CHAPTER 1

From this towering height, the lifesaver looked like its candy counterpart, a small black ring floating almost dead center in a glowing turquoise rectangle; a targeting reticle in his proverbial night-vision scope. One o'clock in the morning, sunburned and beer-happy after a wonderful day on the yacht, Byron had one goal on mind: toss the volleyball from the rear hand-railing on the sixth deck and land it dead center inside the lifesaver floating on the surface of the fourth deck's swimming pool. Not exactly easy-peasy. More like a million-to-one.

"Double or nothing, Byron," Sully reminded him. Taunted him more accurately. "Your terms, buddy."

"I know," Byron growled, trying to center his mind. He tossed the volleyball up and caught it, doing it over and over, spinning it against the pads of his fingertips, and poking out his tongue like he was Michael Jordan at a penalty throw.

Today had been wild. In the aftermath of the thing they'd done together last night, he'd had no idea how the morning would be. He and Chey had woken in Cody and Carla's bed, and even though he'd watched his wife have crazy role-playing sex with Cody in front of their friends Sully and Scarlet, everything seemed . . . okay. Like after the act was done, all the worry and angst leading up to it had no reason to exist anymore. It was done. It was done, it was fun, and the integrity of the relationship with his wife remained intact. More than intact, more like grown stronger with the scarring and healing of a weak spot. The way a healed broken leg might be stronger than before it was broken.

“Here he is, folks,” Sully said in a low whisper like he was a golf announcer, “just about the worst three-point shooter they have on their team, up against what will prove to be—”

Byron shushed him and Sully snorted. Somewhere behind him, Scarlet giggled. Scarlet and Sully had watched Cheyenne have sex with Cody. Had participated, too, in their own ways. And yet, this morning, no one was shame-faced or regretful, or had shown him a look of derision. Not that he deserved one—it was a gift he’d given Cheyenne, and had enjoyed himself as well—but there was a lingering grime of humiliation that might take a little while to scrub clean. The kindness of his friends surprised him.

When Byron still hadn’t made his shot, Sully resumed his quiet narration: “You can see Byron is taking his time on this shot. He’s got a lot riding on this. Sullivan and Scarlet had beat him four hands on Hearts, and Byron, in an outrageous bid to avoid downing four shots of tequila, decided to throw down the famous double or nothing challenge, and here we are—”

Byron jumped to his toes and tossed the ball. It arced high and outward, and Sully leapt forward to the hand-railing, leaning over to watch it descend. Philippe was laughing with Arlo about something unrelated. Cody swigged his beer. The girls were gossiping. They were going to miss his incredible victory.

Sully hissed with furious anger. “Shit! It went in. It fucking went in.”

Byron was sure it didn’t.

Cody went to the railing and looked over. “It’s not in, dude.”

Sully said, “It went in and bounced out. You son of a bitch, Byron.”

The ball did not go in and then bounce out. The ball didn’t go in at all, but there was some new attraction to jeopardy that Sully couldn’t deny. He felt alive standing in the dark near the top deck of the yacht, hands on the railing, smile on his face and that wonderful lie still on his tongue. With the claim that Byron’s ball had landed inside the lifesaver, he’d submitted his fate to a newfound partner in crime. Byron Bishop was a man he now knew to be as devious and degenerate as he was.

Carla shook her head, frowning with an expression of doubt. “I swear that didn’t go in.”

Sully pushed back from the railing and threw his hands up in surrender. “Why would I lie about losing? I told you, I saw it go in.”

Carla put her hands up now, showing that she really didn’t give a shit either way. “Whatever, Sully. It’s your funeral.”

Cheyenne said, “You heard her, Byron. It’s Sully’s funeral. What song are we going to play?”

Scarlet said, “First, I don’t like the funeral talk. Second, we need to go back down to the lower deck because that’s where I left my drink.”

Cheyenne knocked her wine back. “You didn’t bring yours up?”

“You could’ve offered me a sip of yours,” Scarlet said, looking at Cheyenne’s empty wine glass.

Cheyenne said, “Could have,” elbowed Scarlet and laughed.

“All right,” Cody said. “Let’s back get back to the table.”

They all went single file down the set of stairs to the next deck, overlooking the pool. That’s where their card table was set up with their drinks and bowls of food. Cody was in the lead, and as they made their way to the table, Cody strode and leapt up with a foot on the hand-railing and jumped off the deck to the pool twenty feet below, grabbing his knees and shouting, “Cannonball.” A second later: a loud splash.

Carla sat down, wincing. “Fuck, I hate it when he does shit like that.”

Cody hollered out from below, safe and sound. Nobody else would have the guts to do something like that.

Now Cody called out from below, “I can’t believe you hit that target, Byron!”

Sully and Byron and Arlo leaned on the railing, looking down to see Cody bobbing in the pool, paddling to retrieve the volleyball floating near the corner.

“I can’t believe it either,” Byron said, side-eyeing Sully.

Sully shrugged and said, “What am I going to do? You want me to lie? The ball went in the ring and bounced out.”

Byron shrugged and cocked his head, deciding to assume it now as a victory. “I mean, I am a really good fuckin’ shot.”

Philippe joined them, laying his beefy forearms on the railing. He said, “Double or nothing means you won nothing, you know that, right?”

“Yeah, yeah, but this is a different kind of double or nothing. One where I win something,” Byron said.

“That’s the way I understood it,” Sully said, getting antsy.

Philippe frowned, smirking and studying them. “Yeah? Well, you guys play it wrong.”

“Anyway,” Sully said, “You sunk it, Byron. What’s your pleasure?”

Instead of sitting at the uncomfortable chairs at the table, Cheyenne had plopped down on a padded lounger. She said, “Make it really good, Byron. It’s getting late.”

“I don’t know,” Byron said, rubbing his chin and narrowing his eyes in contemplation.

Arlo said, “A dare? Truth or dare again?”

“I think we’ve played it out,” Byron said.

Lily giggled and said, “Hurry up. I want to know how much trouble he’s in.”

Byron snapped his fingers and said, “Seven Minutes In Heaven.”

Lily frowned, unsure. “Is this is more funeral stuff again?”

Cheyenne said, “No, Seven Minutes In Heaven. It’s that spin the bottle game.”

“We didn’t spin any bottles,” Lily said, Arlo putting his arm over her shoulders.

Byron proclaimed: “Me sinking that incredible basket was the spinning of the bottle, Lily.”

Sully sucked in his lower lip, wondering where Byron would take this. Was he going to put him in a closet with someone? Carla, maybe? Or would he do what Sully kind of a little bit hoped he would do?

Cheyenne said, “So Sully has to go into a closet?”

Cody marched up the steps to their deck, dripping wet, saying, “Good, put him there for the night so we don’t have to hear him.”

Sully winked and showed Cody a middle finger. “Jump off the deck again, hot shot. Second time’s the charm.”

Cody darted around Byron and looped an arm around Sully's neck, trying to put him in a friendly headlock. Sully pushed him away, shouting, "Cody, you asshole, you're soaking fucking wet."

Cody laughed, then charged nearer to Sully again, but instead of grabbing him, just shook his own head, sending his blonde hair in gyrating thrashes and sprinkling Sully's face like he was a golden retriever. Sully recoiled, and Byron or someone kicked him in the ass. Sully went around to the far side of the table where they couldn't get him, picked up a bowl of potato chips and held it at his chest like he would chuck it at anyone who followed. No one did, and he lifted a potato chip and crunched it. "So, what do I have to do? Want me to go in a closet?"

Now, the thing here under normal circumstances would be to say, How about I go in the closet with Cheyenne? But given everything he'd seen last night, it would be too touchy to be funny. An unkind thing to say, and his intention wasn't to be unkind. Sully looked at Lily. "How about it, Lily? You want to go in the closet for seven minutes in heaven?"

Lily made a funny face and crossed her arms over her chest and snuggled up to Arlo, who cinched his arm tighter around his wife. Arlo wasn't offended, though, just smiling.

Sully said, "Don't worry, Lily, I have a feeling Byron isn't going to send me to do that."

"No, there's no fun in it," Byron said, agreeing. "Scarlet..."

Sully's heart jumped, and he began to smile.

Scarlet's eyebrows rose high and her head oscillated towards Byron. "Me?"

Sully eyeballed Byron. They'd been through a lot together on this yacht trip and had got closer, and he wondered where Byron would take this.

Byron said, "Yeah . . . I think I'm liking it. Scarlet, I want you in the closet. Scarlet and..."

Sully crossed his arms over his chest and squeezed. The tension felt amazing. He knew what Byron was going to say before he even said it, but the long moment of silence before Byron made his pronouncement beat on Sully's brain like a taiko drum. At last, he couldn't take the suspense and blurted, "Who, Byron, who?"

Byron dragged it out even longer, like he just couldn't make up his mind.

Jesus, Byron, just say it already!

"I don't know," Byron said. "I'm still thinking..." And, at last, he pointed at Philippe. "Scarlett and Philippe, Seven Minutes In Heaven."

A lowing grew amongst the crowd. That was a terrible thing to do to somebody, send the man's wife into a closet with another man. But while they lowed, there was still a friendly demeanor. They all knew something was happening between Scarlet and Philippe and that Sully didn't like it, but also kind of didn't hate it. And, after all, Byron's choice was the exact reason Sully had lied about Byron sinking the basket. But he still had a duty to be offended.

"Hey, wait . . . hey, come on now," he complained, not pushing it too hard in case someone like Lily jumped in and said Byron was going too far. But no one interjected.

Sully regarded them all, all of them smiling, enjoying the torment, and enjoying the night. So now he assumed the proud husband confident in his wife's moral certitude. "Hey, fine, you want to waste your one-in-a-million shot, you go right ahead."

Cheyenne's brow lowered, unimpressed, and she leaned forward, hooked two fingers into the back of Byron's waistband, and tugged him to sit down next to her on the comfy lounge. She put an arm around his shoulders and whispered in his ear behind a cupped hand. Byron never took his eyes off Sully, listening to Cheyenne, nodding, saying, "You don't think that's good enough? . . . uh-huh . . . uh-huh . . . that's devious . . . uh-huh, yeah . . . oh, okay."

Scarlet scoffed, exasperated. "Oh, come on, Chey."

Byron said, "There's an addendum."

Scarlet said, “Oh, yeah? What’s that?” Her tone was dry and unimpressed, but Sully knew his wife’s every iota of body language and tone of voice; Scarlet was also brimming with excitement. Both Byron and Cheyenne were playing them, twisting them into a situation that neither of them hated, but both of them were too timid to initiate.

Byron said, “Seven Minutes In Heaven, Scarlet and Philippe...”

Scarlet said, “And?...”

Byron said, “And you’re both buck naked.”

CHAPTER 2

It was Scarlet's duty, of course, to feign outrage and defiance in the face of such an affront. However, the truth was her heart galloped in her chest like a wild mustang.

"Oh, you guys are so dumb," she said, smirking, trying not to look as struck as she felt. Were her eyes glossy?

Behind Byron, Chey rolled her eyes, and Scarlet shot her a knock-it-off look. Byron said, "You know the rules, Scarlet."

"Why are you coming after me, Byron? Sully's your target."

Byron, surprisingly bold, said, "I'm getting Sully through you. Besides, whassamatter with Philippe? What, you afraid of him?"

Philippe sidled alongside her, smiling, his thick black beard spreading to make room. She was pretty sure he had dimples under there, but wasn't sure. She'd always known him with the beard. He said, "Yeah, like our drunk friend said, whassamatter with me?"

"I'm only a little buzzed," Byron muttered.

Scarlet said to Philippe, “Sounds like you want to get naked in the closet with me—of course you’re not going to object.” Though harsh sounding, she showed Philippe a flirty smile.

They cupped her hands around her mouth and called out an “ooh” sound, saying then, “Sick burn, sister.” Then, slapping a hand down on the lounge’s padding: “Now get in the fucking closet.”

Carla found an empty closet on the second floor, the same floor as Philippe’s suite. No one was using two of the rooms, and all seven of them packed in one of them, laughing with each other like a bunch of dumb high-schoolers. The vibe had altered somewhere in the last twenty-four hours. But how could it not? Here’s how she saw it: these audacious party games at first had been hilarious challenges luring each other into exhibitionism for the sake of fun. All involved warmed up to the idea of carefree shenanigans, and now tonight’s challenges were more a matter of rote protocol; a path to get someone—shit, her—into position so the rest could serve as spectators. Voyeurs. All the friends, even Arlo and Lily at this point, were enjoying the ancient-Roman level of debauchery. Cody was Caligula, and Carla was his love-witch Milonia.

They ran to the made-up bed and tossed her butt onto it, almost spilling her wine. Byron joined her, and the other couples surrounded them, her and Philippe, shepherding them into the space in front of the open closet door.

“You guys look like angry villagers with pitchforks,” she said.

Philippe agreed and upped the ante. “Or some Children of the Corn cult or something. One of us, One of us, you know? Like that.”

Carla smirked to one side, folding her arms over her large breasts. “You’re not thinking of backing out, are you?”

Cody said, “Why would he back out? Close me in a closet with Scarlet any day of the week.” He eyed her with comical menace, looking her up and down like she was a tasty piece of meat.

“Gee, thanks,” she said. “I’m just a tool to be wielded against my husband. I’m starting to feel like a sex worker now.”

Sully stepped into place. “No, you’re not,” he said, eyeing her a little like Cody did, but her husband had a wilder look in his eyes; a crazed excitement, much like he’d had in the cargo of the prop plane before they went skydiving last year. Like he was about to do something death-defying and he couldn’t believe how close the thrilling moment was coming. Something about his wild-eyed dread, his fight-or-flight expression, made her so hot. Right now, without even glancing down, she knew Sully’s rod was at full throttle. Over her. Specifically over her. His wife.

She added to the thrill for him, feigning now like her backing out was imminent. She sighed and crossed her arms and said, “This is so juvenile.”

“The words of the haughty but frightened,” Carla said.

“I’m not frightened.”

Philippe said, “What about me is so scary?”

Byron chuckled, and Philippe smirked and rolled his eyes, figuring what provoked Byron’s chuckle. Chey laughed and got up, strolling closer and sipping her wine. Byron watched her the whole time—again, another man with that hungry look in his eyes, looking at Chey’s skinny butt like it was a tenderloin.

Scarlet let Sully off the hook, jabbing a thumb over her shoulder, saying, “All right, Shrek, get in the closet with me, our friends need to be entertained.”

Someone swatted Scarlet’s ass really hard when she turned to the closet, and she yelped and spun around, angry. But it was Cheyenne, smiling wide. Chey leveled a finger at her and winked. “That makes you Donkey.”

Scarlet made an exasperated sound in her throat and rolled her eyes as high as they would go. “No, this isn’t juvenile at all.” Truth was, her heart was hammering at the opportunity to get weird with Philippe.

She turned to the closet, Philippe standing with his hand gestured forward in the traditional “Ladies First” pose. Chey whisper-shouted: “Aren’t you guys supposed to be naked?”

“I’m not undressing in front of you all standing with your clothes on, watching me.”

“You were naked earlier.”

“The naked people—because I wasn’t the only one—separated ourselves from the clothed so they wouldn’t be uncomfortable.”

Sully said, “You didn’t want to subject anyone to unrequested nudity.”

“That’s right,” she said.

Byron, from the bed, said, “No, you stripped right in front of us first, Scar. Your thing was eye-level.”

“My thing?” she said in an offended tone.

Philippe touched her shoulder. “Come on, Scarlet. Don’t negotiate with them. We’ll take our things off in the dark.”

She eyed all her friends defiantly and turned in a slow circle, going into the closet ahead of Philippe. Once in, she turned and scowled at Chey, and Chey scowled back harder, shaking her head and crinkling her nose. Scarlet winked and Chey almost went into a giggling fit, putting a hand over her mouth to stop the laugh from bursting out.

Then Philippe stepped in with her. His bulk stuffed the space full, and she had to press her back to the side wall if she didn't want to touch him.

“Cramped,” he said, sheepishly.

“Like a sardine can,” she said.

Cody said, “Plus you’re going to come out of there all oily and greased up.”

Carla said over her shoulder toward Arlo, “What would you serve them with?”

Arlo sipped his Scotch. “Definitely lemon. Lemon and some basil.”

Scarlet reached past Philippe to shut them off, sliding the door closed. Now all her friends would be looking at their own reflection in the mirrored door. Someone outside the closet shut off the room lights and it pitched the closet in near total darkness. The bed springs squeaked as more people sat on the bed, laughing and saying funny things to one another. Very close to the door, Carla said, “Im going to need some clothing passed out to me really soon, guys.”

“Yeah, yeah,” Scarlet said.

They were quiet a moment and then Philippe said to her, “I guess this is the part where we take our clothes off.”

“Yup.”

“You cool with this.”

“Yup.”

“No, I mean really.”

“Yeah, really,” she said, smiling in the dark, liking how they couldn’t read each other’s expressions, only vibe off the things they said. It was kind of fun in its isolation. “I’ll go first if you’re uncomfortable.” She lifted her shirt up over her head.

“I’m not uncomfortable,” working off his own shirt by the sound of it.

“I know,” I saw you strutting your stuff down by the pool.”

“I saw you, too,” he said, and now she could hear him do down the zipper in his shorts—and actually gulped like she had trouble swallowing. It was crazy that this insane thing was actually happening. This was what she’d wanted.

“We’re not seeing anything we haven’t seen already.”

“We’re not seeing anything, period.”

“Exactly,” she said, pushing her shorts down but trying not to accidentally knee the guy in his junk. It was kind of a big target.

“Just two people comfortable with their nudity, getting naked, and it’s no big deal.”

“Right,” she said, the shorts getting to the point mid-thigh where they fell to the floor via gravity. She felt the draft of Philippe’s shorts as they fell to the closet floor.

“Hurry up, guys,” Carla said through the door.

He said, “You want to move back?”

“Whoa, careful, you bragger. What, you’re worried you’ll poke my eye out with your thing?”

“No, I’m worried I’m going to knee you in the stomach when I take off my underwear. Move back, I’ll turn around and knee the wall by accident instead of, you know.”

“Got it, got it,” she said. “Then we switch, and you back up while I get my undies off, too.”

“Teamwork,” he said, and then they went through the rigmarole of making space for the other to get their underwear off.

Carla said, “Guys?”

“Yeah, yeah,” Scarlet said. “I think we’re about ready.”

“Pass your clothes out to me,” Carla said.

“We can’t.”

“Why not?”

“We can’t bend over and pick them up, there’s no room in here. What kind of luxury yacht has such a small closet?”

“Sounds like a you problem.”

Philippe said, “Open the door a little and we’ll kick our clothes out.”

“Fine,” Carla said, and opened the door enough they could each push out their clothing with their bare feet. Philippe closed the door again and now they were trapped alone in a tiny space, both of them completely naked. She swore Philippe stood with his hands hiding his genitals. She stood plainly, arms at her side, waiting for her vision to adjust to the intense darkness.

Philippe said, “Just two naked people totally comfortable with their bodies.”

“Yup. Pressed up close and personal in the dark. No, big deal.”

Outside, Carla itemized their clothing, counting out each piece to the crowd. She couldn’t find Scarlet’s panties and asked Sully if Scarlet wore panties and Sully told her sometimes Scarlet did, but not all the time and Carla asked through the door if Scarlet had panties on still.

“No,” she answered. “I kicked them out there. Does this count towards our time?”

“No, of course not,” Carla said, her hand scratching the rug outside the door, searching for Scarlet’s errant panties. “The clock starts when your clothes are out here, Scarlet— Hey! I found them!”

“I told you,” Scarlet said.

Cody said, “They are officially naked!”

Some idiot applauded.

Scarlet said, “Okay, start the clock.”

Byron said, “Starting . . . Now!” Someone began a ticking clock sound.

Both she and Philippe took deep lasting breaths, sighing—not uncomfortable or anything, just unsure what to say to one another locked into a tiny closet.

Philippe sounded like he opened his mouth to say something, but nothing came out. Then, shortly after: “What’s with the Shrek stuff, Scar? What, am I really some kind of monster?”

In the dark she frowned. There was a twinge of humor in Philippe's voice, but it rode on a sincerer tone. You could forget yourself when you were ribbing someone, especially when that someone was a big, handsome guy. Especially when they were a big handsome guy who ran his own successful carpentry business, making high-end furniture, and that person was masculine and hairy and male-personified with a gigantic dong. But Philippe wasn't arrogant. . . . God, what if the guy was sensitive?

"You're a big man, Philippe," she said, wincing at the very close and loud sound of her voice in the cramped space. It was already getting hot in here. "And, you know, Shrek was a big likable lug. The whole point was defending you because of—"

"I'm kidding, Scarlet."

"Oh," she said, rubbing her arm. Philippe chuckled his low rumbling sound, and she chuckled, too. "You do have a greenish tinge."

"No, I don't."

"In certain lights."

"Like an ogre?"

“Yeah. Or pea soup.”

“Maybe I should see a doctor.”

“That’s up to you. What’s your insurance like?”

More chuckling. In the close confinement like this, her most attuned sense obliterated, his chuckle vibrated on her skin in an arousing way. It reminded her of being in a cave with a grizzly bear. A big, good-looking grizzly bear who turned her on a little. A little more than a little.

“Seven minutes is a long time to stand still like this,” he said, sighing.

“We could play I Spy.”

“Okay,” he said, like they weren’t both in total darkness. “I spy with my little eye...”

The tip of his finger poked her right in the belly button and she jumped and gulped and then broke up laughing. “Are you fucking kidding me? Did you just poke me in the belly button?” She rubbed her stomach with her palm.

He said, “No—uh-oh, what if there’s someone else in here with us?”

“Or something,” she said with a gasp of fright. “Were you trying to poke me in the belly button?”

“The truth?”

“Hey now, Philippe.”

“So that was your belly button?”

“You have great aim.”

“I have a good sense of scale.”

“Like you know my height, your height, and can tell by my voice where my navel would be?”

“Triangulation.”

“Like a bat.”

“Again with the monster stuff.”

“Not a vampire bat,” she said, laughing, “more like—”

“Like the bats you cuddle up with?”

“How about Batman?”

He was quiet a second, like he was considering it. “Yeah,” he said at last, “I like that. Batman.”

“All right, Mr. Batman, let me try.”

“Go ahead.”

“Okay, wait,” she said, squinting in the dark like it might help her see better, raising up a pointing index finger. “Say something...”

“You gotta tell me what you’re aiming for first.”

“Don’t trust me?”

“No.”

“I’m offended. Okay— your left nipple.”

“My left nipple?”

“That’s what I said.”

“Go for it.”

“I can hear you standing straighter.”

“Here’s my voice,” he said. “Find my nipple. You got one shot.”

She drew a circle in the dark, pinpointing where she imagined her target might be, then jabbed it forward, hitting flesh.

Philippe laughed like he might be a little ticklish and moved back.

She said, “What was that? Did I get it?”

“That was my bicep,” he said.

“So I was close. Make a muscle.”

“Why?”

“Are you making one?”

Movement in the dark. “Yeah.”

She moved her hand around in the inky black, found his forearm—a thick and massive forearm—then grabbed the ball of his hard bicep and squeezed it. It was like a river rock. “You’re strong,” she said.

“Make a muscle,” he said.

“Me?”

“I know, but I don’t lift weights.”

He said, “Are you making one?”

She sighed, raised her arm and flexed. “Yes, I’m making—”

Fucking guy poked her right in the belly button again.

She yelped and leapt back, laughing and rubbing her stomach. “What the hell, Philippe?”

