

arnica butler
ROBIN'S FIX

a hotwife novel

Thirteenth Line Publications

ROBIN'S FIX

A Hotwife Novel

By Arnica Butler

Copyright 2017 by Arnica Butler

All rights reserved. No duplicating and no resale, but feel free to share with friends or family.

Published by Thirteenth Line Publications

This book is a work of fiction. All characters, companies, organizations, products and events in this book, other than those that are clearly in the public domain, are fictitious, and any resemblance to real persons, living or dead, companies, organizations, events, or products, is purely coincidental.

All characters depicted in this story are 18 years or older.

Cover characters are models. Image(s) is/are licensed from: bartekwadziak / DepositPhotos

Published by Thirteenth Line Publications

READERS!

Sign up for our newsletter and find out about new releases and hot deals!

Go to My Author Page for a complete list of my hotwife erotica stories.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

1: Arrival

2: Nightlife

3: Second Thoughts

4: A Long Week

5: Early

6: Try Me

7: Down The Rabbit Hole

8: Through The Looking Glass

9: Do-Over

10: Gracious Winner

More From Arnica Butler

Thank You

Independent publishing is a marvelous thing, because it allows authors like me and the gang I'm lucky enough to be affiliated with (Ben Boswell, Kenny Wright, Kirsten McCurran, Max Sebastian, and yes, the wild mind of Jason Lenov, who is my partner in more than one crime) to write quality stories for a readership that is not large enough to sustain the profit margins of "real" publishers.

But independent publishing is not entirely independent. I rely on loyal readers, who also help spread the word about my books and keep coming back for more.

And I rely on BETA readers to do the jobs that publishers ordinarily undertake (at great expense): editing, suggesting, and helping to shape the final work. I'm very grateful for the supportive community of BETA readers in this genre.

Special and sincere thanks to "American R" this time, especially for being so tolerant of my wild time demands.

Enjoy!

Arnica

1: ARRIVAL

“It’s the next turn,” Robin said dryly, sweeping her fingers over her phone. “Uh...”

I slowed down, waiting for her to confirm the turn. We were on a two-lane highway heavily frequented by large trucks, and I’d seen more than one driver lifting a rather large cigarette to his lips. This was a part of the country where men were serious men, and truckers were men who were often stoned. I glanced at the rear-view mirror and then at Robin, who was sweeping her fingers over her phone, frustrated.

“Is this it or not?” I said. A street sign appeared to have been plunged into the muddy road as an afterthought, and while a vehicle was still moving. It tipped practically 45 degrees and whatever the writing announced was obscured by an overgrown Linden tree.

“It’s too late,” I muttered.

“My phone is... I can’t get a signal,” Robin snapped. She craned her neck behind her. “Was that it?” she mused aloud. She leaned forward on the dashboard, phone in hand, and squinted ahead of us. “Morton’s Garage,” she mumbled. “Is that before, or after...?”

I sighed and eyed “Morton’s Garage” warily. I knew it would be the most logical thing to pull in to the parking lot while we straightened things out, but the place was giving me the creeps.

Robin turned her head as I passed the place without stopping, her mouth open in mock disbelief. She waved her phone-hand at my window. “Whatareyou...?” she intoned.

I sighed, and set my sights on what appeared to be a diner, about half a mile down the road.

Robin sighed and leaned back in her seat, trying out her phone again. “No signal,” she groaned.

Things had been like this for all of our marriage, to be sure. Whose hadn’t? Stupid fights about driving, stupid fights about who knew how to read a map and who didn’t. Fights about dishes and the proper way to clean a recycling bin; discussions about the “tone” with which I asked questions and gave directions; fights about who spent more than the other on stupid shit, and angered existentialist musings on whether stupid shit from the Pottery Barn was more or less stupid than stupid shit from Home Depot.

Married stuff.

But lately, it had been a little more than that. Seven years' worth of that, and I was starting to feel like Robin was more annoyed with me than usual. It seemed like we spent more time bickering, and much less time laughing about our fights.

And then there was this. This godforsaken bullshit part of the country, and this trip to her parents' cottage at, of all things, some campy campground place. She had inherited the thing and was getting ready to sell it, but that didn't mean we weren't going to be out in the vast wasteland of mosquitoes and no cell reception for weeks.

I turned on the turn signal well before the diner, just to let her know I planned to turn, to keep her from getting more annoyed with me than usual. For the whole six-hour drive, she'd been accusing me off and on of sabotaging the trip with my shitty attitude, which, if I were to be fair, wasn't so far from the truth.

I didn't want to be here.

There was no lying about that.

But, I didn't want to make my wife unhappy. I looked over at Robin. She was thirty-one, about ten years younger than me and twenty-years younger at heart and in appearance. She had one long, tanned leg propped up on the dashboard and her caramel thigh was exposed to mid-thigh. A shaggy line of cut-off dangled between her legs. A close-fitting red tank top hugged her slim waist and pert, perfect-handful breasts. She had her dark brown hair pulled up in a ponytail, and it swished along her shoulder as she turned from the window to the rear-view window to her phone in circles, trying to figure out where we were.

Annoyed with me or not, I loved Robin.

I pulled into the parking lot and came to a stop. The pavement was cracked, almost volcanic in places, and no lines were visible on the gray-black surface. A tire thudded sharply into a huge pothole.

"Jesus," Robin said, and she peered past me and down the highway in the direction we had come from. I couldn't tell who or what the "Jesus" was directed at, so I just shut up and squinted into the sun, admiring the view of Robins legs in my peripheral vision.

“I have no idea what I’m looking at,” she muttered. “Everything’s so different.”

“Really?” I quipped. “Because all this stuff looks like it’s been abandoned here since 1985.”

Robin gave me a quick snort. I was relieved to hear that she hadn’t completely lost her sense of humor. She looked behind her, back at her phone, and then down the highway, in the direction we had been headed. “I just have... this thing is saying we’re somewhere we’re not. I don’t know...”

Robin, I should note here, was one of the least technologically reliable people on the planet. It was unlikely that she was even looking at a map, and it took everything I had to keep from snatching it out of her hands.

Because, again: the “tone” would not be received favorably.

I looked down the highway.

“Well, at least if we get stuck here we can stay at the Gold Medal Hotel.”

This was a joke, because there was no chance in hell I was staying at The Gold Medal Hotel, and the large structural cracks in the stucco that I could see from half a mile away had almost everything to do with it.

“Oh!” Robin said, slapping my thigh. “That’s... I remember that. It’s past that. I know it is. Go down there, I’m sure it’s just a few roads past.”

She smiled at me.

“It’s tempting to stay there, though,” she added, and I was thrilled when she gave me a wink. It was nice to get some friendly, mischievous banter out of Robin these days, because more often than not, that wasn’t what happened.

The thing about our marriage is that it wasn’t bad or anything. I wouldn’t say, for example, that we were on our way to divorce or separation, or even being one of those quiet couples who don’t talk to each other at restaurants. But we had been married for seven years, and I was starting to get the impression that things were getting a little dull for Robin. She laughed a little less at my jokes, touched me a little less often. We were slowly drifting into our own orbits with our own lives more than we were in each other’s.

Or rather, I would start thinking these things, and then Robin would do something and I would be convinced that everything was actually just fine. That may be the reason I never really acted on this gradual slowdown of passion.

I suppose it's why most married couples may not.

I pulled out of the parking lot and drove toward the hotel, and then, gratefully, past it.

"There," Robin said. "It's just up there."

I looked skeptically at the road, and considered pretending to miss it. While there was a brightly painted sign with an arrow declaring that Camp Taghkana was five miles this way, trees hadn't been pruned away from it and the whole thing looked as shady as if we had made a wrong turn in the Appalachians.

I turned anyway, and was immediately rewarded by a clunk as the car dropped into one of numerous potholes.

"Great," I said. There goes the suspension.

Robin rolled her eyes, because she hated any complaints I made about the car. Especially "what's that noise?" and "You smell that?"

But she lightened up quickly. "Don't worry," she said. "You only have to stay the night. I'll get this place cleaned up and then we won't have to think about it again until it's sold. Okay?"

She smiled at me.

"This place is creepy," I said.

She grabbed my arm and gave me a little hug, pulling her knees up to her chest. "Wait until you see the neighbors."

"Are they clowns?"

"Worse. They're all old and play cribbage."

I laughed. The car bumped along the road.

Robin's parents had left her their cottage in a small community called Camp Taghkana. It was one of those fifties-era constructs, and the residents were all old-timers from back in the day. Robin hadn't been there for almost twenty years, and she was sure that the cottage was in a state of disrepair. But a real estate agent had assured us that it could be sold for a good price if we just fixed up a few things. Robin didn't seem to have any huge sentimental value attached to it, and she'd agreed to the idea of selling it right away. With the money, we could put a down payment on a better cottage or a house.

Driving down the crazy dirt road, my suspension clunking away to smithereens, I doubted the agent's assessment of the value of the cottage. Who on earth would want to be stuck out here, except old people?

I sighed and told myself it didn't matter. Whatever it sold for, it was a windfall, and Robin was going to deal with it, anyway. I had to go back to the city to work, and she was going to clean things up and take her own little vacation for two weeks.

I'd agreed to come back on the weekend, but I'll admit that as the car hobbled down the road, I was looking for a way to get out of it.

Little did I know I'd be more than ready to come back in a week's time.

*

"Hmm," I said, and this was one of the most genuine "befuddled" mumbles I'd ever uttered. I shut the car door and leaned against the vehicle, propping myself up against it with my arm extended. "This isn't exactly what I pictured..."

Robin was frozen with her hand on the open car door, her mouth slightly open, her brow furrowed up in confusion. "Um..." she said. She glanced over at me and shrugged before shutting the car door. "This is definitely not the place I remember."

Camp Taghkana had been portrayed to me by Robin, in a series of short memories about the place, as a place lodged in the fifties, like – and she had described it this way on several occasions – the camp in Dirty Dancing. Bad karaoke with Elvis songs, a lot of frumpy moms in one-piece suits, and lawn games.

(Not that there's anything wrong with lawn games.)

A woman in a blue bikini – a tanned, long-limbed beauty who did not look old enough to be anyone's mom except on a technicality, rolled by on a bike. She dinged the bell and gave me a mysterious smile. Her hair was down, streaked by the sun, and she gave it a toss before standing on the pedals and riding away quickly. When I turned to follow her I got a nice eyeful of her pretty ass. Her bike joined up with another pretty girl – this one blonde like a Swede, a little bigger but delightfully curvy. They dinged bells and greeted each other cheerfully.

I turned back to Robin, who made a small harrumph. "Well," she said, but she was grinning. "Camp Taghkana just went up in someone's estimation." She shut the car door and surveyed the scene in front of us: a lot of twenty and thirty-somethings were intermingled with a few people who might have been in their forties, playing Frisbee and horseshoes or just sunning themselves on towels. Music reverberated from the other end of the central yard. The place felt more like a college campus than a “campground.”

“What. Has happened to this place?” Robin asked aloud.

Then she shrugged again and turned on her heel to skip up the steps to the office, which was duly marked as such by a sign that, at the very least, did not seem to have changed in fifty years.

I took another look around the lawn that stretched out in a big square and ran up against some of the cottages, and all the pretty girls and fit men lounging around on it, before following her inside.

*

It was a half-mile drive down a very bumpy and narrow dirt road to the parking lot near the cottage, and from there we had to hike up a steep set of dirt and log steps into a mosquito-filled forest area, to the enclosed porch of Robin’s parents’ cottage.

Robin set down the box of supplies she’d carried up with a huff. “Well, nothing here’s changed all that much,” she said. A cloud of dust was still billowing around the box she’d set down. The air in the enclosure was stuffy. She leaned over a table and opened a window.

The inside of the house was typical cottage fare – plaid couches, dust, and a card table. All the furniture was straight out of the seventies, and the drapes were brown and avocado with wacky flowers on them.

“This is.... hideous,” I said, laughing a little. “What are you going to do?”

Robin shrugged. “Put everything in trash bags, and then ask you to bring me some paint?”

I nodded.

She slid her arm around my waist. It was an unexpectedly tender gesture from her. “In the meantime,” she said suggestively, and I felt my cock twitch to life. “We should go check out... the amenities.”

“Hmmm,” I said, kissing her mouth. Her lips moved sensually against mine and I got a little more worked up. “That is not how I wanted that sentence to end...”

Robin smiled and put her hands over my shoulders. She stroked the back of my neck with feathery touches. “Oh no?”

I had my hands on her waist, and she was turned toward me, her body moving closer to mine instead of wriggling away, as she would ordinarily have done in the afternoon.

She kissed me, and I savored the feel of her firm, full lips and the way they gave in beneath my own. I explored her mouth with my tongue, and found her playful. Why didn't we kiss like this more often?

Robin surprised me by reaching for her own shirt and pulling it up and over her head. Her skin was damp with sweat already, and the skimpy, transparent material of her bra clung to her. I moved my hands up to her breasts, and rubbed the pads of my thumbs over her nipples. A satisfying arousal moved through me when they hardened at my touch.

I felt an urge to ask what had gotten into her, but I managed to keep my mouth shut.

She backed away, tugging on my shirt. “Come on,” she said.

I followed her upstairs, enjoying the steep slope of the stairs and the vantage point they gave me to look up her cutoffs and play with my fingers along the line of her bottom.

The upstairs was just one large room with a double bed on either side of where the stairs joined the area. It was hot as hell, but my balls were aching and I paid no attention to the heat, pushing Robin gently over to the bed on the left.

There were no sheets, just a plastic cover, but to my surprise Robin bounced onto the bed and arched her back to unbutton her shorts and slide them off. I pulled my shirt off and shimmied out of my shorts and boxers.

Robin propped herself up on her elbows, and gave me a fetching look. She was still in her bra and panties, charmingly mismatched. I got onto the bed on my knees and edged closer to her. She hooked her fingers under the hips of her panties and slid them down, slowly peeling them away, revealing her neat landing strip of straight, soft dark hair.

I put my fingers on the strip and slid them slowly toward her pussy. The downy hair was shiny and slick, and my fingers slipped right off the end of it and into her pussy folds. Her clit was hard under the pads of my fingers, and around the ridge of her nub, her folds were moist and hot. It was an unusual state of arousal for Robin to be in, so immediately, but there in the dense air of the attic it somehow made sense. A trickle of sweat snaked down my spine as I knelt over Robin, my fingers exploring her aroused cunt, wondering what to do first – taste her sweet nectar, or just plunge right in and feel the sheath of her pussy around my cock?

But Robin solved the dilemma for me, by lifting her legs up and placing her ankles near her head, while she gave me a gentle push on the shoulder to go down on her. Her panties were still wrapped around her legs at mid-thigh, lacy and fragrant, giving the vaguest impression of bondage. With her legs hooked up as they were, her pussy was spread out before me, engorged and glistening.

With her petals spread open by the position she was in, the scent of her cunt was thick in the air even before I got close to her. I ran my tongue along the edges of her outer lips, the light hair tickling my cheek. She tasted sweet and almost citrusy, and the thick nectar of her pussy had pooled in the folds of her lips for me lap up on my pass back down to tease her clit.

I moved in quickly, though, to suck up her engorged clit in my mouth. I used my thumb to pull at the hood of her clit and get at the face of it, making Robin gasp. Then I watched her over the gentle hill of her mound, as I rhythmically set in on her, making her abdomen ripple in waves and her hands try to clench at nonexistent sheets as her breath disintegrated into rapid, panicked flutters from her throat.

I kept at it, rhythmically pulsing against her clit, her honeyed-lemon juices filling my mouth. Her body became slippery on the plastic covering and she slid backward, up toward the headboard, which she clutched and rattled and used to arch her hips as she let out a strangled scream and her pussy squelched in my mouth. Her legs shuddered wildly and I darted my tongue into the channel of her cunt to feel the pulsing of her orgasm.

Then, only after she was spent by her own pleasure, I rose up onto my knees and pulled her by the legs toward me. I used the tip of my cock to rub her clit a few times and make her moan from the intense over-pleasure, before I sank my swollen member inside of her.

I was so turned on by then that I had to distract myself with thoughts of golf to keep from coming in only a few short strokes. I fell on top of her, and for a few moments she was listless beneath me, her body hot and her skin wet with sweat. Her legs flopped open and I sawed into the hot liquid of her cunt.

But after a bit, she closed her legs around me, and started to grind against me again, seeking another climax. Her pussy clenched around my cock as she clung to my shoulders and fought to get another orgasm in before I came.

“Robin,” I breathed, because it was getting hard for me to keep myself from the edge. But she persisted, her eyes lost in their own world as she bit her lip and pulled on my neck and thrust her hips up against mine.

I tried desperately to think of something, anything else, to stop the inevitable, but when she turned her face to mine and met my eyes, and the taste and smell of her pussy rose from her lips to mine, I went over the edge and could not come back from it.

Robin continued to grind her hips against me, as I spilled my seed into her and even after. It was my turn to grab at the bed as though there were sheets, Robin's body slipping and sliding on the plastic, her skin so hot I could barely stand the touch of it, her pussy gripping me fiercely to the point of near-pain. As my orgasm receded, the feel of her pussy became almost torturous, and I shuddered as she fought for one final climax.

Finally, against my aching cock, she came. She let go of my neck and threw herself back against the sheets, her wet hair spread out around her, her pussy throbbing around my cock. A low moan escaped her lips and her eyes went glassy with pleasure.

I slowly rolled off of her, unable to stand any more of the raw sensations on my cock. The plastic covering stuck to me, and the discomfort of the hot room began to creep in around me as my wild climax rolled away.

I felt sleepy though. That kind of deeply satisfying, easy sleepiness that comes from a good fuck. Which we hadn't really had much of lately.

Not that our sex life was bad. Like our marriage, it was in pretty good, slightly-above-average shape for the length of time we'd been married. But like our conversations in the car, and almost every other interaction we had with each other, sex had taken on a kind of run-of-the-mill, formulaic exchange feel to it. There was nothing particularly wrong with it, it just didn't have any really excitement.

It rarely got as sweaty as all this.

“Ugh,” Robin said, sitting up suddenly, interrupting my pleasant drifting toward a nap. “I'm so sticky.”

I opened my eyes and traced my fingers down her spine. Her skin was wet as though she had stepped out of a pool a moment before. I brought my finger to my mouth, tasting her salty sweat.

She stood up and stretched out. “Now,” she said. “You have to pay me back.”

I raised my eyebrow.

I sort of like it when Robin puts sex into transactional terms. It gets me off a little, thinking she only has sex with me because I do things for her. But what could she have wanted then?

“Go prime the water?” she pleaded.

I stood up, pulled my boxers on, and saluted. “Yes ma’am. Where is it?”

The water pump was stuck away in some godawful place full of bushes behind the house, and it was no joy to get going, but I was happy to do it after such a lovely and unusual afternoon romp with my wife. I pushed my way impatiently out of the bushes and tramped back through the overgrown property, looking forward to a shower.

I heard Robin yelp from inside the bathroom, which was downstairs, and I hurried to see what was going on.

She was in the shower stall, turning around and around and humming. “Oh God,” she said. “Oh God, the water’s not hot yet. Of course. Oh God!”

“It’s fine,” I said, admiring her hardened nipples and the ripples of goosebumps along her shoulders and arms. “I’m hot as hell.”

I stepped in to the small stall, flinching when the ice-cold water landed on my balls. “Jesus,” I said, pulling Robin close to me. Her skin was cold to the touch but beneath the first layer, she was still warm. We clung to each other and I wrapped my arms around her. “It’s not so bad,” I chattered.

“Ugh,” she said. “I have to get out.” She opened the door and looked around. “Shit,” she said. “Shit, shit!”

I turned the water off after tugging on my cock to wash myself off. The heat I’d been feeling was gone, but it started to creep slowly back into my skin as soon as the icy water stopped biting into my flesh.

“What?” I said.

Robin turned to me, clutching herself and shivering slightly. “No towels,” she said. “They’re in the car.”

I rubbed my face, readying myself to dash out there.

But before I could do it, Robin surprised me yet again by laughing softly and making a run for the door.

Naked.

My eyes went wide, and I stepped onto the wood floor and nearly craned it as my foot slipped. I plodded to the window to watch Robin dash to the car.

I looked around nervously, wondering if anyone in any of the other cottages had a view of our house. Surely the people across the street could at least see the driveway. And maybe others, as well. And if anyone drove by on the road -

Almost on cue, the sound of a car echoed in the trees. I looked through them to see flashes of red metal. "A car!" I shouted down to Robin, who stopped, and looked in both directions, but found no place to hide.

Then, she shrugged, and stopped crouching. She walked calmly toward our car.

The red car – a pickup, actually – passed. I couldn't see who was in it, but Robin just stood there with one hand on the car door, and waved.

I heard a lewd whistle.

Then Robin bent down to open the trunk, popped it open, and fetched the towels.

I was too stunned to speak as she came through the door, wrapping one of the towels around her back. I closed the door behind her.

"Robin!" I said finally.

She looked at me. "What?"

Then, as if she honestly hadn't known, she looked over her shoulder as though she could see through the door and down to the car. "Oh, that," she said. She shrugged. "We're never going to see any of these people again, anyway."

"Robin!" I repeated.

She put her hand on her hip, and the towel slid over her back and then dropped onto the floor. "Oh, come on," she said. "Lighten up." She stepped toward me and put a finger on my chest. Her touch sent a delightful ripple through my body. "That never bothered you before. Anyway, everyone had a good time." She smiled.

She dropped her eyes to take in what I knew she expected to see: that my cock was twitching back to life. There was no hiding that she was turning me on.

Still, my mouth hung open a little.

I supposed Robin was referring to long ago, when we first started dating. Something I had liked about her is that she didn't mind being naked.

I certainly didn't mind the view. It wasn't as if she did everything in the nude, but she had done a few things, like open the door to my apartment to fetch a newspaper in the nude, that resembled what she had done here.

But that was years ago.

I pondered it for a moment. Then I realized: what did I care?

And that was just it: there were several feelings competing in my chest. On the one hand, it had been strangely thrilling that total strangers were admiring Robin's nakedness. And on the other, she was my wife, and possessiveness gnawed at me.

Robin smiled again and trotted into the kitchen. "Let's get dressed and go check out the rest of the camp. I kind of want to see it now, it seems so different."

She bounced up the stairs for her clothes.

2: NIGHTLIFE

Robin had dressed in the same cutoffs, which I was enjoying watching as she strutted down the road, and a tight black shirt that criss-crossed at the back, leaving large swaths of her skin exposed in tantalizing triangular and rectangular patches that weaved in and out of each other like a special and complicated wrapping. Something about the shirt made me feel the itch to unwrap her, even though there was no such string to pull and make the whole thing unravel.

Robin looked back at me after walking for a few minutes. “Come on, slow poke,” she teased.

“I like the view,” I told her, my eyes falling to her pretty bottom and the way the cutoff jeans, with a dark hem down the middle, made a delectable contour of the shape of her ass. Robin was thin, with long limbs and a petite set of breasts, and her bottom was small but in comparison to her build unusually curvy. Not big, or even particularly round, but defined; a lengthened convexity between lean torso and her sinewy limbs, a pretty shape that the cutoffs were doing every favor for.

Robin laughed at me, but she kept walking, and so I kept looking. This trip to the boonies was turning out better than I expected, even if there were a million nasty bugs in the air. I certainly hadn’t expected to have great sex this soon into the game, if at all.

“So what is this, like a neighborhood bar?” I asked.. I swatted at a cloud of gnats that seemed determined to follow me.

Robin looked over her shoulder and put her hair up in a ponytail again. Her neck was shiny with sweat. With a rubber-band in her lips, she mumbled: “It’s sort of like... you remember the Legion?”

I groaned, remembering the only bar anywhere near a place we had rented a few summers back in rural Canada.

“The beer is cheap,” Robin offered, snapping her ponytail into place. “And... maybe those bikini girls will be there?”

I doubted that the “bikini girls” would show up for a Legion-esque bar, but cheap beer was always pretty good bait for me.

We walked down the still road for a bit, but before long the low thump of music, with a lot of voices clattering over it, spilled through the trees. To the left, colored lights suddenly burst out of the trees, and we were standing in front of what actually looked like a respectable restaurant.

Robin's mouth fell open.

"The Legion never looked like this," I commented.

She shook her head. "I can't believe this," she said.

I extended my hand toward the steps leading up to the busy porch, where a lot of people seemed to be enjoying a good meal and some beer, and a lot of them looked younger than seventy.

Robin smiled, and with a look of disbelief on her face, walked up the steps to the door. She stared in amazement at the people on the porch. One group gave her a little wave and said "Hi."

We entered the restaurant, and looked around.

"Wow," Robin commented. "This place is hopping."

Technically, it wasn't hopping, but there were probably as many people as you'd find on a Wednesday night in a chain-restaurant like TGI Friday's, which was pretty good considering where we were. The vibe, on the other hand, was much more energetic than that. There were a few families, but a lot of people our age, with no kids. There was an air hockey table with a wild game going on among a group of guys who had balanced pitchers of beer precariously on the ledge behind them. They let out a yell a few moments after we entered as someone apparently won a game.

We walked awkwardly to the bar. Robin set her purse down and continued sweeping her astonished gaze around the restaurant.

"What can I do you for?" the bartender, a guy in his late twenties with flinty blue eyes and a stubbled jaw asked us.

Robin turned to face him. His demeanor changed from gruff to flirty as he took in her pretty face and his eyes dropped, just for a microsecond, to her bare cleavage. Robin said nothing, her mouth open.

"We have beer, wine, liquor..." the guy joked.

Robin snapped her mouth shut. "I'm sorry," she said. "It's just... the last time I was here was like twenty years ago and this place was... lame."

The bartender smiled. "I would not know about that," he said. "This place is really cool now."

I couldn't tell if he was being sarcastic or just an annoying hipster.

"I'll have a Cracked Canoe," I said, starting to dislike the way his greedy eyes were fixed on Robin, and the stubby grin he was giving her.

"And for your sister?" he said.

Very funny, wise-ass, I thought.

Robin ignored the comment, and gazed at the mirrored liquor wall. "I'll have... a... gin and tonic, I guess. Tanqueray."

The bartender nodded, and he let his gaze and smile linger a moment on Robin, before he turned to make the drinks.

Robin brought her hands together and leaned on her forearms. She gave me a stunned expression.

"Well," I said, and I was a little annoyed, though I couldn't exactly say why. Men always had a reaction like that to Robin; this was definitely not the first bartender to flirt with her. So why was it bugging me so much? "At least you'll have somewhere to go in the evening."

My tone was a little bitter. Robin placed her head on her palm and swiveled toward me. "Wow," she said. "That sounds grumpy."

I flitted my napkin.

The bartender returned at that exact moment, almost as if he sensed that he could make me grumpier. "I almost forgot," he said. "It's Mardi Gras week." He was dangling a set of cheap beads in Robin's direction.

Robin smiled.

"It's not Mardi Gras," I said, annoyed.

"It's a theme," the bartender said.

Robin shrugged and took the beads, sliding them over her head in a neat movement. They swung and bounced on the shape of her breasts. They were a bright blue, the color of her eyes, almost as if he had chosen them to bring out the stunning aquamarine orbs beneath her long eyelashes.

As if Robin needed more attention being called to herself.

I rolled my eyes when the bartender left, and Robin mouthed, "grumpy" at me.

