four of them, looking eager for something. I looked behind me to the second stall. The door was closed but a pair of red stilettos were visible below. I walked in a daze out to the hallway, my eyes searching for Megyn, for Max's dark head.

I went upstairs, and worked my way to the railing. Max was there but Megyn was not. I texted her:

[Me]: where are you?

No response came, and soon I saw her coming up the stairs – I had no idea from where – and she sat down next to another woman. Max was talking to his cadre of friends again.

I watched and I watched, but nothing changed or happened. It was a peculiar kind of letdown, or voyeurism.

Finally, I went down stairs for a drink.

When I came back to my post, they were gone.

15: MEGYN'S WIN

I walked back toward the hotel.

I was stone-cold sober, I realized, and that wasn't helping me at all. The disappointment that was coursing through me was unbearable.

I had missed my chance.

I tried to console myself with the images I did have, and by thinking about how I could make Megyn tell me all about what she got up to tonight when she came back. I could fuck her with my fingers and feel how stretched out she was, feel the slimy wetness of another man's cum in her pussy. I could stare at her gaping asshole, if she went that far. I could get her to tell me all about it.

But I had wanted so much more.

It was a tasty pain, thinking about her hair moving up and down the wall, sweaty and sticking to the marble. I could fill in the image I didn't get a chance to see: her dress hiked up around her waist, her bare pussy being probed and plundered by the thick black column of Max Riley's meat. His cum filling her up, overflowing, gushing out of her pussy as he let his cock flop from inside of her.

His mouth moving against her ear, whispering to her that there was more where that came from.

His cum slick between her thighs as she walked around for the rest of the night, Max looking at her smugly, knowing that the way she sat, a little uncomfortable, squirming on the couch, was his doing.

I found a bar – a run-down Irish bar, a hole in the wall, a place where people stared at me when I went in, and ordered three shots of vodka. This made the dreary-looking loners in the bar look away from me: I was a man who needed to chase something down.

Then I went back to the hotel, to lie on the hotel bed and replay my loss over and over again.

Don't get me wrong, it was still hot. I still jerked off and I still replayed it, my cock twitching back to life afterward. It still twisted in my gut when I thought of it. It was still a thrill.

But I was disappointed. Still hungry. Unsatisfied.

I ended up digging into the mini-bar, drinking until I could feel my eyelids closing. Until my heart rate finally grew slower.

I must have drifted off, because the next thing I heard was the click of the door.

Megyn was wearing a pair of yoga pants and an oversized sweatshirt. She nudged the end of the bed.

I looked at the clock. 12:17.

“We have to check out,” I said stupidly, my mind muddled. I was trying to capture the last events of the evening, but they were flying around in my mind like scraps of paper in a windstorm..

Megyn smiled. “I got another day.”

My mind raced. Why was she wearing these pants? Where was her dress. My eyes fell on a shopping bag on the floor next to the hallway.

I rubbed my eyes and sat up. I held my head, trying to get my bearings.

I was groggy. Hung over.

And then the events of the evening started to assemble into a picture.

“Why are you wearing that?” I said.

Megyn smiled. “I messed up my dress. Max had some stuff lying around.”

“Max,” I muttered.

Megyn made a face. “Are you disappointed about last night?” she said.

I couldn’t read her tone.

I shrugged. “No. No... no, of course not.” I didn’t want to make her feel bad.

“Not at all?”

Now her tone was weird, almost like she wanted me to be disappointed.

I shook my head slowly. I wasn’t sure where this was going.

Megyn pulled on the metal zipper of the sweatshirt. She was naked beneath it. She let it fall from her shoulders, and she slipped something out of the pocket as it did.

“Because frankly I thought it was a little disappointing,” she said.

She held her phone in her hand, and I stared disbelievingly, unable to think, as she twisted the yoga pants over her hips and down her legs until they fell into a pile around her feet. She stepped out of them, completely naked.

I could smell him on her. She had complied with my wishes and come to me without taking a shower, his sweat still plastered to her skin, filling her pores. His cum still dripping from inside of her.

“So, I thought of a way to make it up to you.”

I sucked in my breath. I didn’t know what to say or do. Megyn was smiling at me, holding the phone, her face full of mischief. She had a control over me that she had never had before, and she knew it. She climbed onto the bed on her knees and settled into a crouch.

Between her legs, I could see her bare pussy, her gash definitely used and abused, her inner lips still wet, the landing strip above her gash full of hardened globs of cum, or whatever she had gotten into. Her nipples looked as though they’d been pinched hard; they were red and fatter than normal.

But Megyn was now swiping her fingers over the phone. “Do you want it?” she said casually, and then she looked up at me. “Do you want to see my surprise?”