They both snuffled giggles in the dark, and now she joined index finger and middle finger together and jabbed straight out, not caring where she got him, just stabbing really hard. She hit his hairy muscle and her fingers folded. Philippe bristled and bumped the door with his elbow.

“Are you ticklish?”

“No.”

She made claw-hands in the dark.

Philippe anticipated it, saying, “Don’t, Scarlet.”

“I’m merciless, Philippe,” she said grimly, like a movie super-villain—then launched a double-handed claw attack at his sides, finding his hard body, scrambling up his ribs like rabid spiders, scurrying all over him while he freaked the fuck out, grunting, laughing, hitting the walls with his elbows, hitting the door and making it shake. He hooped his arms around her, trapping her arms against his sides and holding her that way.

From outside, Sully said, “What the heck’s going on in there?” Cheyenne brayed a drunken laugh.

“We’re fine,” Scarlet said, her voice tight and breathless. Her naked front squeezed against Philippe’s naked front, her arms pinned to his sides, trapped underneath his thick, powerful arms. His body hair felt warm and comforting against her bare skin. The threatening bulk of his huge penis and scrotum squashed against her stomach, and in the dark, the feeling was alluring, arousing, and making her wet. Her breaths came damp and hot. Philippe’s did, too.

Philippe raised his voice to be heard on the other side of the door. “How long is it?”

Byron said, “I think that’s Scarlet’s job,” to Cheyenne and Cheyenne brayed laughter again, a big annoying hee-haw sound usually reserved for when Chey drank too much Jagermeister at the sorority functions. She actually kind of loved that laugh.

Sully said, “Forty-five seconds.”

“We have a long way to go still,” she whispered.

“Uh-huh,” Philippe hummed.

His chest hair bristled on her lips. Her hard nipples scored his skin. The prominent package of his ample man-flesh swelled against her. His organ was growing.

CHAPTER 3

The only thing Sully saw was his own harrowed reflection staring back at him; a bewildered man sitting on the edge of a bed with his entire lowered-brow focus on what could be happening on the other side of the mirror. His gaze burned on the silvered glass, imagining the awful carnal display beyond.

What were they doing in there?

Why was the door shaking?

Did Philippe have those big rough hands on Scarlet right now? Were they stroking up and down Scarlet's smooth and freckled flesh?

Sully rubbed his hands up and down his bare thighs and squeezed his knees. There was an intense tightness in his belly and under his balls that he loved. Or hated. It was hard to tell. But there was no argument that it made him feel electric. More alive than he'd felt in ages. He rode the raging crest of jealousy right now, surfing into shore with sick hurt whipping through his hair and the hardest possible erection thrust up from his crotch like a raised fist. He was a-live. Capital A-L-I-V-E. Blood pounded through his body like an upstream dam had collapsed, and a hurricane of rushing lust thundered through his town's streets and alleys.

Byron got up from sitting on the bed and came around Cheyenne, walking through Sully's field of vision to come sit next to Sully, on his other side. Sully still stared at his own reflection—knowing his wife was naked with another man just beyond the quarter-inch of glass.

Byron side-eyed Sully, leaning forward with his forearms on his knees, holding a glass of whisky that was now mostly ice. Sully didn't look over, and Byron continued to stare.

At last Byron said, "Are you mad or are you glad?"

Sully grumbled through pursed lips, still staring at his reflection. "Both," he said through gritted teeth. "Both, I guess."

Byron nodded his head in slow, exaggerated wags, then bumped Sully's knee with a fist, saying, "You're welcome, by the way."

Philippe said, "If I let you go, will you swear you'll stop trying to tickle me?"

"I'm not sure," Scarlet said, not wanting to lie. "It's kind of funny."

“Yeah, for you.”

“I didn’t claim it was otherwise.”

Philippe said, “What if I try tickling you?”

“I’m not ticklish.”

“That’s what I said to you.”

“Yeah, but I’m really not ticklish,” she lied.

“I would’ve said that, too.”

“Is this your way of convincing me it’s okay if you try touching me all over? That’s kind of creepy, dude.”

He laughed, and she liked the way it felt to be held so tight against him and feel laughter rumble through his warm, furry, muscular body.

“I’m really starting to think you’re just as ticklish as I am,” he said.

“If you touch me I’ll scream for the cops.”

“Uh-huh,” he said, beginning to sway with her like they were slow dancing.
“Don’t worry, I’m not going to tickle you.”

He swatted her bottom, and she gasped. The bouncing feel of her butt cheeks made all sorts of unexpected pleasure shiver through her sweating canal. She’d felt that right in her bad place. She sucked her lips between her teeth and bit them, staring wide eyed in the dark somewhere where the back wall should be. With her head pressed against Philippe’s chest this way, she could hear the beating of his heart. His big, powerful heart. That was sending blood to that huge sausage between his legs. It got her to her tip-toes, flexing her stomach against the carnal pleasure swirling up from her core—but that mashed his prominent maleness against her stomach harder. Philippe grunted as though with discomfort. She said, “Is there a problem?”

“Kind of,” he muttered.

“I think I feel the problem,” she said.

“Sorry,” he said.

She chuckled to let him know it was okay, working her arms under his a little farther, latching her fingers together behind the small of his back to make herself more comfortable. She could feel her wedding ring against the scissoring fingers of the opposite hand and smiled. Sully must be going wild.

She said, “So this is it, huh? This is how we’re going to ride out the time? Two naked adults clutched together like at our high school dance, latched in a clutch so we won’t tickle each other.”

“That’s how it’s turned out,” he said.

“And we’ve got a growing problem?”

“We do,” he said, flat and uninterested, like they were at a town council meeting.

“It’s growing into me,” she said.

“It feels like it’s folded,” he said.

“That doesn’t sound comfortable.”

“Do you want to adjust it?”

“I don’t want to let your arms go.”

She bit her lips a second again, her heart rate picking up. “Do you want me to fix it for you?”

But Philippe said, “No, I’d have to let one of your arms go.”

“Hold on,” she said, adjusting herself, pushing her hips and pelvis back—

Philippe tightened his grip on her arms.

“Ow,” she said. “Hey, relax, I’m not trying to tickle you. Move your hips back.”

He moved slow, like he still didn’t trust her, easing his hips back as well.

“It’s stuck to me,” she said.

They both shook their hips and bounced their weight on their toes. Philippe’s oversized equipment had stuck to her belly. It was hot in the closet and only getting hotter. It also felt spring-loaded—like when she gave it space to move, it scissored outward against her. But at last, its own weight peeled it from her hot skin and his package fell between them.

Right away Philippe was relieved. “Oh my god, that’s better,” he sighed.

“Yeah,” she said, “I’m not so sure about that.”

His growing penis had fallen between them, and now the dorsal ridge pressed right against her cloven mound. And just like before, it seemed to want to spring outward, putting pressure right against her most exciting erogenous zone.

“Oh shit,” he said, realizing what he was feeling.

Her scissored fingers were slick with the sweaty heat this predicament brought. She didn’t want to let him go, but this contact was forbidden.

He said, “I’ll let you go if you face the other way.” His voice had a desperate, lusty tone. Being trapped in the tight hot space with him, naked, touching, playing, had turned her on incredibly—and had obviously done the same to Philippe. “Okay,” she whispered, knowing it was the right thing, but a little disappointed her turning around would end the naughtiness.

As they came apart, Philippe lifting his arms a little so she could slip out, she said, “Or…”

“Or what?”

“Let me adjust it.”

“Okay,” he said, and she could hear him swallow afterward.

Now with her arms free—and Philippe trusting she wouldn’t take advantage of his surrendered control—she moved back, not too far, already not liking the chill on her skin being apart from his warm body, and let her hand go down. This was it. When her fingertips slipped over the skin of his penis, he chuffed in an excited burst of air and flinched.

She said, “This thing’s not ticklish, too, is it?”

“A little,” he admitted. “Not the penis so much, it’s, you know...”

“You’re a mess,” she said, and they both laughed.

She formed a C-shape with her hand, clutching his enormous hanging—and half-hard—penis, and was shocked how wide it felt in her grip. Under her breath, she muttered, “You have the hugest fucking penis,” hefted it upright—it was so crazy big—pushed it against his own body, then let it go and returned to hugging him, latching her fingers around behind his back once more. She made a satisfied sound, laying her cheek on his hairy chest. His penis was a squishy column between them, and the feel of the tip so close to her breasts drove her wild. This was the beginning of what she desired: to check his thing out, to play with it, to mess around with such a freaky totem of masculinity. Her pulse pounded in her ears and she felt the tickle of wetness in her creases. Philippe's arms returned their bear-hug around her.

She said, "You must be popular on cold winter nights."

His arms hugged her a little more, not trapping her arms, but embracing her. His huge hands crossed over behind her back, his palms resting just above the curve of her ass cheeks. The column of flesh between them grew larger.

Philippe said, "This isn't driving Sully too crazy?"

"It is. But it's good," she said.

"He's cool?"

"He's very cool."

She sensed Philippe nodding. "I like Sully."

"Yeah, he's okay," she said.

They both laughed in their mutual embrace, and Philippe did something bold and unexpected. His big, strong hands slipped lower and held her ass. It was warm and welcome and exciting. She let him know it was okay by nuzzling her cheek against his furry chest. Philippe coddled her ass, thumbs smoothing the flesh.

A knot of deep carnal lust tightened around her heart and she went lightheaded. A strong mating urge squeezed her brain, and she had to shake it away.

He said, “I heard a little about last night.”

“Cody can’t keep his mouth shut,” she said, squinting her eyes hard and chasing away the feeling of hungry need.

“Nope. Carla.”

“Carla wasn’t even there.”

“Anyway,” he continued. “Sounds like you guys are cool.”

Every breath she took swelled her chest against Philippe’s hardening cock. Their skin stuck together when she inhaled, peeled apart when she exhaled. There was something about the simple act of breathing now that imitated copulation. Breathing had become sexual.

“We’re cool,” she whispered. He was taller than her, so his crotch was higher, but seriously, his erection had grown up between her breasts. Like, what-the-fuck?

“So, I don’t know what that might mean to you guys, but, you know, if you, say, wanted to—”

The sliding door rumbled open like lightning, so fast and hard it banged against the far end of the frame. She shrieked and Philippe grunted and they shoved each other away. Their stuck-together skin tore apart, and she felt cold and naked and exposed. Everyone was laughing.

“Holy fuck,” Philippe shouted with laughing shock.

Scarlet could make out the shape of Carla standing hip-shot, one hand on her waist. Though the lights weren’t on, the room was nowhere near as dark as the closet had been. She could make out everyone’s shapes, standing, seated, all looking into the closet. Her heart beat like deafening drums inside her skull.

Philippe said, “No way that was fucking seven minutes, Carla. What the hell?”

Someone flipped on the lights and Scarlet shimmied to hide her naked body behind the half-closed side of the sliding closet door. Philippe was caught out in the open—but he’d already tucked his massive organ down between his legs. He had nothing to show. Sully stared into the closet, blinking against the new brightness, cheeks hollow, eyes dark and still showing a savage electricity.

Carla smiled. “The best part of Seven Minutes In Heaven is yanking open the door at six minutes. Everyone knows that.”

CHAPTER 4

Sully hustled Scarlet into their bedroom and closed the door. He'd tried to pull her down to the engine room because it was closer than their bedroom suite. They were both turned on like crazy, but thank god Scarlet had a clearer head than him and steered them to a place where they had a comfortable bed to fuck on. It would have been pretty hot to fuck his crazy wife in the engine room of a multimillion dollar yacht, but it was probably noisy in there and they needed to talk as well as fuck right now.

Both of them were quick to get on the bed, two married people brimming with unexpected pleasure provoked by near-adulterous behavior. On their knees, they scrambled to remove their clothing as fast as they could. Sully threw his shirt to the floor, saying, "Cody calling Philippe Buffalo Bill—is that more of that pretend-cowboy shit?"

Scarlet stopped struggling out of her shirt and popped the top of her head back out of the shirt's neck hole, just showing her eyes scrunched in quizzical lines. "What?"

Sully grabbed his wife's shirt with impatient urgency and pulled it off. Scarlet bowed forward to let him take it, righted herself with her arms folded behind her back, untying her bikini-top strings. The way she posed like that—knees apart, back arched, bikini-clad breasts thrust forward, hard nipples bulging out the fabric—had his sex motor pegged. Twelve cylinders thunder-powering his rock-hard crankshaft. The way he'd yanked off Scarlet's top had turned her red hair to a sex-tossed tangle. All that mated with the sultry look in her beautiful eyes, and his desire for her became too much to bear. He clutched her slender shoulders, tossed her onto her back, and climbed over top of her.

One arm ended up trapped behind her back; it looked uncomfortable, yet Scarlet was laughing. Her bikini bra lay loosely draped on her chest, breasts swaying and jostling as she struggled her arm free. Sully growled and snatched the bikini top away, clenching it in his teeth, shaking his head like a pit-bull with its favorite chew toy. He spat the fabric out of his mouth, then glowered at his wife balefully, snarling, showing her all the nefarious things he intended to do to her body. Her sexual destruction was imminent.

As he mouth-lunged then tongue-bathed his favorite nipple, Scarlet laughed and caressed his head, running her long fingernails through his hair. She said, “You didn’t get that?”

Still tonguing her nipple, he gasped, “Get what?”

Scarlet giggled with glee and cradled his head. “Buffalo Bill.”

Sully raised to his knees, still straddling Scarlet, ripped down his zipper and yanked open his fly. His mighty underwear-stretching erection bulged out of the gap. “What’s there to get?”

Scarlet’s eyes dashed to what he’d just revealed, and she scooted upright to hand-caress its bulging belly. “Ooh, Sully, what do we have here?”

They worked together to get his shorts down, and once they were, Scarlet was all over his throbbing, naked cock, kissing it, stroking it.

And for a whole half minute his mind was obliterated, and all that consumed him was the heavenly pleasure of intimate togetherness with the woman he loved. Everything she did to him was incredible, and the borderless fortune of Scarlet in his life bloomed behind his eyes in a pinpoint spot center, above-brow, where artists drew the third eye in psychedelic paintings.

“This is so crazy,” he whispered up toward the ceiling as Scarlet sucked his cock, her slick, soft mouth bathing a mouthful of the end of his cock in pure liquid lust. While he’d endured seven minutes—no, six minutes, thank you, Carla—in hell, Scarlet was secluded in heaven with Philippe. His wife had a crush on another man’s penis. Though he’d been seized with all kinds of moral, philosophical, tortured-mind challenges while Scarlet sealed up naked with Philippe in the closet, now that he was reunited and alone with his crazy woman, the spike of excitement right now made what he’d endured more than worth it. This was hands-down the most thrilling chapter in his life. Well, at least in his sex-life. Turns out his partner was freaky and kinky and he was too, and neither of them thought the other would be interested in getting freaky. They were both very wrong. When Carla had yanked open the door, even though it was dark in the closet, Sully was sure Scarlet and Philippe were embracing. face to face. Junk to junk. Then the guy comes out of the closet, acting a noble gentleman, retrieving Scarlet’s clothing that Carla refused to surrender. Everyone’s eyes were on Philippe—he was a good-looking guy with a great body—but he’d tucked his privates between his legs so no one could see it. Cody had laughed and pointed and called Philippe—

“So what is it,” he asked, “what’s Buffalo Bill?”

Scarlet chuckled around his cock, let it slip from her mouth, and looked up at him. All sexy eyes and love and puffy cock-sucking lips shining with saliva. She got up to her knees like he was, looking him in the eye, smiling, having so much fun. She pushed his dick downward, saying, “Buffalo Bill. You know, Silence of the Lambs.”

He narrowed his eyes with incredulity. “Silence of the Lambs wasn’t a Western, Scarlet.”

“You’ve got cowboys on the brain, buddy,” she said, lightly butting her forehead up against his, “ever since you saw Cody raw dog Cheyenne.”

“Raw dog? Since when do you say raw dog? You sound like the guys I work with.”

“Girls say raw dog, Sully. Boys don’t own that word.”

“Two words.”

“Mansplainer,” she said, then cranked his erection down even harder, trying to stuff it between his legs. He was way too hard right now to get tucked.

“Ow, quit cranking, you’re going to snap it,” he said, resisting her.

Scarlet laughed and let his cock go. It bounced upward almost hard enough to smack his belly. “The serial killer was called Buffalo Bill, Sully. Remember he tucked his stuff down in that scene when he was looking at himself in the mirror?” She took up a grip on his wagging cock again and stroked. The pleasure got him lightheaded.

“So esoteric,” he said, groaning. “Cody needs better references.”

“Made me laugh,” she said. Then, narrowing her eyes to sultry, teasing slits, she said, “You know what didn’t make me laugh?”

“What?” he said and prepared himself for something dirty she would say.

“Seeing the back side of Philippe’s tuck job, Sully.”

“Oh, god,” he sighed. “Here we go.” His wife’s fascination with male genitalia was a prompt of wild sexual excitement he couldn’t fathom. There was no denying it though: Scarlet’s kink entertained him in the wildest way.

Scarlet dropped her hand between his thighs, down near his knees. “Babe, when he bent over, his penis touched the back of his calf.”

“You made him hard?”

“I wasn’t even trying,” she said in a whispered sound of disbelief.

“That guy didn’t stand a chance locked in a closet with you, not a thing on that beautiful body. Did he touch you?”

“A little,” she said, smiling and coquettish.

“You guys didn’t kiss, did you?”

She shook her head no.

“Did he try to kiss you?”

“No,” she said and laughed.

“Did you try to kiss him?”

“I’m not interested in kissing him. Not really.”

“I know what you’re interested in,” he said, looking into her eyes.

Sully worked even closer to her, their gazes locked. “Tell me: did my girl get what she wanted?”

Scarlet bit her lips and shook her head no in slow wags. “Not yet.”

“Aw, you didn’t?” He was legitimately disappointed. “You didn’t play with his thing?”

“No,” she said, scrunching her nose. Instead, right now she was playing with her husband’s thing—and that was okay with him. Then she whispered, “I touched it.”

His tone brighter: “You did?”

Scarlet said, “He’s ticklish.”

For some reason he found that endearing. And yet, he frowned and said, “Now I’m a little jealous.”

“Because he’s ticklish?” Scarlet cupped his balls and kneaded them gently.

“Because you were playing around and having fun with him.”

“But I held his penis. What about that?”

“I expected that.”

“You don’t like the unexpected.”

He thought about it. It was strange to have such new and weird ideas to work out in your adult head when he pretty much figured he had life figured out. “You know what? I like the unexpected. I like that jealous feeling, you playing around and tickling Philippe.”

“Well, I have something new and unexpected for you.” Her hand went up and down his slippery shaft in knee-trembling strokes. Her new mastery of him was astounding, and it was like they were on the precipice of something even bigger and better.

“What is it?”

He was prepared to hear his wife had changed her mind and decided that maybe she did want to have penis-in-vagina sex with Philippe after all. But, instead, she said, “I want to cuddle up with him.”

He laughed and then she laughed, both of them looking into each other's eyes, recognizing how crazy this yacht trip had begun. She even still held his raging erection, underhanded and petting the top side with the other hand.

“Cuddle up with him? I thought you were going to say something else.”

“I like the body hair.”

“You do?” He couldn't help himself; finding his wife so honest and adorable, he cupped her perfect face in his hands. This was an openness he could never have expected. They were becoming closer than best friends, closer than husband and wife.

She said, “I didn't think I would, but I really like it.”

“I can't grow any body hair. I can grow a beard if you want.”

“You're perfect the way you are, baby. You're exactly what I want.”

He said, “But...”

“But I kind of want to snuggle up with Philippe.”

“Like spoon with him?”

“Yeah,” she said, and they both broke up laughing again, never looking away from each other.

“That’s the craziest thing I’ve ever heard.”

She made a what’re you gonna do face and shrugged a shoulder. He squashed her cheeks in and it pooched her perfect mouth outward. He kissed her, long and enduring, filled with happiness, play, lust, and love. He said, “We’re going to make it happen, baby. I swear.”

Scarlet said, “Hey,” guiding his hands away from her face and holding them in her own.

“Yeah?”

“And you’re going to get what you want.”

He said, “What’s that?”

“Whatever you want it to be. I mean it. You want Carla?”

He snuffled laughter, holding hands down at their thighs, looking into her eyes with love, his cock shooting up between them like a clenched fist, talking about ridiculous things. “I’ll think about it. Right now, I’m all about you.”

“And I’m all about you.”

“Until you go off with Philippe.”

“I’ll still be all about you.”

“Of course you will be.”

“No, I mean because you’re going to be there with me, watching.”

“Not a chance in hell, babe,” he said, laughing, kissing her again, his kiss pushing her head back to the pillows, getting over her while she raised up her knees to accommodate him, looping her ankles behind his back. He imagined being with her while she played with Philippe and preferred it like it was tonight. Knowing something was happening but not seeing, making it up in your head what was going on and then getting reunited. He pushed his length into his beautiful, crazy wife, going slow, watching her expression change as he spread her opening wide. He groaned with delight. “Not a chance in hell.”

CHAPTER 5

Arlo closed the door to his and Lily's suite behind them, then rested his forehead against the cool steel. Lily sensed the heavy weight of her husband's concern, even though Arlo acted to hide it from her.

She whispered, "What is it, Daddy?" He hated the fright hidden in her voice.

He turned and rested his back against the door, avoiding her eyes. But that's not what Lily needed. He stood straighter, set his jaw firm and showed his wife his strong, dominant gaze.

Lily licked her lower lip, visibly eased by his return to confidence, looking less frightened and more questioning of the man who took care of all of her problems, looking for the clarity he might reveal. She said, "Is it bad?"

Arlo didn't answer. He crossed the room to her, arms extending, and Lily melted against him at the foot of the bed. He held his little girl.

"You can tell me," she said softly, her cheek at his collar.

"Oh, Lily," he sighed, his hand stroking up and down his wife's narrow back. He caressed her neck, then cupped her cheeks and held her back.

“One of them is going to come for you, Lily.”

Lily’s expression shrank from curiosity to unease. She met his gaze, her eyes quivering. “You can’t stop them?”

He thumb-stroked her soft cheeks, just underneath her big corn-silk-blue eyes. “I’m going to do everything I can, Lily. You know I will. I’ll fight them to the very end. You know I often quote Sun-Tzu.”

She nodded.

“Battles are won or lost before they’re ever fought. We might need to comprehend some sort of rapprochement.”

She said, “A meeting in the middle.”

He stroked her hair back from her perfect face, smiling. “You’re so wonderful. That’s what I mean. Tell me, Lily...”

Her brow knit together. “Tell you what?”

“Is there any of them—just one of them—that you would...”

“Would what?”

His expression slimmed to seriousness. “Is there one of them you would lie with?”

Lily’s eyes widened, and she shook her head against his palms in adamant wags.

“Not even one of them?”

She clutched him and hugged him harder, burying her face in his collar. He stroked her back again. He said, “Not even Cody?”

“No,” she muttered.

“Everyone likes Cody. He’s very nice, Lily.”

“Good for him,” she mumbled.

Arlo chuckled, brought her face so he could look at it again, holding her jaw in his hands. “I’ll fight them, Lily.”

“I know you will,” she said, eyes welling up, chin dimpling.

Scarlet found Cheyenne on the third deck, passed out on an outdoor couch with a blue icy-gel pack over her eyes and brow. She looked like she had melted into the couch seats, laying there, small frame hiding inside one of Byron's sweatshirts. She wore khaki shorts, her long tanned legs crossed over at the ankles. Scarlet ran the edge of her thumbnail from Chey's bare heel, up between her toes. Chey yelped and jumped back to one side of the couch, the ice pack falling into her lap.