I was grumpy, though it was pretty hard to say why. After all, it was great that Robin wasn't going to have a terrible time here by herself. Great that Robin would be surrounded by a bunch of vibrant people our age. Men in their thirties with washboard stomachs. Great.

The air hockey table let out another yell, and the group broke up.

"All right, all right," a male voice said, nearing us.

"Loser!" Someone by the table chanted. "And don't make it any of that cheap shit, either."

I had my back to that group, so I couldn't see who was approaching. But Robin did, and I watched as she let her eyes linger on the guy behind me ordering beer. Just a moment too long. She quickly looked away when she realized I was watching her.

I put my elbow on the bar and made a slow, deliberate turn to view the guy she was checking out.

He was a lean, athletic guy with sun-bleached blond hair and a bit of a surfer look going on. Definitely younger than us, but his age was a little hard to pin down. His skin had a slightly weathered look – probably from some kind of outdoor activity, like surfing. His arms weren't bulky but muscles contoured his forearms and biceps with the look of hours of climbing or tennis.

He looked right at me. His eyes were gray-blue and intense. "Hey," he said.

And then his gaze shifted past me, and settled on Robin, who must have smiled at him because he gave a little nod.

"You guys are new here," he said. His eyes narrowed as he continued looking at Robin, almost like he recognized her. "You staying at the Camp?"

The bartender had returned with our drinks.

"My wife's family left her a cottage," I said in response to the guy's question, dryly. Emphasis on wife.

"Nice one. That's lucky," he said.

I heard Robin's drink clinking in her glass. "This place doesn't seem... the same as it used to be," she said. "You staying here?"

The guy hooked a finger behind him. "A buddy of mine's folks left him a cabin, too, so we came out last year to have a guy's thing. Now we make it a regular thing." His eyes twinkled. "It turned out to be a lot more... fun... than we thought it would be."

"Who's your friend?" Robin said. "Maybe I know him."

"Uh... Jim Santos. That guy over there."

Robin leaned over to look at the group of guys, but it seemed like she didn't recognize anyone. She shook her head.

The blond guy grinned. "Doesn't matter. I'm the only one you need to know around here." He put his hand out to Robin. "I'm Heath."

Robin took his hand, and for a moment the two of them were joined awkwardly right in front of me. "Robin," she said softly.

Then, as an afterthought, after a moment-too long of a "look" between them. "This is Tony. My husband," she added.

Heath offered me his hand, and enclosed mine in a too-firm grip. He shook it once, vigorously, enough to make my wrist feel like it was going to crack. “Good to meet you. Now, I gotta get these clowns a pitcher of beer, so if you’ll excuse me.”

He ordered the beer while we sat in awkward silence. After he walked away, I swiveled to Robin. “So, Heath, huh?”

Robin had her straw between her lips and she left it in her mouth as she turned sideways and put her head against her hand. She batted her eyelashes. “Who? What?”

I groaned.

“Oh come on,” she whispered, and leaned out to look over at the ice hockey table. “He’s like twenty or something. I could totally technically be his mother.”

She leaned back in and gave a flip of her hair. “He is good-looking though.”

I swiveled back to face the bar and indicated my displeasure by chugging my beer wordlessly.

In my peripheral vision, however, I picked up on the way the group of guys were huddling together a little, talking in low voices, and casting furtive glances at us.

More specifically, I thought with a sinking heart, Robin.

And yet, even as my heart sank, my cock rose.

“I’ll have another Cracked Canoe,” I practically shouted at the bartender. I looked over at Robin, who set her empty glass on the bar.

“When in Rome,” she said, with a shrug.

*

Things were pretty low-key for the next hour or so. The group of guys played their air hockey game and split up to play darts, the camp drunk came in and started telling everyone what was what in politics and art before the bartender kicked him out. Robin and I got pretty tipsy, and started up a conversation with another couple who were slightly older than us, who reported that they had heard about this place from some friends.

For a while, everything seemed to be pretty normal again. I started to shake off (or anesthetize) some of my dark clouds of worry.

But then Heath came back. “Hey,” he said again.

“Oh, hi,” Robin said cheerfully. She nudged me with her foot, and then leaned flirtatiously on the counter. “How’s your air-hockey going?”

Heath shrugged. “So listen, we’re about to head back there now, but usually we have a little Friday get-together at Freddy’s place. Pretty much everyone in the Camp stops by. It’s pretty chill, don’t worry. But, uh... come by, if you want to. It’s a good time.”

Robin gave him a warm smile. “Thanks,” she said. “Maybe we’ll check it out.”

And another drawn-out look simmered between them.

Or was that my imagination? My gut felt cold. I lifted my glass and took a sip of my beer.

Heath paid his tab and headed back to the group, who I could swear seemed to be waiting excitedly for news of our answer.

“So...?” I said, after waiting a while, giving Robin an arched eyebrow.

I’ll admit, I sort of wanted to check out the party. But mostly I was tired, and the place had gone from being interesting to making me really uneasy.

After all, when I’d told Robin I would have to head back to work for a few weeks and she’d be here all alone, I had pictured her in an entirely different situation. Not some paradise for baby-boomers’ kids, surrounded by a bunch of fit, flirtatious men like Heath.

I didn’t mind going home, either.

Robin brought the beer to her lips. “I don’t know. I’m kind of curious,” she said. “Let’s go check it out.”

“Oh really?” I said.

Robin shrugged. “It’s something to do. The house is a mess...”

Heath passed our table on the way out. “You comin’?” he said, looking at Robin when he began the sentence and then at me with a steely gaze. His eyes dropped back to Robin’s breasts, and the swatch of fabric that let just the tiniest sliver of her crack peek out.

“Yeah,” I said.

Heath shifted his gaze back to me. “Okay man,” he said. “We’re 17 on the Lake Drive.”

And then another sweeping gaze at Robin’s breasts, and he was off.

Robin brought her beer to her lips with a smile on her face. When she looked at me, as she was sipping her beer, she rolled her eyes.

“What’s that for?” I said. I was actually feeling almost as sour as I sounded.

“You know what,” she said.

“That guy is totally macking on you,” I said.

Robin erupted in a laugh that made her bring her hand to her mouth to keep beer from coming out.

“Macking?! ” she said, when she’d recovered. She tipped her glass at mine and they clinked. Then she held her hand to ear like it was a phone. “1997 is on the phone, they want their mascot back.”

I brought my beer to my lips, giving her a nod of appreciation for the jab. “He is, though.”

Robin let out a funny sound. That’s when I realized she was pretty tipsy. “Macking. He’s macking on me,” she mocked.

She was really quite drunk. She laughed at her own joke and leaned back on the chair. “One for the road?” she asked me.

I made a face. “What?”

She waved her hand at me vaguely and slid out of the chair. “It’s a long walk,” she said. She offered no further explanation, just purchased another two beers and headed for the door after slipping her purse over her shoulder as she passed our table. “Let’s go,” she said. “I want to see what this party’s about but you know me. I turn into a pumpkin after ten.”

Robin was definitely the morning person between us.

I followed her into the darkness, feeling incredibly unsettled. Between the bad vibe I’d gotten from the surrounding area, the good vibe that was so incongruent with what Robin had told me about this place, and the way she was acting, I felt like it was probably in my best interest to just go to bed. Reset the whole thing.

But I didn’t.

*

At the bar, the place had felt more like a fun vacation spot for thirty-to-forty somethings. There had been some people with kids there, some older people, and a pretty civilized atmosphere.

But the college-campus vibe I had been feeling out on the yard when we first arrived returned, in increments, as we neared 17 Lake Drive.

Loud music carried through the humid night all the way down the street, and as we neared the house we heard voices – a lot of male voices – rising and falling in waves of cheers and laughter that typically accompanied games like beer pong and keg stands.

It wasn't that bad, but it wasn't that far off the mark when we got there. There were no college-aged guys in sight, but there were very few women. Most of the guys, while a little pudgier than, say, an 18-year-old athlete, were pretty fit, and they were leaning on the railings of the porch or playing Foosball (the source of the racket, a very intense game was going on). From inside the house, the heady scent of weed drifted into the street.

As we neared the cottage, I noticed a red pickup truck parked in the drive, clearly belonging to someone who wasn't a guest at this place. It jogged something in my memory, but I was too drunk to figure it out for a few moments.

I was not unaware of how many sets of eyes gravitated toward us as we walked up the steps. I kept my hands in my pockets and tried to look as cool as a lot of these guys did. But I knew they weren't looking at me. I looked down at Robin's shorts and felt an urge to tug them down further and cover up more of her thigh.

I didn't act on it, of course.

And then, just as we reached the threshold, my blood went ice-cold. I looked back at the haphazardly parked truck.

Red truck.

The same truck that had passed our cottage earlier while Robin was outside naked.

Heath greeted us almost as soon as we walked in. He stood up from a table where he appeared to be playing a card game. "Robbie!" he shouted, christening Robin with a nickname like she was an old, old friend. "And Toby!"

"Tony," I corrected him flatly.

"Yeah, right." Heath said. "Here!" he yelled back at his companions at the table. "Here! We have another player. I think you will find this candidate suitable."

Heath put his hands on Robin's shoulders and turned her toward the table, where three guys and one attractive girl, possibly even the Swedish-looking girl from the bike earlier in the day – looked at Robin appreciatively.

“I like this player. Darlin’ you can join our poker game any time,” one of them slurred.

The Swedish-looking girl smiled demurely.

Robin looked at Heath, who still had her by the shoulders. She brought her hand up to her purse strap and adjusted it nervously. I could see that all of these guys were quite drunk now, two of them had the red-rimmed eyes of the severely intoxicated. “Oh,” Robin said, and she cast a quick glance back at me as though for help. “I don’t... I’m not any good at poker.”

Heath maneuvered her into a chair, smiling. He pushed her gently into the seat, and Robin fell with a plop. “That’s just the kind of player we’re looking for, sweetie.”

It was then that I noticed that the Swedish girl, who was also looking quite intoxicated, was only wearing a bra. And that two of the guys had no shirt on.

“Honey,” I began.

But Robin was already agreeing to the game. She gave a shrug and set her purse down, winding the strap carefully around it. Heath pushed a shot of vodka at her. One of the three guys at the table, a tall one who was still wearing all of his clothes and was looking at my wife hungrily, began to deal the cards.

I leaned down to whisper in Robin’s ear. “Honey, this is -”

Heath interrupted me. “Hey Toby,” he said.

“Tony, man,” I said, annoyed.

“Sorry. Tony. Man, go get you and your wife something to drink. I’m so rude I forgot to ask you all.”

I tapped Robin on the shoulder again. “Honey, this is a game of strip poker,” I said.

“What?!” Robin exclaimed. She looked around the table. “Oh! Oh my gosh.” She waved her hand around. “I... oh gosh, I’m sorry, I can’t play strip poker,” she said.

Heath looked at her, crestfallen. “Oh come on, please,” he pleaded. “We already dealt you in. That wouldn’t be fair.”

“He’s right,” the guy dealing the cards said. “It would be fair.” He grinned at Robin and then lifted his eyes to meet mine. For a second, I saw something sinister flare in them. Then he dropped them back to the table. “Just one hand. You can’t lose more than your shoe.”

To my surprise, Robin hesitated only a second. Then she picked up the cards. “Well, I guess that’s true,” she said. She leaned back against me, taking my hand in hers and squeezing it. “Honey would you go get me a drink please?”

“There’s booze on the kitchen table,” Heath suggested. “And some mixers.”

I was incredibly aggravated with Robin. What the hell was going on here? This was so far from her typical personality I almost couldn’t believe it was going on. Robin didn’t play cards, didn’t like smoking, wasn’t a huge party person, certainly didn’t like anyone acting immature, and did not do things like strip – even her shoe – in front of a bunch of ogling men.

But I didn’t want to be a prick or look like some fucking jealous husband, so I said, very cheerfully: “All right. Anything in particular you want?”

Robin waved her hand vaguely at me, arranging her cards. Jesus, I thought. She had no idea what she was doing. “Just... whatever,” she said. “Something sort of sweet.”

I went into the kitchen in a huff that I tried to keep suppressed. No sense looking like a jackass.

I was all set for the kitchen to look like a frat party, but the age of the party-goers became evident in there. People might be smoking pot and playing strip poker, but there were no red plastic cups strewn all over the floor, no spills, no keg, and no wild party-goers slamming beer bong. Candles flickered in the window sills and a length of the counter had been given over to an array of costly alcohol and some mixers.

I settled down a bit. People were serving drinks in glassware here. No one was actually going to strip. This was just a bunch of middle-aged people, like myself, pretending to be bad-asses but also cleaning up all spills promptly from the floor.

A group of attractive women were leaning toward each other at a table, and when I paused in front of the drinks for a few moments, one of them looked up. “Need a glass?” she said, in an earthy voice.

“Uh... yeah, I need two, actually,” I said.

“I’m Kelly,” she said, her hand out as she approached me. I shook it. Shaking hands like that made me feel yet again better. Grown-ups shook hands and offered people glasses.

Kelly was clearly in her thirties, but she had a nice figure and an especially great ass. Her light brown hair was sun-streaked and her blue eyes twinkled youthfully. She took over the making of the drinks after retrieving a few glasses from the cupboard. "What'll you have?" she said. "I make a great martini."

I averted my eyes from her ample cleavage, pressing out from behind a low-cut shirt. For the first time in a long time, I felt a little tingle of excitement in my spine about another woman.

I looked out the window. Hanging lights illuminated patches of the porch and the lawn beyond it. The cool, back-lit blue of a pool or a hot tub shimmered in the distance. The figure of a girl moved languidly next to it.

"I'll... sure, I'll take a martini," I said.

Kelly smiled. If I hadn't known better, I would have taken her smile for slightly flirtatious.

What are you doing, my conscience growled wryly at me in the back of my head.

Fuck it, I thought. If Robin was going to play "just one hand" of strip poker (I burned again at the back of the neck with annoyance), I could flirt a little bit with an attractive woman.

"One martini coming up," Kelly said.

I leaned against the counter, completely missing her incorrect count of the drinks. "I'll just lean here and watch your magic," I said. It was sort of a hokey line, but who cared?

And Kelly smiled again.

I watched her make the martinis. Her expert shaking was impressive, and it gave her ample bosom a nice jiggle as she did it. She smoothly made two martinis, and then took one for herself. She brought the drink to her sensual lips, and took a sip. "So," she said. "What brings you to Camp Taghkana?"

I took a sip of the martini. Ice-cold, very dirty, and excellent, as promised, the drink almost reminded me of Kelly herself.

"This is good," I said.

She nodded.

"I'm here helping... well, my wife's family left her a cottage, and we just came up to get it ready to sell."

Kelly took a sip of her martini with a sexy twist of the glass. "You don't want to keep it?" she purred.

I looked around the kitchen again. It was at this particular point that a full realization of precisely how drunk I was began to wash over me. "Um..." I said.

A sense of foreboding was descending on me. Kind of like I had perhaps ended up in a horror movie of some kind. Kelly, as pretty as she was, was being a little too friendly. In fact, everything was starting to seem really weird.

"Uh," I said. "You know, it isn't what I expected, that's for sure."

Kelly gave me a smile over the rim of her martini glass. The edge of the drink flickered with the candlelight and I had a flashback of a scene from the thriller The Firm, where all the women were actually demons.

I pretty much slammed my martini. Kelly turned the conversation to talking about the pool, and the whole scene went back to feeling normal again, but I couldn't shake my misgivings about it.

I get like this when I'm drunk.

"Shit," I said suddenly. "I forgot to get a drink for my wife."

Kelly's smile didn't waver. In fact, she seemed even more flirtatious after this announcement. She popped an olive between her full lips, and kissed it the way a woman would give head, and then bit down on the little sword with her ultra-white teeth and pulled it off and into her mouth.

And then she did this thing, reminiscent of porn, where she sort of showed me that the olive was in her mouth the way porn-stars will sometimes show that they have a wad of cum they're about to swallow.

So, creeps or not, my cock twitched to life.

Kelly turned to the counter to make another martini, and I watched her breasts bounce and wondered what they looked like bare.

"Here you are," she said, handing me the drink. "I hope she enjoys it."

"Thanks," I mumbled. "I..."

"Come back if you need something else," she said, and I felt like she winked at me. Just barely, not enough to be sure of it. A little flutter of the eyelid. Just enough to make me wonder, as she sauntered away, her round bottom pretty in her jeans, what she meant by "something else."

"What are you doing?" I said to myself, under my breath, and hustled into the other room to give the martini to Robin.

The party in the living area had picked up quite a bit without my notice as I had been talking to Kelly.

And so had the strip poker.

I stopped mid-stride, taking in the scene.

The men had lost their shirts. One guy was a bit hairy and flabby, and the other was just an average guy in his mid-thirties. The guy who had been dealing cards was, unsurprisingly I suppose, covered in tattoos. And then there was Heath, who may have been in his early thirties but had the body of a college-aged athlete. Muscled biceps, the contours of a six-pack, and lean, tan shapeliness throughout his torso.

And the Swedish-looking girl had taken off her bra.

My eyes went automatically to her full breasts. Her tanned skin was splotted by a triangle of slightly less-tan skin, evidence that she only occasionally covered her breasts while she sunbathed. Her nipples were erect like erasers, about the same color and shape, and her aureole were tidy, flawless circles that almost looked airbrushed. She looked, in a word... nubile.

I moved to stand next to my wife. The group was serious about the hand they were playing, and no one looked at me. Not even Robin, who was frowning at her cards (with good reason, I saw).

I looked Robin over. She had lost both of her shoes and she was holding a pretty piss-poor hand with not much left to take off.

They went around the table in an elaborate betting scheme I didn't understand, and then they called the hand.

The dealer leaned over the table to inspect the cards.

"Well... I win." He looked up at everyone in at the table. "Off with your stuff."

"Robin," I said, trying to keep the mild panic out of my voice.

Robin looked up at me. Somehow she had managed to get a drink in front of her. "Oh there you are," she said.

She did not seem in the least perturbed that all she had left was a shirt and her shorts to take off.

"Well," the Swedish-looking girl said, standing up. She was not Swedish, if you were judging by her very Southern accent. "I guess the game's over..."

She hooked her fingers under her silky red panties, and shimmied her hips for the now-mesmerized group. The guys made comments under their breath and whistled as she did a little hip-shaking dance and pulled on the panties a bit, sliding them down a few inches, then teasing us all by moving them back up. She turned around, and slid her hand beneath the hem, tracing the shape of her ample but firm and well-turned ass, giving us a peek at the milkier-colored skin where her (very skimpy) bikini had kept her natural coloring alive.

Then she took both hands to the straps of the panties and flipped the material down, showing us her full, shapely ass. The panties were down to the soft curve where her bottom met her legs, and I heard all the men suck their breath in a little in anticipation of what they would see when she turned around.

She shook her hips a little more, and one of the guys groaned: “Don’t keep us in suspense, baby.”

Smiling, she turned around, and everyone’s eyes went directly to her fully waxed snatch, smooth as her round bottom. Nothing more than a pink slit between two small crests of silky flesh marked her gash.

One of the guys slapped the table. “I knew it!”

Another groaned. “How am I supposed to know if the carpet matches the drapes?” He looked at Sophie, who was smiling and shook her head before he even asked. “Sophie,” he said. “Please. This bet has been going all summer.”

Heath spoke up next. “Well, lads, that’s it for the game, but that doesn’t mean you’re getting away with anything.”

The dealer, who had won, relaxed with his hands on the back of his head and stared unabashedly at Sophie. “I’m cool if just the ladies pay up,” he said.

All eyes went to my wife.

“Robin,” I said quietly.

The situation, I realized, was not that great.

“Whoa, go around the table,” Heath said. “Fair is fair.”

The pudgy guy stood up immediately. “All right,” he said loudly. He pulled off his boxers. His cock, a stubby, half-hard purple turtle, lay nestled in a thick overgrowth of black hair. He shook his cock and Sophie gave an appreciative giggle. “It’s not huge, ladies, but it has a nice bend at the end to hit you in the right spot.”

My mouth fell open. I put my hand on Robin’s shoulder. She didn’t move, just shot me a quick look. I got the impression neither of us was quite sure how to get out of this.

The average-looking guy was next. He lifted a foot to the table and revealed that he was still wearing a sock. Playfully, he did a striptease with the sock, teasing like Sophie had, until he finally jerked off the white sheath and revealed his feet, which were not pretty.

Robin laughed. The pudgy guy shook his penis again. "You got nothing on me."

Heath stood up, then, and Sophie stopped watching the other two. I could see that her eyes were lighting up and she bit into her lip. I looked at Robin, straining my eyes to see her expression in my peripheral vision. I didn't want anyone to know that I really wanted to know how my wife was reacting to seeing Heath in his boxers.

He gave it a moment, a moment for the ladies to contemplate his ripped abs and his biceps, before he dropped his hands and jerked on his shorts.

Since he was only down to his shorts, I had been expecting to see him in his boxers. Evidently Robin had too, because she brought her hands immediately to her mouth and gasped.

Heath's cock sprung loose from his shorts. It was hard not to stare at it. Heath evidently took more time grooming himself than his friends did, and so his cock was nestled in a much trimmed bed of sandy-brown hair. It was a light-colored, circumcised monster, and it seemed to be twitching to life.

"I never wear undies," he said confidently. Then he looked at my wife, and winked.

My insides burned like I had swallowed a stiff drink. The martini wobbled in my hand. "Robin," I said again in a low voice.

Heath looked at Robin and extended his hand. "Your turn," he said.

Robin smiled. She stood up slowly. I turned to her openly then, staring at her.

"Okay," she said coolly, and she ran her finger along the collar of her shirt.

Then she clutched the cheap beaded necklace from the bar and swung it up and over her head. She slapped it onto the table with a clatter.

Heath looked up at the ceiling. "Disappointing," he groaned.

I breathed a sigh of relief.

Robin turned to me and smiled. Her eyes dropped to the martini in my hand. "That's not very sweet," she said.

She picked up her drink.

I saw behind her that the average-looking guy was moving in on Sophie, who was not after her clothes in any hurry. He extended his hands to put them on her shoulders and they moved closer and closer to each other.

“I’m really drunk,” I said. “I think we’d better go home.”

Robin laughed and took a big swig of her drink. “Ditto.”

*

We walked to the door, Robin thanking people on her way out. Heath asked her to stay, telling her there would be another round of strip poker and she might win. Or lose.

But we ended up outside in no time, and then Robin grasped my hand. “Oh my god,” she said. She tugged on me and we ran, giggling like teenagers, down the steps to the house and out to Lake Drive, looking back occasionally like we couldn’t believe where we had come from.

By the time we reached the road to her parents’ cottage, I was feeling a lot better and we were still laughing. We stopped jogging and caught our breath in front of the house.

“What was that?” I said, jokingly. “A frat party?”

Robin shook her head. “I didn’t know people actually played that game,” she said. She put her hand to her forehead. “Oh. Thank God I let that guy give me that dumb necklace.”

I gulped some air. “I can’t believe you agreed to play,” I said.

Robin made a face. “Neither can I actually.”

“Yeah, what has gotten into you?” I said. I was drunk, feeling some camaraderie with her. Asking the question I’d been wanting to ask all evening – what had inspired the sweaty, slithering sex in the bedroom, the risqué naked run into the outdoors – seemed natural now.

Robin laughed and wiped her hand under her nose. The night had gotten cool. “God, I don’t know,” she said.

We looked at each other, and laughed. Robin took my hand in hers and we walked home.

“Still,” I said, when we entered the house some ten minutes later, as though the conversation had never stopped. “It was kind of sexy.”

I was hearing the words coming out of my mouth, but not really sure where they had come from.

“What, the mosquitoes?” Robin joked. She leaned on the ragged couch to take off her shoes.

I said nothing.

“What?” she laughed. “What was sexy?”

She came closer to me. Her fingers were playing along the collar of her shirt, underneath the fabric. She had a mischievous glint in her eyes.

“You know those guys are probably the ones who drove by in that truck, when you were out there naked” I murmured. But my mind wasn’t really on what I was saying, or even that – I was too busy watching Robin’s fingers making lazy movements along the collar of her shirt.

Robin made a sound, a little bit like she didn’t care or already knew that. She stepped closer to me, and slid her hand down my chest. She drew her fingers playfully over my belt buckle without unbuckling it and leaned her mouth close to my neck. Her breath was hot against my skin when she whispered. “And how did that make you feel?”

But as she said this, her playful fingers dropped down and traced the shape of my thickening cock through my pants. She scraped her fingernails over the material, sending an electrifying tickle through to my balls. My cock jolted to life, and her mouth changed shape as she felt it.

Back up to my belt went her fingers, and she began to tug at the leather strap and pull it out.

“Personally,” she said. “I thought it was kind of hot.”

I was drunk, so I was slightly surprised as I sucked in my breath and said, in a low voice, “That’s so hot.”

Robin grinned and dropped down to her knees, pulling my pants and boxers with her. My cock sprung free and throbbed in the darkness just inches from her smiling mouth.

“Hmm,” she said, gripping my dick in her hand. “Is it?”

She brushed her lips over the crown of my cock as she said this, and my dick jolted again in her hand. She squeezed my shaft and began to stroke me languidly.

“Maybe you wanted me to play another hand?” she suggested. “And lose?”

She grinned when she felt my blood boiling beneath the surface of her hand. She made a lazy circle around the slit in my crown before worming it in to lick up a bead of precum. I sucked in my breath, trying not to lose it completely. I looked up at the ceiling to distract myself from the climax-inducing image of Robin looking up at me while she took my cock into her mouth.

Soon her hot, wet mouth was around my cock, and she was really going at it, swirling her tongue around, sucking at me like she wanted to suck the cum right through me like a straw. But taking my eyes off of her didn't work quite as I had expected: instead of delaying my orgasm it only allowed me to fill my mind with images. Images of Robin peeling away her clothes like Sophie had, as the group ogled her.

I could feel my climax building. I put my hand on Robin's head and looked down. She looked up at me, and continued to suck the length of my shaft hungrily.

"Robin," I said, barely able to breathe. "I'm going to come,"

But even as I said this, my wicked and fickle mind let an image through – of Robin just as she was in front of me now, only with another man's cock in her mouth. Sucking on Heath's cock, on her knees for another man.

It was too late, I could feel myself tipping over the edge.

Robin wasn't big into swallowing, so she pulled back and let my seed splash over her lips and her chin in long, sticky ropes while she stroked my shaft and pumped it all out.

Then she ran her tongue over her lips with a smile, and lapped up a little bit of it.

I was still shaking as she rose up, trailing her fingers along my thigh, making me shudder when she passed over by balls and cock. Up to my chest, playing with my hair.

"Come on," she said, walking toward the stairs. "You owe me."

I followed her, and stared as she threw a blanket down on the sheetless bed and then wriggled out of her own clothes. She climbed onto the bed on her knees, and slid her fingers into her pussy.

In a trance, still reeling from my own orgasm, I moved toward her and climbed onto the bed as well. She brought her finger to my mouth and I sucked off the sweet nectar from her cunt.

I grabbed her by the backs of her thighs and pushed her backward on the bed. Robin is a very flexible woman, she does a lot of yoga, and she sort of folded over with her ass resting on her heels and her legs spread open. I moved down her body and positioned myself to lap at her engorged pussy.