I didn’t know. Jesus, of course I did. No, I didn’t.

My insides twisted with uncertainty, my temperature rose. My blood was boiling, pulsing through my body and echoing in my ears.

Her phone. What could she have in a phone?

It was too much to hope for.

She crawled toward me on all fours. I almost recoiled from her, she was so terrifying. A sheen of dried cum was on her shoulder, and she smelled like sex. Her hair was wild, I was just noticing, and she was the embodiment of my fantasies, yet her wild-eyed look was almost too potent.

This was not my wife.

“I felt so bad about what happened at the club,” she said, and sat up to play with the phone again. “That I did something very naughty.”

She pulled back the sheet I was under and clawed at my boxers with one hand. My cock was already pointing straight up, staining the fabric with my precum.

I was paralyzed. I just watched her, still half-asleep maybe. Maybe I believed I was half-asleep.

She took my hand and put the phone in it.

A frame of a video, and the triangle to play it, were on the screen. Yellows and browns splashed in a blur across the screen: I stared at it uncomprehendingly.

I felt Megyn's hand on my cock. I looked down at her, and she had lowered herself so that her mouth was close to my dick.

She smiled. Smugly. "Press play," she said.

My hand was shaking. It took two tries to get the video going.

The sound was unmistakable, even as the picture remained completely blurred. "Pleease," Megyn's voice was whining. Panting. Skin sticking together. A man and a woman fucking. Like the beginning of every cheap porn video.

I felt Megyn's tongue on the tip of my cock. She pressed the blade flat against it, and when I looked down it looked exactly like she was licking an ice cream cone. But then she started to draw her tongue back and forth in this lewd way she had never done before. Her mouth was wet and hot, and the heat of it radiated down my shaft.

I didn't know where to look.

"I felt so bad," Megyn said, and her voice was hot and vibrating on the crown of my cock, as she enclosed me and then swirled her tongue around the glans. It was wriggling, moving like a beached fish, driving me wild.

And the video, still in my hand, Megyn's voice saying something. "I want it, please, just do it for me, we can delete it later, I want to see your cock in my ass."

I looked down at my wife – my real-life wife – to see her smile just before sucking the crown of my cock into her mouth.

I almost dropped the phone.

"Watch the video," she said.

The discussion on the video seemed to be over. The blurriness ceased, the picture took form. Megyn continued to moan and wail, "oh, oh my... oh god." In real life, my cock sank into her mouth, and her lips slid down the length of my shaft.

My eyes widened.

The image on the screen was of Megyn's ass. The two pretty hills of porcelain white. The small birthmark, faintly caramel-colored and shaped like a diamond, on her right asscheek, clearly visible.

And between her legs, buried in her ass, a long, thick black shaft.

I remembered the sight of her tiny hole wrapped airtight around my own cock, which was only half the size. How tight, how hot had it been inside of her?

Max Riley's cock was twice the thickness (or so it seemed), and here it was, pistoning in and out of Megyn's ass, a sticky sound occasionally making it to my ears over her moaning.

And then Max's voice: "That's it baby, oh, fuck, you're so tight. Fuck that feels good. Mmmm."

He held the camera steady, making sure to get nothing that would identify himself in the shot, just his cock, in and out, in and out of Megyn's tight hole.

"Make yourself come for me," Max said.

At this point, Megyn in my room took my whole cock into her mouth. My free hand flew to her head, and I doubled over to try and suppress the boiling orgasm threatening to burst right then and there.

I wanted to see the rest.

"Don't move," I said, and I felt Megyn comply, smiling, my cock in her throat. I could feel her struggling to breathe against my pelvis, her mouth stuffed with my dick.

And on the video, her ass getting pounded, the rim redder in every frame. Her panting, moaning getting more high pitched. "That's it, that's it, I can feel you're gonna come, that's it," Max was saying.

I heard my wife squeal on the video, and then Max stopped fucking her and let her twist and squirm as she moaned with her wild orgasm, her ass massaging his cock as she twisted around.

"Here, put your hand up here. That's it. Get the other one. You want a video let's do it right."

I watched as Max's dark hands moved Megyn's into position, palms against her buttocks. There was nothing else in the frame, but it was easy to imagine her, face and chest pressed to the bed, ass in the air, Max's huge black body behind her, impaling her with the enormous veined cock that plunged in and out of her on screen now.

"Fuck!" I shouted, as I lost control. Megyn in real life had begun to dart her tongue around, making circles around my cock, and I went over the edge without warning.

I held the phone as my orgasm pumped out of me in waves, stronger than anything I had ever experienced. All into Megyn's mouth, just pouring myself into her throat while I watched Max Riley's cock thrust deep into her, completely buried.

The two of them yelled out from the phone, and he remained inside of her, dumping his seed into her ass.