"What the hell, Scarlet? Why would you—"

Scarlet shooed Cheyenne further into the couch's corner, fanning her hands toward her, then sitting down where Chey's feet had rested. She patted her thighs, indicating for Cheyenne to put her feet there. She said, "I did it because it's funny. Don't worry, I'll make it up to you," patting her thighs again, encouraging her untrusting friend.

Cheyenne could only open one eye fully, the other still squinted. She slunk back down, tossing her feet into Scarlet's lap—and purposely digging in her heels, lifting her weight up to get better comfortable.

Scarlet said, "Ow, ow, ow—okay, okay." When Chey settled, smiling a little, adjusting the ice pack across her brow once more—but leaving a sliver for her eyes to watch Scarlet—Scarlet said, "I deserve it. Just chill, okay? You have no sense of humor when you drink too much."

“I didn’t drink that much.”

Scarlet stared at her, her eyes peeking out from underneath the edge of the ice pack. “You sure look like you did.”

“Then why would you be so cruel, tickling my feet like that?”

Scarlet began rubbing Cheyenne’s ankles, laughing, saying, “It’s part of the learning process, Chey. Hangovers are supposed to remind you of your limits—I’m just doing the same.”

“A hangover is not my friend. You’re supposed to be my friend.”

Scarlet said, “Who says a hangover isn’t your friend? Just because I—”

Chey gasped and jolted, and all talk of alcohol was wiped away as she suddenly recalled the last time she’d seen Scarlet. She swiped away the ice pack and steadied her eyes on Scarlet, smirking to one side. “What happened in that closet?”

Scarlet dug her nails into the tender soles of Cheyenne’s feet. Cheyenne pouted, saying, “Please, don’t.”

“I’m not going to,” she said, then began to rub.

“Are you going to tell me?”

“It’s kind of my business, Chey.”

“I know you’re going to tell me. Don’t make me go through the whole thing, all the begging and stuff.”

Scarlet chuckled. She rested a hand on Chey’s ankle and then pinched the bridge of her nose. “Chey, Chey, Chey,” she sighed. “You certainly did it.”

“Me? What did I do?”

“You really started something.”

“Listen,” Chey said, “what I do is my business. When I hand off the baton to you, what you do with it is your business.”

“That’s fair.”

“Except for the part where you tell me everything that happened.”

“I guess you did tell me everything.”

“What happened in the closet?” Now all amped up and rosy-cheeked, Chey continued. “Did you guys make out?”

“Did we make out? This whole swinging thing turns you into a teenager, apparently. No, we didn’t make out, Chey. It’s not like that.”

“Now you get it,” Scarlet said, laughing, rubbing Chey’s insole. Then she said, “It’s not really like that. It’s more than that. Plus, you didn’t want to kiss Cody at first, either. Look, I do like Philippe. He’s a nice guy.”

“Yeah,” Cheyenne said in an unconvincing tone.

“What, you don’t think he’s nice?”

“No, he’s nice.”

“What is it, then?”

“Nothing,” Chey said in a comical but abrupt tone.

Scarlet studied Cheyenne, trying to figure out what Chey’s problem was with Philippe. She said, “Anyway, we didn’t make out. Get this—turns out he’s ticklish.”

“What were you doing in there, tickling him?”

“You think that sounds lame?”

“No,” Chey said, thinking about it. “Crafty.”

“Crafty how?”

“It’s like an excuse, you know, to put your hands on him. ‘Oh, look, you’re ticklish—is your giant hog ticklish, too?’”

“I didn’t touch his hog, Chey.”

“You didn’t?”

“Well, no. I did.”

“You’re such a liar,” Chey said, and stomped her heel into Scarlett’s inner thigh.

They both laughed a moment, and Scarlet said, “It wasn’t like they shut the door and I just grabbed it—”

“Like the last donut in a box.”

“No, I didn’t do that. It was awkward; in a normal way.”

“There’s nothing normal about people our age locking their married friends in a closet without any clothes on.”

“That was your idea, Chey,” she said, narrowing her eyes.

Chey smiled. “You’re welcome.”

Scarlet said, “Thank you,” and they both nodded with mutual respect.

“Anyway,” Scarlet said, resuming the foot massage, “he’s a nice guy, and we were just kinda talking and joking around; he’s respectful—”

“He was?”

“Yeah.”

“Wow, and ticklish?”

Scarlet chuckled. “Yeah, I guess I did kind of use that as an excuse to—”

“Grab his hog.”

“No, to put my hands on him. To tickle him. You know, I like, uh...”

“Like what?”

She faced Chey, nodding in the affirmative and scrunching her nose. “The body hair.”

“He is furry.”

“And muscular.”

“He is muscular.”

“Yeah, he has a good body.”

Chey said, “So, at what point did you touch his hog?”

“Not long after that,” she said. “Oh, get this: he started getting hard.”

“Such a perv.”

“That’s not nice. . . . Sully said the guy didn’t stand a chance being locked in a closet with me naked.”

“That’s what I meant.”

“Anyway, we were hugging—”

“How were you hugging?”

“He was trying to stop me from tickling him.”

“And then he got hard.”

“I’ll say. I swear to god, Chey, his thing was like”—she leaned back into the couch seat, abandoning Chey’s feet for a second to touch her sternum—“it like came up to here.”

“Well, he is taller than you.”

“Yeah, but seriously, Chey, like right here,” she said again, tapping an index finger to her breastbone.

“Guy’s got a big dick.”

“It wasn’t even like a hundred-percent hard. Like I lifted it up, the thing had weight, and put it against my chest—”

“Maybe you’re the perv.”

Scarlet began rubbing Chey’s feet again, looking out across the third floor deck’s overhang to the bright ocean horizon beyond. “I kinda want to see what it’s like when he’s all the way hard. How big does it get?”

“Pretty big,” Chey said.

“I’ll bet.”

They sat for a moment, both of them lost in their thoughts, Scarlet working absent-minded fingers over Cheyenne’s feet, helping out her hungover friend. She said, “Everything is still okay with you and Byron?”

“More than okay,” Cheyenne said and chuckled.

Scarlet said, “You know what? I’m really glad. Really glad because—” She let Chey’s feet go. “What do you mean pretty big?”

Cheyenne readjusted the ice pack to cover her eyes and laced her fingers across her sweatshirt stomach.

“Chey? It was the way you said it. Pretty big. A confirmation, not a supposition. Did you see it?”

Just her mouth moving under the ice pack: “See what?”

“I asked you if you saw it,” Scarlet said, hooking both of Cheyenne’s ankles with an arm, holding Cheyenne’s feet like she had someone in a headlock. “Do not make me do it.” She jabbed a thumbnail into Cheyenne’s sole but didn’t run it up to her toes. Yet. This was only a warning for now.

“Hey, hey,” Chey said, pulling her feet back, but Scarlet had a good hold.
“Okay, okay,” Cheyenne said, pleading.

“You saw it then, did you? When the hell did you see Philippe like that?”

Chey tossed the ice pack onto the coffee table and sat upright, now both of them facing the same direction. She rubbed her eyes then stretched, shoved her hands into the pouch of Byron’s sweatshirt and hunched forward. She muttered, “Doesn’t seem like a big deal now, but I just chickened out telling you earlier.”

“Telling me what?”

“It was kind of like this . . . I don’t know, mixup?”

“A mixup?”

“Yeah, I thought...” Chey rolled her head around like she didn’t really want to tell this, and Scarlet placed a hand on her back and ran circles. Cheyenne slumped against her. “When I was with Cody...”

“The other night.”

“The first night.”

“Go on.”

“Cody called Byron to come into the room to watch us.”

“Okay.” That was what Chey had secretly wanted.

“We were having sex, okay?”

“You and Byron?”

Cheyenne growled with exasperation. “Just let me tell it. Not me and Byron.”

“You and Cody. And then Byron came in...”

“Right. And he watched us having sex.”

“Okay. Why didn’t you tell me this before?”

Chey sat up, and now swayed the opposite direction, thumping down onto the pillows against the couch arm.

Scarlet said, “What is it?”

“It wasn’t Byron watching us.”

Scarlet’s anticipatory smile began to fade and worked into a shocked ‘O’ shape. “It was Philippe?”

Chey said, “It wasn’t on purpose. It was an accident. I thought Cody was calling Byron, and he said he knew this cowpoke who was kind of hard up...”

“And you thought that was Byron?”

“There were a lot of things going on, Scarlet.”

“No, it’s fine. Okay, so you thought it was going to be, you know, your husband...”

“But it wasn’t. I open my eyes and like Philippe is sitting there. Watching.”

“Did you freak out?”

Cheyenne didn't answer, her head on a pillow, eyes looking out at the blue sky.

“Chey?”

“No, I didn't freak out, okay?”

“So, what, you guys are having sex and then you see Philippe watching—how could you not be freaked out?”

“I don't know, Scarlet,” Chey said. “I'm not looking for any judgments here.”

“I'm not judging you. Seriously.”

“No, I did not freak out.”

“Okay.”

“That's it.”

Scarlet said, “Why wouldn’t you tell me that?”

“I don’t know.”

“But you saw it hard, you said. That’s why I’m asking this. Was he not wearing...”

“No, okay? He wasn’t.”

“Wasn’t what?”

“Wearing anything, Scarlet! God, make me spell it out for you.”

“You wouldn’t have to if you just came clean.”

“Okay,” Cheyenne said, sitting up, riled, grabbing handfuls of hair and swishing it behind her back. “Yes. I thought it was Byron watching us, Cody finishes and he gets off me—”

“And you see Philippe, you’re naked and he’s—”

“Yes, he’s naked,” Scarlet said.

“That stands to reason.”

“It stands to reason, thank you. Because he was watching. And he’s, you know...”

Scarlet’s eyebrows raised. “Doing something with his...”

“Exactly,” Cheyenne said, appreciative of Scarlet’s help. Cheyenne turned to face her now. “And I let him, you know . . . finish.”

“You were watching him?”

“And he was watching me.”

“What were you doing?”

“Nothing,” Chey said.

“Nothing?”

“No. I just stayed the way—”

“Cody’d left you?”

“Yes, like that.”

Scarlet nodded, picturing it. “With your legs open?”

“With my legs open.”

“And you just lay like that so Philippe could finish?”

“Is that so wrong?”

“I don’t know. If you’d asked me last week, I would’ve said absolutely. But now, things are different. Like maybe that was the polite thing to do.”

“It was exactly like that, Scarlet. That’s exactly what it was like. I didn’t want to be rude. I didn’t want him to feel bad, like if I freaked out and like jumped off the bed and hid on the other side...”

“Yeah, you’d really hurt his feelings.”

“Thank you, Scarlet,” Cheyenne said, like she was glad someone finally saw it her way.

Scarlet smiled. “And you said he was the perv.”

It took a second for Cheyenne to get it, and then she looked over, scowling. “You don’t mean that.”

“I don’t. I’m trying to be funny. For your benefit.”

“Like I was for Philippe. I didn’t want him to feel bad.”

“I don’t want you to feel bad.”

Scarlet shrugged. “You’re right.”

Chey, more serious now, said, “The next day I wanted to tell you everything, but I chickened out. It just . . . it was a lot. Things that shouldn’t have been happening were happening, and they went farther than I thought and in the end, what was done . . . I didn’t know what that made me.”

“Now you and Byron, you guys are past it.”

“Past it? We’re not past it, we’re in it.”

Scarlet nodded. “Glad to hear that. So, what do you mean?”

“We both want to do it again.”

“Wow. That’s great, I mean it. Really great.”

Chey sighed heavily, like there was weight to her next statement. But then she smiled, and it all eased away. “If Byron wants to try again with Carla, I want him to as well.”

“Chey’s growing,” Scarlet said and hooked an arm around Chey’s shoulders.

Chey leaned into Scarlet. “Look. I didn’t freak out with Philippe watching, because, yes, Philippe is a nice guy. A really nice guy. Yes, he might be a little perverted—”

“No judgments, Chey,” Scarlet reminded her.

“You’re right, you’re right,” Chey said, putting up her hands in surrender. “I was a party to his perviness and my hands are not clean.”

“You know what this tells me? You’re still not clear of some guilt you have over that.”

“Before you admitted that he’d watched you, you were heaping the perv label on top of Philippe like it would shield you from the thing that happened between you two. Put the blame on him.”

Chey was silent, just breathing and watching the sky. Then she said, “That’s it, a hundred percent. I’m such a jerk.”

“Nah, you’re a good kid. Just a little mixed up.”

They both chuckled, and Chey sat upright, shifting so they faced. “That night I toilet tubed Philippe?”

“Yeah?”

“We got to talking...”

“You were down there a while.”

“You want to know why he and Paloma split?”

“Fuck yeah,” Scarlet said, scooting closer, detecting juicy gossip in Chey’s tone.

Chey tucked her long hair behind her shoulders again, squirreling her hands up inside the sleeves of Byron’s sweatshirt, looking around to make sure no one was near enough to overhear. They were the only ones on the whole level.

Chey whispered, “Philippe’s got a big, big secret...”

Everything was going down right in front of Sully. And Byron knew it, too. They both could see it, plain as day—that's how obvious Scarlet and Philippe were making it.

Byron said, "Looks like something's brewing."

Sully muttered, "It's been brewing a long while."

"Then let me say it looks like it might boil over, posthaste."

Sully and Byron were sitting together on a couch on the yacht's forward deck, the fourth level. Across from them, over the coffee table festooned with depleted appetizers and empty cocktail glasses, Lily and Arlo cuddled up on a small sofa. Behind Lily and Arlo, near the dining table where'd they'd had a wonderful catered dinner brought to the yacht by a service boat, Cheyenne sat and chatted and laughed with Cody and Carla. But it was the couple sitting kitty corner to Sully's situation that had all his attention: Scarlet with Philippe, engaged in fun banter.

Sully grunted, "What the fuck does that mean?"

“‘Posthaste.’”

“Fuck if I know. Fast. Like real fast.”

Lily, reclining on the sofa, snuggled up next to Arlo, who held her with one arm draped over her skinny shoulders, sniffled, then said in her quiet voice, “Couriers used to be called ‘posts.’ ‘Posthaste’ was an instruction to a courier, a post, that the matter of the letter was urgent.”

“Posthaste, my good man,” Byron said in an old-timey voice and tried to poke a finger in Sully’s ear. Sully batted Byron’s stupid hand away, never taking his eyes off Scarlet and Philippe.

Arlo said, “Shakespeare, right, Lily?”

Lily said, “He didn’t make the word up, but he used it in a play.”

Byron said to her, “Which one?”

Lily shrugged. “I’m not sure.”

Byron said, “Some help you are,” and then Byron, Arlo, and Lily laughed.

Meanwhile, Sully's beautiful and charming wife was laying out all the tricks she'd used on Sully back in their dating days. She didn't need to use these tricks anymore, not with Sully, because she'd hooked him, caught him, reeled him up into her dinghy, and, well . . . currently she was running a blade up his fish-belly tickle-bits, looking to pull out all his insides and lay them out on the dock and let them sparkle in the moonlight.

So much of him—even though he'd committed to this game—wanted to back out of this. His heart hammered in his chest, looking at the familiar yet forgotten flirty affectations his wife utilized. She sat with her legs tucked under her, graceful in the round wicker seat for one, her wedding-finger hand curled over one slender ankle. She played with her collar, touched her hair, and laughed at things Philippe said that weren't even that funny—not that he heard much of what they were saying. Philippe could not be funny as Sullivan Hill. No way. Yet Scarlet laughed. Doing so in her most flattering way. Scarlet had a beautiful mouth and an absolutely dazzling smile. Perfect teeth, sultry lips that peeled back in a wide and winsome elastic stretch. It was fucking turning her husband on—what was it doing to Philippe?

One by one, their friends left them until the only other person remaining was Sully. Watching her. Studying her. Gaze hollowed, yet sparkling like chips of obsidian in the starry night. Arlo and Lily were the first to bed, then it was Byron getting up, patting poor Sully on the arm as he headed over to bring Cheyenne to bed with him. Pulling Chey away from her cowboy lover-boy and her cowboy lover-boy's wife. Cody and Carla were soon to follow, coming by to say good night to them, Carla hugging Philippe's bull neck and kissing his hair.

Then there were three.

And the weirdest thing was the third person here—her husband—was the third wheel. An unnecessary addition to the events that might unfold tonight.

Truth was, her husband was only a third wheel insomuch as he'd relegated himself to that position. Sully was being a baby about joining in, about watching her 'get down' with Philippe. But that was his decision.

Only thing was, with him hanging out and watching now, he was setting their strange troika into a wobble, like too much snow caking up in a tire rim.

When Philippe paused to take a drink, she let her eyes roam to her weird husband, lurking but not joining in like a normal husband would do, coming by to sit and talk. She raised her eyebrows at him, widening her eyes and flexing her jaw muscles, expressing a question along the lines of "What are you doing?" Or more like: "Piss or get off the pot, Sully-baby." Either get over here and hang, or get lost, buddy.

Sully flinched with her eye contact, like he'd been caught out in the open in her search light. The uneasiness he applied to the situation seemed to dawn on him, and he licked his lips and nodded.

As Philippe began talking again, Sully was at her side. He kissed her hair and stroked her shoulder, saying, “I’m going to hit the hay, babe. You stay up if you want.”

She and Philippe said their good nights to him, and as her husband skulked away she couldn’t help smiling, knowing—just knowing—he had an erection. If everything went the way she wanted, Sully would be missing out on quite a show. But she had a backup plan to deal with her skittish husband, who didn’t know what was good for him. At least not as much as his wife did.

She regarded Philippe now and smiled wide. “Looks like we’re the only ones up.”

Philippe nodded, smirking to one side, his mustache lifting, and the glimpse of some beautiful dimples showing again, even under his dense black beard. “What time is it?”

She checked her phone, tucked on the cushion at her side. “It’s almost two.”

“It is getting late.”

Scarlet pooched out her lower lip. “You’re not going to leave me out here, are you? What, you have to work in the morning?”

“Not at all,” he said, smiling still. He put an elbow up on the curved wicker edge of the chair and lay his cheek on his palm, eyeing her dreamily. He had dark and dazzling eyes. “Do you want to go in where it’s warm?”

“That’s a good idea,” she said.

They rose together, snuffed the remaining candles and strolled inside, chatting still, walking through the fourth level to the rear, then down the stairs. With neither of them mentioning it, she accompanied him past her and Sully’s level and down to the level below, where Philippe slept alone in his suite.

But once in the hallway leading down the center of the suites on the lower level, Philippe said, “No one’s ever walked me home before.”

Scarlet said, “I always make sure my dates get home safe and sound.”

“Looks like we passed the lounge,” Philippe said. “Maybe you’d like to come in for a coffee.”

The two of them stood outside his suite’s door, in the warm and empty hall, face to face, him taller, handsome, looking at her knowingly. Scarlet looked up and down the hall, then said, “Is this where we kiss awkwardly?”

“You pucker up first,” Philippe said. “Let’s see what happens.”

They both stared into the other's eyes, full of mirth and amusement. This was really going to happen.

She said, "I tell you what: I don't drink coffee this late, but I'll come in for a night cap."

"Your husband doesn't mind?"

"If he minded, we wouldn't be standing here."

That smile again. "He knows you're a big girl."

"And he's a big boy."

Philippe put his hand on the door lever but didn't open it yet. "You can call him if you want."

"I'm sure he's already asleep."

"Good for him."

She said, “You make it sound like something’s going to happen here.”

Philippe smirked again, lips thinning, eyes narrowing and twinkling. He said no more and opened the door and she followed him inside his suite. First thing she noticed was how tidy he kept it. Nothing out of place, and the bed made.

Philippe made his way to the far side of the room and she closed the door behind them, Philippe saying, “I just admire the man’s steady hand and admirable ability to catch his necessary Zs.”

“That’s why he’s always so chipper,” Scarlet said, wandering in the small space of the elegant room.

“Sleep?”

Scarlet set her butt down on the side of his bed, even though there were two chairs. “Rest is underrated.”

Philippe stepped up to the raised edge at the end of the room that led to a dresser, chair, and his closet. “Oh, I don’t think so. All anybody talks about is not getting enough sleep.”

“Exactly. If it weren’t underrated, you wouldn’t hear people complaining they didn’t get enough sleep because they’d be so well rested, you know, understanding how important it is.”

“I see your point. . . . Now, night cap, night cap,” he said, moving bottles on the table top of his dresser. “I have moonshine. Canadian moonshine.”

“Flavored with maple syrup.”

“Sounds fancy.”

“Not really fancy,” he said, half turning, pulling a cork out of a glass jug sloshing with pale amber liquid. “Bush sap. Corn mash liquor, copper still in the backwoods—”

“Oh my god.” She rolled her eyes. “Who makes it?”

“Some guys I buy lumber from up north.”

“Up north up north?”

“Way up north.” He poured two short glasses for them. No ice. “In fact, the maple syrup is local to the still. Bas–Saint–Laurent, Gaspésie.”

“You have excellent French,” she said. “You speak French?”

“Of course,” he said, bringing two glasses over. He sat next to her, his weight almost making her slump against his side, but she righted herself. She tried her drink—like sweet turpentine fire.

“Smooth,” she said, surprised that after that first harsh bite, the taste mellowed. “Your friends know what they’re doing.”

“Centuries of practice,” he said, sipping his moonshine. “How long have you been married?”

“To Sully?”

Philippe looked over, frowning, glass of moonshine paused at his lips. “You were married before?”

She laughed, then straightened her shorts’ legs. “No, no. Married only to one man forever. My Sully boy. Three years plus some months.”

“Good for you guys.”

“Shoot, that reminds me,” she said, getting up and leaving Philippe alone on the bed, waking her phone. She set the moonshine on the small round table between two chairs and sat down across from Philippe, saying to him, “I’m so rude. Give me one second, Philippe.”

“Take your time.”

She dashed out a text to her husband, knowing there was no way he was sleeping right now.

Scarlet: I’m so sorry, baby. I forgot my tape measure. Can you bring it to me?

Right away, he answered.

Sully: No

Scarlet: Please. I need it.

Sully: No way.

She smiled and chuckled to herself.

Scarlet: I really do need it. I'm not kidding. Can you just bring it down and you don't have to come in, I swear. Just pop your arm in his room and I'll grab the tape measure and you can get back to whatever it is you're doing. Prob masturbating again.

Sully: I'm not doing that

Scarlet: Good, you're not busy. Please, baby, please?

It took fifteen seconds for him to answer.

Sully: Does he know I'm bringing you a tape measure so you can measure his thing?

Scarlet: No.

Way longer than fifteen seconds this time—to the point she thought he wouldn't answer at all. She could picture him storming around the room in sexual frustration and distress, his hair in disarray. But then he answered.

Sully: Fine.

Scarlet: You'll do it?

Sully: I said fine!

Scarlet: You're the best

Sully: Where is it?

“Right where I hid it,” she muttered, thumbing the measuring tape’s location in a text to Sully.

Philippe said, “Hid what?”

Scarlet plopped her phone on the seat cushion and scoffed. “God, men are so nosy.”

Philippe chuckled in hearty coughs like a good-looking cartoon bear, leaning his head back, and she joined in with him, laughing, then taking a sip of the moonshine.

When Philippe settled, knocking back the end of his moonshine, then leaning closer, she asked him, “How long were you married?”