The way she was sitting spread her lips open wide, and her clit was throbbing in the center of her wet cunt with excitement. I decided to tease her a little, and so I kissed her on the inside of her thighs from the knee to the grove between her leg and her hip, and flicked my tongue at the freshly waxed outer lip. I did the same on her other leg, and I was treated to a gush of her juices, which I lapped up before prying her lips open and sinking my tongue into her buttery folds.

I swept along the silky inside of her pussy, making a circle around the pulsing center of her clit. She rocked her hips and exhaled, and her hand dropped to my head. I did it again, and felt my cock coming back to life as she squirmed beneath me.

I looked up at her face when I finally brought my tongue against the center of her clit and the fat bulb of nerves. I started slowly, flicking at them, then tickling them, and then finally pushing the blade of my tongue against her clit hard, making the button dart from side to side under my tongue.

Robin's mouth opened, and she stared down at my eyes, but then she looked up at the ceiling. Her abdomen quivered in waves as she got closer to coming.

When she did come, her pussy welled and dribbled her sweet juices onto my chin.

I stared at her, wondering what she was thinking about. I had another thought, that maybe she was imagining Heath's mouth on her pussy instead of mine. And my cock was hard again.

I pulled her legs out from under her, and pushed them up toward her head. She was still pulsing with her wild orgasm when I entered her, and she bucked against me hard. "Oh," she said. "Oh, I can't, it's too much!"

But she was grinding against me as hard as I was fucking her sopping wet cunt, until I filled her with my seed.

I collapsed on top of her, my ears ringing and my head spinning wildly. God, I was so drunk, and so high on the racy, flirting-with-the-illicit sex we were having. I rolled onto my back and stared up at the ceiling. My eyes were treating to me a drunken light show, green and pink stars and speckles were bursting all around on the blank ceiling.

Robin laughed, bringing me back to reality. “We still don’t have any sheets on this bed,” she said.

I thought about what she said, and about getting out of the bed to go find the sheets. I think I felt her rise up, and I assumed she would be back after getting them, and ask me to move.

But soon I was sleeping, drifting off in an exhausted, drunken sea of pleasantness.

3: SECOND THOUGHTS

When I woke up, I was alone, face-up, on the bed with no sheets, clinging to a crumpled blanket. The windows were open and it had gotten a little chilly.

Robin was asleep on top of a comforter she had evidently retrieved and folded under herself. I guessed that I had passed out and been unwakable and unmovable. A signature move of mine.

I kissed Robin on the shoulder and contemplated her for a moment. Her hair was spread out on the pillow she had retrieved from somewhere, and a pillowcase was partially on it, like she had tried and been too drunk to complete the task. It made me smile.

I stroked her arm and she squeezed her eyes and groaned.

I knew better than to try to wake her up.

I trudged downstairs to make some coffee.

I had a wicked headache, and my brain was rolling around in my head like molten lava. I moved stupidly from one box to another, with the vague idea in my head that I was looking for “coffee” items, but not really getting anywhere with it.

I also had an aftertaste of the evening before bubbling up inside of me. Now that the evening was in the past and blurred by my state of inebriation, I was starting to have bad feelings about it again.

“Bad.” Maybe bad is the wrong word. Feelings of being “unsettled” might be more appropriate.

I found a strange coffeemaker her parents had kept – one of those percolating campfire coffee makers you either see... well, camping, or in Europe. After more aimless box-searching, I found our coffee.

I finally figured out the coffee maker and set it to “brewing.”

I heard the soft thump of Robin’s feet on the hardwood upstairs, and then the familiar, almost silly way she walked around in the morning. When she came downstairs, she was wearing a white t-shirt made of a very thin fabric that barely reached her thighs, and her erect nipples made a slightly dark dent in the swell of her breasts where the shirt stretched tight. As she came down the stairs, I noticed that she wasn’t wearing any underwear, and I felt a kick in my boxers.

Her hair was tousled and her eyelids still seemed heavy. She yawned and pushed her hair back from her face as she descended the final two steps. “Hey,” she said casually.

I wondered for a moment if maybe Robin – who drank very little ordinarily – had been far more drunk than I thought she was the night before. Maybe she had completely forgotten the whole evening, and the subsequent romp upstairs.

But she came toward and slid her arms around my waist when I turned toward the sink. She kissed my back, right at the spine, sending shivers down to my buttocks. “That was a crazy night,” she said.

She released me and plopped into a chair by the small kitchen table. The seating for the table itself consisted of benches.

“Yeah,” I said. “That was really something.”

Again, Robin yawned, as though “last night” was just any other night in her life. She turned the back of her hand toward her open mouth. “You didn’t have a good time?” she said casually. Then she picked up a piece of leftover bread from our meal the night before and bit into it. “I thought you were having a very nice time with that lady in the kitchen.”

My heart went cold. Not because anything in particular had happened with Kelly, or that I felt like it would have. Or even so much that Robin knew about it, which was mysterious as hell.

Just... Robin’s reaction was so... blase. And it was so odd that this was the first thing she would bring up, after what happened when we got home. I felt like she was being almost combative.

“Um, I’m not the one who was playing strip poker,” I said, pointedly.

Robin bit into the bread and leaned out to catch some of the crumbs in her hand, looking a lot like she was eating a too-hot pizza. “Oh yeah,” she laughed.

I dropped a sponge I was using to swipe the counter off half-heartedly. ““Oh, yeah?”” I said.

I wasn’t really sure why my voice was coming across as so angry.

“Yeah,” Robin said, dropping the remaining scrap of bread she hadn’t eaten onto a plate.

She was a little annoyed now. She brushed her palms together, as if to say, “You gotta problem with that?”

“It’s not like I actually stripped,” she said to my silence.

I glared at her, looking for the right words to say.

“Anyway,” she said. “You seemed to like it.”

This woman, who was sitting in the kitchen with me, was acting so unlike my wife I could hardly believe it. I opened my mouth to say something, but I wasn’t sure what I wanted to say.

“What the hell, Robin?” I finally managed.

Robin’s eyes flashed black with irritation. ‘What the hell?’ she repeated. “What the hell, you.”

I shrugged. “Oh, I just didn’t know you were so in to stripping in front of a bunch of strangers.”

Robin’s temper, I could tell, was about to go extra-nuclear-holocaust. Her temples were bright pink, and her nostrils were doing this thing they do, where they kind of flare out and she reminds me a little of some kind of wild animal in a cartoon. Like a boar, but a cute one.

Then, just like that, it was gone.

“Look,” she said. “They told me accessories were in. I knew I wasn’t going to have to take anything off that was important before the game was over.”

I stood there, sponge in hand, mulling it over. It actually did seem like a reasonable explanation.

Still, I couldn’t get that wild, hungry look in Heath’s eyes out of my head.

Or the way Robin’s pussy had been so hot, so wet, like never before.

I dropped the sponge into the sink. “Robin,” I said, and my voice was very serious. “I don’t know about leaving you alone at this place anymore.”

I made her a coffee while she fumed in silence in response to that statement, which was about what I expected.

I set the coffee mug down in front of her.

She glared at me.

“Just what the hell is that supposed to mean?” she said finally.

Ah, yes. That was Robin’s feminist voice, which also came out for discussions about laundry and grocery shopping.

And then, like I pretty much expected, she started doing that thing where she answered for me.

“Ohhhh,” she said, waving her hand in the air. “I see. Before, when I was just going to be here at a boring campground with a bunch of septuagenarians playing croquet, you couldn’t possibly be bothered to help me out. But now that Blondie-sweet-tits plays strip poker at the neighbor's, you have all this concern for me."

Her tone was extremely sarcastic, in case you were wondering.

"No," I said, annoyed. "No... no. That's actually not it at all."

And it actually wasn't. Though I had enjoyed seeing "Blondie sweet-tits" tits, I was actually having reservations about my decision to go back into town for other reasons.

Reasons like Heath, I thought.

Heath, and the other non-septuagenarian men around here.

"Are you trying to tell me," Robin said, pulling her legs up onto the chair and catching them with her hand, so that I got a nice glimpse – but nothing more – of her trim bush and the sweet pussy between her legs that set my cock to throbbing lightly, "that you don't trust me here?"

Leave it to Robin to cut to the chase. It was one of the things I liked most about her (when it was directed at someone else) and one of the things I liked least (when directed at me).

I pondered my options for a moment. Robin was sipping her coffee, looking over the edge of the cup with an expression that said she had my number.

I sighed.

"Look... I'll be the first to admit that it's kind of an asshole thing to say," I said.

(Don't go thinking I'm actually a big enough person to say something like that because I actually believe it or have a really good sense of myself or anything like that. I said it to Robin once during an argument and she loved it, so sometimes when I want to get away with saying something that I sense will be poorly received by Robin, I say this first and it seems to smooth things over).

"...but this place is a little... I don't know. More of a party place than I thought. I feel like it's a college frat house."

Robin turned her cup with her fingers and smiled. "What's wrong with that?" she said, shrugging.

For a moment, I took her seriously. Then her eyes flipped up and she looked at me, and the grin from her mouth broke faint wrinkles on the outside of her eyes. She was fucking with me.

She set her coffee cup down. "Okay," she said. "I get it. Last night I was a little drunk. I won't play strip poker while you're out."

She was smiling.

But her smile seemed to me to be more a smirk, like she thought I was being an ass. I sighed audibly and tossed a cup into the sink. “Robin... it isn’t just the strip poker,” I said, highly irritated.

“No?” she said, and now she sounded annoyed. “What it is it, then?”

When I didn’t answer, she blinked at me, slow and flippantly. “You’re the one who didn’t have time to stay here, Tony. So you really have no business getting pissed off about it now.”

I folded my arms. “Oh, okay, so I can’t get irritated that my wife is playing strip poker one hour after she meets some hot guy at a restaurant?”

She rolled her eyes.

But then she set them on me. “So, what are you saying?” Her voice was icy cold. “You think I’d run off with the first piece of... you know... man-meat I saw? Is that it?”

I stifled a laugh – and I think she did, too – about “man-meat.”

“Maybe someone around here has a guilty conscience,” Robin said. She folded her own arms.

Ugh. How did marital discussions always de-rail like this? It hadn’t been my intention to say I didn’t trust her. Or even to say that I didn’t want to leave her here alone – I had to go back to work.

I wasn’t even sure what I had meant, but I certainly meant for it to come across more caring than this.

“Robin,” I sighed.

She held up her hand, snatched her coffee from the table, and walked outside. “You’re being absolutely ridiculous,” she seethed. “And I don’t enjoy being treated like we live in the 1950s and I need a chaperon.”

She walked past me.

“Well,” I said loudly. “Maybe if you didn’t play strip poker with strangers, I wouldn’t think you did!”

“Phbbbt!” she said, and I didn’t have to turn around to know she was giving me the bird.

This was not a good start to this whole adventure.

*

I went outside and sat down next to Robin, who had taken some coffee with her without my noticing. I set another cup next to her and she looked down at it and had to laugh.

“That came out all wrong,” I said.

Robin squinted at me.

“I... look... how much do remember of last night?”

Robin rubbed her eyes. “Really? All of it, Tony, what does that have to do with... how I’m right and you’re wrong?” She smiled underneath her hands.

It was an old joke by now, a good one we used for diffusing stupid arguments.

“I didn’t say any of that stuff because of... look, this just isn’t what I expected. And, there are a lot of guys around here, and I just don’t... I don’t feel as comfortable leaving you here. I thought there were going to be a lot of, I don’t know, upstanding eighty-year old gentlemen here.”

Robin snorted.

“I’m trying to say I’m sorry,” I said.

“But...” she prompted.

I shrugged. “But... whatever, it’s just how I feel.”

She looked at me. “So, what are you going to do? You can’t cancel work.”

“No.”

She slapped me playfully on the thigh. “I was fucking kidding anyway. This is what I’m so annoyed by!”

I gave her a confused look. As Robin was prone to do, she had gotten really worked up in a few seconds.

“You’re basically saying, you don’t trust me to stay here by myself,” Robin said. Her tone was accusatory.

I opened my mouth, but found no plausible denial within it.

“Ugh, Tony. That’s so irritating.”

She took a sip of her coffee.

“Well,” I said. “What was all that stuff last night?”

Robin rolled her eyes and waved her mug around as she spoke, sloshing hot coffee on my pants for emphasis. “It’s playacting,” she said. “You know. Like when I let you call me a dirty little whore, or say I want an ass full of cum.”

My cock was hard.

It had been a very long time since Robin had said any of those things, which, it was true, she wasn’t really into doing. We had tried anal one time when we were both very drunk and it really hadn't been very great because of that, and I didn't actually think my wife was a dirty little whore...

Or want her to be...

Did I?

I took a sip of coffee. "Yeah okay, I get it."

"Those guys are like half my age anyway," she said.

We looked into the forest.

"They probably have so much stamina," Robin couldn't help adding.

I laughed, appropriately, like she wanted me to.

She was right, after all: there wasn't much that could be done. I couldn't get time off work now, and she needed to get this place cleaned up for sale. She had taken time off her own job and that couldn't be undone. And I really was saying, essentially, that I didn't trust her not to go fucking her way around camp with some young guys.

My cock twitched again when I had this thought.

But I kept that bit to myself.

"I'm sorry," I said, scratching my head. "I really don't know what got into me."

Or you.

Robin nudged me and placed her head against my arm.

*

I ended up puttering around, helping Robin move some furniture out of the way for future painting, and having lunch before I left. By the time I got out the door, things seemed patched up between us, comfortably normal again, and I was "over" my streak of jealousy.

The cottage was about five and a half hours from the city, with no stops and a liberal interpretation of the "limit" part of "speed limit." It precluded any commuting on a daily basis, although there are people who apparently do that kind of thing. I drove slowly, and stopped frequently. It took me seven hours to get home.

By the time I drove home and opened the door to our empty town-home, I had oscillated between driving back and taking Robin home with me, and calling into work and saying I had a funeral to attend to, so I could spend the week there. I had pictured myself pulling over on the side of the road and turning around, and then spying on her from behind some trees in the empty lot across from the house.

I called her when I got home. The service was terrible and the conversation was spotted with patches of emptiness, and I spent most of my time asking if she was still there. Then came the inevitable attempts to call each other back (I'd said a thousand times that whoever made the call should call back if it was dropped, but Robin always forgot the rule, leading to endless calls to busy signals.)

I was extremely annoyed when Robin sent me a text.

[Robin]: this sucks. I have the internet people coming on Tuesday let's Skype after that

So annoying.

[Me]: great so youll have internet by next thursday

[Robin]: lololololololololololrotflmoalolol

Robin hated acronyms like "lol" and so when she actually thought something was funny she overused them clownishly.

[Me]: I love you

[Robin]: love you. Have a good night and don't do anything I wouldn't do

I held the screen to my lower lip, trying to think of a good comeback. I typed a few messages and then deleted them. By then, ten minutes had gone by, and I hesitated to write back.

I laughed at myself. What the hell was going on that a conversation with my wife of seven years was causing me as much trouble as if we had just started dating?

It made me uneasy, but it was also a little thrilling.

So I sat down on the couch.

TV all to myself.

Shitty snacks and a beer with no slightly-frowning look.

Great.

I was asleep by eight-thirty.

4: A LONG WEEK

Robin got internet on Tuesday as expected, and sent me a text asking for a Skype date.

Robin wasn't exactly the most up-to-date in the internet world, so I agreed to Skype at 7:30.

Then she sent me this text:

[Robin]: ill make sure you get quite a show

[Me]: um... a show, huh? What kind of show?

[Robin]: oh sorry babe that wasn't for you

Now a word here on Robin's kooky sense of humor. It's really kooky. So it was entirely possible that she was, in fact, just attempting to be funny all along, and that I didn't quite get it. In fact, that was the most likely thing that was happening.

But is that how I took it?

No of course not. Instead, I decided that Robin had sent me a text accidentally, one intended for someone else.

Someone like Heath.

What kind of show would she be making sure someone got?

And was there any way to interpret a text like that as anything but a promise for the show of the kind I was thinking of? Showing her tits, showing her ass, showing someone how she could get a whole huge cock deep in her throat?

I stared at the message so long I started to see double.

Then I shook my head. What the hell was wrong with me? I was spinning off the road, making private accusations about my wife at the slightest provocation.

Still... I didn't want to look like some fool here.

So I pondered it, and I elected to ignore the text. Which doesn't mean I stopped thinking about it.

Unsurprisingly, the first attempt at Skyping was a failure. Something was wrong with the internet, and Robin sent a slew of increasingly frustrated texts telling me she'd have the internet guy back to check it out.

We hadn't really spent that much time apart from each other in many, many years. Not like this, where there was very little chance of communication. I know it sounds cheesy, but I was missing the sound of her voice. I started regretting the whole stupid plan we had cooked up: I should have rented a car for her, and we should have tested the phone service before I left. In fact, I shouldn't have left her there at all; I should have just taken the time off work and stayed with my wife.

Wednesday came and went, and I was left with nothing but a handful of text messages from Robin, saying that the internet guy hadn't come, and she had to go use the office land line every time she wanted to make a call, and then this:

[Robin]: I think I have it worked out.

Mysterious. So unlike Robin, who ordinarily liked to detail everything. Especially if she was texting.

I typed: "How so?" but deleted it. I was doing my best not to be a freakish husband, who was mildly suspicious of his wife for not getting internet installed properly in the boonies within 24 hours.

"Great!" I typed instead, and felt like an ass.

[Robin]: I miss you. Still coming on Friday?

[Me]: Of course. I hope we talk by then tho

There was a very long delay between my text and Robin's reply. The minutes ticked by, and each of them sliced at my insides like a razor. Finally, after twenty minutes:

[Robin]: should be done tonight. If not, tom

[Robin]: for sure

I responded with another "great."

That was the last time I heard from Robin on Wednesday.

I spent the night trying to keep from pacing, from texting, from jumping in my car and going to see what she was up to. If the internet guy didn't come, why wouldn't she just tell me? Was the internet actually that slow, that it didn't work? Was Robin just making all of this up to keep from talking to me while she got up to something else? Something with the good-looking guys of Camp Taghkana?

I was being ridiculous.

I called my buddy Dan, who was really less of a buddy than a dude I knew from work. But he was a tennis player, and we both had a membership at a gym with a racquetball court. To my surprise, he was able to go, and I had my mind off Robin for at least an hour while I unleashed fury on the court.

Dan, to his credit, raised his eyebrows, asked me once if I was okay, and left it at that when I said I was fine, in that voice that is an indicator that you are most certainly not fine.

And then another restless night.

And then it was Thursday.

When I didn't hear from Robin by lunch, I texted her.

[Me]: Babe? What's up with the internet? I haven't heard from you.

Infuriatingly, my wife did not write me back for almost an hour, while I fretted that something had happened to her, or that she was too busy sucking on Heath's cock to write me back. Finally, my phone, which I left on my desk, face up, and which sucked all of my mindpower away from me the entire hour I waited for her call, buzzed and began a little clockwise spin on the table.

[Robin]: Oh hey. He's here right now so hopefully tonight...

My cheeks flushed with anger. I typed:

[Me]: Why couldn't you have sent a text or something?

The message was sent by a clumsy swipe of my thumb before I had time to retract it, and as I read over it I realized it seemed pretty possessive.

A little whiny.

[Me]: I was worried.

Robin's message seemed very delayed. Too delayed? Or was I being paranoid?

It came to me two minutes later.

[Robin]: phone wasnt charged. Misplaced the charger. Sorry

I stared at the text.

Okay.

On the one hand, that was a perfectly reasonable explanation for every thing that had happened. Everything that had happened and was bothering me, like a low-grade toothache. So her phone wasn't charged. What else could she have done?

On the other hand, it was a perfect excuse for not getting back to me, while she was up to more interesting things with better-looking, newer men.

My phone buzzed in my hand, interrupting my thoughts.

[Robin]: So is it a date? You have time to talk earlier?

Sure I did, I typed. And we planned a call for 3:30.

I took a break outside. Feeling a little perversely strange about this call to my wife, I sat in my car with the engine and the air on, logged in on Skype on my phone and waiting for Robin's call.

After an excruciating few minutes ticked by after 3:30, the screen lit up and the lilting song announcing a call blared into my earpiece. I adjusted the volume and answered the call. The screen froze for a moment, and I feared that I wasn't going to get to talk to Robin at all.

"Dammit," she said. "This is still so slow."

"Hello to you, too," I said.

Robin laughed lightheartedly. "Hi, sweetheart. Listen, can you kills the video? I think it's... ugh, this is so frustrating."

"I'm just happy to hear your voice," I said, and it sounded sappy. The honesty of it laid me bare.

“Hi,” Robin said, sexily.

“Oh, hi,” I said. It did feel good to hear her voice.

“Ugh. I’m sorry about all this phone business. It’s really making my life a pain,” Robin said.

“Well... I’m glad you have it taken care of now. But I wish we could get video going.”

There was a pause. “Yeah...” Robin said. “It’s probably something I’m doing. Maybe you can look at it when you get here?”

“Sure.”

There was an uncomfortable pause.

I hadn’t felt this way with Robin since we’d spent a short time apart, long-distance dating, when she attended a summer course in Europe while she was finishing up her degree. The same oddness filled the space between us, an inability to connect; I was in my car and she was in the cottage, I was in the city and she was in the boonies.

I cleared my throat.

“So, uh... how’s the cleaning going?”

“Oh, God,” Robin complained, jumping right into the conversation with sudden gusto. “The air conditioner is on the fritz, so it’s like a hundred and twenty degrees upstairs.”

A pause.

“You must be pretty sweaty,” I said.

Robin, instead of continuing her complaint, as she ordinarily would have, made a throaty noise. “So sweaty,” she said.

Suggestively.

Then she changed the subject. “Um... so I’m going to head into Stockbridge and get a new air conditioner and some paint and stuff,” she said.

I was caught off-guard. “Wait... I thought I was bringing all that,” I said, thinking of a lengthy text she had sent me earlier detailing what I needed to bring up that weekend. “I could also get you a new air conditioner.”

Robin sighed. “Yeah, I just can’t... I can’t do anything without the air-conditioning. I’m dying. It’s a long time to wait.”

“How are you getting there?” I said.

There was a pause. Not a long one, just one that was a little too long. Long enough that it set my suspicion hairs on edge. “Uh...” she began. “You know that guy that we met at the party?”

I put my lips together. Heath.

“Mmm,” I said, trying to sound as disinterested as possible. “Which one?”

“Heath? He’s the one who invited us, actually. Anyway, he um... came over and tried to fix it, and then when he couldn’t, he offered to take me into Stockbridge.”

I was the one to pause now. “Oh he did, did he? He tried to fix your air conditioner.”

A sliver of very perverse pleasure traveled through me.

I could almost hear Robin rolling her eyes through the earpiece.

“Anyway,” she said. “I’ve got to get this taken care of.”

“Uh-huh,” I said.

Another pause. “What is it?” Robin coaxed.

I shrugged and sighed. “Just... you know... I’m not sure I like this Heath guy taking my wife out on the town.”

“We’re going to a Home Hardware,” she said, her voice dry. “For an air conditioner,” she added, even more dryly.

She sounded annoyed.

I decided to humor my way back into her good graces, even if I was still a little wary of this whole thing. “I get really turned on by air conditioners,” I said.

I heard a slight pop as Robin did this thing she does with her tongue and her cheek when she can’t decide if she’s going to continue being mad or laugh at me.

Then she laughed.

And then:

I heard the strained metal creak of the porch door.

“Oh hey.” A male voice. “Damn girl, you look good. You ready to go?”

“Just Skyping with... Tony.”

Now, it’s totally up for debate whether I heard this or imagined it, or maybe I heard something else and turned it into something different in my mind, but it sounded to me like the male voice went: “Oh, shit,” in a whisper, tinged with a laugh.

Not wanting to look like an asshole, I decided against demanding to know who was there or ask any questions about what was going on. I was grateful that the video wasn't on, because my eyes felt like they turned red and I definitely felt a hot stain of anger spread over the back of my neck and onto my cheeks. "That your ride?" I managed to say, jovially.

"Uh, yeah," Robin said, in a tone I couldn't read very well.

She sounded distracted.

In my mind, I pictured her standing up, embracing Heath, pressing her body close to him. Maybe she was whispering to him, close to his ear, not to say anything else. Maybe his cock was getting hard and pressing up against her thigh, and she was telling him to just let her wrap this up...

"Okay," I said, and my chest burned at how lame I sounded and felt. "Well, you better get going."

I felt like there was another too-long pause. Maybe while Robin and Heath played with each other's tongues, smiling. And then Robin said, "Okay, sweetie. I'll call you later."

The strange squiggly sound of the call ending was the last word on the topic.

I stared at the screen, and then looked at my lap.

My cock was hard as a rock.

*

Men have always been attracted to Robin, and so I've witnessed my fair share of men flirting with her. And I always felt a little of two minds about it: I liked it, and I hated it. I'd always assumed that I liked it because it was flattering. Men thought my wife was attractive.

The end.

But now, alone in the apartment with Robin miles away, standing in that cottage with Heath the young good-looking frat-surfer-boy, I found myself thinking long, dark, deep thoughts about what they were doing.

I imagined Heath making a slow circle around Robin's pink nipples and then sinking his teeth into them unto she gasped. I pictured her hand sliding under his jeans, grasping his cock, her eyes wide with pleasure when she measured the size of it.

I could have dismissed these as intrusive thoughts and nothing more, except...

My cock was so hard it ached, and I could even feel a bead of precum boiling up at the top.

It wasn't as though I had never pictured this kind of thing. I imagined Robin with another man all the time. But that was a sort of pornographic play I put on for myself, and the man was never really anyone in particular.

This was different. I was thinking specifically of Heath. Specifically of the pain that I would feel if I could only catch Robin with her mouth around Heath's cock, if only I could see her face when she looked over at me. I pictured her eyes moving toward the doorway where I stood, the surprise that flickered in her eyes for a moment, and then, with Heath's meat sliding in and out of her wide-open mouth, the glint of a smile. I pictured Heath's cock leaving her mouth, the sticky spit from the back of her throat threaded to the end of his cock for a moment, just before it slopped down across her chest. I pictured her looking right at me, with her hand around Heath's cock, her mouth still open. She gave me a smile, and then she kept her eyes locked on mine as Heath fed his meaty snake back into her mouth, puffing out her cheeks, making her eyes water, then moving like an animal down her throat. Robin's eyes grew wet as she strained to breathe and take all of the cock inside of her, all the while looking at me -

I cut my thoughts off, and turned the air-conditioning right onto my face. I still had to get back to work, punch in a few more hours, get home. I could think about this there.

I don't want to give the impression that I thought I was totally alone in this fantasy at this point in the game. I knew I wasn't completely alone. I'd looked into it, in the same place everyone looks into everything: the internet. In a few searches – very tentative searches at first, my heart pounding the way it had when I'd stolen liquor from my parents' cabinet the first time, my finger fumbling the way they had when I'd unhooked Krista McDonald's bra for the first time so many years ago – I discovered that there was apparently an ecosystem of men out there. Men who thought the same thoughts I did, had the same fantasies I did.

But those men seemed so much more comfortable with themselves, and with their wives actually doing these filthy things.

I had ended every search almost running away from it: slamming the computer closed, turning it off the way I turned off porn I secretly liked but consciously found a little disgusting. My thoughts returned to the idea, again and again, and sometimes I went back to the forums and read them greedily and quickly so that I could close the window again and try to deny to myself that I wanted anything to do with it.

Not really.

But it was creeping up on me now, that desire.