I dropped the phone as Megyn wickedly made her way up the length of my shaft, licking up the cum that had escaped her throat, cleaning off every inch of my shaft and sending almost painful jolts of pleasure through me.

“There’s more,” she said, gently pressing her teeth into the tip of my cock and looking at me.

I held up the phone, my whole body shaking.

A final second of footage remained, and it burned its way through my mind.

Megyn’s gaping asshole, Max’s cum dripping from it, just as mine had. Only her ass was stretched out so much more it defied the imagination.

“Did you like it?” Megyn said, crawling up next to me.

My mouth was hanging open and I wasn’t able to answer. Instead, I just breathed through my mouth like an idiot and nodded.

She didn’t sound very uncertain, but I didn’t care much about whether or not she was teasing me, or had gotten too wild, or anything at all.

I was hoping I didn’t have a heart attack.

“I’m so tired,” she said after a while.

And then, lying there together, we fell asleep.

When we woke up, Megyn rolled over onto her stomach and gave a languid, feline stretch. “Okay,” she said. “I think I need a shower. Do you want room service?”

“I... yeah, okay...”

“Order me something amazing,” she said, and slid off the end of the bed. I watched her in awe as she went to the bathroom.

I busied myself with the room service order, getting her one of everything that I thought would make her happy. Pancakes in bear shapes, deep-fried pickles. Chicken Caesar salad.

She came out shortly thereafter and hopped on the bed.

But something was troubling me. I picked up her phone.

“This was an amazing surprise,” I said.

Megyn squinted at me. “But?”

I willed myself to shut up. No buts. Don’t say anything else.

“But... how’d you get it? I thought he didn’t let anyone film him?” I said.

Megyn smiled. “My charms.”

I waved the phone in the air. “This could be very valuable -”

Megyn snatched the phone away from me. I was stunned, so I didn’t react at first. She tapped it in her hand. “We watch it one more time,” she said. “And then I’m deleting it.”

“What?” I said. Disappointment went bashing through me again.

She shook her head. “I feel bad enough about what I did to get him to do it,” she said. “And I said I’d erased it. I even tricked him by showing him a different app for storing videos... no, I feel too shitty.”

Setting all my disappointment aside, my cock thought of a few tasty questions. “Did you watch it with him?”

Megyn looked up at me, and her face was smiling. She had her mouth open, she was about to tell me.

But then she paused, and snapped her mouth shut. She cocked her head. “I think... I’m going to save that one,” she said,

“What?” I snapped.

“For later,” she said, shrugging. She handed the phone back to me. “I don’t know if there’ll be any more material...”

She watched me as I tried in vain to unlock her phone.

When I looked at her she smiled.

“No more material,” I said, and there was almost a whine to my voice.

“For now,” she said. “Who knows. Max is going back to LA for a long time.”

I stared at her. How could she be so casual, so take-it-or-leave it?

But she was. She had already hopped up and started packing her things away, her face neutral as though it were an ordinary day.

“You don’t want to see him again?” I said.

She didn’t even react. She gave a shrug and tucked something into the outer pocket of her suitcase. “I mean, if it comes up.” Then she looked up at me. “What?” she said. “I thought this was the plan all along. Just fun... not anything serious.”

I sat down. I wasn’t sure what I was after. “I know... I just... expected you to be a little more blown away by Max Riley. I mean, he’s Max Riley.”

Megyn put her hand on her hip. “Is this a serious conversation?” she said finally.

I shrugged. I didn't know what the fuck I was talking about, to be honest.

"But I did this all for you," she said. She sat down next to me. "It was because... you know... this was the plan."

I looked at her.

"I love you," she said.

I almost broke apart then, but I kept it together pretty well. As the urge to start crying hit me right through the chest – which I covered up pretty well, by pulling Megyn in close to me and breathing into her ear that I loved her – I realized that this was what I had been seeking all along.

This terrible and beautiful feeling, stomping through my chest right now, the one that was going to make me look like a huge pussy if I wasn't careful, was what I had wanted more than any of the things I'd believed I had wanted. I had wanted Megyn to get every imaginable thrill with Max Riley, and then come back to me.

I had wanted this feeling, right here.

I know that Megyn knew I was getting emotional, but she's an awesome woman. She jumped up, after hugging me for a while, and said cheerfully: "I forgot my face cleanser!" Giving me a second to save face.

When she came out of the bathroom without anything in her hand, five minutes later, smiling, and asked me what I had ordered for breakfast, I felt the kind of flutter in my heart and tenderness for her, as raw as when I first met her. I recited the list for her.

"All my favorite things," she said.

I realized how lucky I was. And whatever the future holds for us, and our sexual adventures, I know I married the right woman.