Philippe eyed her with a devilish gleam, raising one eyebrow. “To Paloma?”

Scarlet smirked but didn’t commit to outright laughter. “Why, you weren’t married to someone else, were you?”

Philippe’s easy smile faltered.

CHAPTER 7

“It’s not a big secret, Scarlet,” Philippe said.

“It is a big secret. You know how I know it’s a big secret?”

“How?”

“Because I didn’t know it, and I know everything.”

Philippe shook his head, narrowing his eyes on her and smiling. “You’re a Carla wannabe.”

She scoffed, and in mock offense, said, “How dare you.”

“You’re more like her than you even know.”

She said, “Chey did say I intimidate Byron.”

“Probably. How about Sully? Do you think he would ever cross you?”

“He wouldn’t dare. But not because I intimidate him.”

“Want another moonshine?”

“Yes, please.” She handed him her empty glass as he rose with his own. While he crossed to the raised end of the room, she said to his broad back, “Sully wouldn’t cross me because he cares about me. I care about him, he cares about me.”

“You love each other,” Philippe said, pouring more moonshine into their glasses.

“We do. Can you pour a third glass?”

He right-faced, eyebrow raised in sly contemplation. “Are we expecting company?”

“You never know,” she said, smiling.

“That’s good,” he said, sliding closer a third glass and pouring moonshine into it. “The more the merrier.”

“That must be your motto.”

Philippe chuckled, plugged the bottle and regarded her. “That is my motto. Who’s the third? Cheyenne or Sully?”

“It could go either way,” she said, waiting a beat, then narrowing her eyes on him, enjoying the moment and her own surreptitious zinger. “Who do you want to see come through that door?”

Philippe leaned his butt on the edge of the dresser, his abundant male package slumping into the crotch of his shorts, reminding her what drew her here tonight. He crossed his thick arms. “It would be great if it was both of them.”

“You like to party.”

“I do,” he said. “All night long.”

“It takes a group to satisfy you.”

“That’s where you’re wrong.”

She cocked her head. “Oh?”

“I satisfy them.”

There was something in his confident tone that changed her chemistry. She lost her grip on the control of the conversation, on the path of the evening. It had gone from 0 to 60 like a Ferrari; from coy to sexual innuendo to promises of exquisite rapture in a matter of heartbeats. She bit her lower lip as she smiled as an honest reaction to his words—but not wanting him to see it. She didn’t want to have sex with him, only to get off on playing with his thing. Cheyenne said he shot ropes like a firehose. “You’re a giver,” she said.

Philippe chuckled again, then eased upright, collected the two glasses and walked to join her, sitting on the other side of the table. He slid her glass closer, saying, “It’s my calling.”

“Everyone has their thing,” she said.

“What’s yours, Scarlet? What’s your thing?”

“I think you know what it is. You were trawling the waters with your tackle.”

“And you bit.”

“Looks like it.”

He said, “Your thing is my thing.”

“My thing is things in general.”

“And I’ve got something special for your collection.”

“You certainly do.”

He eased back in his chair, cool and languid, eyeing her, then drinking some moonshine. He licked his lips. “Well, here we are.”

She drank some moonshine. “Yep. Here we are.”

“And here it is.” His smile was broad in his thick beard, eyes winking back the overhead light as he quick-glanced where his crotch was below the table.

“You want me to make the first move, I take it,” she said.

“You’ve put me in that position.”

“How so?”

“Either you come and take what you want, or I stand up, unzip, and drop it on this table. You see, I’m a gentleman.”

“You’re not a drop it on the table man.”

“You’ve been sweet talking me all night, Scarlet.”

“All right,” she sighed with heavy resignation. “If that’s the way you want it.” She stood and stepped out of her slides.

Philippe pushed his chair back from the table, eyes on her, sinking his posture. She sauntered around the table, assessing her subject. Philippe was a big man. Burly and muscular. He wore a charcoal T-shirt with a V-neck. His muscular forearms were furred, his hands rugged but well-groomed. He wore oyster-khaki shorts, cotton, with a brass zip and button. Like his forearms, his legs were powerful, furred and dark-tanned. She straddled his lap, her bottom sagging between his parted thighs, those masculine hands of his coming to cradle her weight. It was the first time since she was married that any other man had put his hands on her ass. She shivered, and her nipples hardened.

Their eyes connected, but they said nothing. The only sound was their breathing, low and slow. A chuckle breezed from her nose as she brought her hands together and unbuttoned his shorts. Philippe smiled, his lips thin and pursed like he stopped the smile from breaking into laughter. Now she smiled too, caught in the understanding that while this was sexy and naughty, there was also something ludicrous about the whole thing. She bit her lower lip again, and Philippe's eyes narrowed, like he loved when she bit her lower lip. She drew down his zipper, saying, "After all this, it better be in here."

"Believe me, I'll be more upset than you are if it's not."

"Oh, I believe you."

She looked into his eyes as she gripped his bulge right over his feathery-soft cotton shorts. The bulge was pliable, giving, and more than two handfuls. "Still there," she whispered.

"Thank god," he said.

She exhaled through pouted lips as a wave of sudden and deep arousal shimmered on her skin, bringing her pulse in a thunderhead. Philippe's ample male bulk felt incredible in her grip.

She said, “Let’s take a look, shall we?”

Her phone pinged as her hands parted his fly, revealing Philippe wore no underwear. “Hold on a second,” she said.

“Oh, come on.”

Scarlet laughed and dismounted Philippe’s lap, crossing to her side of the small round table to read the text before the screen went blank again. She said to Philippe, “Wait here.”

“Where am I going to go? . . . I’m betting our guest has arrived. They’re not shy, are they?”

She shook her head. “They don’t know they’re a guest yet.”

“Okay, Carla,” he said, sitting there smirking, legs wide, shorts unzipped.

She snapped her fingers and pointed at him, instructing him, “That’s enough.”

He was still laughing as she made it to the door. She cracked it open and poked her head out to see Sully standing clear to the opposite side of the wide, carpeted hallway. “Did you bring it?”

Sully showed her the tape measure, holding it up without saying a thing, his face expressionless.

“Thank you, baby. I mean it.” Now she stepped out of Philippe’s suite and closed the door behind her, just her and her husband, alone in the quiet hallway. Sully looked down at her bare feet. He sniffled. “How’s it going in there?”

“Good, good,” she said. “What were you doing up there by yourself?”

“Waiting.”

“Everything still good?”

Sully closed his eyes and raised his eyebrows high, sighing. He showed a gentle smile. He opened his eyes again, looking at her. “Everything’s still good, babe.”

She crossed her arms, admiring the man she fell in love with and married. She crossed the hallway in slow steps and met him face to face, very close. He smiled wider, his eyes narrowing on her, studying her. Her hand rested on his chest. “Is your heart racing?”

“You feel it.”

“I do. Feel mine.”

Sully scratched his head, still smiling, looking a little unsure, but still definitely into this wild thing. He looked at her chest, then rested his open hand on it. “Your nipples are hard.”

“Yeah,” she whispered.

“Your cheeks are blushed.”

“Are they?”

Sully chuckled, and she liked the vibrations transferring to her chest through his warm palm. “They are, babe.” His thumb caressed one of her nipples pushing out the fabric of her top.

She held his wrist with both hands. “I want you to come in with me.”

Sully scrunched his nose and shook his head no, like she’d offered a kid cod liver oil. She laughed and fell against him, wrapping her arms around his warm and familiar body. “You don’t have to.”

His arms went around her. “What are you guys doing in there?”

She pushed back and showed him a coy face. “You’d have to come in to find out.”

He raised his chin and looked down his nose at her, pretending to be unaffected. “Keep your secrets th—”

Her hand cupped between his legs and found him rock hard. Sully went woozy, head rocking on his neck, eyes fluttering. She said, “This why you wore a baggy shirt?”

“Yeah,” he gasped, leaning back against the wall and loving her palm stroking up and down on the belly of his rock hard cock. A big one. A nice one. One she loved.

“Can I have my tape measure?”

He nodded, produced it again from his shorts pocket. She let his manhood alone and took it. “Thanks for doing that for me. I’m so forgetful.”

“Yeah,” he nodded, standing upright again, regaining his composure after she’d disarmed him by handling his erection. “No problem.”

“Come in with me.”

He scrunched his nose.

“Come in and have a drink. Then you can go.”

“Does he know I brought you a tape measure?”

She shook her head. “I told you he doesn’t. Why?”

Sully shoved his hands in his pockets, mouth squirming, brow lowering. “I don’t serve anyone.”

“You serve me.”

“I like you. . . . I don’t serve other men.”

“You only like me?”

He rolled his eyes, stepped into her space and put his arms around her. “The tape measure’s for you. You’re with him. It’s a proxy thing.”

“I get it, baby. I don’t want this to be weird. If you come in and have a drink, it won’t be.”

He huffed a big breath and slowly exhaled. “He’s not naked, is he?”

“No. Not yet.” She stepped back out of Sully’s clutch, running a hand along his forearm then clutching his hand, the two of them feet apart, connected by their loving grip. “You can leave anytime. . . . One drink.”

Sully waffled, his head lolling again, eyes rolling around. He considered it.

“One drink,” she said. “You can stay. You can go. It’s all up to you.”

Ever the analyst, Sully sucked his luscious lower lip into his mouth, his resolve weakening as his curiosity began to get the upper hand. What was his wife doing in there with this other man?

He took one step forward. She smiled, taking one step back. Then they were moving to the door, her pulling Sully along, showing him her desire to have her husband near her. With her. They stopped at the door.

Sully held her again, the hard belly of his cock pressed into her stomach. “One drink.”

“One drink,” she agreed. “Then it’s up to you.”

Their eyes stayed connected, Sully’s mind working a thousand miles an hour. He kissed her. She held his kiss for a long time, her lust spiraling out of control, ripping through her hayfields like a Kansas cyclone. When their mouths separated with a wet pop, they were both smiling. In this crazy thing together. Linked.

She reached behind her, levered the handle and pushed the door open. “Come on in with me,” she said. “Let’s see what happens next.”

CHAPTER 8

Lily stood facing the bed like she was told, while Arlo worked behind her. Her husband was clothed, and she was naked.

Near her ear, Arlo said, “I’m sorry, Lily. This is the best I could do.”

“I trust you, Sir,” she whispered, wishing there was another way, but knowing her Master would do right by her to the death—or to meet somewhere they both could settle. Since her Master had tried, and won for her a midway point she could accept, it was her duty now to submit. And she would.

Arlo put his hands around her body, the cold steel of the handcuffs he held touching her bare thigh and getting her flinching. She held up her hands, her wrists close together so he could close the cuffs on them. Each cuff cinched shut with a quiet click, ratcheting around her skinny wrists. “Is that comfortable?”

“Yes, Sir.”

“I’m going to be gentle as I can be.”

“I know you will.”

“You’re a good girl, you know.” He ran the backs of his fingers along her cheek and her nipples went tight and hard. She shivered.

“I know,” she whispered.

“This might feel awkward at first.”

“We’ve done it before.”

Arlo said with admiration, “You are my brave, brave girl.”

“Thank you.”

“Now pull your wrists in as tight as you can to your tummy. . . . That’s it, Lily, tight, tight, tight. . . . Good girl.”

While she pulled her hands close to her body, trying as hard as she might to extend her bent elbows behind her body, Arlo lifted a four-foot-long steel curtain rod from where it leaned against the bed, then slid it across her back and through the triangles of her pulled-back elbows, pinning her arms in place, the rod pressing now into her back, squeezed in place against the inside of her arms. It was tight and uncomfortable, but it didn’t hurt.

“How’s that, Lily?”

“Our good equipment is at home, but you know what we’re doing here, correct?”

“You want me to be your little froggy.”

“Not mine, Lily. Not tonight.”

“I know,” she said, sullen and barely audible.

“Be brave.”

“I am.”

“But, yes, you’re right. I want you to be a little naked froggy. Can you climb up on the bed for me?”

“Yes, Sir.”

The extra-length chain on the handcuffs she wore stretched across her ribs as she put one knee up onto the bed, then the other.

Arlo moved behind her, bringing the other matching curtain rod, laying it along her calves, then rolling it forward until it snugged up against the back of her knees. He gripped the curtain rod that held her arms in place, saying, “Now lean forward, baby. Remember to stick your tushy out.”

She nodded, leaned forward her weight, Arlo supporting her by holding the curtain rod, until they worked together to let her down face first on the bed, her cheek pressing down on the comforter.

Arlo said, “Are your hands okay?”

She tried to move them, and when they were stuck she said, “No, Sir.”

“That won’t do, that won’t do,” Arlo whispered to himself, his warm, comforting hands slipping over her back and her sides, rolling her and guiding her hands to lay out, palms down on the bed. “Better?”

“Much better,” she said. “Thank you, Sir.”

She waited with bated breath and heart-pounding patience as Arlo used two lengths of rope looped around the ends of both curtain rods, knotting the rope and securing her in place. He’d made her his little froggy. Only he’d done it for another man’s benefit. She lay face down and handcuffed; on her cheek, knees, and palms, her knees spread wide, her butt stuck out, totally naked. Her opening was fully, shamefully presented to anyone who might want it. With the curtain rods in place and tied together, there was no struggling; no escape from this exposed position.

Arlo's hands smoothed over her naked back and hips again. "You're so beautiful, Lily. You really are. Your body is so incredible."

"Thank you," she whispered, mush-mouthed, with her face smooshed into the bedding.

"What a beautiful behind. And such a narrow waist. . . . Let me take a picture."

"Yes, Sir."

She waited as her husband got his phone, got in position, and clicked a few shots. "Do you want to see?"

"Yes, please."

Arlo brought her his phone, held it sideways so she could see one of the pictures taken of her naked and bound body, crouched like a frog on the bed, her rump hanging off the foot. She did kind of look good—though the sight might be a little garish, the way her most private spaces were shown, her little pink stripe and even her winky hole.

“Does it please you?”

“It does, Sir.”

“So, would you say you’re prepared?”

“Yes, Sir.”

“Good, Lily.”

“Sir?”

“Yes, Lily?”

“He has to wear a condom.”

“Of course, Lily,” Arlo said, smoothing his hand on her rump. “Of course, my little lady. Of course.”

Now Arlo went to the side table and rummaged through his bag of tricks. He returned, and she waited to see what he had for her. He lifted her head just an inch off the bed and fitted around her face a velvet mask that covered her eyes and blacked out her vision completely. “Is it comfortable?”

“Yes, Sir.”

“No, Sir.”

“Good, good. Okay, I think we’re ready. . . . He should be here now. You stay like this and I’m going out to the hall to see if he’s here yet.”

“I can’t go anywhere else, Daddy,” she said, smiling.

“That’s a good point, baby. . . . Hang tight.”

“Yes, Sir.”

She listened as her husband crossed their suite and opened their door. Arlo made a brief sound of acknowledgement, like their guest was ready and waiting in the hall. The best her Daddy could do for her was to arrange a session like this one where an anonymous man from the yacht would have his way with her and she would never know which man it was.

Out in the hall she could hear the muffled voice of her husband talking and another man answering. The other man laughed at something. She couldn't make out any words they were saying, could hardly make the sounds out at all. Her heart galloped out of control. The door opened again and she bit on her lower lip.

Then her husband was near her ear, stroking her cheek. "Hi, baby. He's here now. He can't wait to come in. Are you ready for him?"

"Yeah," she gasped, her toes wiggling, her pulse pounding in her ears.

"Okay," he said, then fidgeted with something.

She said, "He has a condom?"

"Yes, Lily. He has a condom. He's, uh . . . I don't know how to say it nicely. Uh, ready?"

"You mean..."

"Erect, Lily. He's ready to go. This might not take long at all."

“Okay.”

Then he stopped fidgeting and brushed her hair away from her face. “I’m going to put your ear buds in now, okay, baby?”

“Yes, Daddy.”

Arlo was careful putting her ear buds in, rolling her head one way then the other, slipping the hard plastic buds into her ear holes without hurting her. He said, “Brown noise? White noise?...”

“Could I hear the ocean, Daddy?”

“Of course, baby,” he said, leaning closer and kissing her cheek. “I love you, Lily.”

“I love you, too,” she said, smiling—no, beaming—below her velvet eye mask.

Then the beautiful sound of the vast salty ocean filled her ears; waves crashing, somewhere a buoy’s bell donged, and gulls flew over her head, cawing.

She bit her lips and waited for an unknown man to enter the suite and use her for his pleasure.

First thing Sully noticed was Philippe's suite looked like a hotel room when you first checked in. Nothing out of place and the bed made.

Sully had his hands in his pockets, looking the room over, nodding as though the reason he was here had nothing to do with his wife wanting to play around with the tenant's giant penis. Scarlet had entered ahead of him and gone to the far end of the room where there was a step up to a raised level.

At last, Sully looked over to Philippe, sitting in a chair by the table. "Hey," he said.

Philippe said, "Good to see you, Sully."

"Yeah, good to see you, too."

Scarlet returned and offered him a short glass of pale amber liquid.

“What’s this?” Scarlet told him it was moonshine and maple syrup and he shrugged and took a sip. “It’s good,” he said. Scarlet told him to have a seat on the bed and he did. She sat in the chair on the opposite side of the table from Philippe, crossing one leg over the other. Why the heck would his wife summon him into this awkward situation? He didn’t even know how to sit so it didn’t look like he was uncomfortable.

Scarlet sipped her moonshine, then said to him, “You know, Philippe here has a big secret.”

At first he thought it was some dirty double entendre, some reference to Philippe’s endowment—which was no secret at all; everyone on the yacht had seen it. Heck, people on shore could probably see it, the thing was so big.

But Philippe said, “I think my friend Cheyenne whispered something in your wife’s ear and they both think it’s something I kept hidden.”

Sully frowned, looking to Philippe. “What’s that?”

Philippe looked to Scarlet, his eyes lazy, a smirk pulling up one cheek, and Scarlet smiled a devious smile back at him. Now Sully had to know. He couldn’t have them holding secrets without him.

Sully asked again. “What is it?”

Philippe said, “Your wife is dying to tell you. I’ll let her do it. It’s no big deal.”

Scarlet’s face turned to Sully, and he showed her his casual expression, though there was something tingling up his back—like a Spidey sense—that whatever the secret was (that was no big deal to Philippe, apparently) was a big deal to Scarlet. He could read it on his wife’s face. She said, “Philippe was married to Paloma...”

“Yeah.”

“And Philippe and Paloma were married to another couple.”

“What?”

Philippe shook his head and held up a hand to stop Scarlet. “No, it’s not like that. No.”

Scarlet turned her head to Philippe. “No? Then how is it?”

Philippe said, “I was married to Paloma—I still am—but we lived with another couple. In the same house. . . . And then, after a while, another couple joined us.”

Sully said, “Six people?”

“Yes,” Philippe said.

“Six people in the same house all . . . you know, like”—he leaned forward and whispered, “swapping?”

“A polycule,” Scarlet said, crossing her arms, acting smarter, when he knew deep down she’d heard the word polycule roughly twelve hours or so before he did right now.

Sully nodded, assessing this new information, twirling it around in his mind to get a good look at it and see what he thought. He took a sip of the moonshine. Philippe was hot. Paloma was like a supermodel. Were all of them hot? A whole house in the woods full of hot people having sex with each other? Holy shit—just like this yacht. He took another sip of his moonshine and drained the glass.

Philippe stood and offered a hand, saying, “Let me get you another.”

“Yeah, yeah,” Sully said, passing Philippe the glass then running his hands up and down his own thighs quick enough to start a fire. He shot a wide-eyed look to his wife, and she cocked her head and did the same to him. They both smiled at each other with disbelief.

Scarlet turned to Philippe. “So, how does all that work? I mean, six people, that’s got to be a lot of emotions to handle and feelings to take care of.”

“It is,” Philippe said, topping up Sully’s glass. “First, it’s not six people. It’s three married couples. That proved too much, maybe. But I’ll tell you how you make it work.”

Sully said, “How?”

“Honesty,” Scarlet said.

“No,” Philippe said, returning and handing the filled glass back to Sully, then setting the rest of the bottle on the table so no one would have to keep getting up. “It’s contracts.” He sat back down in his seat and lifted his glass to his lips.

Scarlet asked, “It’s not honesty?”

Philippe shook his head no. “What’s honesty other than some half-baked truth sold to you by that used car salesman known as your ego. Deception isn’t born on your tongue when you tell a lie—it lurks in the dark corners of your soul.” He smiled at them, bouncing his eyebrows, knowing it sounded like he talked out of his ass, yet serious all the same. “That’s why it’s contracts that save the day. Contracts are agreements. Spoken agreements are a bond stronger than so-called honesty.”

Scarlet said, “What kind of agreements are we talking about here? Do you need lawyers? A notary?”

“Witnesses,” he said. “Take, for example, what’s happening tonight...”

Sully’s foot was bouncing, his moonshine sloshing in the glass he held on his thigh. He took a quick swig. “What’s happening tonight?”

Philippe looked over to Scarlet, his eyes roaming up and down, face to chest and back again. “Scarlet has something in mind, but I don’t know what it is yet.”

Scarlet flashed a quick, wide smile, like she’d been busted. She said, “Tell me what you’d like to see on the menu. If I like it—if we like it”—she looked to Sully—“maybe we can come to an agreement.”

Philippe nodded. “Scarlet likes to run this like a negotiation. Okay, I like it, too. I’ll start high and then we can haggle...”

The confident way Philippe stared at Scarlet was so fucking exciting—mostly because of the effect it had on his headstrong wife.

“Go ahead,” Scarlet prompted.

Philippe rubbed his jaw, miming the act of deep contemplation. “I want to spend an hour finding out what makes Scarlet come. Then after that, I’m going to make her come, hmm, five more times.” Then he looked to Sully. Sully’s scalp tightened and tingled with a crazy never before felt erotic anticipation that raced his heart. Philippe continued. “And I want to do the same to you, Sully.”

Scarlet looked over at him, smiling devilishly.

CHAPTER 9

Sully stood, then crossed the space that separated him and his wife and Philippe. He set his almost-empty glass of moonshine down on the table with a quiet but heavy thud, stepped rearward and sat back down on the edge of the bed. His brow had settled low over his eyes, darting left and right at the people sitting opposite. He licked his lips, ran a hand through his hair, his auditory processing coming very slow.

“Wait a second.”

Scarlet’s smile grew wider and her eyes narrowed. There was a look of malevolent glee in her beautiful gaze that amused him. It also confirmed what he thought he was hearing.

Philippe said, “That’s where my negotiation begins. If I’m serving too much, you can send some of it back.” He rested his elbows on the chair’s arms and linked his fingers together. He showed none of the mischief Scarlet did.

Scarlet said, “It’s a generous offer. I can’t imagine anyone would send that back. . . . Wouldn’t you say, Sully?”

His brow didn’t raise, eyes darting from Philippe to Scarlet, then staying on Scarlet. He couldn’t help a feeling of jealousy now, wondering if she’d discussed this already with Philippe and they were springing it on him now, amused by his perplexity.

But Philippe wasn't amused like Scarlet was. His expression looked more how Sully imagined his own expression may look: of befuddlement. It cleared Sully's notion that this was a sandbagging. This was Scarlet's doing, and Scarlet's alone.

Now he smiled. Scarlet liked that, raising her eyebrows and saying to him, "What's your opinion?"

"So you're looking for a threesome?"

Scarlet's brow lowered. "That's not what I'm looking for."