And what kind of person did it make me, if I liked thinking about my wife fucking another guy?

I finished work in a listless daze, all of these thoughts crowding out the things I needed to concentrate on. I finished reports and sent them away, and then felt as if I had dived off a cliff, realizing suddenly that I didn't know what I had written.

When I got home, I resisted the urge to get on the internet and waste my time in forum after forum of hotwife conversations, hotwife pictures, hotwife porn. I waited for Robin to call me back, and the hours ticked away slowly.

I sent her a text around 7:30:

[Me]: You back yet? Want to Skype?

My phone stayed blank, and my suspicions deepened with every passing moment.

I couldn't resist any more, and I got onto a thread on Reddit where men post pictures of their wives with other men.

It was a dirty, quick, jerk-off, while I looked at a picture that caught my eye for reasons I couldn't really explain and wouldn't want to: the woman was blonde, not dark-haired, but she had blue eyes like Leigh's, and she was looking into the camera, or at her husband (supposedly her husband) while her tongue made lazy circles around the crown of an enormous black cock, endlessly, in a .gif.

Then I lay awake, staring at the ceiling. Until a fretful sleep took over, assisted by a few glasses of whiskey I had poured myself, my mind was a jumble of erotic thoughts and guilt, jealousy and desire. All of it boiling up in lewd images of Robin and Heath, Heath and Robin. Robin's tongue making slow, lazy circles around the crown of Heath's cock, while she looked at me.

*

When I woke up around seven, there were three messages from Robin, stamped 10:05, 10:13, and 10:20.

[Robin]: i cant believe this but my phone died again I left the wif or whatever on all afternoon

[Robin]: hey im back want to talk?

[Robin]: im sorry i missed you sweetie. I love you cant wait to see you tomorrow xoxoxoxoxo

My stomach growled. I had forgotten to eat dinner.
I typed, half-angry, half-relieved.

[Me]: call me now?

And then I made a big act out of being nonchalant while I made myself some coffee and washed down some Advil for the headache I had gotten. I examined the whiskey bottle, which revealed that I'd had more to drink than I thought.

My insides burned, burned thinking about Robin. She couldn't expect me to believe her fucking phone died again, could she?

I went back and forth wildly, thinking I was being a bit psychotic, and then thinking I was being taken for a ride if I let Robin talk me into this stupid story about her dead phone.

She was notoriously low-tech, Robin. She often plugged the charger into her phone and then failed to plug the charger into the wall, to be fair to her.

But twice? When she was out in the middle of nowhere?

With Heath?

My abdomen felt cold again.

Then the phone began to sing, the low-tech Skype call had begun.

I answered with video without thinking.

But a blurry, whitewashed image of Robin, pixelated to all hell, slowly materialized, and her voice came through a moment later. "Oh hey! I can see you!"

My heart warmed to my smiling wife, her sleepy eyes, her disheveled hair.

"I'm sorry I missed you last night," Robin said, her throat a little froggy. "I left the... you know, the wif thing on, and then I plugged it in, but I don't know, I think some of these outlets don't work..."

her voice trailed off. “Anyway. It’s good to see your face.”

Then she frowned, as I said, “Hey.”

“Hey,” she said. “Hey, aren’t you going to be late for work?”

I rubbed my eye with my hand. “A little, unless I hustle.”

“You’re still coming tonight, right?” she said.

And then she added, “Because I miss you.”

“Yeah,” I said, formulating a plan in my mind. It was a sort of shitty plan, the kind of crap plan a jealous husband would make, but I was already setting off down that path and I knew myself well: there was no turning back. “Yeah. I’ll... be there around eight, I guess?”

“Cool,” Robin said.

The choice of word was strange for her. It made her sound too young, like a character on a TV show.

“Okay,” I said. “I’d better... get to work. Everything okay? You got your air conditioner?”

Did I imagine it again, or was there another pause?

“Yeah,” Robin said. Then she yawned. “Everything okay with that.”

“Okay... well, I’ll call you when I’m on my way,” I said.

I was lying.

Robin blew me a kiss.

“I love you,” she said. “Drive safe.”

“Love you, too.”

5: EARLY

It took some finagling, and a lot of careless mistakes were probably made, and I had to promise to pick up a lot of shitty work for Dan in the future, but I managed to leave work earlier than I had planned.

I drove way too fast on the highway to try and get to Camp Taghkana hours before Robin was expecting me. My plan worked: I got there at four in the afternoon.

I left the car at the main road, not wanting to alert Robin to my presence. All the way there, I found myself thinking about all the ways I could catch her, thinking about what it might look like if I found her.

Catch her at what? Find her with whom? Heath of course, and even though I knew it was a little ridiculous to even be thinking these things, still, there I was. Trying to catch my wife in an affair I'd probably entirely made up.

I had no idea what I was going to tell her about why I'd left the car up the road, but I didn't really care.

I crept up to the house and around the back. It was silent, and all the windows were open, so I was already feeling my hopes dashed before I peered into the windows.

The living room furniture had all been pushed into the kitchen, and the drapes had been taken off the windows. Blue painters' tape ran along the ceiling and floor boards, and the wall gleamed white. Rollers and paint trays were strewn across the tarp-covered floor.

My heart feel a little, even as I breathed a sigh of relief.

I stepped into the kitchen. "Robin?" I said.

There was no answer, but my paranoid desires made me go upstairs to check anyway.

I stopped at the foot of the stairs and looked around the living room.

Obviously, Robin had been working hard at doing exactly what she said she was doing. The room smelled of having been freshly painted – in fact, it was still wet.

But where was Robin?

I was irritated as I headed back to the car and climbed in, turned it on and parked it in front of the house. I had no reason to be angry at Robin, but I was having a negative feeling toward her nonetheless. That she wasn't there. Almost like I was upset that she wasn't there doing something illicit.

I shook my head at myself and turned off the car.

It made sense that Robin would take a break. It made no sense to be upset that I hadn't caught her fucking another man.

I decided to walk up to the bar, along the path that led along the creek and the past the swimming hole, to see if I ran into her. There didn't seem to be much else she could be doing, especially without a car.

The walk turned out to be longer than I remembered, and it was sweltering. Bugs started biting me and I was in an extremely foul mood by the time I reached the swimming hole, but it didn't stop me from crawling through a bunch of bushes to sneak up on the place and try to catch Robin in the act.

Because that's what I was doing, wasn't it?

My chest was full of ice, and my stomach twisted in pain, but I still sort of wanted to find her there. Even as I neared a vantage point behind the bushes where I could see the people swimming, and I recognized that the female voice in the pond wasn't hers, I still kept going, holding out on a weird combination of lust and dread.

There was a couple in the pond, locked together and making out. But the man had dark hair and the woman was blonde. She was wrapped around his torso and their lips were connected. I watched for a moment, unsure of why a feeling of being let down was spilling over me.

I moved on (after watching for a bit) and found my way to the bar after making a wrong turn and ending up in a clearing on the other side of the trees. There were only a handful of people in the restaurant, sipping beer and speaking in lazy, muted afternoon voices.

Frustrated, I trotted down the steps with my hands in my pockets and squinted into the sun. I took the road back to the cottage, even though it was a longer walk. I didn't need any more bugs biting me, and I suppose I thought I might run into her.

About halfway to the cottage I decided to call Robin and see where she was, which is what any normal person would have done from the beginning. I got a light signal and gave it a try. She could at least tell me where she was, even if the conversation was garbled.

There was no answer, and I got nothing but the sound of her standard answering service, fading in and out as I continued walking down the road. It only made me burn even more inside. My imagination went wild the entire walk home, piling up scene after scene of Robin and Heath, their bodies wet with sweat, his hips grinding against hers, her pussy getting filled up with his cum.

The house was still unoccupied when I got back. I crept into it anyway, listening for the sound of two lovers dashing across the floor to hide somewhere or climb out a window. For whispers, or footsteps, or even the sound of panting and slapping skin. I could feel my erection growing as I moved slowly to the foot of the stairs, my ears craving to hear something wet and sticky.

But no one was there.

Dissatisfied with my own dissatisfaction, I opened the fridge to look for a beer.

I stared at the contents. Bottles of different kinds of craft beers crowded out a dish with slices of tomato and some condiment containers. Tons of beer.

Not really Robin's thing.

I took one and started pulling drawers open in search of a bottle-opener. Now my heart was really racing, my anger burning right through the center of me. What, was she having her buddy Heath over for beers all the time? Maybe she kept them around just in case he dropped by. Maybe they lounged around in the bed, drinking beer and giggling like new lovers.

I set the beer down (I couldn't find a bottle opener) and dashed up the stairs.

I surveyed the room. The bed on one side of the cabin was made up, but unwrinkled and untouched. The sheets and blankets on the other bed had been kicked off the foot of it and remained in a pile at the end of the bed. Some of Robin's clothes were crumpled on the floor, as though she had stepped out of her shorts and panties at the same time. There was a hole in the center of each leg, like they had slid down her thighs, onto the floor, and she had stepped out of them.

I couldn't actually believe myself, but I snatched up her panties and smelled them. The scent of her pussy, tangy and sweet, filled my nostrils.

It wasn't really evidence of anything, one way or the other.

I looked at the bed. The sheets had been stretched and moved around on, but that also didn't say much, because Robin was a restless sleeper sometimes.

Still... it was just as easy to imagine that the sheets had been pulled and contorted as two bodies writhed on top of them...

I was just in the act of crawling onto the bed to bend over and smell the sheets, still searching for evidence of something I seemed to want to find and not want to find, when I heard the screen door slam.

"Tony?" Robin called.

I stood up, trying to control my blood pressure, thinking of what I was going to say. Half of me was already going down the path of being as angry as if I had discovered something real... and the other half was pleading with myself to stay calm because I hadn't actually discovered anything at all.

And then the screen door slammed again.

My blood went cold. I stopped in my tracks, listening. The air around me seemed suddenly stuffy, hot.

A male voice said something, low and deliberately indistinguishable.

Robin said something, and I could only make out, "...don't know... car."

More mumbling.

"Tony? You here?"

Then more talking. I leaned toward the stairs to better hear, but I didn't dare move or the floor would creak. What would they do, if they decided I wasn't here? Was that Heath, with her? And what were they talking about?

"Okay," Robin said. "Well..."

And a strange silence.

More talking, then the door opened, and then it hissed closed before slamming.

I moved to the top of the stairs.

Robin shrieked when she saw me, and her hand flew up to her heart. "Jesus! Fuck, Tony. You scared the shit out of me. Didn't you hear me calling you?"

She went from wildly frightened at the beginning of her proclamation, to angry by the end. She narrowed her eyes.

"I was taking a little catnap," I lied. "The door woke me up."

Robin relaxed. “God,” she said. “Seriously, you freaked me out.” She looked around. “Sorry... I thought you were coming later, I came back to clean things up before you got here.”

I stepped down the stairs, descending slowly, watching Robin’s every move.

“Who was that?” I said.

Robin pushed her hair up to cool her neck off. “Huh?”

I studied her face. Was she lying to me?

“Whoever just left. Who was that?”

“Oh...” she said, dropping her hair and waving absent-mindedly at the door. “This guy Chris. I had a bunch of stuff to bring back and he helped me carry it.”

She blew on her bangs. “It’s hot as hell in here. You want a beer?”

She turned toward the kitchen area, and that’s when I realized, watching her legs wobble a little, that she was drunk.

Really, quite drunk. She opened the fridge and leaned on the door, making it tip on the uneven floor and jostling all the beers. “Whoo,” she declared, and the uneven volume of her voice confirmed my suspicion.

She kicked the door closed and turned to the counter.

I scrutinized what she was wearing: her black bikini top, and a pair of short cutoffs over what appeared to be her suit bottoms. A dark stain of water revealed the outline of the suit. Her skin glowed with the sienna color of a fresh tan that bordered on a sunburn.

She slipped a bottle opener out of her pocket and popped the tops off the beers. Then she started, when she noticed the beer I had left on the counter. She looked at the two in her right hand, and back at the beer.

“Are you drunk?” I said.

She turned around to face me. Her cheeks were flushed and she had a wildly attractive glow. “I think I am, actually,” she said. She extended her hand and I took the beer from her.

“Where were you?” I asked.

She had the beer to her mouth and was taking a long swig of it. She released the beer bottle almost breathlessly. She rubbed her hand over her forehead. “At Heath’s place. Fuck, it’s so hot,” she complained again.

I was silent, watching her, my mind picking over her behavior. She didn’t seem particularly guilty of anything, and her manners didn’t speak to some kind of guilty conscience.

Still, if I wanted to think something was going on, there was plenty of circumstantial evidence.

“The electricity's off and on,” Robin said, tipping the beer into her mouth at the end of her sentence. “So I hope you’re ready for a hot time.”

And just like that, everything fell into place. The kicked-off sheets, the stifling air, the fact that she had gone to a pool instead of baking here, the lukewarm temperature of the beer in my hand. Robin’s unanswered phone. All of it adding up to a big fat nothing, and me being a conspiratorial jerk.

And yet I could still feel something inside of me that... yes, wanted for there to be something more to the story.

“So you went to Heath’s, huh?” I said.

Robin wiped her forehead again. “They have a little pool,” she said.

“I thought there was a pool at the clubhouse.”

Robin looked at me, and her heckles started to rise for the first time.

“Yeah. But everyone ‘cool’ goes to Heath’s house.”

She was making fun of me.

“It seems like you had a lot of drinks,” I said.

Robin looked into her beer. “I think I did. Too many. It was just so nice floating around in the pool. I think the sun got me, too.” She looked up at me. “More drunk, I mean.”

There was a silence. I tried to subdue the irritation inside of me, but it was boiling in my blood. Anxiety, irritation, lust, disappointment...

“Hey,” Robin said, looking up and behind her at a tasteless rooster clock on the wall. “Why are you here so early? What time did you get here?”

Her question sounded perfectly neutral. Her voice was perfectly normal. She sounded happy to see me, not like a woman who’s had other plans to fuck some guy upstairs just hours before her husband came in from the city.

What was I thinking, anyway?

I stepped close to her. “I just wanted to see you. I left early, did some extra work yesterday and the day before to make up for it.”

“Uh-huh,” she said coyly. She put her hand on my shirt and ran her fingers along the collar, making the material scrape my skin lightly and sending a shudder down my spine. “You’re sure you’re not checking up on me? Trying to surprise me? Trying to see if I’m up to something naughty?”

She moved her leg against mine, her upper thigh against the inside of my thigh as she said this. So when she uttered her final sentence, when that curvy, sexy word “naughty” came out of her mouth, and my cock jerked against her leg, she felt it clear as day.

I saw her eyes light up.

“Hmm,” she said. She moved against me and leaned back a little when I caught her around the waist. She played with the straps of her bikini, pulling on the fabric until I could see into the gap between it and her skin, her pink nipples hard and inviting. The bikini had left a faint white triangle over her skin.

Awfully faint, given how tanned she was.

“What...” I cleared my throat, suddenly feeling it clench with excitement. “What naughty thing would you get up to, little girl?”

I pulled on the string of her bikini. “Were you out sunbathing naked again?”

Robin grinned. “Hmm... not naked.”

I must have raised my eyebrows with a little bit more than feigned alarm, equal to what I felt. “Oh, really?”

I wasn’t sure if she was joking now or not. Especially after her naked walk out to the driveway, and her strange behavior of late. I couldn’t exactly tell if it was part of the game as she helped the string of her bikini along, letting the material fall down, exposing her skin.

“You know how I hate tan lines,” she purred. “Anyway, all the other girls were doing it.”

There was no way to lie that this idea excited me, especially because the first “other girl” I thought of was the buxom Sophie, and when I thought of her, I thought of her naked.

But while my cock was hard, my face must have betrayed something worrisome, because Robin smiled and kissed me on the lips. “You know I’m just joking,” she said. Then she leaned back. “Well, about me, anyway. But....”

She let her unfinished sentence linger in the air seductively as she hung onto my neck and swayed back away from me, as though we were dancing.

“But...?” I said. The bikini was sliding off her breasts and I was having a hard time concentrating on the conversation.

Robin smiled again, mysteriously, and another prickle of arousal spiked through my balls.

“You wouldn’t believe what people are up to over there, actually,” she said. “Like, not everyone. But a lot of people.”

“Like what?” I tugged on her bikini strings to completely peel away the suit top, and then I leaned down, pushing her chest toward me with my hand on her back, so that I could flick my tongue at her nipple.

She laughed a little and squirmed in my arms. I had let my beard grow a few days’ worth of stubble, partly out of laziness but, I knew, somewhere in the back of my mind it was partly to match Heath’s manly jaw stubble.

Whatever the reason, Robin seemed to enjoy it.

“Like what?” I repeated, moving my mouth to her other nipple. Because as interested as I was in the silky halos of her aureole, I wanted to know what everyone got up to at Heath’s house.

“Well, lots of nudists over there, for one,” Robin said. She giggled again and sucked in her breath as I pushed her backward toward the sturdy butcher-block style table at one of the counter. I unbuttoned her shorts and gave them a tug before lifting her up to sit on it. Then I plunged my hand into her swimsuit bottoms, and into the folds of her pussy. I found her soaked and slick.

My eyes went wide and something a little like erotic terror burst inside my chest. I moved my mouth in a fish-like move. My hands felt around, confirming what I had initially discovered: her cunt was bare and smooth.

Robin smiled wryly. “You like it?” she said casually.

There was no sense trying to tell her how I felt about it. That it was like an ice pick through my heart, cold and suspicious. That it was hot as hell, that my fingers were unable to get enough of the feel of her while I imagined how she would look when I finally got her spread open on the bed or the floor and got a chance to see what I could feel in my hand. No sense trying to tell her I loved and hated it.

“What else,” I said. I sounded distracted, because I was. My mind was spinning with the feel of Robin’s hot cunt, and her breathy voice vibrating against my neck, and the images she was conjuring, of nude ladies strewn about the pool. And the images I was making, of her bare cunt.

“I guess the reason...” Robin started to say, and I was as lost as she was about what she wanted to say, or why. The only thing I could think of now was her bare pussy, and all that it implied: had she done it for someone else?

She lost her train of thought as my finger slid over her clit. She gasped and I looked at her face. Her went glassy with pleasure.

“Keep talking,” I urged her, moving over her hard clit again, even though I didn’t even know what we were talking about anymore. She gasped.

“I guess... I guess the reason there are so many... people here... is that it’s kind of like, a... like a swinger’s club or something.”

I dragged my finger up the ride of her clit and felt her shudder against my hand. With my free hand I pulled on the strings of her bikini bottoms. First the right, then sliding my hand over the plumped-up curve of her ass, the left.

I pushed her legs open and stared at her newly-waxed pussy, at the exposed skin I had never seen before. She looked raw, and vulgar, and beautiful; the contents of her bare petals spilling out, glistening with her excitement.

And then the meaning of what she had just said (swingers) hit me, and my balls throbbed, along with my cock.

“Is that so,” I said. I pinched her clit between my fingers. “And how did you find this out?”

Robin mewled. Her head tipped forward and she wiggled her hips to get my fingers to drive harder against her clit. She rocked back and forth a few times. “It, um... I ssss.... I saw.... I saw...” her voice trailed off and she started to rub herself against my hand.

I pulled my hand away from her clit and slowly up her stomach, between the two of us. Her face twisted with a sudden agony, and she looked at me, pleading for me to go back to what I had been doing.

I brought my nectar-coated fingers to her mouth, and traced them along her lower lip. Robin opened her mouth and sucked my fingertips into her hot, wet hole. As she closed her mouth around my fingers, she sent a wave of heat through me.

“What did you see?” I breathed. “Tell me and I’ll let you come.”

I pulled on her lower lip, watching her open mouth, thinking about having it closed around my cock.

...around Heath's cock...

"I walked in on someone... or maybe... I mean, they weren't even hiding. But there were two guys and a woman, and she's married, and they were.... you know."

I shook my head slightly, and moved my hand down to her sopping cunt. I brushed over it with the lightest touch I could manage, even though I was aching to shove my fingers into her and feel the heat of her body closing around my hand. "I don't know. Tell me," I said.

"She was, um... she had one of them in her mouth. And the other guy was behind her. Just going at it. Right in the living room."

I rewarded her by sliding my finger into her pussy and pinching her clit from the inside out and the outside in. Robin mewled again and I curled my fingers to stroke her where I thought she liked it best. I seemed to get it right; I felt a shudder travel through her limbs each time I moved my finger.

"And did you watch them?" I said. I was asking but I was off in another world, expressing my fantasies, making Robin come on a kitchen table, thinking of how I was going to come the moment I put my cock inside of her.

I didn't expect her to say:

"I did."

She paused, and leaned forward, grinding up against me.

I tugged on my pants and my boxers hurriedly and freed my cock. I found her sopping hole, not able to take any more, and I pushed myself inside of her.

Robin put her mouth next to my ear. "I looked away at first, and then I stopped and watched the whole thing. I watched them until they came in her mouth and her pussy at the same time. Her husband was watching -"

Here, my cock twitched violently inside of her, and I lost control of myself. I grabbed her hips and slammed deep inside of her.

"-and after she gave those guys a... after she... oh... oh..."

"What?" I said, gritting my teeth.

"After that she gave him... she gave her husband...oh... oh God, I'm going to come.... oh fuck!"

I didn't have to hear what she was going to say to know that whoever she had been watching had given her husband a blowjob. And my own dirty mind quickly superimposed my own wife in the story – my own wife sucking on cock and getting fucked, being spit-roasted, and then crawling on her hands and knees to suck the come out of my cock...

So as soon as Robin was shuddering violently in my hands and her pussy was clenching against my cock, I was fucking a load of cum into her.

“Wow,” I said, after a time had gone by. I had no idea how long we were there on the table, panting, clinging to each other.

Robin leaned back and scooted away from me, and my cock flopped out of her. She pushed back against me and stood up, moving her hands over my back. “That was very... um...”

“Athletic?” I offered.

She laughed, and looked back at the table as she wriggled away and headed toward the bathroom. “I was going to say, ‘unhygienic,’” she said.

“Not as sexy,” I pointed out. Robin entered the bathroom and turned on the shower.

“So... that’s a, um, very sexy haircut you got there.”

Robin poked her head out from behind the shower curtain. “Huh?”

I motioned to my crotch and whistled.

“Oh, that,” she said, winking, and then she disappeared behind the curtain again without saying anything.

Okay...

“When did you do that?” I said, casually walking into the bathroom.

“Don’t you like it?” Robin said, instead of answering the question.

“You seemed to like it.”

I looked at myself in the mirror. I wasn’t doing too bad for my age. I am nine and a half years older than Robin, something that never used to make much of a difference, but which was starting to bother me now. I rubbed the stubble of my beard, speckled with just a trace of gray.

It wasn’t the first time I had wondered if Robin wasn’t perhaps becoming unsatisfied with me. With the staleness of marriage, with the fact that I wasn’t young and athletic anymore, not the way some guy like Heath was.

And then things like this: waxing her pussy.

“Why’d you do it?” I said, plucking my toothbrush out of the container absentmindedly.

Robin slid the curtain open again and eyed me suspiciously.

“I joined a cabaret,” she said, her voice deadly serious.

She took a towel off a hangar and flipped her head over to wrap her hair up. "This place is crazy," she said. "They used to not even sell firewood here, you had to go to this other Camp.... and now they have a spa in one of the old cottages."

She flipped her head up, the towel magically wound around her hair in one of those lady-turbans that all women seem to instinctively know how to do. "But then Sophie showed up while I was checking it out, and she was like, get a wax, they're on sale -"

"Sophie," I murmured. "Little Miss Strip Poker?"

Robin smiled. "Well, she would know about good deals on waxing, right? So I thought, whatever, I've never done it. So I did it."

I looked down at her bare pussy.

"Did it hurt?" I said.

Robin made a face. "Oh God, it was the worst," she said. She took a step toward me, and playfully tapped her fingers on my cock, which was twitching to life again. "But I put some ice on it afterward, and it was fine."

I shuddered.

Robin traipsed out to the kitchen. "Take a shower," she said. "It's cold as hell but it feels great."

"So," Robin drawled, pulling a pair of cutoffs over her bikini while I admired the view. "What should we do with the rest of the evening?" She leaned in and kissed me on the shoulder, and her hair skated over my arm, sending a thrill through me that threatened to have me riled up again. I fumbled with my boxers.

I looked up at her. Robin was biting her lower lip fetchingly, her eyes a little lit up.

Obviously, she had something on her mind. And I thought I knew what it was.

I took her hand in mine and brought it to my lips. "Hmm..." I said. "What do you want to do?"

Robin gave one of her funny shrug-but-not shrugs. "Well... I don't know. Maybe we could just go... check things out. Over there. You know, just to see what's going on."

I stood up and moved close to her to get my shorts out of a bag on the table. "Just to see what's going on," I said.

“Nothing more,” Robin said. “But come on, you aren’t just the tiniest bit curious?” She played with my feet with her pretty toes. “Or maybe you see that kind of thing all the time, and so you’re like, meht, no big deal.”

She smiled as she looked up at me.

Inside, I felt like I was getting torn apart again.

Sure, I wanted to go see these swinging, orgy-loving people. In fact, under different circumstances, I could easily see myself being the one who was talking Robin into going.

So it wasn’t that I didn’t want to satisfy my voyeuristic curiosity. Or even my carnal one, to be sure.

It was Robin who was bothering me. Robin’s enthusiasm for this adventure. Robin’s willingness to go see what was going on, her mild fascination with it, her changed behavior. The dark sensation that she was roping me into something, that maybe she’d already seen all of this for herself and she had a more nefarious purpose to going over there right now.

Robin was looking at me sweetly.

On the other hand, what if all this was was... what it was? What if my wife just had a genuine curiosity in seeing something new and exciting? Something that obviously turned me on. Something that I couldn’t deny to myself, I sort of wanted to see her not just watch, but participate in.

When I had that last thought, about Robin participating, it clanged inside of me, a cold, metallic thud. Thinking about it both hurt me and aroused me.

Robin’s fingers were back on my chest, traveling down, down to my cock, where my true desires were obvious. She grinned.

“So...?”

“Yeah,” I said. “Okay. Let’s go. Just...” my voice trailed off.

“What is it?” She searched my eyes. “I mean, you’re not worried we’re going to actually, like... get in on it, are you?”

“Well,” I said. “Maybe.”

Robin threw her head back and let out a laugh. “Whoa,” she said. “No. You definitely don’t have to worry about that.”

My mood shifted suddenly. “Why not?”

“Are you serious?” she said.

“Just curious. You wouldn’t ever... get in on it? Not even a little?”

Robin’s mouth fell open. “Oh, come on,” she said. “No way.”

“Would you play strip poker again?” I said.

She paused. "That's hardly 'getting in on it.'"

"But you would do it?"

I could feel excitement building up inside of me, my blood racing, my heart slamming into my chest. I wanted her to say yes as much as I'd love it if she would say no.

And then she practically made me explode:

"Well," she breathed, pushing her hair to one side. "Would you want me to?"

I said nothing, and Robin gripped my hard cock. "Mmhmm," she said. "So... what else would you want me to do?" She let go of my cock. "This is a serious conversation," she said, changing her tone suddenly. "We need rules."

I knew that what I should have been feeling was total excitement and gratitude for having a wife who was excited about a sexual adventure and so pragmatic about it.

But I was too stunned to say anything.

"How about," Robin said, "We go, and we see what's up, and we agree that the only things we can do are things that involve.... no touching? So, strip poker is okay, or... I dunno. Flirting. But..."

She cut herself off and brought her hand to her mouth, tapping her lips. Thinking.

"This sounds good," I said, my voice practically croaking.

"The only thing is, can you really flirt without touching someone?" she pondered.

She was looking up at the ceiling as though she was asking a very serious rhetorical, philosophical question.

Then she dropped her eyes to meet mine. "That could just be part of the challenge, couldn't it?"

She gripped my cock again.

"I think you like the idea," she said.

I did like the idea. I liked the idea very much, and it was traveling through my groin and my lower abdomen like molten lava. But the cerebral part of my mind was wondering who the hell this woman was.

"Come on," Robin said, biting my lower lip. She began to stroke my cock. "It'll be fun. And then, afterward..." she slid down my chest and let my cock brush against her lower lip as she spoke. "Afterward, we'll come back home, and see if the evening did anything... you know... exciting to us.”

She licked the ridge of flesh between my crown and my shaft. Her hand began to pump my cock, as she slid the crown over the blade of her tongue. I looked down at her, helpless to stop her or guide her or do anything but wonder what the hell was going on.

Vaguely of course.

Because most of my mind was occupied by the orgasm that was boiling inside of me.

Robin jerked me off until I came, and she directed my cock to her open mouth, taking my seed in the back of her throat and on her lips.

She wiped her mouth after I finished coming, and stood up. “What do you say?”

What could I say?

6: TRY ME

“Look who’s here,” Heath called out, lifting a beer in our direction as we climbed up the porch. Mr. and Mrs. Smith. “Can I make you two fine people a drink?”

Robin slid her hand into mine and squeezed it. “I’d love a gin and tonic,” she said.

“Beer,” I said.

Heath looked at me. “Any particular... kind...?”

“Beer-beer.”

“One beer-beer coming up.” He gave Robin a slow up-and-down before heading to the door. He was stopped by a friend, and changed direction after a quick, low-voiced chat. He followed his friend around the wrap-around porch.

“I don’t know if we’re getting that drink any time soon,” I observed.

Robin put her head on my shoulder. “Oh well. Let’s go take a look around, shall we?”

“Show me the pool,” I said.

We cut through the house – a considerably nicer, refinished version of a typical cottage. Another game of strip poker was indeed going on at the same table, and the stunning Sophie (who was either truly lousy at cards or a shark) seemed to be losing more than her shirt again. Through the kitchen, to an expansive back porch that overlooked a steep grade and then a small swimming pool at the end of the lawn. Beyond the pool, a weedy end to the property disappeared down another slope.

“And lo and behold,” Robin said.

A woman was slowly spinning in circles in the center of the pool, reclined on a floating chair. Totally naked. A couple of guys, with an attractive woman between them, were sitting on the edge of the pool, kicking their feet. They were lazily watching the floating pool girl and drinking. I took instant note of the fact that they seemed very close as a threesome; one of the guys’ hands was on the woman’s knee, and she was leaning against the other in a very familiar way.

I had flashbacks of college, drunken parties where almost anything went on any given evening. Nights when you would spend thirty minutes talking to one girl only to make out in a closet with a completely different one. But this – this was different, because everyone was well past college-aged. And everyone seemed to be doing something that had an illicit feel to it because of that.

After all, there was no way none of these people were married. And hadn't Robin even said that one of the group she'd observed was?

Robin seemed to read my mind, and leaned over to whisper in my ear. "That's her," she said, nodding toward the pool.

"Who?" I asked.

"The one at the edge of the pool. That's the one I saw. And those are the two guys."

The scene, which had only seemed mildly illicit up until then, suddenly had me wildly turned on. I wondered if Robin would be into doing something so casually: blowing two guys and then sitting around poolside with them as though they were just good friends from college.

I shifted uncomfortably, an erection threatening to show itself in public. "Uh..." I said. "You know, Heath is never going to get those drinks for us. I'll... go do that."

Robin smiled, leaning casually on the balcony. "And what should I do, while I wait for you?"

The possibilities.

But Robin didn't wait for me to answer.

"Don't worry," she said. "I'll think of something."

And then she gave me a complicit smile, but it unnerved me as much as it made my erection worse.

I had a sinking feeling in the pit of my stomach that I should have done something at that moment. A feeling that Robin standing there on the deck was a last chance of some kind.

But I didn't do anything, and Robin winked, turned, and hopped down the steps toward the pool while I walked in a daze toward the back door to the kitchen.

I trust my wife, I told myself, as I half-stumbled into the busy kitchen, where quite a few people were gathered, making and getting drinks.

And I did trust my wife, right?

Or did I not?

Robin had never given me any real reason not to trust her, so really this was a stupid question for myself. But the energy at the party suddenly seemed threatening to me: too young, too wild, too much like something that would get Robin to behave in a way that she shouldn't, or had promised not to.

And had she really promised anything? I made drinks like a zombie at the same counter where I had been chatting with Kathy, and went through our conversation with a fine-toothed comb.

Had she promised not to do anything?

No hands, no touching, I remembered.

But had that been a promise?

And where had my fucking balls been in that conversation? Why hadn't I said something, insisted on a promise?

I hadn't even explicitly agreed to anything... I had just let Robin lead me around by my cock. Or let my cock get led around by Robin.

Either way.

I made myself a martini in a regular drinking glass because I couldn't find anything else in the cupboard, which seemed to have been raided by a good deal of party-going at the house since I was last there. There was no tonic and no gin in sight.

I looked around for something sweet that I could concoct for Robin.

"Whoa," a familiar voice said, near me. "Looks like you beat me to it."

Heath.

"If you want something sweet, for Robin, there's daiquiri mix in the freezer. You just add the booze."

I felt my neck burn as that punk mentioned the sweet drinks that Robin liked. Why the hell did this guy know what Robin liked to drink?

"How do you know Robin likes daiquiris?" I asked, and my voice was brittle.

Heath shrugged. "Man, whatever. All chicks like daiquiris." He made a sound, a disdainful laugh. "What, you don't think I'm making your wife a bunch of drinks? Trying to get her drunk? Maybe getting up to something I shouldn't be?"

I couldn't tell if this guy was challenging me or not. His eyes were sort of laughing, his mouth turned up in a smile. But I had no idea what he was trying to get at by saying what he had just said.

He reached for a glass, and I tried to play it cool. "Freezer, huh?" I said. I turned and opened it, and sure enough, there was a big container of daiquiri mix.

“Here,” Heath said, handing me a glass that seemed almost half-filled with rum. “Just pour it in there.”

Was this guy trying to get my wife drunk?

I did what he said, and took the glasses, thanking him.

Heath stayed behind to make his own drinks, and I walked out to the porch, edging my way through the crowd that seemed to have blossomed on the porch. I had a tingly feeling on my back, like Heath was going to follow me, and he gave the kind of wariness I got from having a mean-looking dog lurking around behind me.

But Robin had found herself someone else to talk to. She was sitting on a bench set back a way from the pool. I stopped on the landing, watching her. In a lot of ways she looked as different from my wife as she possibly could: she was touching the edge of her bikini provocatively and smiling generously for her new friend, who just happened to be a fit guy about my age, with a great tan and a set of very white teeth.

The fucking guy looked like a dentist commercial.

A knife of pain twisted in my stomach as Robin gave a toss of her hair and laughed for her friend, and the silvery giggle echoed all the way up the stairs, like she was doing right next to my ear.

I'll think of something, I heard Robin saying.

I sucked in my breath and walked boldly down the steps. When I reached the level of the pool and started to cross the stone patio surrounding it, Robin looked over and gave me a smile. Another smile that burned right through me, threatening to make my cock build a tent in my shorts. I felt a flush of embarrassment heat up the back of my neck.

“Oh,” Robin said, as I approached. “You got me a drink. Thanks.” She stirred with the straw Heath had added at the last minute and brought it to her lips, closing their generous shape around the tip of it in a slow and deliberate gesture. As she did, she looked at the guy sitting next to her, and her eyelashes fluttered. She sucked on the straw, and there was no question that she was doing it with the intention of making each of us think about exactly what we were thinking about.

“Mmm,” she said. “Strong.” Then she flashed her eyes toward me again. “Honey this is Donny. He actually used to come here when we were kids, but I barely remember him from then.”

“A lot had changed since then,” Donny agreed, squinting up at me.
“Hey man.”

We shook hands, and Robin moved her daiquiri around with her straw and smiled secretively.

“Well,” I found myself saying. “I’ll just.. leave you two to catch up.”

Robin grinned up at me, and said nothing else before closing her lips around the straw sexily, a glint in her eye.

I wasn’t sure exactly where to go or what to do at that point. It was pretty clear to me that I’d just given my wife permission, even encouragement, to do what she obviously intended to do with Donny. He seemed into it, and she had a look in her eye like she was actually going to go through with it. Whatever “it” was.

No touching, I reminded myself.

But what would I do with myself in the meantime? Sit down and watch on a bench tucked away on the lawn, like a stalker?

I slammed the martini I’d made, decided the best thing for the storm brewing in my abdomen was to have another, and then I gave one last look back at my wife. Robin was leaning back on one hand, her pert breasts on pretty display in her skimpy bikini top, her eyes on Donny as he told her some kind of story.

I waited. She shifted her eyes in my direction, and though her expression didn’t change, it seemed like she passed me some kind of message. Like a wink, some kind of complicit glimmer. Then she sat forward, lifting her drink, dipped a finger into the cold liquid, and sucked it off her finger.

My cock throbbed.

I hurried up the steps to get another drink and think of a place to install myself and watch the show.

I passed Heath as I went back into the kitchen. He had installed himself on the opposite side of the room, which hung out past the deck and also looked down into the yard. He was leaning on the low windowsill, his legs out in front of him, crossed at the ankles. I couldn’t help but notice he was stealing a few glances out the window, his eyes going toward where my wife was flirting with Donny.

And I couldn’t help but notice that he seemed a little disgruntled by what he saw.

None of this helped my erection. I gave once last furtive look in his direction, at his scowling face as he stole another glance down the hill, let myself feel the pleasure of watching another man feel the same jealousy that I did as my wife batted her eyes for Donny, and then I moved quickly to the counter to lean against it and hide the bulge in my shorts.

I skipped the martini part of the martini, and tossed the last two olives from a questionable-looking open jar into a glass with some vodka while I surveyed the yard from the kitchen window the best I could. Since the house was on a hill and the pool and surrounding yard were in a deep depression, I could only snippets of the property, meters away from the pool. The rest of the view was blocked by the porch. I wondered if I should just go sit out by the pool by myself, or pretend to go for a swim, or what. I wanted to watch every moment of my wife's flirting, but I didn't want to look like some sleazebag, either.

I turned around and bumped right into the huge swells of pink-tipped breasts of none other than the strip-poker loser, Sophie.

Her creamy skin swam in front of my eyes for a moment, and in slow-motion the ice-cold liquid in my glass crested in a wave over the edge of the glass and onto her skin. Right onto her pink nipple, which reacted by hardening into a pretty pink eraser-tip.

"Oh!" she exclaimed, and I stared at the glistening vodka making a tidy rivulet down her smooth curves.

"I'm so... so... sorry..." I said.

Sophie smiled, and shifted her weight, making her big breasts bounce. My eyes disobeyed direct orders and snuck a peek down to see her smooth snatch. I encountered a pair of blue boy-short underwear instead and quickly jerked my gaze back up to her face.

She gave me a coy grin.

At this point, not only because of Sophie but because Robin was somewhere licking daiquiri off her fingers for another man, my cock was rock-hard and there was no hiding it.

My hands ached to reach out and wipe the liquid off her body, which I sensed she wouldn't mind me doing – she even seemed to be waiting for me, expectantly, to do just that – and turned to find a towel I had seen hanging off the oven door. I grabbed it hastily and held it out to her.

Sophie fluttered her eyes and waited.

“I, um... have a deal with my wife,” I stuttered, putting the towel on the hook formed by her hand on her hip and her arm. “So...”

Sophie lifted her chin and grinned more. “Well,” she said, ignoring the towel and wiping the vodka up with her finger, bringing it to her mouth afterward. “You can make it up to me by making me one of those drinks.”

I was about to open my mouth like an idiot, and say “it’s just vodka,” but I managed to realize what a stupid thing that would have been.

“Uh,” I said instead. “Yeah, okay.” I turned back to the counter to make a real martini.

Sophie leaned against the counter. “So, who’s your wife?” she said, watching me make the martini.

With her pretty tits on full display, I was having a really hard time deciding which of the bottles on the table I needed to make a martini.

“You know Robin?” I said, my eyes flitting over each of the bottles and making no sense of them whatsoever. Flustered, I grabbed a bottle of gin and then set it down, picking up the vodka. “There are no olives,” I blabbered.

Sophie leaned slightly in my direction, so close I could smell her skin, and a lock of her white-blond hair fell forward and brushed against my skin. “I know Robin,” she said, and she dipped one of her fingers into my drink, which I had set on the counter next to me. She plucked one of the olives from my drink and brought it to her lips as I stared at her. My mouth hung open as she placed the olive on her lips and bit into it sensually with her teeth, before her tongue darted out and collected into her big, pink mouth. “You don’t mind sharing, right?” she said.

I turned back to the drinks and tried to remember the ingredient I was missing.

Sophie pushed away from the counter and stepped behind me. As she did, she pulled all of the hairs of my body away and toward her like a magnet, without touching me. “You need ice,” she said.

I felt the cold blast of the freezer against my skin as she opened it, and then a puff of icy air as it closed. She was back, with a container of ice. She dropped three cubes into the martini shaker, then took a fourth and brought it to her mouth. She closed her lips around it and sucked on it.

I turned my attention back to the drinks.

“So what’s your deal with Robin?” Sophie said casually, and in my peripheral vision I saw that she was dragging the ice cube over her skin, down her neck, over her chest, and further down...

My deal with Robin.

“My deal with Robin is, um...” I was moving my eyes over the bottles, really at a loss as to what other ingredient went into the drink I was making, which I couldn’t have told anyone the name of for half a million dollars at that moment. “Um...”

Sophie’s toned, tan arm passed in front of my face, the curve of her breast and the pink nipple that capped it swinging below her bicep. She handed me the vermouth. “Are you guys, like, totally exclusive?”

My stomach twisted. “Kind of,” I said. “It’s a... a....” I was pouring the vermouth, the vodka, and concentrating on the drink to take my mind off the proximity of the very statuesque Sophie, and the itch in my palms to cup her swinging breasts.

That was it.

“It’s a no-touching deal.”

I shook the martini shaker, semi-triumphantly. I was going to get through this just fine.

Sophie had somehow located a martini glass, and she turned slightly to pick it up from her right side. She held it out to me.

I poured the martini for her, and while she tasted it, I allowed myself another stroll with my eyes over her generous curves, and the convex but toned thighs below her boy-shorts. The material of her underwear had tucked slightly into the lips of her bare cunt, revealing the shape of her pussy. I lifted my eyes to meet hers, startlingly blue and framed by slightly trashy, seductively slutty black mascara.

“It’s good,” she purred.

Then she put her hand on my chest and swiped it down my front. “Thanks.”

I shuddered, relieved I had been able to pass my own test, my mind already heading back to the yard, and what Robin might be doing. Sophie’s voice interrupted my thoughts. “Hey,” she said.

I turned around.

“Let me know if the rules change.”

And then she was gone.

“Jesus,” I whispered under my breath.

I slammed what was left of my drink and made myself another one, hurriedly, making a bit of a mess. My hands were shaking a little, and I didn't know if it was disorientation from Sophie, or the unsettled feeling that my wife was getting up to her own game, or pure excitement.

I headed back out to the porch, taking note that Heath had disappeared. I felt a cool thrill go through me: was he also seeking out my wife to watch her, maybe to interrupt what she was doing with Donny, maybe to try and get her to do it with him?

I sought out the last place I had seen Robin and fully expecting to find her there, maybe a little closer to Donny, maybe taking her cutoffs off in a little faux strip-tease, getting into the pool. I was more than a little curious about how Robin would manage our "no touching" rule, or if she even would. Part of me, I could feel, was hoping she'd break it, or bend the rules a little.

But when I sought out my wife's pretty legs at the bench I had last seen her on, she was gone. And so was Donny.

And there was no Heath, either.

I swept my gaze rapidly over the entire scene at the pool, panic rising in my chest. But no Robin. No Donny.

No Heath.

Not much else about the scene seemed to have changed: the people who had been there before were still there, getting much friendlier with each other, and the group with their feet in the water had beckoned the woman on the floating bed to swirl closer to them. They were smiling and talking, splashing water at each other's legs and chests.

Things were about to get heated there, but where was my wife?

I strained to see into the increasing darkness beyond the pool area.

I scrambled down the steps, my eyes shifting and looking in all directions for Robin. When I got to the pool, the girl floating on the water smiled at me.

"Hey, have you guys seen my wife?" I said, trying not to sound as half-crazy as I suddenly felt. "It's... she's, her name is Robin. She was just down here?"

The girl between the two guys said, in a sultry and very stoned voice. "Oh, I know Robin. Yeah, she was just here."

When it became apparent that she was not going to elaborate on that, I looked to the girl floating in the pool, who shrugged. "I guess they left," she said, a glimmer in her eye.

“Thanks,” I said, and I continued down the slope away from the pool and scanned the remainder of the yard, which ran up into a forested area, a creek at one end, and more forest on the other side. It was impossible to see into those places, but I knew Robin was a poison-ivy awareness queen: there was no way she’d go into the bushes with some guy.

I swung back up toward the house. Mumbling a little, mildly annoyed that Robin had moved so fast on her target and so easily begun her game, a little unsure that I even really wanted to be playing it (and unsure that I really wanted Robin to stick to its prude rules), I went through the door of the basement level on the far end of the house, which was wide open.

There was a rec area on the bottom level of the house, where the party seemed a lot more boisterous, and a lot more... adult. The heady smell of weed lingered in the air, but that was not what a lot of the people in the large area seemed to be on. Someone had a strobe light going and some hip-hop music, almost too low to be heard well, was making a few very stoned dancers bob and grind against each other to the beat that reverberated in the walls.

The deeper I went into the rec room, the more sexual things seemed to become, and the more I began to worry about finding my wife. I started to feel like things were slipping out of control. I brushed up against a couple who were making out, half-undressed, in a narrow hallway. The girl broke away from her partner with a slurpy sound and turned to me. I was expecting to get an earful but she only smiled, and one of her hands floated magically toward my chest.

No touching.

I edged away, apologizing over the music with a few noncommittal sounds. I reached a set of stairs and looked up them; there was no way of knowing if Robin had gone that way. The only other choice was a hallway that led to two closed doors. One was evidently a bathroom, because someone was waiting outside of it with a look of impatience.

I went upstairs.

At the landing of the stairs, I took in the sight in front of me. It was a pretty boisterous scene: the strip-poker was to the right, and Sophie was sliding her panties down from her hips. My eyes refused the orders I gave them and took a long, lingering look at her bare snatch. Then I remembered that my own wife’s pussy was just as smooth and silky, and I felt another punch in the gut: maybe Donny was feeling that out for himself.

To the left, a few stairs led down to a sunken living room, where a couple on the couch was very wrapped up in what they were doing. The couple was rocking against each other, a woman with a very pretty ass that was barely covered by her dress, and the sturdy legs of a fit guy whose shorts seemed to be rumpled down to his thighs.

I couldn't tell if they were actually having sex: their clothes were still mostly on. But the girl was on top of the guy's lap and rocking her hips, and his hands were grabbing at handfuls of her ass as she did.

"Wow," I said, involuntarily, and I became transfixed, much the way Robin described feeling. I stepped to the side of the railing and watched, admiring the way the party just kept going on around us, heavy with youthful sexuality. I had to admit, it was exciting; like going back in time. It felt good to feel aroused, to feel like things like this were possible – making out with some chick on the couch in front of everyone.

Suddenly, though, the scene made me uncomfortable, and I remembered that I was looking for my own wife. I turned to my left, intending to head back down the steps and back out to the yard, to look for my wife and maybe get out of here.

I bumped right into Heath.

From that moment, things happened in quick succession: Heath smiled at me, just as I pushed myself away from his hard, muscled chest. "Have you seen Robin?" I said quickly, and Heath gave me a strange look.

And then, almost as though I had summoned her with that question, I saw Robin's shiny black hair. It caught my eye as she passed from the hallway beyond the steps – the one that led to the two closed doors – and past the stairway, back toward the door that led to the backyard.

And right behind her, the sandy, curly mop of Donny's hair.

Heath's eyes followed my gaze, and I looked quickly from where I had seen Robin to his face, which seemed to fall with the tiniest trace of disappointment. That flicker of jealousy burnt right through me, in turn.

And then Heath turned back to me, and gave me a flippant grin. He shrugged, and pushed past me.

I scrambled down the steps, following my wife.

I replayed, over and over again, what I had just seen: Robin, followed closely by Donny, leaving the hallway.

When I reached the bottom floor I glanced back at the two doors. One was closing, and I caught the sight of tile: a bathroom. The other was still closed.

My gut twisted. I calculated the time that had passed, what Robin could have been doing, weighing and re-weighing the possibilities that she could have just been going to the bathroom, innocently, by herself. Maybe Donny had waited for her. That's why they were there together.

But it didn't seem to add up.

I pushed through what seemed like a growing crowd, back to the very front room.

"Oh hey!" Robin's voice called to me from my right.

The music had gotten louder, the smell of weed, weedier.

Robin was slinking around on the dance floor, her hips moving lazily from side to side. Her hair had come out of its ponytail, and she was pushing it up in a pile on the top of her head with both hands.

Donny was inches from her, very close, but not actually grabbing her with his paws. Still, they were clearly dancing together, and clearly at Robin's behest.

Robin waved at me, beckoning me closer. But at that very moment, she leaned in very close to Donny, and said something right next to his ear.

Then she started to dance again, and Donny gave me a look – stern and almost annoyed, and one that I could not make heads or tails of – before he took to dancing again.

We were the only people dancing, except for the same very stoned girl who had been dancing earlier. It wasn't a huge area, and there weren't a lot of people around it, but it still seemed like I was in a fishbowl as I headed toward my wife, who was gyrating sexily and only half-clothed, her breasts jiggling above her smooth stomach.

She was, in fact, dancing like a fucking slut. She curved her hip right into the shape of Donny's crotch, pushing her hair messily over her face and smiling at him with an open-mouthed, come-hither and fuck-my-mouth look.

I move closer to her and put my hand on her back. With my mouth next to her ear I asked her: "Where have you been?"

Robin threw her head back and smiled. She kept shaking her hips, and she ran her fingers over her bikini line. "In the bathroom," she mouthed, giving Donny a quick glance and then smiling.

Then she held her hands up above her head, and twirled around slowly, leaving me to gape at her. My gut went ice-cold and my heart kicked at my chest furiously.

But – and there was no denying this – my cock was hard as stone.

In the bathroom, huh? I looked at Donny, who met my eyes for a moment and then started to dance, his eyes dropping to the floor. Like maybe he didn't want to look the husband of the woman he'd just fucked in the bathroom in the eye? Or just a regular look?

I glared at him, and then I pushed myself up next to Robin. She turned and let her hands drop onto my shoulder. She ground her body up against me, and she grinned when she felt my erection. Her fingers scraped at the back of my neck, right along my hairline. She leaned over to my ear. "You seem happy to see me," she purred.

We danced close like that for a moment.

"If it's okay with your friend Donny," I said, finally, "I think we had better go home."

Robin's eyes glinted as she studied my face, leaning back and pushing her small hips against my crotch. "Hmmm," she said.

I stared at my wife as her eyes shifted to the side, behind me, a little over my shoulder. "Donny?" she said. "Is it okay if I go home now?"

I pushed Robin toward the door, not caring what Donny had to say about it, and Robin laughed, falling forward to bite into my shoulder. When we got outside I turned her around and pushed on the small of her back, guiding her gently toward the gate and away from that wild place.

*

Robin walked ahead of me all the way home, humming a little tune. I couldn't tell if she was just very, very drunk, or if she knew what she was doing to me, how she was teasing me, and just enjoying her power over me.

She trailed her hands over bushes and trees, and occasionally looked back over her shoulder to make sure I was following her.

And I was. Following her with a hard cock, my body raging and my eyes on her skimpy cutoffs, replaying over and over the way she had looked at me as she had walked down the hallway with the satisfied-looking guy behind her. Replaying the look on his face. Was it a smirk? And was it just a youthful smirk, or was it a "I-just-fucked-your-wife" smirk?

Robin trotted up the steps and I followed her quickly, two at a time. As soon as we were in the house I took her by the shoulders and spun her around, pushing her into a wall and lifting her hand up, holding her by the wrists. I ground my body up against hers, sinking into her softness. My cock throbbed against her thigh.

“So,” I said, and I couldn’t tell if I was angry or not, not by my voice or by what I was doing. “What did you get up to all that time?”

Robin smiled. “What do you think I got up to all that time?” she said coyly. “What does anyone get up to in the bathroom with a stranger?”

My cock twitched and I pushed up against her, clawing at her pants to get my fingers into her panties and the mucousy wetness that was seeping out of her.

Was it just her own juices? Or was she so wet because she had, in fact, let another man fill her with come?

“Oh I didn’t do anything like that,” Robin purred. “After all, we said ‘no touching.’ Right?”

She slid her hands down to her shirt and pulled it up and over her head.

“So I didn’t technically touch anyone... unless....”

I yanked her bottoms down and pushed her to face the wall, pulling her by the crotch toward me so that she was bent over with her hands against the wall. “Unless what?” I growled, sinking my fingers into her hot pussy. She was so wet, it seemed impossible that she hadn’t let someone fill her up. I pushed three fingers inside of her, and it seemed to me that she was loose and ready... perhaps stretched out?

With my other hand I rid myself of my own clothes from the waist down. “Unless what?” I repeated. “What did you do?”

Robin pushed her ass back against my hand and let me fuck her with three fingers, so I put another in and I was practically fist-fucking her. She moaned and used her own weight to fuck me. “I didn’t break the rules,” Robin said.

“But you went into the bathroom with another guy?”

“Mmmhmmm.”

“So what did you do?” I pulled my hand out and replaced it with my cock, which was so engorged now that I could barely stand. I slid into her like she was a tub of hot butter, and then I pulled on her shoulder to bring her up against my chest. “Tell me what you did,” I breathed.

Robin gasped, and her mouth hung open. I could feel in her body that she was so close to coming that she would probably not manage to tell me.

I pushed her forward again and she braced her hands on the wall.

Then I slowly pulled my cock from inside of her, and began to tease her by popping just the crown of my cock in and out of her hole.

I gave her a hard slap on the ass, and she yelped, but I felt her pussy squeeze around me when I dipped into her cunt again. I went a little further, and gave her another hard slap. Again, she squeezed me.

I slapped her again and she gasped. "Tell me," I said.

Robin slipped her hair and looked back at me. "I just did a little striptease," she said, and her voice was silky and low.

I pulled my cock out, and teased her by slapping it against her clit from below.

"And then," Robin said, "I let him jerk off all over my tits."

That was it. I thrust forward, hard, and slammed my cock deep inside her until I could feel the hard barrier of her cervix. Robin yelped and turned back to face the wall.

"Say it again," I said, fucking her.

"I let him come all over my tits," she said. "Oh, oh... oh fuck."