Sully looked to Philippe. Something communicated between them with no words spoken. An understanding. Perhaps by virtue of being two males in the room with a cunning female, both of them at one time or another being victims of wily women, they both seemed to comprehend their roles in Scarlet's game. They understood their intended roles, but knew neither of them would play along.

Sully said to Scarlet, "You'd said to me earlier you didn't want that, but now here we are, and your true intentions shine through."

Scarlet's chin dipped downward, and she regarded him from underneath her brow. He'd overplayed his hand, and she knew exactly what he was thinking, what he was getting at, and she was too far ahead of him to have the tables turned. They both smiled at each other with extreme affection. Even Philippe smiled, amused at the antics of a married couple who enjoyed the struggle for dominance. Sully raised his face and regarded her, his eyebrows high and superior, smiling and engaged.

Scarlet said, "Our friend here began negotiations and opened with a very large offer. You don't have anything to say about it?"

"What's there to say? You're right." He nodded a chin to Philippe in a gesture indicating respect. "It's a great offer. Excuse my wife and I while we negotiate our own opinions."

Philippe laughed, crossed his arms, and regarded Scarlet. "You understand," he said to Sully, eyes still on Scarlet, "she banked on a certain wow factor, if you will. You know, my sexuality providing a big surprise."

"Meant to knock me on my ass," Sully said, eyes on Scarlet, too.

Scarlet knew she was being played, putting up hands to placate Philippe in case there was any offense. "It wasn't quite like that."

"I called her a mini Carla earlier."

“I’m sure she didn’t like that.”

“Not one bit,” Philippe said.

Scarlet said, “First of all, I’m five-eight, and—”

“Five-seven,” Sully corrected.

Scarlet rolled her eyes. “I’m five-eight and Carla’s like four feet tall, so I’m hardly a mini Carla. Second of all—”

“I’m so fucking turned on right now,” Sully said, out of the blue, unprovoked, a total non sequitur. But a true statement. His heart pounded and his cock throbbed like an electrified iron bar. His beautiful wife Scarlet looked like prey to him right now and he was a hungry and savage lion.

The truth of his statement hit Scarlet and rattled her, breaking her out of this charade they all played. She regained her composure and looked him up and down, assessing him in a superior manner. “My, my, my,” she said. “So, I have the upper hand.”

Philippe laughed, totally amused by their banter, and Sully’s smile stretched ear to ear, studying Scarlet and rubbing his hands up and down his thighs in greedy, urgent strokes. All manner of debauched dance moves leapt behind his eyes; things he would do to her tonight. Things they would do to her tonight. His superior wife, so smug and conniving, reduced to a watery puddle of sexual goo.

All of this seemed to relay between him and Scarlet, like she had access to his dirty thoughts, and she inclined her head to one side, and furrowed her brows in a expression best described, as Oh, come on now.

He ignored her and turned to Philippe. "I guess you're, what, bisexual?"

Philippe shrugged. "No big deal, right?"

"Hardly surprising," Sully said.

Scarlet rolled her eyes around the room in an exaggerated bit of theater, a woman having to contend yet again with a bunch of boys. "What happened to our negotiations?"

Sully said, "Do you wish to subtract something from Philippe's offer?"

Now she was a little more puzzled, and a crack showed in her lordly ramparts. "You're into that? Him doing all that?"

Sully raised his chin, looking down his nose at her. "Doing what?"

Scarlet's smile returned, realizing her husband wanted to embarrass her by making her say it out loud. "Making you come, Sully."

"Tell me what response you expected from me?"

Scarlet laced her fingers together and lay her enjoined hands in her lap. Silenced. Knowing she'd been bested. And damn it, seeing her that way made his dick flex. Pre-come pulsed into his underwear.

He said, "I was content to let me wife spend some time alone with you, Philippe, here in your tidy room. She'd tell me later what happened."

"But now," Philippe said, "you're glad she lured you down here."

"I am."

Scarlet said, "Well, good for you."

"What do you think she wanted—ultimately?"

"I'm not sure."

“Do you think she even knows?”

Sully shook his head. Scarlet loosened her hands, picked an imaginary thread off her shorts leg and shooed it away, pretending to ignore them.

Sully said, “How about it, Scarlet? Do you know what you want?”

“Isn’t that what negotiations are for?”

Philippe said, “So, we’re still negotiating?”

“I know what I want,” Sully said.

Scarlet looked his way, a sparkle of enjoyment returned to her eyes. “Tell me then.”

“You called me in here. You just can’t bear to be without me, even for a minute.” Philippe laughed, and Sully continued, saying, “I’m touched. I’m flattered. You can tell yourself this was all about some power game you were playing, but the truth is you didn’t want to be alone.”

“How sweet,” Philippe said and Scarlet looked over at him, unperturbed but aroused by the path of their negotiations. Philippe looked to Sully. “Why don’t we start there—”

Scarlet said, “Start where?”

Philippe said to Sully, disregarding Scarlet, “Show me how you make her come.”

Scarlet scoffed. “I’m not some biology class frog you two science perverts can dissect and see how poking a part of my brain will make my leg kick.”

“That’s astoundingly accurate,” Sully said. “That’s exactly what we’re going to do.”

Philippe said, “Substitute brain with pussy.”

“Yes, exactly.”

“You guys are so ridiculous,” she said drolly, playing with her neck. The blush on her cheeks had reddened and her nipples’ fabric bulge had grown even more pronounced.

“Let me act as my wife’s agent a moment. I need to negotiate on her behalf.”

“This isn’t what she wanted?”

“Who knows how her brain works; it’s a mystery to me. But she stated clearly to me her expectations of what she would do in here with you.”

Philippe said, “Is that right?”

“Yes, yes, she did,” Sully said as Scarlet thumbed her lower lip, smirking and eyeing him with a restrained lust hidden behind a mask of sporty indifference.

“My wife came here for one thing and one thing only.”

Philippe snapped his fingers like a brilliant revelation had come to him. “Oh, right. Her thing for things.”

“Oh, she told you already?”

Scarlet laughed and looked to the ceiling, shaking her head, her graceful hand stroking her own throat. “Yes, Sully. I told him, you’ll be glad to know.”

“You weren’t down here that long, even.”

“When you came down, I was sitting in his lap with his shorts unzipped.”

“You move fast.”

“I don’t waste time when I know what I want.”

“You’re sitting here stalling right now, stalling for a quarter hour. I think you talk a bigger game than you play.”

“I had my hand on his bulge, my lovely Sully boy. What do you think of that?”

“I don’t know. Why don’t you tell me what you thought of it?”

Scarlet scooted forward in her seat, eyes alight now with a renewed energy. “I thought Philippe and I were off to a good start.”

Philippe sat straighter like Scarlet, leaning into their troika’s circle, saying to Sully, “She certainly is eager.”

“A real eager beaver, you might say.” Sully’s eyes were locked on Scarlet’s, both of them staring at each other with baleful desire. Philippe chuckled at his zinger of a double entendre.

“Look,” Scarlet said, “I’m glad you guys are getting along so well, but if you think you two hound dogs are going to pull me apart like a chew toy—”

“Not you,” Philippe said.

“Not me what?”

Sully said, “We’re not going to pull you apart.”

“No,” Philippe agreed. “Just your legs.”

That shut his beautiful strong-headed wife up and he couldn’t stop a broad smile spreading as she went hollow-cheeked and walleyed, realizing they were going to have their way with her and she would struggle with them and shit talk them but she would surrender to them in the end, give them what they want and let them take from her things she didn’t know she had to give. Scarlet had never been more beautiful to him. This was a facet of the woman he loved he’d never seen before, and it was the kind of thing he could get addicted to.

He said to Philippe, “She came here for one thing. Maybe you shouldn’t disappoint her.”

Philippe nodded, his expression grave and resigned; a man who was used to this moment, the moment where he revealed his implement of masculine power. He stood now and Sully's eyes stayed glued to Scarlet as her face turned up to regard Philippe, gaze lowering to where his hands gathered to unbutton his shorts and draw down the zipper. Her throat flexed as she swallowed a hard anticipatory gulp.

"Let her do it," Sully said, edging closer, his butt almost off the edge of the mattress now.

Philippe walked closer, his shorts unzipped and unbuttoned, staying up from the bulk of Philippe's muscular ass. Sully watched as his wife's hands went to the faded khaki front of Philippe's cotton shorts and stroked over the material, exploring, skirting around the obvious and generous bulge of concealed meat.

Sully stood, unzipping and unbuttoning his own shorts, walking to stand close and side by side to Philippe, both men with male packages presented to the hottest woman on the yacht. His shorts stayed up by the tent pole of his mighty erection, pointing north-northwest, the knot of his swollen cock head poking up against the material.

Scarlet smoothed her hand over his prominent presentation. One hand going up and down on his, the other—her wedding ring hand—exploring the bulk of Philippe's package.

She looked up to him, saying, "How did you know this was what I wanted?"

“Because I’m married to you,” he said. “Now stop stalling and free our cocks already.”

Scarlet bit her lips, breathing heavy now, pupils wide and dilated, her hands tucking into the waistbands of both their shorts and tugging them downward, anxious to see what each of them had for her.

CHAPTER 10

Both men presented their shrouded genitalia to her. Two confident men who were fun and easy to talk to. Shit, she married one of them, and loved him to bits. Her hands tugged their waistbands downward in synchronized fashion, tugging on the left, then tugging on the right, like climbing a ladder. Her most-familiar friend popped free first; upright and raging hard, parting the fly of Sully's shorts and shooting forward like the figurehead prow on a nation's mightiest warship; Sully's erection was a finely carved acrostolium, the fluted lip of its helmet head flared and pronounced, thick and meaty; a testament to her husband's maximal hardness. This was her Sully at his most engorged; a totem of his highest arousal. A silvery stream shimmered in a long liquid line from the urethral snick, down the belly of his turgid shaft, staining dark the fabric of his fly.

On her left, the lowered shorts had revealed the mighty bough emerging from Philippe's muscular trunk, an implausibly wide limb buffeted by coarse black pubic hair, bent downward by his suffocating cotton shorts. It had grown harder and larger, straining against the material and lengthening down his shorts leg. Philippe didn't sport underwear.

"Hang on one second, love," she whispered to Sully's eager penis, touching a finger pad to its slippery point and tracing down his penis's sensitive underside. Sully moaned and shivered, and more lubricant pulsed.

She turned her attention to her marriage's invited guest, taking the shorts' waistband and, instead of tugging downward, tugged them upward, snugging the fabric against Philippe's swelling member. A fleshy knot of wrinkled foreskin and fat cock head bulged naked below the hem of his shorts' leg. She whispered, "Wow," truly awed by the freakish size of his penis.

With thumb and forefinger she squashed a gentle effleurage, rolling the pads together, Philippe's abundant foreskin between. He also pulsed his lubricant. she guided the foreskin upward to reveal an enormous porcelain-smooth purple-gray glans.

She let Philippe's cock head go and pushed back, feeling overheated, cheeks flushing. She fanned her face and smiled up at both sex-hungry men, liking the expressions they showed her; it revealed her sexual power over them. Poor Sully, smart-mouth husband and loving co-conspirator: thinking he had the upper hand, toying with her, turning over prop tables she'd set up for him to flip, thinking he could knock out a stuntman cowboy with the candied glass she handed him. She'd riled her man into the red zone and then let him take the wheel, let him show off what a bad ass driver he was. Like she cared. All that interested her was their destination.

As she pulled her hair back from her face, neither man needed further instruction, both of them shooting their shorts down and stepping out of them, then returning to the poses they'd had, hips jutted forward, showing her what they had like they were at the urologist.

Philippe's growing penis was a true marvel; an unreal and equine tubiform, a heavy, dangling pound of meat. It was wider than her own wrist. The thing could comfortably sport the Gucci watch Sully bought her at Christmas. She'd like seeing that; her black leather band circling Philippe's beefy girth, the circular gold face showing the time, resting center—but not eclipsing—Philippe's broad brown-skinned tenderloin.

Even Sully looked sideways, regarding Philippe's dangling flesh club, assessing the thing with a look of admiration and maybe awe.

"I can't believe it," she said, still pulling her hair back like she would make a ponytail, though she had no binding for one. "I have never seen anything like it."

Her hand returned to her husband's bounty, gripping it mid-shaft, a surge of his warm pre-come spilling over the webbing between thumb and forefinger. Though her eyes remained on Philippe's penis, she had a fear of touching it. So far this had mostly been a fun bit of gameplay; yeah, she'd rubbed on his foreskin, but the act of gripping his penis still seemed out of bounds. But she wanted to. Wanted to grip it, play with it, study it. Sully had brought down her tape measure, too. And speaking of Sully, her husband was rock hard in her stroking grip; she'd dirty talked him her fantasy of playing with Philippe's monster cock and he'd responded with extreme lust; and, hell, she'd put her hand on Cody's impressive pipe and all it did to Sully was make him wild for her. When it was all over with Cheyenne that night in Cody and Carla's bedroom, Sully didn't say much about her sorority friend. All he could talk about was her and her hand on Cody's penis.

She looked up to meet Sully's eyes. He smiled. She said, "We're really doing it."

"No, we're not," he said, plain-faced and distant.

"We're not?"

“No, you’re just sitting there talking about it. What are you, chicken?”

When Philippe chuckled at the way they talked to each other, it made his heavy member sway between his legs like a stiff pendulum. It had lengthened even further; she swore it was only a hand’s breath from the top of his knee.

She scoffed and backhanded Sully’s erection, making it wag. Sully gripped it and held it still as she swiveled on her chair to face what she came to this room for.

The anticipation was killing him. His wife now faced the biggest penis he had ever seen in his life. From locker rooms to the thousands of hours of porn, he’d never seen one bigger. It was a thing of legend. Scarlet’s pretty, feminine hands rested on Philippe’s hips, her eyes going over every millimeter of Philippe’s endowment, a sly and satisfied smile on her perfect face. She even nibbled her lower lip. When she was brave enough, her right hand slid down Philippe’s hip, between his legs, her grip circling his enormous shaft. It looked pretty hard, like he was erect, but it was too heavy to fight gravity, doing its best, but remaining down and outward like a metal detector scanning the beach. Scarlet’s circling thumb and forefinger didn’t meet around its girth. There was a gleam in his wife’s eye. She really enjoyed this. Was turned on by it. Not to the point of wanting this other man inside her, but to the point of a sexual curiosity. What he liked best about it was that it put her in this weird perspective he’d never considered his wife in before: one of youth and puberty, his wife as a horny teenager, before he ever knew her. Who were her girlfriends back then? When she talked to those girls, what did she wonder about sex? What wild claims did she make? It brought him near the point of laughter, considering this woman he loved from a whole new point of reference. It was almost like a gift to see her this way, to share this with her.

He said, "That's a great piece, huh?"

"It's amazing," she said without regarding him, her hands more comfortable handling another man's penis while her husband watched, moving this enormous dong left to right, checking out all its angles, lifting it upright and laying its bald length in the black scrub grass of Philippe's hairy abs. The end of the thing was a whole inch or two above Philippe's navel. He said to Philippe, "You must be pretty used to this."

Philippe shrugged and cocked his head, like maybe Sully would be surprised by the answer. Philippe said, "It's always different."

Scarlet said, "How many girls have run out of the room screaming when they saw it?"

Philippe's expression wasn't so enthusiastic now, and it reminded him that Philippe was a man with feelings and thoughts and fears and desires, just like anyone else. Just because he had between his legs what every man in the world dreamed they had, didn't mean it was all sunshine and roses. Philippe said, "Quite a few."

Scarlet was too entranced at the moment to register Philippe's look Sully had seen, so Sully stepped in before his wife accidentally said something she thought was funny but could be interpreted by Philippe as callous. He cupped the back of Scarlet's silky head, stroking his wife's hair with love, saying to Philippe, "I think Scarlet's a fan." Perhaps there'd been a girl a long time ago, or maybe even recently, one Philippe loved, who'd unzipped his pants and treated him like a circus freak. Not every girl in the world was a horny little cock fanatic like his wife. Fuck, he'd love to say that to her right now just to make her mad, but he wanted to preserve the buoyancy of the moment, and maybe save Philippe from hurt feelings. He said, "Look at her admire it. I wish she paid this much attention to mine."

Philippe chuckled, and Scarlet shot Sully an indignant look. "I went over yours pretty good when we started dating, buddy."

Sully wagged his hips and made his cock tick back and forth. "That was a long time ago. What about right now?"

"Aw," she said, pouting, tenting her brows to taunt him like he might cry soon if his wee-wee didn't get any love, "did I ignore my little baby boy?" She ran her grip up his shaft and he got so faint at her heavenly touch his knees went soggy.

"Baby boy?" He grunted and dipped, trying to grip consciousness again. "Hardly."

"Sully's got a great piece," Philippe said. "You're lucky to have it."

“You tell her,” Sully said, putting his hands on his hips and jutting them forward, showing off to them both every inch he had. Scarlet laughed, stroked him a little more—fuck, had he ever gone slippery.

“I love his piece—by the way, I hate the word piece—I wouldn’t be with him if it didn’t do all the things I wanted it to.”

“That’s a high commendation,” Philippe said. “What word do you prefer?”

“I’m more of a ‘cock’ girl.”

“I’ll say,” Sully said, laughing.

She batted his cock again, then re-gripped it, laughing with him. Now her brow furrowed, and she said, “I can’t help ignoring one more than the other with you so far apart. I need you guys closer.” Scarlet’s grip on his and Philippe’s penis tightened, and she began to tug them, making him and Philippe face each other. They smirked at one another, and Sully moved his eyes around, feeling awkward.

“That’s better,” Scarlet said, but still with a slight sound of dissatisfaction. “Closer,” she urged, squeezing his dick harder, tugging him closer to Philippe. He shuffled closer and—

The tip of his penis touched Philippe’s.

“Hey,” he said, jolting, squirming.

Scarlet said, “Sorry, baby, I need you guys closer, and Philippe, well, he’s just so darn big.” She met his gaze and right away he saw a thrill there. Like maybe this had been part of her plan all along: get him down here in Philippe’s suite so she could do freaky shit with their penises. But what was wrong with that?

Philippe said to Scarlet, “If he doesn’t want to...”

Scarlet said, “He wants to make me happy.” Then she looked up at Sully again; his wife holding two dicks lined up facing each other, her hands stroking and gripping them. He was so fucking turned on right now he couldn’t remember a better sexual experience in his life than this crazy one here with his own wife.

“Whatever floats your boat,” he murmured, and Scarlet smiled.

She tugged them closer and the spongy end of his cock squashed against the spongy end of Philippe’s cock. The head of Philippe’s cock dwarfed his own. A full and corpulent army helmet—leaking seminal fluid just like his, their two shiny knobs squirming all over each other, shining wet, so sensitive and succulent.

“Hoo,” he sighed, getting lightheaded again, knees going to jelly. He buckled, his cock slipping away.

Scarlet said, “You okay?”

“Yeah,” he said, gulping air, surprised how insane the erotic feeling he had just accelerated when their cock heads touched. He jutted his hips forward again, pushing his cock against Philippe’s, and Scarlet beamed. This was so fucking crazy and they hadn’t even started yet. His wife still had her clothes on.

CHAPTER 11

Abreeze caressing her stuck-out ass cheeks let Lily know someone had entered the suite. She wondered if Arlo stayed. Then wondered what she would prefer. It would make her feel safer knowing her Daddy was in the room watching out for her. But then, did she want her proud, loving Master to witness his subject's subjugation to a man who wasn't her Master? Would her Master enjoy seeing another man use his wife like an object meant only for sex?

A hand rested on the top curve of her rump, the right side, the man's fingers pressing the small of her back. All wonder of her Master's consideration evaporated, wavering away like heat off asphalt. The ocean sounds whooshed and cawed in her ears.

The man's hand was large, and she swore he wore gloves. Warm, leather; even under the ear-buds' simulated seashore her mind conjured the sounds of creaking hide. Two hands on her flesh now, exploring the shapes of her ass. Her cheeks burned with humiliation; gosh, the vulgar way her Master had exposed her to this other man was debased and debauched. She had never been treated this way before in her life. But she trusted her Master. If this was the best he could arrange for their summer stay on this yacht of degenerates, then so be it. It didn't change her. She was resilient. And her husband knew her value.

Still, the reduction imposed on her was awful; her, a beautiful and kind and valuable member of society, reduced to her functioning biology and what those easy biological parts could provide for some man. Not a good man like her husband. No, maybe an awful man like that hairy Philippe or perhaps some raconteur like Cody Weber, who'd flown in helicopters and shot rifles and probably killed people. She bet it was Cody who put his hands on her right now.

Awful Cody with his hey-look-at-me body all covered in bronze muscles. She'd hugged Cody's wide back on the jet ski to shore wearing her Daddy's butt plug, spent the afternoon with Cody, having fun—gosh, he was funny—goofing around. . . . All that before she knew about the dirty things going on behind her back. Dirty Cheyenne, and wow, even level-headed Scarlet joining in.

But not her. Not Lily Dixon, wife and lover of the greatest, most talented man she ever met in her entire life.

The leather hands peeled her cheeks apart, and she raised her eyebrows high, heart hammering in her little chest as she felt his—no, Cody's, she knew it was Cody!—breath on her most sensitive parts. Her toes scrunched, and she bit her lower lip. A tongue licked its way up her seam, the tongue point dancing a wet circle around her back hole. Her breaths chuffed, and she emitted a dreadful mewling sound at the sweet erotic indignity of it all.

Scarlet mushed her husband's cock head against Philippe's cock head, watching the shiny, supple shapes glisten. Both men were aroused, both men leaking their sexual lubrication, her husband's emitting reluctantly maybe, spurred by his wife's indecency. At least that's what she liked to think. Maybe old Sully boy got a kick out of Philippe's penis. It was a weird thought, but somehow she didn't think Sully would allow this with anyone else. Not Cody, not Arlo, definitely not Byron. Philippe had a curious and attractive male sexuality; authentic and sharp, yet somehow ingratiating or welcoming. His penis was so much larger than Sully's—and she didn't imagine her husband would enjoy that comparison—and yet, here he was letting his wife hold the two of them together, point blank, the size difference unavoidable. Philippe was longer by inches; Philippe was thicker, too, and Sully was already a thick boy. But she'd not been able to touch fingers around Philippe's girth.

Sully said to Philippe, "So, we're just going to let her keep her clothes on?"

"Let her have her fun."

"It's always her way."

Philippe said, "At some point she's not going to be able to stop herself."

"And she'll just strip down like she's too hot."

"Exactly."

"I'm right here, guys," she said.

Sully looked down at her. “Yeah, but you look preoccupied. Are you having fun?”

She joined in on their comical indifference to the strangeness happening between all three of them. “It’s been a long time since I’ve done this,” she said, like it was no big deal.

Sully didn’t even believe her for a second, saying to Philippe, “Scarlet majored in dick during college.”

Philippe chuckled, his cock slippery in her slick grip. She rubbed their lengths back and forth against each other in a motion akin to sharpening a kitchen knife with a file. Both men’s cocks gleamed with their own wet. She let their penises go, Sully’s staying upright, Philippe’s monster drooping to hang heavy against Sully’s thigh. It might have been the hottest thing she’d ever seen in her life. The room was getting humid with the heat they were all pumping out of their bodies right now.

Even their balls were different in size; Sully’s tight packed and hugged near his shaft, Philippe’s much larger and hanging low. She rested both men’s scrotums in her palms. Philippe’s dangles had weight, her husband’s were self-suspended.