"Again," I said, slapping her ass. "Tell me what a bad little girl you've been."

"I locked myself in the bathroom and let that guy jerk off all over my tits," Robin said.

Fuck, I thought, and I hammered into her.

"And then... what..." I grunted.

"Oh," Robin gasped. "Oh! Oh! And then.. and then.."

She turned back to look at me again, and met my eye.

And then, she took her pointer finger, and swiped it over her dangling tits, before lifting it to her mouth, and closing her lips around it. She mimed sucking cum off her finger, and then released it with a pop.

And I exploded inside of her at that moment, yelling a string of filthy obscenities as I pounded her full of cum and pictured her sucking cum off her own fingers on her knees in the bathroom of Heath's house, a stranger's fat prick bobbing inches from her face.

But as soon as my orgasm ended, and with it the ecstasy of the adventure we'd had, the bad feeling began to creep in.

Robin turned around and leaned against the wall, pushing her hair from her face and running her fingers down her chest. "Wow," she said.

I stood back from her. Was this woman really my wife?

I reached forward and touched her chest. I swiped at the sweat that had beaded on her collarbone and brought it to my nose to smell.

“Oh my God,” Robin said, slapping my hand away from my nose before I could smell it. “Jesus, Tony. You don’t actually think I did that, do you?”

I stared at her. I wasn’t sure what I thought.

“It wasn’t against the rules,” I said.

Robin leaned her head back even further and looked up at the ceiling. She laughed again. “Oh, okay,” she said. “Well, then.”

“Wait,” I said. “Are you saying you didn’t really?”

Robin tipped her head down to look me in the eye. “What?” she said. “Of course not. I thought we were just supposed to tease each other,” she said. “I thought that’s all you wanted.”

“No, of course. It is, of course,” I said quickly. “I just... it was just...”

Robin smiled. “So hot?”

Well, I had actually been thinking it was just so hard to believe that she hadn’t been up to anything down that hallway, but I just said: “Really hot.”

“But... because you thought I actually did it?”

I opened and closed my mouth.

Robin folded her arms and leaned on one shoulder on the wall. “Does that mean you actually want me to do something like that?”

I sighed. This was a tricky question. Not the least of all because I really didn’t know what I wanted, if I was being honest with myself. That same queer cocktail of disappointment and relief, spurned arousal and humiliation, was churning inside of me.

“No,” I said, and my voice sounded strange, even to myself. “I just wanted the tease. It was fun. It was hot.”

“And that’s all?” Robin asked.

I swallowed. Was this a serious conversation?

I tried to read Robin’s face: was she trying to get around to me saying I wanted something more? Did she? Or was I going to fall into some kind of trap by saying that I did?

“I think it’s best if... yeah. Right?”

Robin brought her thumb to her lips and scraped it thoughtfully on one of her teeth. She moved her thigh against my groin, where she surely must have felt that my cock had not gone completely soft after our romp. “Right,” she said softly.

We kissed, and then Robin yawned and put her hands on my shoulders. “I’m so tired,” she said. “I don’t know how these people stay up this late. Let’s go to bed.”

So we did, and Robin fell asleep in a matter of minutes.

I turned to her, my head filled with an idea suddenly. “Robin?”

“Mmmm...?”

“What did you do, when you were, you know, with Donny?”

Robin lifted her hand and waved it in the air, half-asleep still. Finally she planted her palm on my arm, slapping me gently. “God, seriously...?”

“Uh,” I said. “Well, yeah.”

Robin yawned and opened her mouth, but it took her a moment to reply. “I just... we were there and there were all these little plates....”

If Robin got drunk and started to fall asleep, she did stuff like this; talking nonsense. It was actually very entertaining.

But not tonight. I kissed her on her shoulder. “No, honey, what did you do with Donny?”

Robin was too far gone. “Yeah,” she said. “Totally.”

I gave up and rolled onto my back.

I stayed up, sweating in the sweltering heat and thinking about the final moments of the evening, wondering if I was asking for what I really wanted.

7: DOWN THE RABBIT HOLE

Robin might have slept fine, but I was tossing and turning all night. Finally, unable to deal with all the mixed emotions I was having, I went downstairs and decided to surf the net – which for me, generally means watching porn or getting on Reddit. Since my porn needs were pretty much satisfied, I ended up on the latter, and while I had intended to go there in search of distractions, I ended up going to a hotwife forum again.

And then... down a rabbit-hole of forums about swingers, hotwives, and wife-sharers.

It should also be noted that I made myself a few drinks while I did this.

But for some reason, on this night, I wasn't shying away from the posts the way I ordinarily did. I started lingering on the words rather than skimming them, going deeper into the forum and the posts than I ever had before.

A couple of things became clear to me, as I explored these communities: one, which I had already kind of known, I wasn't alone being turned on by the thought of my wife having sex with another man. And two, there were a lot of people out there who weren't conflicted about it at all. And a lot of people who had started out conflicted, confronted their desires, and gone on to convince their wives or girlfriends to actually enact their fantasies.

There were dark stories within these forums as well, which I found myself oddly gravitating toward. Wives who had run off with their new lovers, men who were left hopelessly wondering if she preferred her lover to them. Men who had had to learn to live with their wives staying with another man for much longer than they had originally planned.

I suppose I ended up fixated on those stories because that would be just my luck, wouldn't it? I wondered if I even wanted it to be. It made a certain kind of pain crawl inside of me, dark and pleasurable in ways I couldn't explain to myself.

I looked at the clock when it began to get light. Nearly five am. Jesus.

I closed my eyes, just to rest them for a moment. And it was lights out.

The sound of the coffee maker gurgling woke me up. I jerked awake and nearly knocked my computer off the table.

My neck ached and my leg was asleep. I felt the pins and needles biting at me before I even shook off my slumber and figured out where I was.

Robin was by the counter, a mug in her hand. She turned around and crossed her leg in front of herself. “Hey there, night owl,” she said. She had a smile on her face as she brought the mug to her lips. “Couldn’t sleep?”

My heart lurched violently in my chest. Shit. The forums.

I cast an uneasy glance at my computer, but the screen had gone to sleep.

That made me breathe easy for a second, but not for long. How long had Robin been here? What if she had seen the screen when I had drifted off to sleep? I had had too much to drink; she could have come down at any time. I didn’t have any idea when I had checked out.

“I... uh...” I mumbled. “I had too much to drink, and, uh, you know how it is.”

Robin shrugged. “I had too much too, but I slept really well. Weird, huh?”

She was looking at me earnestly.

Then she came over to me and slid her arms over my shoulders, leaning in to kiss me. “What were you up to all night?”

She moved her hand toward the mouse pad, ready to wake my computer up. My heart leaped into my throat. The screen lit up and I was paralyzed. I couldn’t remember what the last thing I had been doing was.

I shifted uncomfortably, sweating suddenly, it seemed, everywhere on my skin.

“Oh God,” she said, her eyes going over the screen with lightning speed. She looked at me, and it seemed like she was looking for a reaction.

My breath remained caught in my throat. Robin was a super-fast reader; had she read the words on the screen?

“Reddit,” she complained. “Ugh.” She trotted away, saying no more, and I waited until she was in the bathroom, singing softly, to breathe again.

I quickly closed all of my open tabs and then, feeling a little foolish, went ahead and deleted my history anyway.

We spent the day in Stockbridge, shopping for things to fix up the house. Robin and Heath had evidently done a very poor job remembering what she needed to buy on Thursday, which of course stoked my suspicions about what they had done all day instead.

But then I reminded myself that there were several cans of paint on a table in the living room, and Robin had applied masking tape throughout the house. In order for her to have been spending a lot of free time with Heath, she'd have had to burn the candle at both ends, and that honestly wasn't Robin's style.

We had a lunch at riverside cafe that was very overpriced, but served nachos that Robin deemed appropriately Southwestern, which was always a big beef with her because she'd gone to high school in Texas and thought the entire East Coast was utterly incapable of properly melting cheese on chips.

"See?" she declared, picking up a chip and allowing it to hover over the beany, cheesy chip pile, strands of fake cheese she ordinarily wouldn't touch with someone else's finger pouring over the sides. "Great, huh?"

"So you ate here with Heath," I said, my stomach going jealous-cold again.

Robin put the chip into her mouth and smiled, then sat back smugly in her seat, chewing, without saying anything.

I raised my eyebrows.

"Yeah," Robin said, when she was done devouring the chip. "That's how I knew about it."

I looked at her pointedly.

"What?" she said, and she gave me that seductive, but enraging smile. She picked up another chip. "You didn't expect me not to eat after shopping. At Home Hardware, of all places. Did you?"

I looked out onto the river. I was aware that I was pouting a little, and I hated myself for it, but I couldn't suppress the inclination.

Robin rubbed my leg with her foot. She had kicked off a sandal and her smooth, soft foot felt like silk against my skin. "Come on, Tony," she said. She bit into her nacho. "It was just for the nachos."

When I looked back at her, though, she seemed to have such a satisfied and smug look on her face that I thought she was toying with me.

And then she guided her bare foot up to my crotch, where she felt for herself that the smug look she was wearing, that made my blood boil with jealousy, was not entirely upsetting to me.

It was her turn to raise her eyebrows.

I grabbed her foot, but I didn't move it away. Only part of me wanted to; the other part was enjoying the feel of her toes against the length of my shaft, curling and rubbing against me. "You never told me," I said, "what it is you did with Donny last night."

Robin grinned. "Oh, I thought I did," she cooed.

"Seriously," I said, but my cock replied in a very different way, by flexing beneath her foot, making her smile.

She looked at me over another chip, pulling on it like a fly fisherman to get the cheese piled high on it. "Oh, jeez," she said. "We went and hung out in a room with a bunch of people who were smoking up. But then I could see Donny was going to break the rules, so... out we went." She pulled on the nacho again. "Perfect timing, though."

She fluttered her eyelashes to look at me. "For making you think something else," she explained.

I nodded with pinched lips. "And you didn't do anything with Heath, the other day?"

She closed her mouth around her thumb, and my cock twitched against her foot. When she sucked cheese off the top of her finger, my cock throbbed and betrayed my excitement again.

And then Robin purred, smiling:

"Did you want me to?"

She rubbed her foot over my cock in a tantalizing circle, finding the answer to her question in my reactions. She dropped her foot to the ground and continued eating her nachos.

"But just," I croaked, after a bit, my stomach feeling a little like I had been punched. "Just teasing, right?"

It was important to clarify that.

Robin looked at me, and her eyes glinted. "Right," she said, cavalierly. "Of course."

*

We had a pretty low-key night, and didn't go to any more parties. We were both pretty tired, so we had a great, rowdy sex session on the steps and then upstairs. Then Robin watched Netflix while I pretended to do a little bit of work, and we both fell asleep.

On Sunday we went to a late breakfast at the bar, and the atmosphere was bright, family-oriented, and generally consoling. The previous evening, of typical married life – sex, some Netflix, and dozing off early – had settled me down. I felt myself floating down from the exciting but terrifying highs of watching my wife skirt so close to the edges of infidelity, and landing in a nice bed of familiarity. It had been nice to have a little adventure, nice to inject something fun into our sex life, but it also felt nice that everything seemed to be cozying back to normal.

I left in high spirits, and Robin kissed me, promising to work hard all week so we could enjoy the weekend together and then get out of there.

I left a little early to avoid getting slammed by traffic, but the plan seemed to be one that the entire Eastern seaboard shared.

I arrived home at eight, exhausted and annoyed, and called Robin.

“Jeez,” she said, without even answering the phone. “That was some trip.”

“Yeah,” I agreed glumly.

“That really sucks. Poor you. I got to just take a nap all day.”

“Thanks,” I said sarcastically.

“Sorry,” she laughed. “I’ll make it up to you next weekend.”

“I hope so,” I growled.

We shot the shit a little more, and when I hung up, I felt like we were back on the normal track of things in our marriage. I slept well, and I stopped worrying so much about everything that had happened that weekend.

My suspicions, though, were yet again aroused on Monday.

It began with a text in the morning, which I sent as I was drinking coffee and feeling a little lovey-dovey reflecting on the second half of our weekend. Though I was a little loathe to admit it, Saturday’s “normal-marriage” events, after the recklessness of Friday night, had made me feel romantic, like doing something a little bit cheesy. Almost believing that Robin had done something with another man had thrown a glowing light on our real, untouched marriage.

So I texted her:

[Me]: Hey I just woke up thinking about you. Time to Skype?

It was early in the morning; in order to get to work “on time,” I needed to leave by about 7:30. But I figured since she had napped all day, she might be up early.

There was no response from Robin, though.

Not all morning, not all afternoon.

For a while, I consoled myself by remembering that Robin often forgot to charge her phone. After all, that had happened so frequently on this trip alone. And how many times had I plugged her phone in for her at home? A zillion? She probably didn’t even realize that she didn’t do it.

But the hours ticked on, and nothing from Robin.

When I got home, I texted her again, bringing up Skype on my computer as I did. I logged in, and felt a surge of excitement when I saw that Robin was also logged in.

[Me]: Did you sleep all day? Im home, want to Skype?

No answer.

I called her on Skype.

No answer.

And then, horrifically, her Skype icon went offline.

And that’s when the jealousy started to burn again.

I pictured her listening to the sound of my call, riding Heath’s cock on the couch. Did she smile at him as she leaned over to snap her computer closed. “Sorry,” I could almost hear her saying. “My husband was calling.”

My stomach ached with jealousy as much as my cock throbbed with arousal. I sank onto the couch.

I typed and re-typed messages, deleting them and then re-typing them. It felt adolescent, puerile; but also it gave me that flying sensation from my youth. The feeling of not knowing how a girl would respond, the thrill of taking chances, gambling, not knowing if I would get what I wanted.

Finally I settled on:

[Me]: I just called you on Skype. Are u home?

And I waited. A long half hour of delicious pain unfolded inside of me, while I waited for my wife. I pictured her with Heath in every possible position, with Donny in every filthy scene I could conjure. I superimposed her face over all of the porn stars I had watched in the past three months, looking right at me with a big cock in her mouth, laughing with her eyes.

My phone shook on the glass tabletop.

[Robin]: huh? When did you call? Im just getting all these messages

The response was frustratingly possible. Didn't that happen sometimes? Haven't we all experienced that very phenomenon?

[Me]: where are you? Want to chat?

Another lengthy, lengthy wait as I went cold and hot, like a pendulum, the back of my neck burning with rage while my cock throbbed in delight.

An hour went by.

Then another.

I had some drinks and went through the photos on my phone, looking at Robin, feeling rage at her fake smile one moment and then sappily in love with her the next. It was awful and thrilling.

Finally, the phone rattled to life.

Message after message after message.

[Robin]: yeah sure im just out right now getting some food at bar

[Robin]: call u when I get home?

[Robin]: oh hey I lost track of time going home now

[Robin]: you there?

[Robin]: I feel like these messages are going nowhere...

[Robin]: I guess ill try u when I get home

"God. Damn. It," I muttered under my breath, extremely irritated with Verizon. I swore to cancel services immediately. "How is fucking possible, in the year 2017, to have a fucking pocket of dead air on the East fucking coast?!” I yelled.

I really wanted to throw my phone, but I was too old for that, so I set it down.

I stared at the computer until it became too boring, at which point I went back to my illicit pleasure: hotwife websites. My eyes grew blurry, and I toggled back and forth to Skype until they itched and it was almost midnight.

No call from Robin.

I went to bed and had terrible dreams

Tuesday was even worse.

I woke up and tried Robin again, both in text form and uselessly leaving a message on Skype.

I took a shower, trying to wean myself from the habit of looking at my phone incessantly.

But I didn’t even dry off completely before picking it up, and it slipped from my hand and almost shattered on the tile floor. The screen cracked, and I cursed so loudly I wouldn’t have been surprised to have the police show up.

In the car, the phone buzzed and I violated a rule I had sworn to Robin to never break by looking at a message. It wasn’t even from her, just a garbage solicitation.

I yelled at the windshield in traffic, my nerves frayed to the edge. What the fuck was my wife doing right now? Why was everything in the world conspiring to make it impossible for me to find out.

At ten o’clock I received a message from her.

[Robin]: wtf is up with this

[Robin]: I didnt get any text from u til now

Aggravated, I typed away.

[Me]: never mind let’s talk tonight

And her response (“Okay”) came back immediately. Strange in its brevity, but what could be expected? I called Verizon, I was so mad, to maybe bitch about service or aimlessly demand to speak to someone who could explain how there was no fucking coverage in that area, especially because (I was growing an argument to end all arguments in my mind) I had seen a cell tower on the highway, and that sucker should have been enough.

But I gave up because I had work to do and I was on hold forever.

The evening, though, held only nasty surprises for me.

Robin was not online. I texted her, and she responded that the internet wasn't working again for some reason. I proceeded to attempt to guide her to fixing it in a series of texts that made us both angry as hell. Or at least I guessed that, from the curt tone to her texts.

Her responses started happening further and further apart.

And then, this terrible exchange:

[Me]: its the icon in the top right corner that looks like a phone signal, right click it

[Robin]: It doesn't say anything

[Me]: when you right click it? Are you right clicking?

[Robin]: just give me like 15

This first message, I didn't think much of. I pressed on, thinking Robin needed to pee or something. But she messaged me in thirty seconds.

[Robin]: I decided not to wear that

[Robin]: or anything else

And then a dark and scary text silence.

I stared at my screen, unable to believe what I was reading.

I had no idea what to do, or how to respond.

There weren't very many ways to interpret something like that, were there?

A cold, blind fury started to boil over inside of me. This was proof, wasn't it, that my wife was up to very naughty things?

My hands shaking, I started to type, "what?" but Robin kept typing right through it.

[Robin]: I cant figure out what you mean, it just says input, output, some other thing

[Robin]: im sort of losing patience with it

A long pause.

Surely she would see her own mistaken text to me? Surely she would realize and try to cover it up or explain it somehow?

[Robin]: honey?

[Robin]: oh man, I hope this isn't delayed again. Listen, I don't think I can make it work tonight. People want to meet up at the bar... can I just try this tomorrow?

My insides burned.

I typed, "sure."

But I never sent the message.

Instead, I fumed. I decided Robin was definitely up to something, and whatever it was, it was no good. Then I decided she wasn't, and I was acting like an adolescent cock. Then I went on Reddit. Then I watched some porn, thinking about Robin and Heath. Robin and Donny. Robin's aquamarine eyes hovering over a shaft of black cock, her lips stretched out to a thin line like the whore in the porno I'd picked... Robin looking at me while her mouth got filled with inch after inch of another man's meat...

And then, I lay down in bed to have another terrible sleep.

8: THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

Wednesday morning was another angst-ridden succession of delayed responses and poorly-timed texts. But Robin professed to have the problem “really, actually solved” thanks to some guy named Kip who worked in IT in Toronto and was down here visiting his cousin.

Great.

I waited all day to get home so I could talk to her, feeling like I had swallowed a piece of coal and it was burning slowly right through my gut.

I got home, set up my laptop, and logged on with a beer and a cheap, gas-station burrito I had microwaved. I had eaten the burrito by the time Robin logged on.

Tentatively, not wanting to be disappointed again, I clicked on her icon and called.

“Finally,” I said, as Robin’s face filled the screen on my computer.

Robin smiled at me. “I was beginning to think we’d never see each other again,” she said, her voice sultry.

She had a strange look on her face, though I couldn’t quite say what it was.

Probably I was just going crazy.

She propped her tablet up and settled into the chair. She was wearing a white t-shirt that fit snugly against her tanned skin, and I could see the outlines of her nipples through the thin fabric. It was the kind of shirt that almost looked like it had been soaked for a wet-t-shirt contest.

She folded her legs up and revealed that she was also wearing her very short cutoffs. Her hair was in her usual ponytail, with little wisps of hair cascading down to her neck, grazing her skin.

“Nice shirt,” I said.

Robin looked down at her shirt and smiled. “You like it? I’m wearing it out tonight.”

I formed the beginning of several sentences in my mouth before I managed to get out, “You’re going out tonight?” And then, wanting to say them all, I said, in quick succession: “In that shirt? Are you wearing that for Heath?”

Robin smiled and looked thoughtful.

“I’m wearing the shirt for you,” she said. She leaned forward so that her pretty face took up most of the screen. “I’m so glad we got this problem taken care of,” she said. “I have a big surprise for you.”

I had no idea what to say. “I... what...?”

I had a lot of questions I wanted to ask her, like if she had gotten my texts from yesterday and who she had meant to text when she sent me her errant message. I wanted to know if she was teasing me or if she was being serious, if she was actually fucking around up there or deliberately making me think so, or if I was just being crazy and seeing things where there was nothing to be seen.

But the way she was smiling right now, the way she was moving her mouth seductively into a luring smile and telling me she had a surprise for me...

Well, that knowledge knocked me right off my train of thought.

Robin just smiled.

Then I heard a thump, which seemed to come from nearby.

“Okay,” Robin purred, looking off to the left. “Well... I think that’s my ride. I have to go.”

“Wait,” I said, snapping out of my reverie. “Where are you going?”

Robin leaned in close to the camera, so that just her lips were visible. “Just another party. It’s very close by,” she said seductively, and kissed the camera. “Bye.”

“Wait, Robin...” I said, but all I got was a nice view full of Robin’s breasts, and then saw her fingers tapping on the screen.

Was she hanging up on me? A flash of angry heat made its way over my face like lightning. “Robin, what the fuck?” I muttered, expecting my screen to close up into a picture of her icon.

But the feed continued on.

“Robin,” I said, confused. “Hey, I’m still here.”

But Robin was getting up from the couch where she had evidently been sitting, taking the tablet with her. If she heard me, she didn’t indicate it. “Come on in,” she said. And then the camera jiggled as she set the tablet, in its stand still, down. Robin fidgeted with something, looking right into the screen and tapping on it, and then something else. The realization that she had muted me and not turned off the camera sank through me slowly, forebodingly.

But foreboding of what?

“Robin?” I said.

She registered nothing.

I watched as she walked away from it: wherever she had set me I had a nice view of the living room and a part of the kitchen. “Robin,” I said, one last time, however futile. I was muted, powerless to stop her.

“Hey, hey,” I heard a familiar male voice say.

My heart sank as I watched Heath’s arms, then his muscled torso, come into view. He had a six-pack of beer and a bottle of wine. He set them on the table.

Robin leaned on one of the dining room chairs with her knee, and rested her weight against the table on her palm. She twisted flirtatiously, moving her hips in ludicrous circles to draw attention to them.

Heath asked Robin if she wanted wine or beer, and she surprised me by saying she wanted beer.

He opened two bottles, his eyes on her breasts. “Nice shirt,” he said.

Robin took the beer from him. “This old thing?” she joked.

They sat down at the table, and Robin stretched her legs out in front of herself.

“So, when is hubby coming back?” Heath said.

My skin tingled at the mention of my “name.”

I watched with a cold burn in my gut as Robin ran her fingertip over the lip of her beer bottle, fingering it the same way she often had my cock. Her message to Heath as deliberate as her message to me.

If, of course, this was all intentional.

“Not until the weekend,” Robin said.

Heath brought his beer to his lips and drank from the bottle while he looked at Robin. “He’s a pretty crazy man, leaving a hot little number like you here all by yourself,” he said.

Robin leaned back in her chair. “Is he?”

They looked at each other over the table for simmering moment, and my stomach dropped to my feet. My cock was pounding to life, and I leaned in to the computer screen so close it was slow-burning my retina.

“Maybe he trusts his wife,” Robin said finally.

Heath just kept staring at her. “Should he?” Heath said. “Are you a good and faithful wife?”

My cock throbbed.

“I don’t know. Does a good and faithful wife have strange men over for beer and pizza while her husband’s out of town?”

Heath, I could tell, was as hungry for Robin as I was. He set his beer down. “That sounds like a really naughty wife to me,” he said. “That sounds like the kind of wife who needs a little bit of discipline.”

It was obvious that this was going to a very real place, minutes before Heath said that, but these words, more than anything, made my heart begin to kick inside my chest so loudly I could almost hear it.

“Robin,” I said, with futility.

“Come over here,” Heath said, spreading his leg open wider to form a bench for Robin to sit on. Robin unfolded from her chair, her long legs looking even longer than ever. She stood in front of Heath, who patted his thigh.

Robin climbed onto his thigh, straddling it. His leg was a thick tree trunk that she was riding like a horse, and she ground her little bottom against it when she sat down.

“Oh I see,” Heath said. “I see what kind of girl you are.”

I couldn’t exactly see what Heath was doing now, because Robin’s back was to the camera. Some exchange that was very quiet was going on between the two of them, and Heath had his hand up to her face. I squinted. And then I realized: she was sucking on his fingers.

“That’s it, you little slut,” I heard him say. “Is that how you’re gonna suck my cock?”

I saw the back of Robin’s head move up and down to nod. Heath tipped her head back, shoving his fingers in her mouth. He used one hand to support her as he tipped her back like a doll and made her suck on his fingers while he shoved them bluntly in her mouth. “I know all about wives like you,” he said.

He took his hand from her mouth and used it to rip at her shirt, pulling the material down so that one of her breasts popped free of the shirt. Then he twisted her nipple in his fingers.

He stood up suddenly, pushing Robin off his knee. She stood on the floor. “Get down on your knees,” he told her, while he unbuttoned his shorts and let them drop to the ground.

He wasn’t wearing any underwear, so his thick cock sprung immediately from his shorts, just inches from Robin’s body. She was dropping slowly to the floor, dropping to her knees.

“Take that shirt off,” Heath said. “Let me see your titties.”

Robin, my wife of seven years, crossed her arms to either side of her waist and obeyed Heath, pulling her white shirt up and over her head. Her breasts sprung loose and bounced in the air while Heath surveyed the sight of them from above.

Robin was looking up at him, and in my mind’s eye I could see the scene so poignantly, her blue eyes over her pretty mouth, looking submissively at him, waiting for his next instruction.

Heath used one hand to tug at his shirt from behind and liberate himself. His muscular body was completely naked now, right in front of my wife.

To my horror, his cock, which I had been relieved to see was pretty much normal in size, if a little thick, was growing. In bouncing twitches, the length of his shaft just seemed to keep going and going.

Robin was staring at it, and Heath was clearly enjoying himself as my wife stared at his growing member.

“You ever have a cock that big in your mouth before?” he said, taking the length of it in two fingers and directing the crown of it to Robin’s lips.

My gut boiled. This was really real. My wife Robin was really getting another man’s cock rubbed over her lips.

“Why don’t you give me a little kiss?” Heath said.

Robin puckered her mouth, and kissed the crown of Heath’s cock as I stared at the screen in delightful pain.

Heath put his hand on her head, his big fingers gripping her ponytail firmly, and then he used all of his wiry strength to push Robin forward.

Though the view wasn’t exactly perfect, I could still see the strain of Robin’s lips as Heath stuffed the meat of his cock into her mouth, slowly, pushing her forward even when it was obviously too much for her.

“Is that the biggest cock you’ve ever eaten?” Heath growled. “I bet it is. I bet your hubby’s cock just slides right in there and jiggles around in your mouth like a pinball. Come on, you can do it, take a little bit more in.”

He pushed on Robin’s head, and I could see that she was struggling to breathe and gagging a little.

He released her head, and she bounced off his cock, taking a huge gasp of air. Spit linking his cock and her mouth lingered for a moment before dropping to the floor.