Sully, standing confident with his hands on his hips, hard cock thrust out, said to Philippe as she held their balls, “You ever seen a girl do this, play with dicks like this?”

“All the time,” Philippe said.

Sully called him a showoff, and they both laughed at that, their balls moving around on her palms.

Philippe said, “It’s called frotting. Rubbing cock together like this.”

“Huh. Everything’s got a name now,” Sully grumbled.

Philippe looked down at her. “Is he always so disgruntled?”

“All the time.”

Sully agreed. “Twenty-four seven.”

Philippe chuckled again. “You’re a funny guy.”

In a Long Island voice, Sully said: “What am I, am I like a clown to you? Do I amuse you?”

Philippe said, “What is that, Goodfellas?”

“Yeah,” Scarlet said. “It’s his favorite movie.”

“Not my favorite,” Sully said, “but it’s up there.”

Philippe studied him, the two of them naked and face to face while Scarlet stroked their cocks. “We should hang out sometime.”

“With our cocks touching, or...”

“That’s up to you, Sully,” Philippe said, smiling.

“Touché,” Sully said, and both men broke up laughing together again at Sully’s dumb double meaning.

“I’m glad you’re both getting along so well,” she said, lining them up again, both of their undersides resting against each other, cock heads looking up toward the ceiling. “But I think I want you both sitting on the edge of the bed together.”

She scooted back from them and stood, putting her hands in her shorts pockets.

“If’n you say so, Miss Scarlet,” Sully said, nudging up the brim of what she figured was an imaginary cowboy hat.

“I say so,” she said, touching her hands on their upper arms, liking how they were both buck naked and compliant and she was fully clothed and in charge. Sully and Philippe stepped rearward toward the edge of the bed, Philippe’s huge and engorged penis swaying between his thighs. He elbowed Sully and said, “Was that Cody? Were you doing Cody?”

Sully chuckled. “Yeah, I guess you’ve seen him play cowboy.”

“A lot of girls have a cowboy kink.”

“A lot of girls? How many girls have you guys slept with?”

Scarlet snapped her fingers. “You’re not sleeping with anybody,” she said, lighthearted, yet still a little zinged by her husband’s eager query of Philippe’s and Cody’s conquests. She didn’t want to know how many women Sully slept with before her, and she definitely didn’t want him wowed by Philippe’s numbers.

“Stay focused,” Philippe said, but gave a curt nod in a way that read to Scarlet as acknowledgement that Philippe and Sully would talk later when Scarlet wasn’t around. Sully thought it was funny but Scarlet didn’t—and Philippe recognized that and said, “Our polycule was loyal, for what that’s worth, Scarlet. I’m just joking around, and I assure you, I haven’t been with anyone in months now. . . . Literally months,” he added at the end to indicate the dry spell was torment.

“Too much ‘you guys’ talk,” Scarlet said, “and not enough ‘me’ talk.”

Philippe sat on the bed, legs apart, his penis and balls hanging off the edge, the end of his cock almost down to the bottom of the box spring. “And what is it Miss Scarlet wants to talk about?” He framed “talk about” in air quotes. Sully sat down beside Philippe, pushing his hips forward to make his cock look bigger, aware of the beef that dangled beside him.

Scarlet withdrew her hands from her pockets, brought them together before the two watching men, then drew them apart, an expanding length of tape measure between, the roll hidden in one hand. “I want to talk about measurements.”

Sully gasped a sound of shock. “Where did you get that from?”

Philippe said, “It was like a magic trick.”

She said drolly, raising one eyebrow, “I come prepared.”

Philippe said to Sully, “Your wife is very impressive.”

“You should see her without her clothes on,” Sully said, wriggling his eyebrows at her and biting his lower lip.

She said, “He has seen me without my clothes.”

Sully put his hand over his heart and winced as though wounded. “Yeah, you’re right,” he said, voice squeezed. It was like even though he and Philippe were naked and she would measure their penises in about ten seconds, the idea another man had seen her naked made him sick with jealous hurt. And she liked that.

She said now, “Philippe even had his hands all over my bare ass in the closet.”

Sully chuckled through a long exhale. She knew her husband’s heart was hammering away right now, and she loved they were doing this together. It was way better than her down here alone with Philippe, her husband sulking in their suite waiting to hear the post-game report. Sully was too good a friend to miss out on the actual doing of the deed.

With her hand on Philippe’s broad and hairy chest, she guided him to lean back on his elbows. His stomach muscles flexed and his cock fell to one side to lean against his thigh. It was such a sexy sight that she paused a second to take him in. The smile on her face was unstoppable. Her heart hammered, fun and joy played through the pleasure chemicals her brain was fluxing right now.

“Let’s get this bad boy in the upright position,” she said, lifting Philippe’s cock and arcing it upward. Past the midpoint she let it go and it fell against his hard stomach with a slap. All three of them laughed. Philippe’s penis looked ridiculous this way, his balls hanging down to rest on the mattress, the enormous flesh club laying back on his stomach. It looked unreal.

She kneeled at the side of the bed, Sully sitting, watching her, smirking, and she took the zero end of the tape pinched by finger and thumb and pushed it underneath Philippe's scrotum, guided the tape along his shaft, his balls sagging out on either side of the tape. Sully turned up his hands in a gesture of dispute while she ran her other thumb and finger along the tape, stretching it out toward the big fat end of Philippe's penis. She knew Sully had an objection.

"Oh my God," she said. "It's like fourteen inches."

"It's not fourteen inches," Sully said. "Don't be ridiculous."

"I know how to read numbers, Sully," she said, angling Philippe's penis toward him with the tape measure pegged to it so he could read it for himself. "Fourteen inches."

Sully rolled his eyes. "You're like measuring it from his anus, Scarlet. That is not how you measure a penis."

"I thought she majored in this," Philippe muttered, pretending to be disappointed.

"I didn't say she graduated," Sully said, and they both laughed at her.

She withdrew the tape measure. “So sorry,” she said to Sully. “How many penises have you measured, my Mighty Measure Master?”

“Well, only one—but I measured it a lot.”

“I would love to catch you doing that,” she said.

Sully took the tape measure from her, saying, “Not since I grew up, Scarlet.”

She showed him a restrained expression on the verge of hilarious cachinnation, trying not to burst out at the image he’d put in her head of young Sully alone in his bedroom with a ruler and a hard-on.

“Well, I defer to your dick-measuring expertise,” she said, curtsying in place, bowing her head. “I hope I pick up a few things from watching one of the greats.”

Sully leaned forward, looking very serious now, like dick measuring was super important. “First thing when measuring a dick, young grasshopper, is you must be topless.”

Philippe lounged with his big proud member laying on his hairy muscular torso, eyeing her with sexual hunger. “Sorry, Scarlet. Your husband’s right. It’s in the rulebook.”

“If you insist,” she said, cocking her head, doing the coy thing with her mouth, beginning to raise her shirt higher, teasing both men.

When the shirt was lifted, they both sat straighter, scooting closer. Her knees went weak when their hands went to her stomach and back, and they both kissed their way to her breasts, working together to thumb up her bra and free her aching nipples.

Scarlet's flesh was feverish. An inner heat roasted, and Sully felt the temperature of his wife's arousal against his lips as he kissed and suckled. Her nipples were full and swollen, with the plumpness of new fruit. He was naked, and she was topless. She loved male genitalia, and their partner for the evening had a gold medal winner between his legs.

Scarlet's muscles quivered under her taut skin. Sully's hands played over her ribs and stomach and lower back like he was exploring her for the first time. And in a way, he was. This was the Scarlet he knew and loved, but she'd exposed a hidden facet to her. He'd been blessed with it. A part of his wife she would have kept hidden, now exposed to him, where he could tweak it, play with it, squish it, use it to make her shriek with ecstasy. And that was what he wanted more than anything. To send his sexy redheaded kitten over the top. To smash her soft little pussy over and over until she babbled his name. Or Philippe's name. He didn't even care anymore. The jealousy was kind of fun. It provoked him, urged from him some turbo-charged masculinity; not wanting to be bested, not wanting to be diminished, but also wanting Philippe to be here, to help out, to take one end of Scarlet and help carry her up and over the cliff wall of orgasm.

And as if reading his mind, Philippe's suckling of Scarlet's plump left nipple stopped, and he pulled back saying, "Let me watch you with her, Sully. Show me Scarlet in ecstasy. I really want to see what makes her motor run."

Sully panted with eagerness. Philippe had been sucking Scarlet's nipple. Scarlet was Sully's wife. But, yeah, he loved it when he got Scarlet's motor running and he'd love to show off what she could do.

Sully looked up at his wife, whose eyes had taken an aroused and glassy shine. He said, "You hear that, baby? Let's show him what we can do."

"Not so fast," Scarlet said, her voice breathy and slow. Both her hands cupped around the back of Sully's head and Philippe's, her fingernails scratching through their hair. "You're taking us off course."

Philippe tongued Scarlet's nipple. "I think you want to go off course."

Scarlet still caressed their heads. "Yes, I don't mind going off course, but if we don't hit our waypoints, we're going to get lost out here."

"We wouldn't want that," Sully said, running his tongue up her stomach and along the ridge of her rib cage. Scarlet moaned with pleasure, swaying on her feet.

"The first waypoint," she said, but couldn't continue, eyelashes fluttering.

Philippe repeated, "The first waypoint..."

"Is confirming you have a fourteen-inch dick."

Philippe chuckled. “I don’t. It’s—”

Scarlet pressed her finger to his lips. “Don’t wreck my fun.”

With his lips held together by the point of her finger, Philippe muttered, “We could just get to the point, though.”

Sully said, “She thinks the point was fourteen inches.”

Scarlet looked at him, mouth slimmed to an unimpressed line. “All right, hotshot,” she said, seeming to clear her thoughts. “Show me how you measure,” dipping, and swiping the tape measure out of his grip. Then she held the bulk of the rolled tape in one hand, smacked the point of his erection with the zero end.

He grunted and gripped his dick, holding it protectively. “Well, that’s not how you do it, whipping it like that.”

Philippe chuckled, then lowered back to his elbows, letting his huge cock lay up on his belly—the endpoint above his navel.

“So show me,” Scarlet said to Sully, getting his attention again. “Let’s do yours.”

Sully took the dangling zero-point of the tape measure, threading it outward, Scarlet feeding him more tape than he needed. “Okay,” he said, “you measure on the top side, not the bottom side.”

Scarlet repeated it as though she were taking notes. “Right, not the bottom side.”

“The bottom side has no endpoint, you see? I could start at my butt hole, my tailbone, see where I’m going?”

“Sure. We don’t like cheaters.”

“We don’t. So we measure from the top side. From the top side,” he said, snugging the zero and into the base of his cock, “then up to, you know—”

“The pee hole.”

“Right,” Sully said.

Philippe said, “Urethra.”

Scarlet said, “Ooh, somebody went to med school,” and they all laughed.

“So there,” Sully said, “now you do it,” leaning back with the tape draped over his upright penis.

She held the tape in place with one hand and tightened it across his dorsal side. “It’s seven... And a bit.”

“We can add a bit more, because you could push the zero further into my body.”

“I thought we didn’t like cheaters,” she said, narrowing her eyes on him.

He said, “It’s acceptable.”

“Sully’s in the penis measuring union, Scarlet, the Local 4712. I’d take his word for it.”

“You guys are hilarious,” she said, as though unimpressed by their banter. “And around the middle, what about measuring that?”

Philippe looked over at Sully’s erection with the tape draped over the end of it. “I’d say he’s six inches.”

Sully pointed a finger pistol at Philippe and winked.

Scarlet said, “What, did he get it right?”

Sully said, “Yeah, looks like we got a suite full of dick detectives here.”

Philippe said, “Maybe Scarlet could take her dick measuring major put it to use, you know, profiling dicks for the FBI or something.”

“She’d have her own ‘Ten Most Wanted’ list.”

Both he and Philippe broke up laughing, and the more Scarlet scowled and smirked at them, the harder they laughed. He’d had no idea that it might be like this. He’d wanted to hide in their suite upstairs and let Scarlet come down here all by herself. Look what he would’ve missed. “Okay,” he said when he got himself together again, shifting his hips to wag his dick back and forth like a metronome. “Scarlet, put the tape on our buddy here.”

She regained control of the tape measure and thrashed his chest with it a few times, making him try to bat it away. “Any guesses? Any guesses from my in-house dick counsel?”

Sully said, “Find out for yourself. Did you bring a notebook? You have to write all these numbers down and then do some math. Length, three girth measurements...”

Philippe agreed. "Calculate their volume. Displacement."

Sully said, "I hope you remember your algebra."

"You know the value of pi, right?"

Scarlet shook her head at them both in admonishment. "Why do you guys insist on taking all the fun out of this?"

"Sorry," Sully said, putting up his hands in surrender, Philippe joining in. "We just want to get to the good stuff."

Philippe said, "Yes, Scarlet. Your stuff."

Sully watched as his wife's cheeks blushed redder. It aroused her having both of their attention. It aroused her being in control, too. Being the one with the tape measure. Being the one in charge, telling everyone else what to do. But he couldn't wait to find out how quickly that would crumble once they started in on her. Would it be quick? Would she fight back, try to stay on top? For how long? God, what if she kept her wits about her the whole time? What if it turned out Scarlet was even more dominant than Carla? His wife could be the alpha bitch on this yacht, and she didn't even know it. Scarlet just let Carla take the wheel even though behind Carla's back Scarlet and Chey talked shit about her, and he bet Scarlet was always saying how she would be a much better driver than Carla.

Scarlet scowled. “What are you smirking about?”

“Who, me?” he said, breaking into a chuckle.

“You look guilty.”

“Just thinking about all the things we’re going to do to you tonight.”

“That’s not what I’m down here for.”

“So she says,” Philippe said under his breath.

Scarlet said to Sully, “Whose side are you on?”

“I’m on the side of having the most fun.”

“Are you having fun now?”

“I am,” he said, confident.

Scarlet said to Philippe, “You know he was going to stay up in our room while I was down here?”

“I figured.”

“Isn’t it more fun when he’s here?”

“I think so.”

Sully said, “Is that why you lured me down into your web?”

Scarlet drew an hourglass between her naked breasts. A black widow. He laughed, then sat up, going to her, hugging his arms around her warm, naked body and feeling the heat of her sex-fever against his cool cheek. “You’re so fucking hot.”

She said, “Aam I going to get to measure his Dick or what?”

“I’ve never seen somebody take so long doing it, though.”

“She wants it done right,” Philippe said, taking Scarlet’s wrist and pulling her on top of him. She fell against Philippe’s body, his naked cock between them, Scarlet’s bare chest pressing his hot, engorged manhood. Sully watched the foreskin gulp closed over the enormous cock head, Scarlet’s weight pressed against it. His own cock surged with unexpected delight.

He said, “Get that tape on it, Scarlet, get your numbers. I can barely stand watching you without putting my hands all over you.”

“I want you to sit there and watch,” she said, chest to chest with Philippe, her eyes on his. Her skin was smooth pale porcelain against Philippe’s hard, furry muscle. The black hairs prickled and sprung against Scarlet’s naked skin. There was no way Sully would’ve anticipated how arousing he found the sight.

He spanked Scarlet’s ass, and she yelped. And he said it before he could even gauge whether it should be said: “Why don’t you kiss him?”

Both she and Philippe smiled, looking at each other, hearing his words and themselves gauging whether that was a good thing. Scarlet wondering if she would be able to kiss another man. Measuring his penis was one thing...

Philippe said, “Seven Minutes In Heaven.”

“We never did get to kiss...”

Sully said, “Carla yanked the door open too quick. You never got to see how compatible you two were.” What the fuck was he saying?

Scarlet bit her lip, then like an awkward teenager darted her lips to smack Philippe’s chin before scooting upright, scrambling to sit on his stomach, her legs straddling his hips. Philippe laughed, never getting a chance to kiss her back, instead now lacing his fingers together behind his head, showing off the muscle. Scarlet looked at the half of his big cock that was showing, putting the tape measure on it saying, “Five inches. I really thought it was going to be bigger.”

Philippe flexed his butt muscles, getting Scarlet to jostle and ride up and down on his hips. “You might want to scoot down a little.”

She did, saying, “Oh my gosh, you’re right, there’s a lot more here.”

Sully said, “Do it from the top side.”

Philippe grumbled, “Miss Fourteen Inches.”

“What, is that a crazy number?”

“Nobody has a fourteen-inch penis,” Sully said like he was mad at her.

“Sor-ry,” she said, “what do I know?”

Philippe said, “Not as much as your husband, apparently.”

“Har-dee har har,” Sully pronounced.

The way Philippe lay might have been about the most sexy thing she had ever seen. Philippe was kind and nice when you talked to him, when he was sociable at dinner or parties and fully clothed, and it seemed to de-fuse what turned out to be a potent masculinity. When you found out how hot his body was without his clothes and how long and thick his penis was, you saw him in a whole different way. He lay confident below her, between her straddling thighs, with his hands behind his head. His shoulders were huge, his beard thick and manly. And his gnarly horse cock lay up on his muscular stomach.

She held the tape measure in her hands, topless, her nipples aching and wet from both their mouths. She smiled, taking it all in, enjoying it, dragging the pleasure of anticipation on and on and on.

Then Sully rose from lounging at her side, threw a leg over Philippe and straddled him as well, snuggling up behind her, buck naked, his wet cock slipping along her back. His hands went under her arms and she allowed it, gasping as he cupped her breasts. The action of her husband surprised her, threw her sex drive into a high-torque gear she hadn't anticipated. Something low in her belly slumped, heavy and laden with wet sexual need.

One of Sully's warm hands abandoned her breast and slid down her stomach, flipping open the button of her shorts before sliding below, going under her panties and discovering with the pads of all four fingers that his wife was flooding right now. She could hear the tackiness of his stroke. They all could. Philippe's amused face slackened to one of lust.

Sully whispered in her ear, "We're going to measure his dick right now, okay?"

"Yeah," she gasped.

"Then," he whispered, "I want to see if it would fit in your mouth."

More than ten inches, they discovered. Sully guided her hands, never touching Philippe's erection, but comfortable working close to it with her, almost hand-over-hand at times. She'd pushed the tape's zero end into the bushy seam where Philippe's enormous penis emerged from his body, gripped it there, her hand C-clamped around the ultra-thick base. The other hand, Sully's light grip on her wrist, ran the tape up to the bulbous head of Philippe's cock. It was a plump and mighty knot, smooth and sexy, its lone and deep-set eye looking up at her while she whispered the number she read off the tape. "Ten. More than ten."

The whole time, Philippe lay comfortable and placid, hands behind his head, smiling, watching them work, enjoying the respect they were showing to the mighty totem of his masculine power.

And while her small hands worked over the bulk of his shaft and corpulent head, her husband had one hand shoved down the front of her shorts, his fingers plying the curled wet folds of her opening. He'd encouraged out her swollen clit, and the pad of his thumb would sometimes squash it against the inside bend of his fingers, and when he did, her lashes would flutter, her head would rock, and her sight would blot with phosphorescent pleasure.

Sully whispered, "How thick is it?" His fingers curled and breached her insides and she gasped and moaned a wild sound she'd never heard before. Philippe unfolded his hands from behind his head, going up on an elbow to support his weight while he cuddled one breast, his thumb brushing over a sensitive nipple.

She began to hump against Philippe's crotch, making his balls squash outward each time she did, and Sully's fingers eased deeper with her motion. She was breathless by the time the tape measure circled the girth of Philippe's cock. She could barely make out the numbers; her heart rate jostled her vision, and the excitement had brought a sheen of wet to her vision.

"Almost... almost eight," she panted.

Sully whispered, "Satisfied?"

"Very."

Philippe took hold of the tape measure, threaded it from around his cock, and tossed it off the side of the bed. "We should get down to business now."

Sully said, "We should," plunging gentle thrusts with bunched fingers, plucking her nipple, Philippe doing the other. She'd lost control of them and they were taking over. There was little she could do to fight back; the pleasure was wonderful. She'd held them at bay, under the heel of her control, by the ruse of wanting to measure Philippe's penis. Who cared about the number? Fourteen inches, ten, twelve, a hundred, five, four, three, two, what the fuck ever. It was a beautiful thing; it was big and attractive and that's all that mattered.

Philippe said, "Get her naked. Show me what she's got."

“I have a name, you know,” she gasped.

Sully laughed and bit her neck right where it swooped to her collar. It turned her to warm butter, and she slumped on Philippe, both men now working on getting her on her back. Philippe rolled, Sully guided, and Philippe and her husband lay her on the bed on her back, her shirt off, her breasts rolling around. Then her knees were up to her chest, and Sully was shimmying her shorts and panties off.

“Hey,” she said with a weak voice, pretending to bat away her husband’s hands, like he was offending her dignity by showing what she had to this other man.

Sully tossed away her shorts and gathered her panties in a fist, holding the bundled fabric to his mouth and nose. “She showered and cleaned just for you, man.”

“Coming down here, knowing what she wanted.”

“What a bad girl,” Sully said. “She’s soaked them, though.” He handed the panties to Philippe, who did the same motion, holding the panties to his nose and breathing in her scent. How humiliating.

“She’s so fucking hot,” Philippe said.

“Uh-huh,” Sully said, cupping his hands on the points of her knees. She’d held her thighs together, but now her husband parted them so Philippe could get a look at that most secret part of her. She’d walked around naked, but he’d never got so close a look at her innermost secret. But now he saw it, admiring it, brow lowering, cocking his head one way then the other as he looked at her bared pussy with unabashed enjoyment.

Philippe asked Sully, “Can I touch it?”

“Be my guest.”

“Hey,” she said, closing her knees together. “I have a name. And you’re supposed to ask me if you can.”

But even with her knees closed, her privates were still bared, and now Philippe’s beefy finger stroked along her wet slit, and she emitted a quavering, awful sigh of dirty pleasure.

“She’s acting awful feisty for a woman so overheated,” Philippe said.

“She thinks we don’t notice,” Sully said.

She rolled her eyes as if they were talking crazy, but they weren’t. An overpowering urge to copulate twisted her frame like there were horses pulling at four points, trying to tear her apart. She’d never intended to have sex tonight, but it would be dishonest to say she’d thought it was impossible. Especially if she'd been able to coax Sully to join her—and she did.

She looked at both men on their knees on the bed, naked, aroused, Philippe's ridiculous oversized organ almost touching the bed. Her expression went coy, and she eased her gaze over to Sully. "I thought you wanted to see if I could get it in my mouth." And with that, she stroked a foot against Philippe's dangling member.

The deep breath Sully inhaled—pupils dilating, eyes widening—showed her she could get the upper hand again if she wanted, and Sully better know she could. But Sully surprised her, not recoiling from her presented sexuality; he was riled and active, indicating for Philippe to sit at the foot of the bed. She lay with her head to the side, watching Philippe take position at the foot of his bed, big shoulder muscles flexing, putting his legs out wide, his ample male beef dragging on the bedding.

She said to Sully, "What are you doing?"

Sully got over her, forehead to forehead, smiling and crazy-eyed. "You want to suck it, don't you?"

"I didn't say that."

"Lay your head on his thigh, baby."

“Yeah?” She kind of liked Sully instructing her, and she hadn’t thought she would have. “Show me.”

Sully guided her to crawl between Philippe’s open legs and lay on her side with her cheek on the inside of his furry thigh. His cock looked even bigger than when she’d measured it.

She peeked at her husband, looking as innocent and guileless as she could. “Like this, baby?”

Lily’s terrible orgasm rushed upward a cyclone of shame. Another man—Cody—made her come from tonguing her dirty part. And she could do nothing about it, chained in place, tied and stocked and naked. All her most naughty girl parts were spread wide for some man to take advantage of. And that dirty man—Cody—had bathed her anus with his slippery tongue, doing all kinds of perverted things to her. Shameful, awful things she’d be mortified for her Master to discover. But she was ten times worse than Cody because she’d orgasmed from it.

She bawled her shame into the bedding and the man’s leather-glove hand stroked her back. She rocked her face into the quilt. Why couldn’t he—Cody—just put his big thing in her and get it over with? Why would he try to make her come like that? Was it to make fun of her? Put her in her place? What kind of man—besides her Daddy—would tongue her most private of places? A place meant not for sex, not for intimacy. Not unless you really loved the person. But Cody was immoral, and he probably liked doing it every chance he’d get. She’d even confessed to Arlo her opinion on what kind of man Cody would be in bed. How could she have been so right? Gosh, what a horrible predicament.

She said aloud, “Please, don’t make me come again.” But the ocean sounds drowned out her own voice, and she heard no reply from the man—Cody. “Just do what you need to do and let me back to my Daddy. Okay?”

And right away, the man—Cody—put his tongue into her bottom hole again, the point practically spreading her aperture and sinking into her body. She squealed and babbled and kicked her little feet in protest, a shiver passing up her back, the threat of an even bigger orgasm.

Sully watched his beloved wife pleasure Philippe’s huge cock head with her lips and mouth. Scarlet would pull on his foreskin with her pinched lips, force the too-big glans in her mouth, her lips peeling back his foreskin, his unsheathed cock head sliding on her gullet. She liked doing it and she liked knowing he watched. His cock ached and his prostate had tightened up like a squash ball. If he wasn’t mindful, he might shoot his load over her legs while he watched her.

Her hand held a loose grip mid-shaft, Philippe’s huge organ down one leg, held in place, Scarlet using his thigh as a pillow as she treated his cock like some carnival treat. God, Philippe’s cock pumped pre-come. Scarlet had it in her mouth. She tasted the sexual product of a man who wasn’t her husband! Why the fuck was that so hot? Because it was taboo? Because it was forbidden? Probably because he loved her; it escalated the displayed sexuality into the stratosphere.

Scarlet was long and lean and fucking perfect. Seeing her stretched out across the bed, naked, sucking a sexual object she found arousing, was almost too much to bear. he hoped Philippe wasn't kidding about going all night, because he couldn't hold out much longer. he ached to ejaculate. Ached hard.

In fact...

He guided Scarlet's top knee higher, scissoring her legs, and she never stopped trying to get more of Philippe's cock in her mouth. With one leg higher, her sweet pink pussy was exposed. Philippe had touched it. That shiny little muffin belonged to Sully, for crying out loud.

"You're so fucking hot, baby," he said, getting over her body on hands and knees.

"Am I?" She tried to keep a straight face but let loose a blubber wet laugh against Philippe's cock, a strand of spittle keeping her lower lip connected to his swollen cock head bulging out the wrinkled collar of his foreskin.

"You know you are," he said, getting near her ear.

"You wanna try?" She angled the end of Philippe's cock toward him, like he could join in if he wanted.

“Sorry,” he said. “I’ve got other plans.”

“Oh yeah? What are you—”

She sighed and gasped, her lashes fluttering as he thumbed his rock-hard husband cock into her groove and eased himself all the way in until his balls squashed against her in a wet and eager slurp.

CHAPTER 14

The stranger in the suite had left Lily gasping and panting on the bed. He'd done terrible things to her backside, things she was too timid to admit to her Master. But she would. She would confess the dirty things he had done, as shameful as it might be. She lay now with her face smooshed into the bedding, her hair damp and clinging to her cheeks and back and shoulders, bound and tied in such an undignified and unforgiving position. A froggy. A defenseless little sex froggy.

But the man wasn't done.

No, up to this moment had been foreplay. Foreplay of all things. Why wouldn't he just come into the room and get it over with quick, have his way with her and get back to cocktails with the others?

The leather glove he wore stroked her haunches. She was spread wide, her stuff jutting up into the air. She could tell the overhead lights were on. The man—Cody—would see every stark detail of her sex. The restraints cut into her, not enough to hurt, other than a dull ache. She writhed against them to relieve the kinks in her back. The man must have seen her struggling; he rubbed her back for her, big leather grip kneading her shoulders and caressing the stretched muscles of her lower back.

But then she could feel... it. His thing. His man thing. Touching her legs, her bare legs, bumping against her inner thigh. What might seem like the

At least she would be returned to her Daddy soon.

His tip nuzzled into the slick cushion of her opening and her sore back stiffened—and for reasons she supposed she could never fathom, she steadied herself for the man's entry. And enter her he did; inch by slow inch. Another man's organ invaded her most sacred space. Her husband's space. Her toes curled, her eyes rolled back in reluctant ecstasy. It felt incredible and awful and sinful. What would her husband think knowing another man could deliver such pleasure? Would he be happy for her or alarmed? It wouldn't matter, because when this man left the suite finally she would bound into her husband's loving arms and bury her face in his neck.

The man's thing was thick. And it was long, too. Sinking deep inside her canal, filling her up, stretching her. The man was as big as her Daddy. She thought he might be. She'd seen Cody's. How could she not see it? The way he flaunted it around in front of everyone. Her Daddy kept his gift hidden. It was only for her.

And because of that, this was where she was. Subjugated, bound and displayed before another man because she would never in a thousand years—even under threats of violence—share her Daddy with anyone else. No one. No one, not ever.

And in the end, this predicament her Master had arranged was the best of all her possibilities. It showed her Master how she would obey him. It showed her Master she would never share him. It showed her Master even though this man could deliver astounding physical pleasure, she would have to be restrained. She wanted no intimacy with Cody.

And in return, even while she endured the stranger's deep thrusting, loved the liquid pleasure that swirled deep in her belly where the man's swollen cock head plunged over and over, she'd discovered a connection to her Daddy. Her Master. Her husband. Arlo.

For the man—she was sure it was that raconteur Cody Weber—knew how to please her. Cody knew what she liked. His leather palm rested on her tailbone, his large manhood easing in, then withdrawing, her petals clinging to his latex-covered shaft, and he would dip in a way that allowed his length to go deep without bumping her cervix.

Her Master, her husband, had instructed this other man—Cody—on what his wife liked best. Looking out for her. Knowing how much a violation this was and working hard to ensure his baby Lily was cared for and satisfied.

With that warm thought glowing in her mind like sunlight through a farmhouse window, she relaxed and smiled, comforted by the knowledge her Master was with her in spirit. It didn't matter whether her Master was in the room, he was in her heart. With this relief she succumbed to the deep pleasure another man delivered in the style of her husband: careful, thoughtful, interested in his length probing all her secret pleasure spots; even the deepest one.

It didn't take long for her legs to tremble, her stomach to tighten. Her insides went gooey and her eyes rolled up behind her mask. A rumble shuddered through her, getting her moaning, making all the sounds that came with the impending thunderous arrival of an overwhelming orgasm. She wished to kick out, stretch her body, luxuriate in the enormous pleasure that tumbled her way. But all she could do was twist and writhe against her restraints as the man steadied his length deep inside her and she squeezed and milked it, shimmying her tush against him.

When at last the orgasm spiraled up from the eddying currents of pleasure, forming a water spout, a pirouetting tornado of inner lubricity that danced from an intense point somewhere near where the head of the stranger's cock throbbed and flexed; a pink pocket she imagined curled behind her cervix, a complex of her most favored nerve endings that her husband taught this man, this Cody, how to find.

She cried out and babbled vowels and half-words as the orgasm claimed her in complete sexual sheathing, every part of her body set to electric tingling. She cried out Arlo's name, wishing he was in the room, that he had the courage to stay, that he would know no matter who she was with it would only be him she thought of.

But as the whirlpool hit its peak, she remembered Cody in the beach town, the two of them gone to shore, Cody trying on cowboy hats and asking her which one she liked. As she rode out the orgasm that cocooned her, she could see him like a bronco buster, naked, his bronze muscles glowing in the amber lamp light from the suite's bedside table lamps, and he's naked but he's got cowboy boots, and he's wearing the hat, and as she cried out even louder, crying out Arlo, Arlo, Arlo, Cody took the hat off and whooped it around him, taking her from behind, swatting her ass with the cowboy hat as he claimed victory of her as he left her shaking and panting and drooling with his big cock buried inside her.

Scarlet's tongue slipped and slithered over Philippe's large, swollen—but oh-so-supple—cock head. She loved its shape under her tongue, and hoped Sully enjoyed the show she performed.

He must have; his cock was hard as a crowbar as he rocked against her, almost fully inside. Sully felt amazing. What was this called, spit-roasted? Is that what Philippe and Sully would tell their friends later? They'd spit-roasted Scarlet. They wouldn't say that, but she liked to fantasize they would and then try to picture each of her friend's responses when they'd been told. Spit roasted? Scarlet? No way.

Yes way, ladies.

Spit-roasted and loving it. Her husband—who knew what she liked—fucking her while she sucked another man's huge cock. Another man, Scarlet? Who is he? You don't know him, she would say. Nice guy, rich, good-looking, masculine. Great beard.

They'd say, How did this happen? . . . Oh, I saw the guy's huge penis and kind of got turned on, and my husband told me to go for it if I wanted. . . . Your husband? . . . My husband. . . . Wait, Sully? . . . Yes, Sully. My Sully. . . . Sully? Sully like Sullivan Hill Sully?

The one and the same. Sully and their friend Philippe, watching her naked, spread on the bed between them, claiming her mouth and her pussy in incredible ways. A sex toy for two men, one she loved, and the other she liked very much. The pleasure was wild and forbidden and so fucking good. Permission to be bad. Like real bad. Naughty, naughty.

Above her, the end of his cock in her mouth, Philippe said to Sully, “Show me how she comes.” Like she wasn’t even hear, just a play thing for the two men to enjoy.

She slurped her lips to a point on his fat cock head, so she could say, “Sully makes me come so good.”

Sully groaned with delight from her words, smacking her haunch. Philippe scooted up, his cock leaving her, coming to her side. “I want to watch her come.”

Sully pulled out, and she moaned with disappointment. She patted her own pussy, complaint, “What are you doing?”

Sully jerked his own cock, eyes eager. “Get up on your knees and face Philippe.”

She wanted to ask more questions, but time was of the essence; she was surfing a sexual high. So she rocked upright, Philippe took her arms and helped her up until they faced. Fuck, his big strong hands felt good on her. Their eyes connected in a strange and lustful way. All the charm and good humor was there from before, yet something was new. Wasn't hard to figure out why, given what they were doing, but the eye connection tightened her core.

"Hey," she said.

"How you doing?"

"Pretty good," she whispered. Then gasped as Sully entered her from behind. She collapsed against Philippe's muscular chest, slinking arms up to circle his neck. His warm hands comforted her back.

Sully took hold of her hair, easing it back to lift her face off Philippe's hairy muscle. He said, "Kiss him. I want to watch you kiss him while I fuck you."

She could barely see her husband in her periphery, but his tone of voice told her this wasn't a joke. He wanted to watch her kiss another man. It seemed so wrong, and yet it was an easy thing to do, and she turned back to Philippe. Sully eased in deep as he would go, pressing against her bottom to encourage her mouth closer to Philippe's.

Before their mouths connected, Philippe whispered, "I can't wait to watch you come."

Then her lips pressed Philippe's. So different from her smooth-shaved husband—though Sully had grown a goatee one time that she'd made him shave off because it looked too Satanic for the finance business and none of his friends had the courage to tell him. She gave this other man her tongue and he took it, his own slipping along hers, twining, their lips suckling. He was a good kisser. Her fingers played through the hair at his neck, explored the muscles of his shoulders and collar. He was bulk. He was strong. And the whole time, Sully gave it to her just the way she liked it; the right pace, the right depth, the right angle. All for Philippe's benefit, her husband showing off how he knew his wife's body, how he knew her pleasures, how he could play her favorite melodies.

It wasn't long before he had her brow furrowing, her focus stolen, her chin dipping as her panting increased and gained the creak of a pleased moan. Sully knew what worked and he was having a good time showing off his trick. And, she liked to think, showing off his hot wife.

And just as the big bad orgasm chain came rumbling down her tracks and she had no more time to let out of the way, Sully pushed deep and held his thick cock inside her because she loved to hump it that way when she came — But Philippe sensed it coming, too, holding the back of her neck with one hand while the other spread wide on her back and stroked down to where Sully impaled her. His finger teased at her back hole, exploring, curling her toes and making her sex sounds go whistle high and breathy. And just as the train hit her with full thundering force, Philippe curled inside her anus with a gentle sweep and she bucked and cried like never before, getting owned and dominated by two amazing men.

CHAPTER 15

The ratchet snap of the handcuffs releasing woke her. Groggy and out of it still, Lily eased forward on the bed like an inch worm, rubbing her wrists on the bedding to take away the cuffs' bite on her delicate skin. The man unlocked the stocks on her ankles and she was free at last.

Then her Master's voice: "You can remove your mask, Lily."

In one wide-awake motion she snatched away the mask and thrashed around, jumping to the foot of the bed to lock her arm's around her husband. Her eagerness almost knocked them both to the floor. Arlo held her in his arms, chuckling at her warm reception, guiding her back to the bed. "It's over, baby," he whispered. "You are such a good girl."

He climbed on the bed, her hands all over him, chasing after him as he went up to the pillows to sit back on them and receive her. She curled up on his lap and hugged his neck, laying her cheek on his collar. Arlo tugged half the bedding over to cover them, cover her nudity, and kissed the top of her head.

"It's over?"

Arlo whispered again, "It's over, baby."

“I was a good girl?”

“Such a good girl,” he said, stroking her hair now. That’s when she saw it laying at the foot of the bed. She knew what it was but couldn’t believe it.

“What is that?”

Arlo said, “What’s what, baby?”

“That,” she said in a hoarse whisper, sticking her bare foot out from under the covers so she could point at it with her toes.

Arlo leaned closer to it with his supportive arms holding her. “I think it’s, you know...”

“No.”

“It is, baby,” he whispered, cradling her in his arms.

“Gross,” she complained in a childish whine, then tried kicking at the covers to flick it off the bed but couldn’t do it. “Get it off of here, ew, Daddy, gross.”

Arlo eased her aside and slipped off the bed and she watched as he lifted the dirty, dirty thing with a thumb and finger, the gross old condom hanging down with the heaviness of Cody Weber's sperm in the reservoir tip. He'd left his condom tied up on the bed. it had been on his penis. It had been inside her.

"Take it away, Daddy," she said when Arlo didn't run screaming out of the room with it like she would want him to. Arlo held it away from him, the thing swaying as he went into the bathroom with it and she called after him, telling him to flush it down the toilet.

"You're not supposed to flush things like that, Lily."

"Throw it in the ocean!"

Her Master told her the windows in there don't open, Lily, and he wasn't going to litter and when she whined that it wasn't enough to just throw it in the waste bin, he said, "You're going to have to be a good girl, Lily."

She pouted and crossed her arms, saying in a quiet petulant voice, "I am a good girl."

Arlo stared at her, a patient expression but one that showed she was very close to getting the paddle if she wasn't better with her manners. The he stepped on the waste bin's pedal and dropped the used condom into the garbage. The lid closed.

She felt a little childish now, and she softened and thanked her Daddy.

“It’s all gone, baby, the bad thing is gone and you won’t see it again,” he said, returning to the bed. “Okay?”

She nodded and held out her arms, remembered she was naked and crossed one arm over her bare boobies. Arlo opened the bed covers properly and she climbed off them so she could get underneath with her Master. They cuddled under the bedding, her naked, Arlo in shorts and a T-shirt. She kissed his chest and neck and slithered all over him like the world’s loneliest snake. Arlo held her, hugged her, cradled her. He asked her if she was sure she was okay.

“I am, Daddy.”

“You sure? He wasn’t bad to you?”

“No,” she said, shaking her in adamant wags. If the man was bad to her then her Daddy had failed her and her Daddy would never fail her.

“Was he good to you, Lily?” His voice was lower, more serious, almost concerned.

She said, “He wasn’t you,” and pooched out her lower lip.

Sully couldn't believe how fast he'd made Scarlet come. Wished he'd lasted longer himself, but those were the breaks. You couldn't have everything. His toes curled as he pulled out of Scarlet—who'd collapsed against Philippe, hugging him. Fucking incredible. Incredible. They were working like a team and he didn't even feel jealous, only felt pleased she'd come so hard.

So hard, she was slow to recover, and Philippe had to let her down onto the bed, setting her down on her back with her eyes rolled up and glassy, her mouth trying to say something funny, some quip, but her lips sticking together. She was such a beautiful thing, such a wonder to look at. To love.

But just as Scarlet spread out on the bedding, naked and on her back, Philippe got over her on all fours and at first Sully thought he would try to fuck her with that horse dong—All the electricity returned in a split second and his semen-dripping rod, deflating between his legs, shot to life again. In a few pumps of his heart his flagging member went ramrod straight, ready for action. All this when Philippe did nothing to put his cock inside Scarlet, only kissed her neck and collar, doing it smooth and nice while Scarlet came back to the land of the living, blinking and looking up at the ceiling, her hands doing absent caressing on Philippe's shoulders.

Then Philippe's kisses traveled lower, going down to her breasts, his tongue—holy fuck, another man's tongue!—dancing over her nipples, making her squirm a little, then lower still those kisses went, over her ribs and lingering around her tight navel. Scarlet's eyes widened, just as Sully's did, the both of them realizing their friend's intent and not knowing how they thought of it. Well, at least Sully didn't know what he thought of it. Scarlet, on the other hand, went from unsure to sure in a second, raising her knees and closing her thighs against Philippe's bearded face, kissing lower now and mouthing on her mound. Sully closed his knees with the spike of insane lust the sight provoked. Then opened them fast, gripping his cock and stroking it, heart pounding with a thunderous desire to get in between them and fuck his wife again.

But he stayed calm, watching instead of participating, letting Philippe have a turn, trusting this guy would know what to do since he had more experience than them. He sure seemed to have no squeamishness, tonguing and mouthing Scarlet's full pussy while his semen had just filled her up a moment ago. Bisexual, indeed, and Sully nodded with a decision to respect such bold courage. Scarlet sure loved it. That was clear. She knew he'd come inside her and knew how that went. She would be wet with his seed for a while, and Philippe was between her legs mouth-pleasuring her and lapping it all up. It was bad. It was dirty. And it sent his wife into the fucking stratosphere. Her eyes were crazed, open wide but unseeing, her mouth opened to a shocked O shape, no sound coming out, just jaw opening and closing in awe, her knees easing in and out on Philippe's ears, her toes pointed and scrunched.

Then the gasps came; quick excited chuffs coming in irregular bursts as each lap of Philippe's tongue tickled another new and libertine curd of the brain matter that fired up his wife's sex engines. The things Philippe did between her legs had Scarlet's twin-V8s racing into the red zone, her sex shaft glowing fire hot as she went into overdrive. The cries of ecstasy called from her in a sudden thunderclap as she came around Philippe's magical tongue. And as Philippe smiled with success, Sully could see now that Philippe not only pleased his wife's well-fucked and semen-leaking pussy, he had a big middle finger plunging in and out of her bottom.

Now it was Sully's turn for his eyes to roll up as an overwhelming lust rolled him over and tried to claim his consciousness like a big wave coming to shore and looking to sweep him out to the big, scary sea.

It might have been the dirtiest thing he'd ever seen.

And maybe the most amazing.

A hand patted his knee and it brought him awake, looking down to see it was Philippe, urging him into action.

"Huh?"

"Fuck her," Philippe said, smiling, a sense of urgent duty in his voice that made Sully aware this was a thing he and Philippe were doing together: they were working Scarlet, working her orgasm, taking turns on duty, each of them riding her wave as it built higher off the last one.

He was quick to get between his wife's legs, watching her beautiful face as he slid inside her again, the eyes widening, the look of twisted pleasure. And as his hips began to moil against Scarlet's, fully inside her, Philippe rested a hand on his lower back, up and down with his work.

"Look at her face," Philippe said, lusty and into it, enjoying the sexual deluge they were delivering to Scarlet.

And Scarlet's face was in beautiful ecstasy, gone off to a distant place where she couldn't snap back at the to stop staring at her like he would expect her to.

"Open your legs a bit, buddy, let me get my hand in there," Philippe said and before he could ask Philippe, "Get your hand in where?" he was already opening his legs wider.

Philippe's hand went over Sully's ass and between his legs and for a second he thought the guy was going to grab his bean bag. His balls clutched up high, disappearing inside his body and in so doing, his cock flexed. At the feel of his cabling cock Scarlet gasped with more delight, panting and chuffing.

Philippe didn't grab his balls, instead he pleasured Scarlet's back hole. Judging by the sound and the face she just made as Philippe's arm snugged up against Sully's ass, his hand doing something down there and it wasn't to Sully.

Sully rolled his hips forward, getting even deeper, rocking his wife's pelvis back so Philippe could get a better space to do his magic, then he fucked his wife deep and slow while Philippe fingered her ass, watching her face the whole time as it went through a whole series of emotions and wild expressions. She came again. And then again another time her thighs trembled around his waist.

Sully withdrew, lightheaded, cock throbbing, the end inch like a hair-trigger, one errant gust of wind could get him ejaculating, and said to Philippe, “You lay down. Get on your back, okay?”

CHAPTER 16

When Philippe was seated at the side of the bed, they worked together to get Scarlet's languorous body up onto Philippe's lap, sitting on him like he was a shopping mall Santa Claus. And his dazed wife looked at Philippe with glazed unknowing; Philippe could have been a mall Santa for all Scarlet knew right now.

"Hey, hey," he whispered, patting her cheek.

"I'm fine, I'm fine," she said, exhausted but amused and laughing.

"Lay back with her," he said to Philippe.

And hearing his words piqued Scarlet's dirty curiosity. She eyed him, sly, practically purring, "What are you going to do to me?"

He kissed her mouth, smiled back at her, saying to Philippe, "Get her facing me, lay back with her."

Philippe did it without question, easing back to lay on the bed with his legs over the edge, taking Scarlet along for the ride, his wife lifting her knees like a polite lady, then letting them down and part when she discovered she wouldn't be able to lay on Philippe with her legs drawn up like that. It was perfect.

He put his arms out on either side of them and kissed above his wife's mound, on that flat plain below her belly button, watching how it made her skin flutter. She moaned and raised her knees again.

Scarlet lay on top of Philippe, the two of them like starfishes; prostrate and open. Below his wife's exposed pussy, slick and deep pink and eager, Philippe's massive cock lay on the bed. Sully winced, then committed himself. He picked it up.

It felt so odd in his hand. A penis, yeah, but unlike his own. An odd thing, some undersea creature that lived under rocks or in coral beds, one eye that peeped out from a nest of folds. Man, it was thick.

He levered it upward until it touched Scarlet. Touched between her legs, nestled its broad back into her puffy membranes, slick with her wet and his semen, still seeping from her. Slick with Philippe's tongue, too.

He mushed Philippe's penis into her pussy, listening to the wet smacking, watching her petals squirm under his turgid flesh club.

With a hand on the flat of his wife's stomach, he guided her to tilt her pussy up where it was more receptive to teasing with Philippe's cock. The sight of this too-large manhood touching his wife's most sacred place drove him wild. His cock couldn't get harder, and he had this wildfire urge in him to do this all night, to tease her every opening, to do everything they could together, to get dirtier than they ever thought they could. But for her. For Scarlet. All for his wife's physical pleasure. But with her physical pleasure came some psychic thrill he couldn't deny. He wasn't selfless in this act.