Heath still held his cock to her face. "Don't tell me that's the best you can do," Heath said. "Don't tell me you're a slut who can't swallow my cock."

Robin looked up at him and opened her mouth, edging closer to his cock to tell him she was ready to try again.

"That's good, you little slut. Go all the way, all the way down, take it in."

God, the way this asshole was talking to my wife. I could never say something like that to Robin.

I stared at the screen, unable to believe what I was seeing, as Robin forced herself to swallow a few more inches of Heath's cock.

She still couldn't make it to the base, and Heath released her so she could gulp at the air before pushing her back onto his dick. "You're gonna get this all in your throat before we stop," he warned her. "So keep going. Open up."

This time, Robin managed to swallow a little more of his dick. Heath tapped her bluntly on the back of her head with an open palm, trying to force her a little deeper.

Robin threw her head back, gasping for breath. "I can't," she complained. She reached for his shaft and put her hand around it. "It's too big."

"Too big, huh? We'll see about that." He grabbed her by the ponytail and turned her around, so that she was largely facing the camera. He pushed her down to her heels. He moved behind her and sort of squatted over her, pulling her head back awkwardly with one hand. "Open up and lick my balls at least. Get those balls in your mouth and suck on them, you useless little slut."

I watched in horror as his two, knocking balls sank into Robin's open mouth. Heath's fat cock twitched while she pleasured him, her mouth straining to accommodate his hairy nuts.

Heath stood up after letting Robin suck on him for a bit, and pushed Robin forward onto her hands and knees. Her face disappeared at the bottom of the screen, but I could still see her back and her ass as Heath dropped to the floor and settled in behind her.

I heard Robin mewl as Heath lined his cock up at her hole, and then she moaned loudly as he slowly moved his hips forward. And though I couldn't see it very clearly, I knew that it was really happening. My fantasy and my nightmare: Robin's pussy was getting stretched and filled by Heath's cock, right in front of my eyes.

"Oh!" Robin moaned.

Heath slapped her ass hard with his open hand. "Ride that cock, you little slut! Ride it and show me how sorry you are for having such a useless mouth."

He slapped her bottom again, and Robin backed her ass against his hips. She started to work her ass against his hips, riding his cock exactly as he had asked. Heath stared down at the sight of his cock moving in and out of Robin's pussy.

Robin's moans started to get more high-pitched as she humped him, and I could tell she was going to come.

But Heath had his own plans. He brought his hand to his mouth and sucked on his thumb, then dropped it, between Robin's legs. Just as Robin's squealing reached a crescendo, and she was about to come, he pushed his thumb inside of her ass.

Robin let out a shriek that was both the peak of her orgasm and a yelp as Heath's fat thumb was shoved into her ass. Her legs kicked, but Heath easily controlled her as she bucked against him, both with the hand that was gripping her ass with his thumb inside of it, and with his other hand, which he used to reach forward and grab her ponytail, jerking her head up and lifting her off the ground.

Robin's face had the strangest expression as Heath began to fuck her himself, one finger in her ass and her hair being pulled tightly at the scalp. She put her hands on her thighs and let her mouth fall open, a strange sound a bit like a squeak coming from her throat as Heath pounded his cock up and inside of her.

He withdrew his hand from her ass and made her gasp as he did, then brought his thumb up to her mouth and shoved it in. "Suck on that," he ordered her, and Robin obeyed, letting him fuck her closed mouth with his thumb while he continued pounding her from behind.

Suddenly he pushed her flat to the floor, lifted her legs up and started pounding into her mercilessly while his face contorted into a scowl and his muscles rippled. He gave a yell and thrust hard inside of her as he came.

I stared at the scene: Robin's legs splayed open on either side of Heath's hulking mass, his seed bursting inside of her pussy.

He gave a few more thrusts and grunts as he shook the last drops of his cum inside of my wife, and then he knelt there, panting with the effort, Robins legs still in his hands.

Robin began to stir, and he released her legs. She got onto her hands and knees and pushed her loosened hair from her sweaty face. I couldn't read her expression.

Heath reached forward and pulled her back toward him, his hands fondling her tits. "That was great, baby," he said, his mouth close to her ear.

Robin smiled and the warmth in her smile cut through me like a knife.

Did she really enjoy this kind of rough, degrading sex?

Heath turned her mouth toward him by moving her chin firmly with his hand, and they kissed.

And then the words that struck me to the bone: "I'm not done with you yet, though."

Robin slid off his lap and onto her own heels. She lifted her ponytail from her shoulders; evidently it was wet and sticking to her skin. "I need a little breather," she said. "Beer?"

Heath rose and pulled his shorts up and over his hips as he did. "I guess," he said.

Robin went to the fridge, out of sight of the camera shot, and I heard the sound of the old fridge opening and the bottles inside jingling as the appliance tipped on the uneven floor. Bottles clinked together and then Robin reappeared in the scene.

I squinted into the screen, my face pressed close to it, trying to see my wife in detail that I knew perfectly well was impossible to grasp. Robin sat down on the chair, her body still naked. I wondered how much wet, foreign cum was lubricating her skin on the vintage plastic-covered cushions of the chairs, what her pussy looked like after being stretched open by Heath's gigantic girth. Her skin seemed wet, even though that was a detail I certainly couldn't see in the grainy screen, which was getting grainier as the light faded outside and only the lamp in the kitchen illuminated the scene.

They clinked their beer bottles together and Robin took a sip of her beer. Then she rose, saying she had to go pee. Heath grabbed at her ass as she passed by him, getting his fingers right into the most secretive parts of her, feeling his own cum slimy between her legs.

I stared at the man who had just fucked my wife on the screen of my computer. I opened my mouth, as though I was going to say something, and then my heart plummeted as I had the most fucked-up thought: what if Robin had never muted me, after all? What if she was just waiting for me to say something so she could enjoy hearing my pain.

Of course, that was too fucked up. I knew it, deep inside, so I don't know why I even tortured myself with the thought. Still, I had a compulsion to test it.

My heart thudded loudly and rapidly in my chest as I gathered the courage to test the very horrible idea and prove it false.

"You fucking bastard," I said, finally.

Heath flipped the cap of a beer bottle across the table, and the action took place so immediately after I said that that it almost seemed as if he had heard me. My pulse raced and I went cold.

But he hadn't.

Robin sauntered back into the room, her sinewy limbs slipping together, probably dripping with her juices and Heath's cum. She sat down again and crossed her legs.

"I'm going to be sore tomorrow," she said.

Heath set his beer down, slowly and deliberately. "You're not gonna be able to walk tomorrow," he growled.

My cock, which was practically bursting, seemed to fill past its potential and I had to clutch my pained abdomen.

I stared at my wife, my eyes searching the increasingly dim picture for her reaction. Her features were hard to make out, so really it was left to my imagination to picture the changes on her face: did she raise an eyebrow? Did she smile quietly and mysteriously? Or did she frown at this vulgar frat boy because it was too much for her.

"Turn on the light," I complained, my eyes beginning to feel as strained as my hard cock.

Robin gave her foot a little kick, and then I pulled away from the screen with surprise as the whole table scraped across the floor; Heath pushed it roughly as he rose to his feet.

Robin's beer tipped sideways and spilled with a clank. She looked startled. Heath was moving toward her, pulling his shorts down and taking out his already hard cock, which it looked like he was planning to cram into her mouth as soon as he reached her.

And then:

The worst, most horrifying sound imaginable filled my ears and echoed in my head even as the image on the screen changed abruptly to Robin's smiling profile picture. The slow, downward-spiraling song of a disconnected Skype call.

I stared at the screen, my mind unable to contemplate what had just happened.

"Fuck!" I shouted. I furiously swiped at the screen with my mouse, as the reality of what had just happened came pounding in, dark and real, in huge waves of horror and despair until I felt like I could no longer breathe.

My Wife
Was Fucking
Heath
And I
Was Not Going To See
It

The man who had just said that he was going to fuck my wife until she couldn't walk was right probably filling her mouth with his fat cock and I wasn't going to see a moment of it.

Desperate, I tried calling back on Skype. Maybe she had left the sound on, my addled mind reasoned, as part of some twisted game she was playing, and she would hear the sound of the call.

But the call was never answered, and whatever was happening there went on, invisible to me.

I fished out my phone and tried calling her, my heart pounding, my palms sweating. I knew she had no service there, but I thought maybe, maybe if her phone could be in one of those little pockets, she would at least hear it -

And what, Tony? Take Heath's cock out of her mouth, tell him she was going to answer her phone, and then see that it was me, and figure out that the feed was dead?

I sank into the couch.

I felt like I was sinking into the floor.

I would not get to see what was happening. I would probably not find out until much later, tomorrow at the earliest, and I would have to spend the whole night being tormented by not knowing. Not knowing how Heath was fucking my wife, how many times, how hard, where, and how long.

I would not get to see what I knew I wanted to see so desperately: Robin's slutty performance, or hear what I wanted to hear: her pleased moans as Heath the brute manhandled her in our cottage.

How depraved would their next round be? How far would Robin let him go?

My cock ached, and I absent-mindedly took my cock out and began to jerk myself off, my eyes closed, re-playing the scene I had actually watched over and over. Especially the part where Robin looked up at her dominating lover, her mouth full of his cock.

But after I came – hard, violently – the bad feelings came back to haunt me all night.

I spent the night in a sleepless limbo: imagining what they were doing, getting myself worked up by my own fantasies and nightmares and then jerking off and feeling terrible until I got myself back into a state of arousal again and repeated the whole torment.

I tried calling Robin at two in the morning, at three, at four... I tried her phone, and Skype. But of course, my wife was up to something else entirely, and there was no answer, no window into the world where she was getting her brains fucked out by Heath.

Finally, somewhere in the very early hours of the morning, around maybe five, I drifted off into a dreamworld that was much like my real world: I dreamed that Robin called me back and held the phone close to Heath's cock as she sucked on it. I dreamed that she called and told me she was leaving me, that she had thought things over all night and Heath was more of a man than me, had what she needed. I dreamed that I drove there in the middle of the night and found them laughing together in bed.

I woke up to the sing-song sound of Skype. I was so deep in my dreams that for a moment I wasn't sure where I was or whether anything that had happened in reality wasn't just part of a dream.

Robin's profile picture filled the screen. Bleary-eyed, I sat up and stared at the computer, trying to get my head around what had taken place, and all of the bad (and good) feelings that were getting kicked up inside my chest.

I didn't answer her first call. I waited, staring out the window, getting my head around what had happened, what was real and what wasn't, and what I was going to say to my wife.

She called again in about ten minutes.

I contemplated buying myself more time by not answering. It was 7:15 am. I was going to be late for work, I was feeling low and high, and I couldn't wrangle my thoughts into a single, coherent stream to think of anything to say to Robin.

But I answered the call anyway. What else could I really do? Robin was, after all, still my wife, still calling me.

Robin's smiling face, refreshed and clean like she had just come from a shower, filled the screen. "Good morning," she said, before I could get a word out of my mouth.

I mumbled something, rubbing my eyes. What the fuck was I supposed to say to her?

"Robin," I said, and I was on my way to saying, "what the fuck?" but I couldn't get it out of my mouth.

Robin's voice faltered a little. "So... what did you think?"

My heart was aching. What did I think? What did I think?

"I can't... believe you did that," I stammered, trying to sound as though I was making a casual statement about how cool it was, but my ambivalence betrayed me in my voice.

Robin smiled. "Which part?"

My eyes went wide. Which part!!!?

Robin's smile faded a little. "Please don't tell me you didn't like it."

"I...I...I..." I stammered.

Robin was looking at me with a smile.

And then, the familiar sound of Skype ending a call filled my ears.

"GOD. DAMN. IT!!!!" I shouted. I lifted my hand to send my computer flying across the room.

Then I picked up my phone.

Then I went back to the computer and tried to call her again.

Her Skype icon disappeared.

I typed furiously into my phone. The messages were half-coherent; my hands were shaking; I sent messages of accusations, messages calling her a bitch, messages asking her to call me back. All the while the image of her smiling face burned into my vision and distracted me from finishing a sentence.

I set the phone down without sending the message.

“Calm down,” I told myself.

Fact: Robin, my wife, had just fucked another man.

Also fact: she seemed to have done it so that I could watch deliberately.

And let’s face it, another fact: I had enjoyed it.

Fact: She was either feigning her inability to communicate with me, or it was a real problem with the phone. I didn’t know which.

I put my hands up to my head.

What was the game that Robin was playing?

Was she playing a game?

I stared at the computer, Robin’s pretty selfie staring back at me.

And then, pushed into a corner, I finally made a decision.

There was only one thing to do.

9: DO-OVER

The drive took me only a miraculous (and dangerous) just-under five hours.

As I drove, my thinking clarified. I felt more methodical, more like an animal after prey, with every passing minute. This is the kind of person I am, the kind of person I've always been: once a decision is made there is no derailing me from my plans.

It was mid-afternoon when I got to Camp Taghkana. I drove past the turn-off and on, to Stockbridge. I had a vision in my mind of what I was going to do, what I was going to see, and none of it happened in the afternoon.

I checked my phone, just in case, for messages from Robin, but naturally there were none. Of course not.

I went to the riverside cafe, perhaps to give myself an extra dose of pain. I sat at the same table we had sat at and ordered myself a beer, then another, and then a dangerous third beer. Then I switched to water because the last thing I needed interrupting my plans was a DUI or a limp dick.

It was nearing evening by then, and I was sifting through the possibilities of the evening: what I would do if I found Robin here, or there.

I drove back to the camp and parked the car at the visitor's center, tucked away where it wouldn't look incredibly obvious, even if, for some reason, she passed by this way.

Even with all the driving, and all the brooding at the restaurant, I still wasn't entirely sure what I was going to do. Was I going to confront Robin? Burst into the cottage and tell her to pack up all of her shit and get out? Was Robin a cheating whore of a wife?

But she wasn't really, was she? She had, inexplicably, given me a window into what she was doing, and she had also landed on something that, to be fair, I really enjoyed watching.

A lot of me just wanted to sneak into the house and watch her, a voyeur, enjoying the filthy things she got up to with Heath.

A lot of me thought the most reasonable way to act would be to have a conversation with my wife like an adult, and find out what the fuck was going on.

A dark, animal part of me wanted to sneak through the back door, push her onto the bed, and punish-fuck her.

So I really didn't know what it was I was going to do until I did it.

I got to the cottage approaching from the back, forested area, along the path that wound through the camp and connected the cottages. I lurked outside for a few minutes, peering into the windows to determine who, if anyone was in there.

Robin.

Alone.

And then, still undecided on my course of action, I walked up to the porch, and crept into the enclosed area. Robin was puttering around, quietly working.

Doing exactly what she said she'd be doing.

With one crucial difference, of course; she had fucked Heath like a whore the night before.

I stepped into the kitchen, making no noise.

And there I stood, watching Robin.

It took her a few minutes to notice me. Finally, she turned around, and her eyes flew open in alarm. She dropped a roll of paper towels and gave a strangled yelp.

"Jesus!" Robin said, clutching her hand to her heart. She looked truly scared for a moment, which was enormously arousing. But after a few quick breaths, as she looked at me and assessed who I was, her look of shock dissolved, mysteriously, into a smile. "You scared the shit out of me," she said, laughing lightly.

It was my turn to look somewhat confused.

"Not expecting me?" I said gruffly.

Robin straightened up and looked at her wrist, as if there were a watch there to tell her the time. "Actually," she said. "No. I thought you'd be here... later. Maybe tomorrow."

And then, as if this wasn't perplexing enough, she let out an exhale and actually started looking relieved. She pushed a loose strand of hair away from her face.

And then she stood there, inexplicably smiling at me.

I had no idea what to say for a long moment. And then I came up with:

“What?”

Robin, spellbinding Robin, slinked toward me like a sex goddess, and I stood there paralyzed and hypnotized, my eyes full of her slouching neckline and the faint bumps of her nipples pressing against the material of her shirt, her mouth, twisted into the smile she was wearing, full and sensual, nothing like what I expected it to be.

I stared at her as she put her arms over my shoulders and edged very close to me. “Oh come on,” she said, looking at my mouth as she spoke, before she lifted her eyes. “I’ve been married to you for how long?”

I narrowed my eyes, trying to understand what that particular question had to do with any of this.

“What?” I repeated like a parrot.

Robin’s confidence flickered for a little bit, and her expression turned a little down. “I thought... I was sure this is what you wanted.”

The plain truth of this statement hit me like a ton of bricks: in many ways, it was and had been exactly what I wanted. But because it was the last thing I had expected Robin to say at that moment, I was left stammering again: “What?”

“I figured... you were never going to act on your desires unless you were boxed into it,” Robin said. Her fingers worked through the hair at the nape of my neck. Her body moved closer to mine, warmer and almost melting against me. “So I took matters into my own hands.”

This final sentence, I could see, was meant to be delivered in a sexy, confident voice, but I could hear that Robin was faltering a little, and her eyes were more concerned than seductive. She was reading me for a reaction, doubting herself a little as she did.

She pushed her thigh against my swollen cock, and the expression in her eyes changed, her concern fading away to a lustier gleam now that she had confirmed what I was unable to articulate. Perhaps my mind was reeling, trying to catch up with what was happening, but my body seemed to have known all along.

“Don’t tell me you didn’t like it,” she said, her voice throaty and full.

Then she kissed me, and my surprise was overtaken by the soft feel of her lips greedily pulling mine into her mouth.

I pushed her backward and onto the table, shoving my hand down her shorts and finding her bare pussy, already ripe and wet, and no underwear.

She grinned and moved her hands to help me out of my pants, which I barely shook down to my knees.

She tugged at her shorts with me and they dropped over her hips with only a little extra effort. I pushed my fingers into her cunt and explored it for myself, feeling with my fingers for some kind of change, or maybe for evidence that Robin had just come from a tryst with Heath. But I found only the silky petals of her waxed snatch, slippery and hot. Much the same as ever – only different in my own mind.

But I had no time for that, as the images from the night before began percolating in my mind and I remembered all the filth that had spewed from Robins mouth, all the ways she had let Heath use her body. I pushed her onto the table and yanked her by the ankles to sheathe myself in her cunt.

We fucked quickly, almost a little too dirtily, but we both came so fast there was no avoiding it. Then we panted together, Robin lying on the table, my cock still inside of her, stunned by our rapid lovemaking.

Robin finally rose up, on her elbows at first and then pulling herself up to my shoulders. She kissed me on the chest, grazing her lips over my body.

“What...” I began. “How did you...?”

Because she was right; Robin had known that I was going to live in a state of turmoil, unable to act, unless something tipped me over the edge. I was like that with everything, and it wasn’t something I was necessarily proud of. I had been that way with career changes, house purchases, even selling the stupid cottage and deciding whether or not to take my vacation time to hang out with Robin.

But how Robin had known, in spite of what I had told her, that my real desire was to actually see her follow through on this?

Robin laughed against my chest, and it came out like a low growl. “You’re wondering why I was so sure of myself?”

I looked down at her, and I had to crack a smile. “Well... yeah. Yes.”

“You’re like this with everything,” she began.

“I know that,” I interrupted. “Just... why were you sure of what I really wanted? You know, you could have made a grave miscalculation.”

Robin leaned back on her hands. “Really? Tell me, did you like seeing me suck Heath’s cock?”

My face remained the same; a little confused. But my cock flexed inside of her.

“There’s that,” Robin said, smiling, her eyes lowering to my crotch. “And then... there’s your history of falling asleep with your Reddit forums open for all the world to read.”

“No,” I managed to say.

Robin nodded. “I did some research of my own, and then... you know, I never really gave it any serious thought until the opportunity presented itself.”

My mouth dropped open.

“How long have you been planning this?” I said, finally.

“You mean, all this?” She swirled her finger around. “It just happened like it happened. I just went with the flow.”

“But how long had you known about... uh, you know.”

“A while,” she said, smiling. “I wasn’t super into it but... it just kind of worked out.”

We kissed again.

“I did sort of orchestrate the internet ‘problems,’” she said. “That was all for effect.”

“Huh?” I said.

“You know, all the ‘problems’ this week. I read about it on one of your forums. I actually thought it would be a dead giveaway to you.”

I let out a low whistle. “Impressive.” I had been pretty tanked reading that story on Reddit, but it was ringing a bell.

She nodded. “Thank you. It worked the trick.”

“You must have gone through a lot of those posts,” I said.

“I’ve caught you at it a few times,” Robin said. “That’s why... I guess it’s why I felt okay just going ahead with it. It’s why I thought Heath was a good, I don’t know – opportunity. And why I thought you’d like something more... you know... like I was cheating on you.”

“Wow,” I said.

Robin kissed me. “I hope it was okay.”

We lay in silence for a bit, and then I had a sudden thought:

“That’s another thing,” I said, pushing her sweaty hair from her shoulder. “You really, you know... like that kind of sex? Like with Heath?”

My cock was coming back to life, but this time I didn’t really care if Robin felt that. She knew as well as I did that that sort of thing wasn’t my shtick.

Robin smiled. "It's fun, but it's just that.... Fun. It's kind of like... a performance piece." She looked thoughtfully at her fingers. Then she added, quickly, "I'm not into it every day, if that's what you're getting at. It's just kind of a... I don't know. Like getting a fix."

"Mmm," I said, pulling her close to me. "And so what did I miss from last night?"

Robin pushed away from me, and an expression of surprise lit up her face. "Huh?"

I thought she was joking, so I moved in to kiss her. "Okay, tease me some more, but I'll get the truth from you."

"No," Robin said, pushing me back. "I'm serious. What?"

I searched her eyes, and she didn't seem to be playing any game.

"Uh... the feed died. Or Skype hung up, or whatever. Right before you and Heath were going to go at it..."

Robin's eyes went wide with alarm. "What? The whole thing?"

"No... no, just, you know, the second time. I thought you said you did that on purpose."

Robin put her hand to her face. "You missed everything then!"

I pushed inside of her and lifted her onto my cock. "Not everything," I said.

Robin looked at me, and her face was really serious. "No... really. What was the last thing you saw?"

"I saw you guys... you gave him a blowjob, and you had sex, then you had a beer, and then you were going to go at it again..." My cock was at full readiness now.

Robin sent it rocketing to near explosion as her eyes grew wide. "Oh, no," she said. "You missed everything."

And then she wrapped her legs around me, and dug her heels in to grind her body onto my cock. "I guess there's nothing to be done, but repeat the performance, then."

*

Robin was wearing a pair of boy-short underwear and a long, form-fitting tank top. She had loosely gathered her hair in a ponytail, and smeared a very young-looking, strawberry-red lip gloss on her mouth. She had showered and she smelled like fruit. I could see the lips of her pussy faintly outlined by her black underwear.

She typed a message into her phone, and I watched, amused and aroused. Amused, by the way Robin typed – she used one finger, delicately. Aroused, because she was putting a great deal of thought into typing out a message to Heath.

“Actually,” she said suddenly, lifting her eyes. “Would it be better if I ‘sexted’ him or something?”

How on earth had my wife completely missed her own generation’s tech-savvy? She sounded like an old person talking about “doing marijuana.”

“Uh...” I said.

“What do I do for that? Just take a picture?”

“I guess,” I said, my arousal making it difficult for me to think. This was Robin’s show, anyway.

“Of what?” she said.

I shook my head slowly.

Robin tugged at her shirt and exposed a pretty breast, then held up her phone, preparing to take a picture. Then she looked at me, deciding better of it, and bit her lip.

“I want to make sure he comes,” she said.

I gulped.

Robin peeled her underwear away. Then she handed me the phone. I stared, phone in hand, as she opened her legs, and exposed the glistening flower of her pink cunt, totally waxed, a little swollen from so much use, by Heath and by me. She held her legs open with both hands on her knees.

The tangy scent of her cunt wafted toward me.

“Too much?” Robin said.

“Maybe... slide a finger over... your...” but I didn’t need to finish my sentence, because Robin already knew what to do. She slipped a long finger into the folds of her pussy, and posed for the picture with her clit pinched lightly between her thumb and her pointer finger.

Jesus, I thought, taking the picture.

Who was this woman?

I gave her the phone, and she looked sheepishly at the picture.

“Too much?” she said.

“No,” I said.

Robin looked at me. "Okay... I'm sending it, then."

She tapped her screen.

We looked at each other. Then we laughed at the same time. "Now what?" Robin said.

I shook my head and looked around. "I guess I find some place to hide."

Robin had already thought of that. She had strategically piled some boxes in several locations, including several crates with slats between them, emptied and turned on their sides.

If you knew what it was for, it looked pretty staged, but I couldn't imagine Heath would give that any thought.

"Maybe he won't come," Robin complained, looking at her phone.

"I wouldn't worry about that," I said. I pulled her close to me. "Are you going to tell me what you're re-enacting?"

"I told you – oh," Robin interrupted herself to look at her phone.

"Be there in ten," she read off. "Be naked." She fluttered her eyes up to meet mine. "I guess that answers my question."

My stomach boiled. There wasn't any point to asking if she was really doing this, because she already had.

As if she was reading my thoughts, she put her hands on my chest and stood on her tip-toes to kiss me. "You're into this," she said. "Just relax and enjoy the show. It's already happened, so there's no use worrying about it."

I closed and opened my eyes very slowly. She was right.

Robin slipped her tank top up and over her lean body. "Oh!" she said suddenly. "I have a great idea." She ran toward the stairs. "Stay there!" she shouted at me. "And hide!"

I looked around the cottage in a daze.

Then I got behind one of Robin's box-piles and tested my view.

Heath was there as promised, even sooner than ten minutes.

*

We heard him coming through the forest. Robin waved at me to get down, and then she crossed the kitchen... naked, beautiful, and wearing a pair of black high-heels.

My cock throbbed. It was incredibly slutty.

“Well, well, well,” Heath’s voice said from the porch. “I guess somebody finally got what they were looking for last night.”

I heard his footsteps as he entered the room, and then they were there, in full view: my wife, naked, and Heath, moving in on her, his hand grabbing her ass and taking a big handful of her flesh firmly in his huge paw. “Got that cold beer for me, baby?” He looked her up and down. “Nice shoes,” he growled with approval.

I agreed.

Robin produced the beer from the counter, and Heath took it, pushing her back from him slightly, taking in her naked body.

“You little slut,” he said, after taking a big swig of his beer. “I thought for sure you’d be all worn out after last night.”

Robin shrugged, flippantly, and it sent chills down my spine to see the way it ignited Heath’s expression. “I guess you didn’t wear me out as much as you promised.”

There was a moment of tension, at least for me, as we waited for Heath’s reaction to her challenge. A little bit of animal danger lurked inside of him, if what I had seen from the previous night was any indication. He calmly took another sip of his beer. “Is that a fact?” he said.

I suppose Robin must have smiled at him, because he returned the expression and took one final sip of his beer.

Then, lightning-quick, he had his hands on the back of her head and was pushing her down to the floor. His other hand was working on the button of his shorts, which dropped to the floor with a soft phloomp that I could hear.

I was disappointed at first that I didn’t have the view that I craved, the one I had imagined so often, of Robin’s face as she took Heath’s cock into her mouth. But there was something almost more erotic, however strange it might sound, to watching the back of her head being pushed back and forth against Heath’s groin, listening to the slurp of her mouth as she serviced Heath. I also enjoyed watching his expression as he looked down at my wife sucking on his cock. “That’s it, suck on that cock, you little slut. Get it all nice and ready.”