The sight mesmerized him; put this incredible knot of awful desire in his belly. Philippe's cock head emerging from the foreskin, the smooth glans appearing and slipping over Scarlet's opening, her pretty pink flesh rippling underneath Philippe's monster.

And it occurred to Scarlet what he was doing. She'd accepted his teasing, not knowing what he was doing, liking it, but now it hit her: her husband was using Philippe's cock to play with her pussy. She cranked her chin to her collar, eyeing him, bewildered.

"What are you doing, baby?"

He thumbed the cloven underside of Philippe's massive cock head and eased it into her canal. Scarlet's expression was exquisite.

He said, "Sit up for me, baby. Sit up and kiss me."

She'd said she wouldn't fuck Philippe. Wasn't interested in it. Philippe was too big, she'd said.

Now she didn't seem so sure.

Philippe's large fingers curled around Scarlet's slim sides and helped her to sit up. Sully eased the angle of Philippe's cock for her and as she sat higher it pushed inside her. Scarlet's eyes widened, then her brow dropped and her lips curled like a snarl. "Ow, ooh," she whispered.

"Take it easy," he said, caressing her hair, helping her to sit straighter. Philippe was hardly inside her and he was too much to accommodate.

But Scarlet said, "Condom."

There were condoms in the bedside table's drawer. Philippe told him where to find them. When he turned he saw his wife a little more alert than she had been, coming out of her sex fugue, weary, and a look of anxiousness. Her hair hung down on either side of her face in heavy red curtains and her dazed eyes peered across the room under heavy lids. She licked her pink lips, waiting for his return. From her demeanor he knew she considered what they were about to do.

Philippe's hands stroked her back. He'd pulled over two pillows from the head of the bed so he wasn't flat on his back and uncomfortable. He was propped up, able to see the creamy pale skin of Scarlet's narrow back. His cock was harder, not upright—its substantial bulk requiring too much blood pumping for that to happen—but off the bed and laying on his hairy thigh, right in the seam where Scarlet's pale leg met Philippe's.

Scarlet was so lost in thought when Sully put his lips to hers it startled her. She smiled and huffed a series of small chuckles, biting her lower lip and giving her husband a sultry look. He felt like telling her she didn't have to put on a show for him, he was already mad in love with her and turned on like never before in his life. He presented her the torn open condom packet, saying, "You do the honors," then kissed her again. While they kissed, Scarlet removed the greasy rubber from the packet, her mouth working on his with warm wet passion.

Sully pulled his kiss away so Scarlet could work. He watched his wife's hands handle Philippe's cock, getting it upright, steadying it so it wouldn't fall against her thigh, plopping the rubber on top like a small beanie, then rolling in alternating downward strokes, struggling to make the condom fit his oversized erection. Once she got the condom halfway down, she smiled, looking up at Sully, holding Philippe's condom-covered member against her pussy and humping against it, giving her husband a sexy look. The dazedness had dissipated from her gaze. One look at her and anyone would know she'd been well-fucked, but a brightness shone in her gaze now, an adventurous sparkle. He fucking loved it.

With no impulse to do so, his kiss darted to his wife's, both of them intent on making out, on being with one another while they did this crazy thing. Scarlet's arms hooked around his neck, letting Philippe's cock go—indicating it was Sully's turn to "do the honors." While his tongue worked with his wife's his hand went down and found Philippe's trophy, nuzzled the end up against Scarlet's entry.

Now his wife broke their kiss, leaning back and sucking on her lower lip, never looking sexier in her whole life to him. She put her hands out behind her, supporting her reclining weight on Philippe's muscular sides, her legs parted, her sex gleaming with wet excitement, ready for her husband to use another man's implement to penetrate her. He took a long agonizing moment to soak in this amazing woman he'd married. The pale skin, the beautiful face, the luscious red hair, the creamy freckled skin. Her nipples were hard as cherry pits, her tummy sucked in tight. But deeper than the visual were things no one else got to see or understand. A whole complex galaxy of wonderful personality traits he'd fallen in love with.

She said, "Hurry up," and he laughed. They had a strange relationship of blunt reprimands and harsh analysis, quick to get on top of one another, a struggle for fleeting temporary dominance. Always performed with love, always done with respect. Even if outsiders didn't get it.

"Calm down," he said, and Scarlet chuckled, tightening her thighs on Philippe's lap, so eager to get his cock inside her, so eager to get fucked again. He wouldn't disappoint her.

Philippe's wide cock on his palm, he guided the fat end into his wife's narrow channel, luring her closer with the promise of a kiss. Scarlet's mouth pursued his, eyes narrow and sultry, cheeks blushing, leaning closer, Philippe beginning to spread her pussy's opening wide. She bit her own lips at the large size of Philippe's intrusion, and that was how Sully kissed her, lips bitten closed, parting them with his tongue, finding her tongue.

Her arms slunk around his neck again and she leaned close enough for their shoulders to touch. This would mean that Philippe had entered her body. More than just stretched and teased at the foyer, he was ensconced in her pink hallway, stretching his wife wide. To hold his wife in his arms, feel her sexual tremble, all at the provocation of another man, was a heady thing indeed. It felt like his skull was a balloon on a string, the string untethered now from his body and floating up to bat at the ceiling with the inflated lightness of helium.

She gasped a s sound of discomfort into his kiss and he broke apart to watch her take another man, holding her arms, stroking his palms on her flawless skin. Scarlet's hands fell to her thighs and stroked them. She arched her back, curled it forward, rocking on Philippe's lap as she struggled to find a manner to take his enormous penis inside her without hurting. Philippe's balls hung to the bed. The width of his shaft protruded up from that sagging scrotum, disappearing inside Scarlet's body.

Her beautiful face contorted with pain and pleasure, questioning, satisfaction, and so much more. Sully stroked his cock while he enjoyed the show, standing before her and Philipe with his feet shoulder width apart.

Scarlet scoffed and moaned, and continued to struggle to find her pleasure on Philippe's oversized organ. Sully had to stop touching himself because the sight was too erotic. He went to her instead, concentrated on her. Touching her, supporting her, stroking her neck, caressing her tits. Philippe held her steady, giving her a place to sit and explore and not fall over. Two men helping one woman. He never thought it could be so incredible. This kind of crazy sex could be addicting.

His hand stroked down her belly, went through her muff and finger pads finding her clit, brushing it free from her folds and pleasuring it. Scarlet's nails dug into Philippe's sides and she gasped and cried with pure, surprising, never-before-felt ecstasy. This feeling between his wife's thighs had never been felt before. She'd never been with a man endowed like Philippe.

It took many minutes for her to become accustomed to his size, for her to be wet enough, her membranes prepared enough, her balance and posture to find equilibrium, but once she was prepared his wife began to rock back and forth, her hips rolling forward and down, back and up, Scarlet doing all the fucking, Philippe content to lie still and be the big hard dick she worked on.

When she came, she fell forward, jerking and spasming in little twitches, her face falling against his bicep, her wet lips mushing there and dragging down. He wanted to laugh at the state she'd put herself in, but instead he had to hold her and think about things that would stop himself from a spontaneous, no-hands ejaculation.

He said to Philippe, "Help me get her on her back, she's not going to be able to sit."

"I can sit," she muttered.

He told her he didn't think so and that she sounded like she was drunk and while she protested they both got her on her back on the bed. Sully told Philippe to fuck her like that, missionary. Philippe got over her like a grizzly bear and Scarlet put her arms around his shoulders. Sully scooted onto the bed, near to her head so he could watch her better. Philippe plopped his big heavy member onto her tummy and stroked it up and down. Sully didn't know how his wife could get that thing inside her, but she'd done it. Just not very deep.

Scarlet said something to Philippe but he didn't understand it and asked her to say it again. When she said it again, Philippe looked up to Sully, saying, "She's saying something about the condom?"

“Yeah. She said take it off when you come.”

“Why?”

Scarlet tried to explain but sex-slurred her words. Sully chuckled.

“What’d she say?”

“She wants to see you come, I guess.”

Scarlet nodded.

Philippe’s eyebrows raised. “Okay,” he said, agreeing to it, but surprised she’d want to see that.

“She’s kinky,” Sully said.

“I’ll say.” Now Philippe reared his hips back, steadied his beefy member with a hand and eased it into Scarlet.

Sully watched with surprising lusty glory as his wife's mouth went to a howling but silent O, her back arched and her eyes rolled back with exultant big-dick rapture.

CHAPTER 17

There were things she remembered in the morning light.

Things like how it felt to be underneath a powerhouse of a man like Philippe. How he filled her and stretched her, how she'd been underneath him, disbelieving she could accommodate him. She remembered orgasms. She remembered Sully orchestrating Philippe's actions, telling him, "She likes it like that," and "Turn her over on her tummy, pull her ass up, she likes getting pushed into the bed that way." Sully, Sully, Sully. Spilling all her secrets so another man could take advantage of them.

There were more things she remembered, her lashes beginning to flutter as she came awake, aware now of daylight soaking into her eyelids and reddening them with the promise of a bright and sunny day.

Sully had taken his turn as well, not content to just watch. She remembered them talking about her care and comfort, and the two of them pausing so Philippe could get some lube. She remembered a lot of lube. Could feel it now, too, as she came awake, a silky feeling between her thighs, laying in bed on her back.

Oh, shit. She remembered her request to see Philippe ejaculate. Her waking cheeks blushed with the shame of her saying it out loud. But it was well-received, and in the end now she remembered Philippe pulling out and struggling that condom off his massive endowment, pulling back on his flesh sleeve until that crab-apple cock head, shining wet and smooth, sent heavy streams of semen over her body.

“Fuck,” she whispered, frowning, eyes closed, a hand fighting with the bedding to emerge in the morning and seek out her hair. “Fuck,” she said again, finding her silky locks sweat-heavy and tangled with drying semen.

But then she chuckled, thinking how she’d wanted that and how Cheyenne wasn’t kidding Philippe’s eruptions were exciting and impressive. A strange sense of pride came with that, like it was her who’d aroused such a spectacular show of sexual prowess.

Then she remembered a discussion about how to get her back to the suite upstairs. Would they dress her first? Philippe said he’d carry her over his shoulder since the two of them carrying her would look like they’d murdered her and were trying to dispose of her body. Sully laughed and said they kind of had murdered her. Goof. Also Sully said something about if they got caught carrying her upstairs he didn’t want to be empty-handed and have another man seen carrying his wife, and him like holding her shoes. Philippe asked Sully if he could carry Scarlet all the way upstairs and Sully was offended, saying, “What, you don’t think I’m strong enough?” She remembered telling them to shut up because she was trying to sleep and they both laughed at that.

She sat up and eased her eyes open, fighting the brightness, wincing and crinkling her nose, then looked around the room through slitted eyes.

It wasn’t her room and for a second she couldn’t place it. Then she was embarrassed realizing she should. It was Philippe’s room. She’d never returned to her own suite last night.

There was no one else with her. She was alone.

She rubbed her forehead, leaning forward and trying to think. God, her vagina ached. Not just ached, stung. She groaned and held her stomach now. “What a fucking night,” she sighed.

Now she chuckled as more came back to her and her brain shrugged off its nighttime robe, ready to dress for the day. They’d all slept together in this bed, her in the middle. She’d slept in between the two men last night.

After sex and after Sully and Philippe found no satisfactory manner to return her comatose body to their suite upstairs, they’d said fuck it and slept in the same bed. She’d been lying there and they both got in buck naked, one on either side of her and Sully tried to steal her pillow. She’d hissed at him like a mother goose finding someone reaching for the eggs she sat on, then snuggled up to him and he’d put his arm around her. Philippe was warm and hairy. At some point she thought she’d had her arm around Philippe but couldn’t remember if it was real or part of a dream.

Then, more recent, Sully and Philippe awake and joking around. Fucking talking about basketball or something, some dumb guy stuff, point spreads and city names. Wait, yeah, and Sully asked her if she wanted breakfast and she’d shook her head no and covered up with a pillow to block out the light. He’d kissed her bare butt and re-covered her naked body with the bedding.

What fucking time was it?

She collapsed back onto the bed wishing her phone was nearby. Where did they all go? Did everyone know she'd spent the night in Philippe's bed?

Probably.

There was a soft knock at the door, and she covered up with the bedding, and lay back down. "Yeah?"

The door opened and Carla poked her head in. She held a tray between two hands and Scarlet spotted a steaming coffee decanter. But despite the appeal of a coffee she was hit with a torpedo, sinking in the ocean with her hull blown open: Carla knew she'd slept with Philippe. She'd probably find out anyway, but Scarlet hated providing clear and inarguable evidence.

Carla said, "Hey, sleepyhead."

"Hey," Scarlet answered, wanting to hide under the covers but there was no point now. She'd been seen.

"I heard somebody has a tummy ache."

"Who?"

“You do,” Carla said, coming in with the tray and using her foot to close the door behind her. She wriggled her nose like there was a funky smell in the room, pausing a moment in bare legs and feet and an oversized hoody.

Scarlet sat up, resigned to Carla’s knowledge of last night’s events and looking forward to a coffee. “What time is it?”

“About one-thirty.”

“One-thirty? Holy shit.”

“Yeah, I guess you were up late last night,” Carla said, setting the tray down on the bed right beside Scarlet, then climbing up to join her, the tray between them. Besides the coffee decanter there were two cups, two plastic containers of fruit-bottom yogurt, toast with butter, bacon, an orange, water—oh, thank the lord, she was so thirsty—and a small pillow.

“We were up late,” Scarlet agreed in a robotic monotone, trying to hide from her wily friend anything that might give away secrets of last night. “Where’s Sully?”

“Last I saw,” Carla said, passing Scarlet the glass of water, “he was playing pool.”

“Playing pool?”

“Yeah, him and Philippe were playing pool after breakfast.”

“Oh, god,” she sighed. So much had transpired while she lay sleeping. No way for her to frame the story or read reactions, it’d all happened without her knowledge. She was sure everyone on the yacht knew she’d had a threesome last night.

Carla produced from her pocket a small white bottle, twisted off the cap, and shook out two capsules and presented them to Scarlet.

“What are those for?”

Carla said, “Ibuprofen.”

“I don’t have a hangover.”

Carla cocked her head and showed a get-serious expression.

“What?”

“Not for the hangover. For the tummy ache.”

“I don’t have a tummy ache,” she said, frowning and sipping her water.

Carla waited a beat for Scarlet to catch on and when she didn’t, said, “Pussy ache?”

Scarlet set her water down and palmed her forehead. Fucking big mouth Sully. She groaned and rubbed her cheeks.

“Take them. It’ll help you feel better.”

Without looking at Carla, Scarlet took the capsules and drank them down with the water. She set the empty glass on the tray, sitting on small, extended fold-down legs. “Can you pour me a coffee, please?”

“Sure thing,” Carla said, pouring coffee into a cup. “Cream? Sugar?”

Scarlet nodded for both and Carla poured then presented the cup to her.

Scarlet took a long deep inhale then sipped and moaned with pleasure, already feeling the caffeine doing good things. She said, “What did Sully say?”

“About what?”

Scarlet took her turn to offer a get-serious expression.

Carla chuckled and lifted a yogurt container. “You want the cherry or the peach?”

“Peach, please. What’s my husband been saying while I was sleeping down here?”

Carla peeled the top on the cherry yogurt and stirred it with a spoon. “Your husband hasn’t said anything to anyone.”

“He hasn’t?”

“Nope.”

“Then how are you here?”

Carla smiled around a mouthful of cherry yogurt and paused to swallow. With good humor, she said, “Oh, he told me. But that’s because I asked him. He didn’t say anything to anyone else. That I know of.”

“Okay,” Scarlet said, nodding, satisfied for the moment. She’d pictured him strutting around, peacocking, telling everyone how they’d turned Scarlet inside out last night. “And Philippe said nothing?”

Carla shook her head no, then passed Scarlet the pillow. It was cold.

“Ice pack?”

“Bag of frozen peas in a towel.”

Scarlet said no more about it and tucked the chilly bundle under the covers, arranging it in the right spot, avoiding Carla’s eyes.

Carla scooped more yogurt, stirring, thinking. “If you have a heating pad, that’s good, too. On your lower back. Oh, you know what? . . . Use my hot tub, up in my suite. A hot tub and some Epsom salts.”

“Maybe I will.”

“Do you feel okay?”

Scarlet thought about it, drinking coffee, taking stock of her current physical well-being. “I feel pretty good.”

“I bet you do.”

“Yeah, I do. Just a little achy.”

“My hot tub, babe. I’m serious. I can find you some Epsom salts.”

“I will. I’ll take you up on it later. And thank you for the coffee.”

Carla finished her yogurt, then began showing Scarlet the other things on the tray. “There’s more. Eat something. OJ? You’re not going to say no to bacon...”

“I’ll eat the bacon,” she said, taking a strip then nibbling with her lips pulled back. She said, “Why would a penis be so big?”

“I know,” Carla said, scoffing.

Scarlet wanted to ask if Carla had ever swung with Philippe but felt a funny jealous feeling. Like if Carla had slept with Philippe, she wouldn’t want to hear about it.

Carla said, “To be honest, I like smaller ones.”

Scarlet laughed and put down the end of her bacon, using a paper napkin to get the grease off her fingers. “You do?”

“I do,” Carla said, nodding, smiling to herself.

Scarlet frowned. “But Cody...”

Carla looked up. “Yeah, but Cody’s gentle. I don’t mean tiny or anything.”

Scarlet said, “I didn’t think you did. It was just surprising to hear—considering the man you’re married to.”

Carla cocked her head, narrowing her eyes, looking to lecture on her situation. “Cody’s my true soul mate, my best friend. My best friend in life. I love him for what we have together, too—you, know, the life we’re building. . . . But I don’t think of Cody when I masturbate.”

When it sunk in and her auditory processing caught up with the most incongruous statement she’d ever heard, she burst into laughter. The laughter tightened her tummy and that hurt down in the basement and she clutched the ice pack against her crotch, now trying to stop laughing. “Ow, ow, ow...”

“What, is that crazy?”

Once Scarlet got herself upright, wincing and ouching, she said, “I think there are a lot of women out there who masturbate thinking about your husband.”

“Well, hooray for them. Go for it. But he’s mine.”

“Unless you say different.”

Carla showed a more serious expression now. “Yeah, that’s right. Unless I say different. Chey’s lucky I wanted to sleep with Byron.”

Scarlet thought it was a joke at first, then realized it wasn’t. “What, you really think of Byron when you masturbate?”

“Not all the time. But, yeah, sure I have.”

“Huh, wow.” Scarlet nodded in slow wags, letting it all sink in. “Chey told me Byron flubbed it.”

“Why would she say that? . . . She’s so mean to him sometimes.”

“Oh, I don’t think so. She loves Byron.”

“Yeah, but he didn’t flub it. Chey should feel lucky the guy couldn’t perform because he couldn’t stop thinking of her.”

“Of Chey?”

“Who else?”

“So he didn’t flub it?”

“His mind was elsewhere.”

“And even the mighty Carla Weber couldn’t distract him?”

“Mighty? . . . You and Chey are both kind of mean sometimes.”

“We are? We are?”

“Callous, maybe. Not mean.”

“Callous,” Scarlet repeated, and looked at the ceiling while she considered it. She and Chey both thought Carla was the mean one. She sighed. “Well, sorry about that.”

“No need to apologize. I can be a bitch, too, believe me.”

Scarlet laughed again, saying to the ceiling, “Now we’re bitches?”

“Nah. Sometimes all three of us can be a handful to deal with.”

Scarlet’s laugh reduced to a chuckle. She said, “I really worked Sully over the last few days.”

“You guys seem like a great couple. Strong.”

“We care about each other.”

“You’re a good match. An equal match.”

“Thanks.”

“You feel guilty for working him over?”

She shook her head. “Psshht. Not at all. He tried doing it to me, too.”

“A battle of wits.”

“And I won,” Scarlet said, smiling.

“Great victories don’t come without scars.”

“Sun-Tzu?”

“Scarlet Hill.”

“Never heard of her.”

“She’s a brilliant strategist.”

“She thinks.”

Scarlet turned. “What, I’m not?”

Carla smiled in a way that made Scarlet feel uneasy. They studied each other a moment, and now it felt like she was sitting with the Carla she was used to. Beautiful, sexy, savvy, dominant.

She said, “Chey says that about Byron because that’s what Byron told her happened. That’s what he thinks of his time with you. It’s not her being mean.”

“Okay,” Carla said, accepting it. “She’s setting us up again.”

“Wait, what? You and Byron?”

“Yeah,” Carla said, smiling with a small measure of pleasant anticipation. Then she shook her head and changed the subject. “Did they have sex last night?”

Scarlet frowned, bewildered. “Who?”

Carla said, “Philippe and—”

“Sully? No way.”

“Are you sure?”

“Sure I’m sure.”

“Not even like mutual handjobs or a blowjob or something?”

Scarlet stared at Carla, figuring her friend was looking to set her back on her heels, make her unsure or something. She shrugged, played it cool. “Not that I saw. But after I went to sleep, who knows what happened.”

“Men get so horned up.”

“Like we don’t?”

“Not the same way. They get that urge to hump and they’ll hump anything. If their girl’s not available, they’ll hump the couch, the mattress, anything that’s a good size and comfortable shape.”

“Yeah, well, whatever,” Scarlet muttered, remembering a time when she was younger, humping a human-sized pillow.

“Well, anyway,” Carla said, patting Scarlet’s ankle under the bedding and scooting back, “I just wanted to make sure you were okay. Sully thinks you're in sexual bliss down here but he doesn't know what it's like to get a beer can pushed into your hoo-ha."

"No, he doesn't," Scarlet agreed. "What's everybody doing up there?"

Carla paused bedside, lifting her sweatshirt and putting her hands in the pockets of her pink short-shorts, sunlight sparkling in her shaggy platinum blond bob. "Lily's reading, your boys are playing pool—"

"My boys?"

Carla chuckled at her own joke, smiling wide. "Byron and Cody went to shore..."

"Is Chey around?"

"Sure. Want me to send her down? You're okay with her knowing?"

"I guess I'll come up. It's the afternoon for crying out loud."

"Ah, take your time," Carla said, waving it off, pivoting then and going to the door. She opened it and then stopped. "Hey, Arlo's prepping a huge, huge dinner, so don't eat too much."

Scarlet's stomach growled in anticipation. "Another dinner again so soon? That guy's a workhorse."

Carla leaned on the open door, saying, "Oh, we've got a surprise guest coming tonight, that's why he's cooking again."

"We do? Who?"

"Paloma's plane just touched down on the island. That's why Byron and Cody went to shore. They've gone to pick her up."

"Wait, wh-what? Who? Paloma?"

"Yeah, she flew in to join us after all."

"Philippe's wife Paloma?"

Carla jerked her head back. "Do you know another Paloma?"

"No—"

“Yeah, that Paloma. Philippe’s Paloma. Anyway, take your time, go soak in my tub, okay? Toodles.” And with that, Carla was gone and Scarlet was alone in Philippe’s suite, naked in Philippe’s bed.

“Oh, holy shit, holy fuck,” she said, jumping out of bed and scrambling her things together as fast as she could, picturing Paloma climbing aboard the luxury yacht and catching her friend Scarlet coming out of her estranged husband’s bedroom suite with an ice pack on her cooch.