Robin kept sucking, and it seemed that she was managing to get the whole thing into her throat, because her forehead was pressing his abdomen in slightly with each movement of her head.

Heath slapped her hand away when she brought it up to his shaft. Then he took her wrist, and reached down for the other. He suspended her hands above her head in one hand. “No hands. Get that whole cock in your mouth, all the way to the base, that’s it.... Yeah, go ahead and gag on it, you know you like it.”

The slurping sounds coming from Robin’s mouth got wetter, stickier, and messier as she continued to bob in front of his groin, her hands held above her head, in a position of ultimate submission.

Well, perhaps not ultimate enough for Heath.

“Look up here, while you’re doing that,” he said. “Show me how much you like sucking my cock.”

It grated inside of me, fire-cold, that I couldn’t see Robin’s face as she evidently looked up at Heath’s scowling face, completely submitting to him. He put his hand behind her head, holding it in place, and began to thrust his cock into her mouth.

The sound became a kind of cacking, gagging sound as he fucked her in the face like a rag doll. First he did it slowly, but then he really got going, jamming his cock into her mouth so rapidly it almost seemed impossible, while Robin emitted a sticky, filthy cack-cack-cack. He pushed her hands down to the back of her head, and Robin folded them behind her head, prisoner-style, while he thrust inside of her some more.

He slowed after what seemed like a dirty eternity, and pulled the length of his cock from her mouth in a long, deliberate movement. I could hear the sticky spit strings draining from her mouth, clinging to his cock, slipping down her face.

Heath pulled her head back by the hair, crouching a little, and then I had a very clear view of him as he slapped his meaty cock against her upturned face. The fat slab splatted on her lips and her neck, and Robin darted her tongue in and out of her mouth, licking at the shaft.

He began to rock back and forth over her lips while she licked at the length of his shaft. “Good girl,” he coaxed. “Good little slut. Grab the heels of those slut-shoes of yours.”

Then he grabbed her again with both hands, pulling on her hair, disheveling her ponytail and pushing her hard and deep into his groin. Robin sucked his cock back into her mouth, and now there was just a plosive sound as he face-fucked her, his own face turning wildly red as he neared climax. “That’s it,” he breathed, getting close. “Just take all that fucking cock, get me started off nice with your little whore mouth, oh, yeah, you want a big load of cum, don't you? Here it comes, you little slut, open wide."

I could not believe the way this guy was fucking my wife, using her like a puppet. His face went red and the muscles of his meaty neck strained as he blew his load into Robin's open, willing mouth. He seemed to be coming forever, and I started to worry that Robin wouldn't be able to breathe, but at last he pulled his cock – still hard – from her mouth. It slapped against his thigh with a wet splat.

Heath stared down at her. "Open your mouth, show me that you drank up all that cum."

Jesus.

I could hear Robin panting lightly as she opened her mouth and received a look of satisfaction from Heath. He leaned slightly to the right to get his beer from the counter, still looking down at her. "God, you're such a slut, Mrs. Smith," he said. He touched her lips with his fingers and pulled her mouth slightly open. "You just love eating cock, don't you?"

Robin sucked on his fingertips in answer. Then she stood up and fetched herself a beer from the fridge.

Heath stared at her ass as she turned around, and reached between her legs possessively, feeling her pussy. He smiled, obviously confirming that Robin's cock-sucking performance had turned her on.

Robin took out a tub of margarine, setting it on the table, and then a couple of beers. Heath looked at the beers, and popped his own bottle from his mouth. "Oh really?" he said. Then he looked at Robin, who was plopping into the chair next to him. "You really are a crazy little slut."

Heath took a sip of his beer. "I knew you liked that. Girls like you always like it in the ass."

My mouth fell open and I very nearly made a noise.

I found myself staring at the tub of margarine as Heath sucked on his beer and looked at my wife. His cock was twitching to life at the prospect of what they were about to do, and there was no denying that my own cock was rock-hard, my balls aching. Still... really? Robin had never done that with me, never indicated that she wanted to...

Heath reached for a chair and turned it around so it banged up against the table. "Get up there," he said.

Robin obeyed, climbing onto the chair and placing her hands on the table. Heath stood up and walked around her, his hands all over her sweaty body.

Now Robin was facing away from me at an angle, so I was going to have a great view of Heath violating her. He placed a finger on her ass and played with it, making a circle around the pink pucker of her asshole. He used his hands to pry her asscheeks apart and give himself a nice view.

He plunged his thumb into her ass without warning, and Robin gasped. He roughly thumb-fucked her, his hand spread out on her ass, firmly holding her in place. "If you want some lube, you're going to have to earn it," Heath said, plunging his finger in and out of her ass.

Robin tossed her head back and made a noise that was half-agonized and half-pleased. Then she turned in the direction of the crate I was peering through, and met my eyes. Her mouth was open, and she wasn't smiling, but she had an erotic, glazed, pleased look on her face. She mewled.

"You want me to lube it up before I put it in your ass?" Heath growled.

"Yes," Robin breathed. "It's too big."

"Then what can you do for me, huh?" He pulled his thumb out of her ass and brought it to her mouth. I stared as Robin swirled her tongue over his thumb and then sucked it into her mouth.

"That's good," Heath growled. "That's a start. Now get your hand down there and play with your cunt."

Robin slid her hand under her body and her fingers dipped into her glistening cunt. Heath stood back, picking up his beer bottle, and watched. "That's it," he said. "Play with yourself, make yourself come."

A silence fell over the room, except for the squishing, squelching sounds as Robin expertly played with her swollen clit and brought herself close to orgasm. She began to rock her hips, and I could tell she was very close to coming.

Heath reached out and snatched her hand, and Robin let out a low moan. "Not quite yet," he said. He moved the margarine next to her face. "Now, get your ass ready for me."

Robin dipped her fingers into the margarine, and then extended her hand over her back and rubbed the oil over her asshole in a slow circle.

"Get it in there," Heath said. "This is all you're gonna get."

Robin reached for more, and then brought her arm back again. I stared as she slipped one finger into her ass, and then another. She plunged in deep, and then brought her fingers out to push another glob of margarine in.

It was single-handedly the lewdest thing I had ever seen. My cock was so hard it felt like it was going to split.

“You ready for my cock?” Heath said. He couldn't resist getting his thumb in with Robin's fingers. Together, they pried her ass open, and the pink insides shone in the light. Her tiny pucker was stretching open to an enormous gap.

Heath took his heavy dick in his right hand and brought the bulbous crown to her ass. It covered the hole, and Robin dropped her hand to the table to brace herself. “Oh no,” Heath said. “Get those hands up here and hold your ass open. I want to have a nice view of my cock when I put it in here.”

Robin brought her hands up to her ass and pulled her cheeks apart, and Heath pushed forward.

Robin mewled again and started to breath heavily as the fat inches of Heath's cock slowly sank into her flesh. “Oh!” she yelled. “Oh! It's too big!”

But she remained as she was, holding her ass, digging her fingernails into her own flesh but not trying to escape the huge cock that was moving forward, filling her ass up.

“You can take it, just open up for me like you did last night,” Heath said. “That's it. Fuck, your ass feels good. I can't believe your hubby doesn't get in here. Fuck.”

Heath shoved the final inches of his dick inside my wife with a forceful thrust. His balls slapped against her pussy with a wet slop and Robin yelled, her eyes squinting shut.

And then Heath began to fuck her, while she clutched her own ass. Her sweaty body slid up back and forth on the table as he rammed himself into her faster and harder with every thrust.

“Oh!” Robin cried. “It's so big! I can't take any more, please.”

“You can take it,” Heath assured her. “You're going to take a big load of cum.”

Robin dropped a hand to the table and pushed up.

“Get that hand back here,” Heath said, and Robin obeyed. “Didn’t you tell me I didn’t ride you hard enough, you little slut?”

“Yes,” Robin breathed.

Heath rammed his cock in deep and Robin moaned. “Well, I’m here to fix that.”

He grabbed her by the hips, locking her hands to her ass with his forearms, and lifted her up. Then he started to really ram into her hard. Robin opened her eyes, and looked at me, her expression a little glazed over as she took the punishing thrusts from Heath.

“Get your hand down there and make yourself come,” Heath said. “I want you to squeeze the cum out of my cock.”

Robin dropped her right hand and worked it under her body, and then she started to mewl again as she brought herself closer to coming. At last, she shrieked, and Heath growled with approval. Then he threw his head back and rammed himself hard into her ass, yelling as his seed filled her up. As his cum filled her ass, I could hear every squelching thrust of him finishing himself off.

Heath stood over my wife for a moment, and then at last he pulled out of her ass. His cock landed against his thigh with the same plat I had heard only a night ago, but now I had a direct line of vision to the gaping hole he had left behind, and his white seed oozing from Robin’s still-throbbing ass in waves.

He slapped her playfully on her bottom. “How’s that for a booty call?” he said. “You finally get enough?”

My chest felt like an enormous rock was pressing on it as I waited for Robin’s answer. She rose up to her knees on the chair and shrugged – that same, defiant shrug she had given me a few times over the past few weeks. “Maybe.”

Heath had his beer halfway to his mouth and he exhaled a laugh, almost like he couldn’t believe her. “You gotta give me some time, though, baby. Damn.” He collapsed on one of the chairs. “Get me another beer, would you?”

Robin walked to the fridge and retrieved a beer for himself, and one for her. She opened them, and set hers on the table next to his. “I have to pee,” she said.

She walked past me and looked down at where I was hiding as she did. She gave me a wink and went into the bathroom, closing the door.

I turned my attention back to Heath, who was chugging his beer, obviously a little parched from his workout with my wife. I could see his cock under the table, twitching back to life.

Robin wasn't seriously going to fuck him again, was she?

My cock ached so badly I could feel it in my kidneys.

Robin opened the door and walked out. She passed close to the box pile and leaned over to ruffle my hair. I caught a whiff of her scent; her pussy, the briny smell of Heath's cum, her sweat.

She clicked back across the kitchen, still wearing her heels.

Heath looked her up and down. "What's with the heels?" he said, grinning.

"Oh, I don't know," Robin said. "There are so many things you can do with them."

Heath set his beer down. "You really are a horny little bitch," he said. He took a sip of his beer. "Your husband is one dumb fucker," he added.

Robin brought her bottle to her lips and blew on it gently. "Is he?" she said casually. "How so?"

Heath snorted. "Seriously?"

Robin put her foot up on the table and tipped her chair slightly. "Maybe he's in on it," she said. "Have you thought of that?"

Heath shook his head slightly. "Yeah, right."

Robin shrugged again. "Could be."

Heath looked a little thrown off his game for a second, and it was immensely satisfying to see him struggle to find a smart-ass response.

Then he shrugged. "Whatever. C hacun ses goûts, as the French say."

I couldn't see very clearly, but I think Robin rolled her eyes. "You speak French," she said disbelievingly.

"Oui," Heath said unconvincingly.

"Say something else."

"Jaccques Costeau."

Robin let out a laugh that was genuine and burned me more than anything else she had done that night.

But it was not a moment meant to last. Heath had other things in mind.

"So," he said. "What did you plan on doing with those heels?"

Robin stood up, and took a last sip of her beer. "I'll show you."

What Robin had planned for those heels was to lie face down on the couch and hold them in her hands, with her knees bent and her chin resting on the arm of the sofa. And then to open her mouth to let Heath fuck her with his filthy cock.

The scene was more obscene than the last, and Heath grunted lewdly as his shaft slipped in and out of Robin's mouth with a sticky cacking sound that filled the room along with their tepid sweat and the scent of sex. My own view was limited to seeing only Robin's lips closed around his cock, and the silhouette of her arm stretched back to hold her heels.

This went on for a long time, I suppose because Heath had already dumped two loads into my wife. I was starting to feel sick from the squeeze on my heart and my balls.

Finally, they changed position. Heath slowly pulled his cock from Robin's mouth. Robin's face was streaming with watery tears, running mascara, and sticky spit. "Get over here and ride my cock," Heath said.

He flopped onto the couch, and Robin changed positions, climbing on top of him. I couldn't see anything besides the back of Heath's head, and Robin's long neck as it arched up and back. She opened her mouth as she slid onto Heath's cock, and I could hear the wet squelch of her pussy as it closed around him.

Her tits bounced as she began to ride Heath's cock. She put her hands on his shoulders and started to bob slowly. Heath slapped her ass. "Come on," he growled. "Ride that cock."

"My pussy's so sore," Robin complained.

Another wet slap of Heath's palm on her ass confirmed that he didn't much care. Robin bit her lip and started to move faster.

I could see the precise moment when she caught the fever to finish herself off, and if her pussy was sore it no longer mattered to her. Her eyes went glassy and she lifted her eyes toward where she knew I was hiding. But she bucked on top of Heath relentlessly, faster and faster, until she closed her eyes and let out a strangled moan as she came.

Her body relaxed, and Heath grumbled, but Robin was clearly spent. He thrust up into her pussy a few times, but she went limp like a rag doll.

He threw her onto the couch, stood up to lift her legs. His cock was swollen and seemed thicker than before. Then he pushed Robin's legs up to her head, so I could see the spikes of her high heels, and fell into her. He rammed his cock hard into her pussy in squelching thrusts until at last he groaned and his eyes rolled in his head as he filled my wife's cunt with his third load of cum.

I stared at Robin's high heels, twisted next to either side of her head. She moved her left ankle, rolling it slowly. Heath lifted his body from on top of her and disappeared, collapsing, it seemed onto the couch. Robin's feet dropped, but she stayed where she was.

For a long time, there wasn't anything but the sound of their panting, and my own heart and blood pounding in my ringing ears. My cock was now so painfully hard that I felt sick.

Then I heard two slaps, the pat of a hand on skin. "Okay," I heard Robin say. "You gotta go."

"Huh?" Heath's voice mumbled. "Man. You really are wham-bam, thank you ma'am."

Another friendly slap. "Come on. Seriously."

Heath groaned.

"You can't sleep here." Robin's voice was getting colder by the second.

Heath sat up.

He pushed himself off the couch and found his shorts on the floor. Robin stretched out on the couch. I saw a blanket slide down off the back of it as she covered herself.

Heath leaned over the couch and kissed her. I heard the wet slop of it.

"Give me a call if you want another booty call. I'm going over to Jake's now if you want to hook up later."

Robin yawned. "I have to call Tony," she said.

"That guy," Heath muttered, deprecatingly. Then, sarcastically: "Oh, right. He's in on it."

Robin moved her feet in response. "See ya," she said.

Heath shrugged, pulled a shirt over his head, and shook his head as he walked out of the cottage.

I waited, unsure of what to do, my whole body aching. I slowly rose up at the same time that Robin peeked out over the top of the couch. She was grinning.

"So," she said. "You in on it or what?"

I felt unsteady as I crossed the room, fumbling with my shorts and pulling my shirt over my head. I stood by the couch, and Robin rose to sitting. She took my cock in her hand, and her eyes went wide with amazement. “Looks like yes,” she said.

She flicked her tongue at the end of my cock, and made a wet, leisurely swirl around the crown. She looked up at me, her face sticky and wet with water from her eyes and spit, and her blue eyes burned as she opened her mouth to take my cock into her throat.

I shuddered, and put my hand on her head. “Robin, I’m... not going to last very... long...”

She pulled back and smiled, then licked my cock again. “I know,” she said. “I’m too sore for much of a romp anyway.” She flicked her eyes up at me. “Next time.”

I could feel my climax boiling up from the base of my cock before she even got her lips around my dick, surging forward on those words alone. As I sank into the heat of her mouth and her eyes hovered over my dick, I could see that what she meant was that there would be plenty of time for me.

After all, Robin was mine in the end.

10: GRACIOUS WINNER

“So,” I said. “Where do we go from here with the rest of the week?” I looked around at the unpainted walls, the scraps of paper and trash bags everywhere. There was still a ton of work to do.

Robin and I had lingered in bed, making love tenderly until nearly noon. Now we were famished and planning to run into town for a huge brunch.

“It doesn’t look like you’re going to be done by the end of the weekend.”

Robin looked around and laughed. “Uh... no.”

She found the shoe she was looking for and waved it, then bent over to put it on her foot. “I was thinking...”

I raised my eyebrows.

She shrugged. “Well, there’s really no reason we have to sell right away. Right? I mean, it could be kind of fun to have a cottage.”

I couldn’t have agreed more.

“We could keep it as long as it’s... useful,” I agreed.

Robin touched my chest as she walked toward the door. “Let’s eat. I’m dying here.”

As we drove down the road, passing the visitor center, I slowed down. Heath and Sophie were sitting on lawn-chairs near the square with Bloody Marys in their hands, watching some guys playing Frisbee.

Robin looked over at me and raised her eyebrows. Then she smiled, and rolled down the window.

Driving extra slow, I leaned my hand on the steering wheel and shook it back and forth in a friendly salute, as Robin hung her head out the window (doing so, I’d like to think, so that Heath had a better view into the car).

He wore an astounded look, his perpetual alpha-male confidence noticeably at least disturbed for a moment, as he stared at us going by.

“Toodles!” Robin called out. “We’re going to lunch.”

He still looked surprised as hell as we drove off.

Robin exploded into giggles as we turned out onto the rutted road.

“Did you see his face?” she snorted. “That was great.”

I had.

I smiled smugly. There wasn't much need to say how I felt.

After all, I'm a gracious winner.

END

MORE FROM ARNICA BUTLER

Click on the links to see the blurbs for more stories that are like Claudia because they are interracial, romantic, or fun summer swinger stories. Or maybe you want to change tack and explore darker themes or suspense?

APOLOGY!

Due to a glitch in the Amazon system, I've had to remove direct hyperlinks from my backmatter. I apologize for any inconvenience this causes my readers. Any of these titles can be located on My Author Page

Interracial hotwife books by Arnica:

Interracial Hotwife Bundle

Includes The Tenant, Not Black and White, and Grand Slam for $5.99

Claudia Changes Tack

Mike is on his friends' luxury sailboat with his stunning blond wife Claudia, hoping for nothing more than to convince Claudia that sailing is enjoyable. It turns out that his friends are swingers, in the Caribbean for more than just the sailing. And it turns out that Claudia has a streak of voyeurism in her. The couple embark on a mild adventure of exploration and sexual reawakening on the warm, beautiful beaches of the Caribbean, and it seems like the ideal vacation.

Grand Slam: An Interracial Hotwife Adventure

Charles keeps a secret desire about his wife Zoe. Her sizzling beauty is typically hidden under scrubs and a hair bun, so his fantasy may never happen. But a wrong turn on a weekend getaway turns out to be the opening pitch of a very naughty game, and Zoe seems determined to knock it out of the park.

The Tenant: A Very Naughty Hotwife Novel

Once upon a time, his exotic and incredibly sexy wife Anna loved to indulge Brian's fantasies...to a point. She teased strangers, and took them to cruel, tantalizing places. But she never went all the way. The game ended when Brian and Anna got married, and that was that.

Or was it?

When the gorgeous, charming, and very black John moves into their basement rental, Brian finds that his sleeping desires have been building up all these years. He doesn't just want Anna to tease. He isn't just toying with the idea. He is obsessed with driving his wife to do things with another man. Lewd things. Obscene things.

When he confesses his desires, is Anna just a little bit too willing to make things just like old times? Is she too easy to push over each new line? Brian can't help but wonder if his own obsessions have gone too far...or if Anna's have.

Not Black And White

When a photographer turns Rick on to the idea of watching his wife with another man, Rick feels an obsessive desire inside of himself catch fire. He can't help arrange for his shy, girl-next-door wife Danielle and the rugged, black photographer to cross paths. He knows that Drake Reyes' erotic photographs are not as abstract as they appear, and that Reyes sleeps with his married models. He knows his wife is not immune to Reyes' charms – no one is. He just can't help but imagine what it would be like to stand in his gallery, looking at Reyes' lurid photos, knowing his own wife is the model, knowing how the photos were taken.

But was it really his idea, or have Drake and Danielle been as manipulative as he has?

Please note, this is the novelized version of the short story Black and White, with significant changes to all scenes depicted in the short story, as well as the point of view. There is, however, some repetition: scenarios which occurred in the short occur in the novel. There are plenty of fresh new adult scenes, however. Please enjoy.

Unlocking Noel: A Reluctant Hotwife Novel

Pretty, bookish Noel is not exactly an adventurer in or out of the bedroom, and Spencer has come to accept that. But things take an unexpected turn one year at an annual ski vacation. When they return the following year, Spencer gets to work on unlocking Noel and her (literally) dark desires.

A romantic hotwife novel with a deliciously corruptible and reluctant heroine.

Fun Summer Swinger Titles:

A Summer Vacation

Poor Keith. He's been condemned to a campy cruise with his family and friends. Worse yet, he suspects something is going on between his wife and bad-boy Hank, the husband of a family friend his wife has invited along. Keith's in for a very big surprise – and much more naughty, adult fun than he expected on this cruise – when he finds out what's really going on.

Try To Have Some Fun

Helena and Steve's wealthy, sexy, swinger friends have returned to town. Helena has a child- and work-free stretch of summer ahead of her. There's nothing stopping her from spending her days relaxing by their spectacular pool. No reason not to borrow a tiny bikini, or to maybe sunbathe topless.

Or skinny-dip at one of their wild parties.
One thing, though, will probably lead to another...

Romantic Hotwife Books By Arnica:

Ela's Performance

Peter's sweet-faced and fiery wife is headed back to school for a degree in violin performance. Unexpectedly, Peter finds himself becoming very paranoid about who Ela is spending so much time with, and what she is doing at school so very late. It isn't as if he doesn't have his reasons for suspicion. There's the way his own relationship with Ela started, and their own past experiment with an open relationship before they were married. A few other strange things to fuel his jealous fantasies...

And when he discovers someone from Ela's past has resurfaced, he'll take a chance and confront his own desires and obsessions...but will he get what he really wants?

The Houseguest

Sharing and temptation...and sharing temptation. An old buddy returns to Erik's hometown, down on his luck and getting a divorce. By offering to let Ethan stay with them, Erik sees a way to get closer to making his wife-sharing fantasies a reality. To his delight, Natalie seems to be game for something far more adventurous than ever before. But as things heat up, Erik can't help but wonder: Who's seducing whom?

A Conventional Hotwife

Paul Banks was thrilled when a luggage mix-up five years ago opened a window of opportunity for his long-buried desires. Since that time, he and his wife have been playing a little game at their yearly company conventions, and every year his wife ups the ante, going further into his fantasies. But Kathy Banks might be getting just a bit out of control, and things might be going a little too far...

Or not.

The Hotwife Summer

When Ben and Summer have the chance to spend the summer in Italy, their stale marriage starts to heat up in ways Ben could only have dreamed about. Summer is ready to take his hotwife fantasy all the way, and her choice is a sexy, Italian, Michelin star-studded chef. It's too late to put the brakes on what he's set in motion when Ben discovers the humiliating truth about Summer's choice of man. Summer has a taste for being naughty, and a filthy little plan of her own. Will it be everything he could wish for, or will Ben's cuckold fantasy turn into a nightmare he can't escape?

Body of Research

When ever-suspicious Chris plays private detective on his wife's phone and finds that she uses dozens of dating apps, he worries that his darkest fantasies have come true. And it may not be as delicious as he had imagined.

It turns out that Jen is up to something other than cheating, and the door is open for the two of them to explore the boundaries of their marriage. But in any experiment, the results can be unexpected...

The Hobby Job

Former career professional Laura is going crazy living her stay-at-home-mom life in a small country town. Her husband Conrad has the perfect solution: get a “hobby job.” Laura gets turned on to the idea, and to Conrad's surprise, chooses to wait tables at a run-down restaurant down the street. But she gets a lot more than a hobby job when she meets Nate, a young, hot waiter who has his eyes on her from the start.

Conrad and Laura start on separate journeys, exploring new possibilities in their marriage, and opening up to their hidden desires, fantasies, and needs.

Will their journeys merge, or will Laura's “hobby job” make a hobby of their marriage?

The Hotwife Tattoo

When Greg's brother marries his wild, tattooed, ex-girlfriend Renee, he knows things will be a little complicated. But when Renee befriends his wife Sara, she starts to change in almost unbelievable ways. Greg sees that there is something more to Renee's plans than just friendly sister-in-law bonding. Is Renee's influence all bad, or can Greg get something he has always wanted and never admitted to his wife – maybe even himself?

Explore darker themes by Arnica Butler:

Well-Constructed Affairs

As a hot female construction engineer, John's wife Adria draws a lot of attention at the job site. Which isn't all bad. But when Adria opens the door for him to tell her about his sexual fantasies, he doesn't realize she has opened the door on her own – very dark – fantasy as well. A fantasy she hasn't shared with anyone until now. The couple are off on an exploration of their desires...but is their marriage well-constructed enough to withstand the forces of their fantasies?

Nikita Gets In Too Deep

When Cole and his wife Nik arrive at their usual vacation spot in dull Cape Breton, they're taken by surprise by the most unlikely of next-door neighbors: ultra-sexy Paige and wealthy, commanding Mitch. And these new neighbors are full of surprises. Cole and Nik embark on new adventures in their marriage, trying new things and pushing boundaries they'd never even discussed. It's invigorating, but Cole can't help but wonder if his transformed wife hasn't gotten herself in too deep...

A Gamble: The Making of A Hotwife

Ryan is just an average guy, coaxing his sweet, beautiful wife Victoria into playing into his hotwife fantasy – even if they're just pretending. But a trip to Vegas with his co-worker Brad and his sexy wife Irena turns Ryan's life upside-down. To help Ryan, Brad makes a proposal that could change everything...but it all centers on Victoria's innocence. How far will Victoria go to save what she holds most dear, now that her virtues, her love for Ryan, their marriage, Ryan's desires, and even their finances all hang in the balance? This is a 52,000-word novel about risk and romance, filled to the brim with the hard, steamy scenes you love. Please enjoy!

A Dark Place: Cuckolded In Lagos

Three people are carving out their fortunes in Africa's largest city, but each of them holds a deeper, darker desire. What is the secret desire of the angelic Charlotte, who finds all men's eyes on her after dark in Lagos? What about Andrew, who keeps a secret hunger so buried perhaps he doesn't admit it even to himself? And what could be darker than Clement Ambode's already shadowy “reliability” as an all-purpose contractor in the underbelly of Lagos?

Charlotte, Andrew, and Clement will find themselves in a very dark place when their worlds collide in this ultra-sexy, novella-length cuckold story.

Hotwife Suspense By Arnica Butler

Nila's Long Con

It began with a chance encounter with a man from his wife's past. Rich knew Tennile had some skeletons – of a sexual nature – in her closet, but he never dreamed they were going to come back to haunt them both. Before he can blink, the two of them are embroiled in high-stakes intrigue, with Tennile's reputation and career, their marriage, and a lot of money on the line. There seems to be no way out but to play the game, and Tennile's past might be game-winning asset. In the style of A Well-Laid Trap, this is a thrilling hotwife ride that will keep you hooked until the end.

A Well-Laid Trap

It all begins when Patrick is convinced he saw his wife with another man at a downtown bar.

He begins to investigate. But the more Patrick uncovers about Jordan's activities, the less he understands.

The biggest problem is, Patrick can't decide how he really feels. On the one hand, his wife seems to be betraying him, and on the other, his sex life has reached a scorching pinnacle he never thought possible.

But he had better hold on to his hat, because when he finds out the truth, things will get much, much hotter than he might have ever imagined...